NCO-OPERATION WILL WIN, GANDHI DECLARES.

der of Remarkable East Indian Movement Explains Demands for America's Benefit.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.
[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HI, March 4.—Gandhism is more than a political [illegible]. It is a religion among most of the followers of [illegible] Indian leader. With that thought uppermost in [illegible] I came away from my first meeting with the man [illegible] to overthrow British rule in India by political non- [illegible] civil disobedience.

Mahatma Gandhi.

[illegible] for Mahatma Gandhi [illegible]. It began in shabby [illegible] road in Bombay and it [illegible] Delhi at a little one- [illegible] bungalow in the out- [illegible] this ancient Indian city. [illegible] was surrounded by [illegible] every caste, hoping for [illegible] of the holy man, in [illegible] place so much hope.

AY PREPARED.

[illegible] told by a white-clad boy [illegible] that Gandhi was not [illegible] when I sent a card in I [illegible] way had been prepared [illegible] reception. I was ushered [illegible] sitting-room, where I met [illegible], secretary of the In- [illegible]. He was a man [illegible] was bearded. He re- [illegible] as he motioned me [illegible] chair near him. Sitting [illegible] in his chair, he [illegible] the table edge with his [illegible].

"[illegible] wish to see Mahatma?" he [illegible].

"[illegible]" I replied.

"[illegible] been arranged, but you [illegible] wait a little while, for [illegible] busy. In the mean- [illegible] and rest yourself. It [illegible] trip from Bombay."

ATED ON QUILT.

[illegible] the secretary disappeared [illegible] appeared, beckoning me to [illegible]. A chair was carried [illegible] room ahead of me. A [illegible] Hindus, garbed in home- [illegible], and I was in the [illegible] of Gandhi. Seated on a [illegible] of homespun, with a great [illegible] pillow at his back, the [illegible] was busy with a spin- [illegible]. He was sparse of fig- [illegible] head shaved except for [illegible] gray lock at the crown. [illegible] protruded. He wore [illegible] glasses. As he [illegible] welcome, I noticed that [illegible] his teeth were missing.

"[illegible] from America? He [illegible] I have long wanted to [illegible] America through your [illegible]," he said as he [illegible] his hand. He was naked [illegible] loin cloth of white [illegible] which he had probably [illegible]. I glanced at the [illegible].

WHEEL WEAPON.

"[illegible]," he said, "is our weapon. It is more effective than machine [illegible] than armies. Already [illegible] 200,000 in the [illegible] Manchester is [illegible] its force. It is [illegible] the Briton in his most [illegible]—his pocketbook."

"That, then," I ventured, point- [illegible] the wheel, "is the means by [illegible] to gain Indian in- [illegible]?"

"[illegible] symbol of the move- [illegible]," Gandhi replied. "When [illegible] home in India turns to its [illegible] wheel for its cloth, [illegible] won. There will be [illegible] for violence."

"[illegible] you are facing 200,000 [illegible] men," I said.

"What can these armed men do [illegible] if we do not aid. If every [illegible] folds his arms and refuses [illegible] with the forces which [illegible] the country they are helpless. [illegible] the Indians refuse everything [illegible] a blade of grass, the British [illegible] live a week in India. Civil disobedience, imprison-

SUBSIDY IS NECESSARY.

Shipping Board Member is Positive in Views That Danger is Great.

Man Who Understands is Not Loyal if He Stands in Way of Measure.

BY GRAFTON S. WILCOX.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—"Unless substantial aid by subvention or otherwise is given to American shipping, our ships will be swept from the sea and the immense fleet we constructed during and after the World War might just as well be scrapped with our battleship program of 1916, and our competitors placed in undisputed possession of our foreign commerce."

This was the declaration here today of George E. Chamberlain, member of the United States Shipping Board, and former Senator from Oregon, in an address before the convention of the National Merchant Marine Association. "The proposition," he continued, in concluding a thorough discussion of America's merchant-marine position, "resolves itself to a very simple one, and that is:

TWO ALTERNATIVES.

"An American merchant marine with aid, or

"Surrender to foreign flags without aid."

Mr. Chamberlain, whose speech followed within a few days President Harding's message to Congress, urging government subsidies to upbuild the national merchant marine, declared that the future could only be judged by the past.

"Where governmental aid has heretofore been given," he said, "or proper restrictions placed upon the carriage of our commerce in foreign bottoms, it has resulted in the upbuilding of an American merchant fleet, but where that aid has not been given, or where restrictions have been removed, foreign ships have outstripped us in the world's business.

"There are many reasons for this, but the essential ones are the high cost of ship construction due to higher wages paid to American laborers in American ship yards, the higher cost of operation of American ships, due to higher wages paid to and more liberal treatment of American seamen, better equipment for health and safety at sea, and if these standards are to be maintained, either aid must be given to American shipping or the differential now existing in favor of foreign ships will place our people and our ships at a great and insuperable disadvantage in the commerce of the world.

THOUGHT NECESSARY.

"About this there can be no question in the mind of anyone who will give the subject that careful study which is essential to a complete understanding of the situation."

Commissioner Chamberlain had the subject of an American merchant marine very much at heart, and went so far as to declare after submitting details of America's shipping situation, that any citizen who becomes party to propaganda for abandonment of American merchant marine in favor of any other maritime power, is disloyal to his country. He reasoned it this way:

"After the war was over, in order to assist in the stabilization of world conditions, at the initiative of President Harding, a Disarmament Conference was called to meet at the capital of the nation. The result of that conference is known to all. It may safely be said that all good citizens approve of the purposes and efforts made by that conference. All good citizens of this and of every civilized country hope that the treaties and resolutions agreed upon by those participating therein will prolong peace and tend to prevent war, but the close student of the world's history does not believe that the work of the conference will result in the establishment of peace the world over and for all time, nor will war end until greed and avarice are eliminated from the individual human heart.

LOOK INTO FUTURE.

Shortsighted then, indeed, are those who would abandon all thought of national defense on sea and land, and this does not mean armed preparedness and the maintenance of a large standing Army or any invincible Navy or the cultivation of the military spirit. Belief in national preparedness is not inconsistent with a program of peace or its maintenance for the things which make for the development of trade and commerce, in the very nature of things, make as well for national preparedness.

"If we consider carefully the ratio of naval disarmament as established by the conference we will see that Great Britain is just as much the mistress of the seas as she was when she had afloat the greatest navy in the world. Japan occupies relatively the same, if not a better position, than she did before this ratio was agreed upon. The United States, likewise, has not had her position relatively changed by the ratio agreed upon, and the same holds true of all the powers that united upon this fixed ratio.

"No lover of peace, no one who does not realize to the full the terrors of war, and that another such as the last would practically destroy civilization, could or would complain of the adjustment that was made, but he is blind, indeed, who does not or will not see that

New Ruling Made on Immigration Quota Law.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—Wives and minor children of members of any religious organizations, as well as the ministers themselves, are immune from the provisions of the immigration quota law, Federal Judge Mack held today. He ordered the release on a writ of habeas corpus of Mrs. Gittel Gottlieb, wife of Rabbi Solomon Gottlieb, and their four-months-old son, who had been detained by immigration authorities since their arrival from Palestine.

WORK MADE A MEMBER OF CABINET

Hays Takes Up New Job With Picture Industry in East Tomorrow.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Dr. Hubert Work took the oath of office today as Postmaster-General, succeeding Will H. Hays, who had been a member of the Cabinet for one year to the day.

Dr. Work, whose home State is Colorado, has been First Assistant Postmaster-General under Mr. Hays. In a statement addressed to the personnel of the postal service, the new Cabinet official said Mr. Hays had "set up new ideals for a postal service." Adding that those ideals had been approved by the American people, Dr. Work said it was his purpose "to give substance to his vision."

Mr. Hays called later in the day at the White House and said good-by to President Harding. He will leave tomorrow for New York, where Monday he will assume the directorship of the National Association of Motion-Picture Producers' and Distributors. He said that he had made no plans to visit Hollywood, the motion-picture suburb of Los Angeles, but intended to study the situation and do those things necessary to place the production of motion-pictures on the highest possible plane.

Indorse Policy of President's Aid to Marine

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Resolutions approving the policy of the administration for aiding the nation's merchant marine were adopted today by the National Merchant Marine Association and presented to President Harding. The association's annual convention closed with the election of officers and the adoption of a program in the interest of shipping generally.

PUTS DO IN M'ADOO.

Wm. Gibbs Gives Wife Credit.

Former Cabinet Official Shakes Gotham Snow Off Brogans.

Also, Here's a Good Tip for Los Angeles Dealers in Real Estate.

BY FRED E. HAMLIN.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—William Gibbs McAdoo and his family are en route to Los Angeles, and they know exactly why they are going to the land of sunshine and flowers. Mr. McAdoo put it very concretely just before his departure for the Golden State when seen by a reporter.

The former Wilson Cabinet official and his family came near to getting away from Manhattan without saying good-by to anyone except the apartment-house elevator man, the janitor, cook and a few others. Seen by the correspondent at the station, Mr. McAdoo said:

HERE'S GOOD REASON.

"When I left the Cabinet in very poor health after six years of work I sought California for a rest. Mrs. McAdoo, of course, fell in love with that part of the country and I capitulated. We both like open country, beautiful scenery and horses, and when we found all three with a climate that was especially agreeable, we decided that we would make our home there. We'll get more satisfaction out of life, that's all.

"I expect to open my own law offices; I suppose it will be shortly after I get there, but first we must get into our own home," he added.

Of course, Mr. McAdoo told the big town an official good-by when, several days ago, he issued a formal statement that he was quitting the law firm in Wall street and that he had succumbed to the irresistible lure of western life."

FEW KNEW OF GOING.

But not more than half a dozen folks outside of intimate friends knew that the McAdoos were leaving New York. A telephone call from the Los Angeles Times correspondent who desired an interview on the details of the move to the West brought out the news of the departure. A hastily aroused photographer, a reportorial friend and The Times correspondent composed the press brigade that usually is of formidable size and number when so notable a family as much as lifts a finger these days hereabouts.

Two women friends of Mrs. McAdoo, two secretaries to Mr. McAdoo, several zealous railroad officials and a corps of Grand Central "red caps" loaded to their eyes with mounds of baggage, comprised the rest of the good-by squad.

The McAdoos had planned to get out without commotion or confusion and even settled down in a home out in Los Angeles before

FIUME UNDER NEW RULE.

D'Annunzio Legionnaires, Fascisti, Install Government; Italy Plans Intervention.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ROME, March 4.—Italian Fascisti and former D'Annunzio Legionnaires have installed a government at Fiume after their coup of yesterday, when they forced President Zanella to relinquish office. The new provisional government is composed of former members of D'Annunzio's national council.

Italian carabineers are doing police service in the city, while battalions of other troops are massed within the confines of Fiume, ready to check further outbreaks. The cruiser Mirabello, which formed a part of the fleet of d'Annunzio when he held the city, has been ordered to Fiume.

REFUSES TO LEAVE.

Zanella, who was chosen to head the Fiume government by an overwhelming majority in the elections last April, refuses to leave his native city.

Premier Facta and Foreign Minister Schanzer met today to discuss how to oust the insurgents. The government this evening sent Commendatoro Castelli to Fiume as a special commissioner, with instructions to try to straighten out the situation. After consulting several members of the government departments tonight, Capt. Mostwenturi and Maj. Giurati, respectively Minister of War and Chief of Cabinet in the D'Annunzio ministry, left Rome for Fiume.

BITTER CONFLICT.

Several weeks' agitation preceded the overthrow of Zanelli, who has been charged with being more for Fiume than for Italy. Besides the fierce national struggle between the annexationists and the Zanella autonomists, there have been bitter local political animosities. These arose on Zanella's return after having successfully contracted a loan with the Italian government. On the very day he announced this transaction a bomb was hurled at his automobile by political antagonists, wounding his chauffeur. After that the conflict became more bitter.

WILL INTERVENE.

The newspaper Mondo says the government will intervene to re-establish order and safeguard the lives and liberties of the inhabitants of Fiume while the city is given an opportunity to secure a new government with sufficient strength and authority to support it. It is added the Italian authorities will maintain strict neutrality amid the class of local factions.

Rain Falls in City; Showers Probable Today

Rain began falling in Los Angeles and immediate vicinity late last night, but up until midnight had not come down in a quantity sufficient to register.

The weather had been more or less threatening during the day. The same condition prevailed at Ontario, Redlands, Long Beach, Santa Monica, San Bernardino and other near-by cities, where it was reported that a cloudy sky indicated rain before morning.

The U. S. Weather Bureau forecast for today is, "Probably showers."

HARDING FINISHES FIRST YEAR IN WHITE HOUSE.

Epoch-Making Twelve Months Has Proved Remarkable in Life of Nations of the World.

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Warren G. Harding completed at noon today his first year as President of the United States. In twelve months he has humanized the government of the country, has progressed steadily toward normalcy at home and has made great contributions to world stability and international amity. And on the threshold of a second year he is unchanged in personality or attitude toward the crowding problems he has to face. Many he has successfully settled.

President Harding is endowed with the great gift that was McKinley's. He is a natural harmonizer and humanizer, and to the domestic problems that crowded his first year he has brought the concentration of the best brains of the country. He has had one conference after another to seek a proper solution. The President entered office with the reaction that came from the fever of war and the overstimulation to victory. He had to aid this country in getting down from the heights of exhilaration, and financial, industrial and agricultural inflation. He faced the problem of country-wide unemployment and overexpanded governmental agencies.

YEAR'S ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

He had to put the country actually on a peace basis after many months of inaction following the armistice. And with actual peace many war laws had to be repealed. During the year the President has accomplished the following outstanding tasks:

Secured actual peace and re-established relations with our former enemies.

Brought the great nations of the world to a limit in armaments.

Established at home a budget system for the control of expenses and the transaction of government operations on business lines.

Enacted a temporary tariff to tide over the reconstruction days until a permanent tariff could be wisely drawn.

Revised the internal tax laws to prevent inequalities.

Secured relief for the agriculturalists.

Secured legislation for the permanent funding of the debts due this country from the Allies.

Placed the American merchant marine on a nonloss basis.

MERCHANT MARINE.

Outlined to Congress a method of legislation by which the government could turn its $3,000,000,000 merchant marine over to private owners and operators with government assistance to the point of absorbing difference in cost between American vessels and foreign competitors because of legal requirements enacted by this government.

The President has pointed out to his countrymen that with a smaller navy the merchant marine, alive and active, is indispensable, and has outlined a subsidy plan, which will, even at his own maximum expense, cost less in 100 years than it cost the country in two years in an emergency to build ships to save America.

CREDIT WHERE DUE.

Marked as epochal is the accomplishment of the administration in revolutionizing international relations. President Harding's conference to limit armament demonstrated for all time to the world that international conferences conceived in sincerity and carried on in fairness could stand. With an unselfishness unique in political annals he turned the details over to his Secretary of State and granted him the credit for the sensational and courageous program enunciated so clearly and so forcibly that the world was surprised into almost instantaneous acquiescence.

That conference produced seven treaties of world importance and twelve resolutions, the tenor of all of which was to carry the world nearer to normalcy and a return to prewar sanity.

It accomplished all it set out to do and more. It demonstrated to the doubting Thomases of the world that on American initiative, and because of American sincerity and good faith, the old devious ways of secret diplomacy must end around a common conference table in the open. That the American nation approves of the conference and its accomplishments is best shown in the public opinion which indorses all the treaties born at the conference and the ratification by the Senate in pursuance to the public opinion of the Yap treaty, the first of the seven. Unless the Senate loses its contact with the public all the other treaties will be ratified for the same reason, and the epochal work of the first year of Harding's administration in international affairs will have been officially sanctioned by the entire government which sponsored the limitation of armaments.

Even though these treaties may be hamstrung in the Senate by shrieking politicians of the Johnson stripe, nevertheless Harding's efforts will not have been in vain. A new ideal has been set alight in the world. There has been implanted in the hearts of the American people—in the hearts of the people of the world—an idea that cannot be killed by any Senate. President Harding has given something to the world that cannot be taken away.

GOOD TEAMWORK.

He has given much of his strength to see those who came to him, and no President has ever received more individuals at the White House than President Harding.

He has drawn to him and his associates the active co-operation of the men and women of the country, who want to return to the orderly ways which prevailed before the World War, and considering the tremendous obstacles which faced

PRESIDENT IS GUEST OF PRESS CLUB

"First Birthday" of His Administration Honored by News Writers.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A return to normal ways of government, President Harding tonight told members of the National Press Club, he considers an achievement of his first year in the White House. If nothing else had been accomplished, the President said, "the long step toward getting back to normal ways of government would seem to me to have been the achievement of the year."

The address was delivered at an entertainment given in honor of his first "official" birthday, and to mask the occasion a birthday cake surmounted by one candle was presented to him.

"I am not unmindful of the fact," he said, "that my predecessor was ill and that the government was in the drift of the reaction from the war. But problems of readjustment are infinitely more difficult than any of you can imagine."

Mr. Harding said he liked to throw aside the cares of official life and mingle with gatherings like his audience. "If there is one trouble with this White House job," he said, "it is being a human being."

A President, he said, cannot hold himself aloof and cannot find time to get all things done he would like to. "I never find myself done," he said. "I never find myself with my work completed. I don't believe there is a human being who can do all the work there is to be done in the President's office."

"It seems as though I had been President for twenty years," he continued, adding that life has been so full in the past year, "that there's scarcely an impression of life outstanding before I came to Washington except one; my viewpoint of the Senate compared with what it is today." He emphasized that he did not mean this in any unkind spirit.

There have been some plans which have not been worked out, Mr. Harding said in discussing his first year in the White House, and some dreams which have not come true.

"Maybe some fault lies with the Executive," he added, "but it can't be all, for it's a divided authority."

He asked the support of the newspaper men as molders of public opinion in his task of making "this republic of ours the best government in the world."

Mr. Harding was given an ovation when he entered the Press Club. A demonstration of radio telegraphy was in progress at the time and he became one of the most interested of the auditors.

NO SPECIAL SESSION.

Reapportionment is Denied.

Governor Flouts the South at Behest of Northern Politicians.

Mandatory Provisions of the State Constitution Are Disregarded.

BY THE WATCHMAN.

Disregarding urgent appeals from influential organizations and citizens in Southern California, Gov. Stephens announced yesterday that he will not call a special session of the Legislature to consider the question of Legislative reapportionment, his refusal to act having the effect of denying proportional representation to approximately 300,000 residents of counties in the southern end of the State.

The Governor's defiance of public opinion in Southern California means:

LAW IS DISREGARDED.

(1.) That mandatory provisions of the State Constitution requiring State legislators to vote a reapportionment bill based on Federal census returns of 1920 have been permitted by the Governor to be flagrantly disregarded.

(2.) That the reapportionment of 1910 will stand for at least another year and probably for many years.

(3.) That the tremendous population increase, business growth and industrial expansion in Southern California during the decade of 1910-20 will have no recognition whatsoever in the lawmaking body of California, a body organized on the principle of popular representation.

(4.) That selfish and embittered politicians in Northern California seeking profit at the expense of the people of this region will be encouraged in their attempts to penalize progress and prosperity south of the Tehachepi.

SHOWS SUBSERVIENCE.

Legislators and others acquainted with the reapportionment situation energetically charged the Governor yesterday with complete subservience to a group of Northern California State office-holders who believe that the State machine can be strengthened in the north through a slap in the face administered to the south. Gov. Stephens, who formerly lived in Los Angeles, and under whose administration the State tax burden has been increased nearly 75 per cent, has never made a decision evoking quicker protest or more genuine indignation than his arbitrary disposal of the reapportionment matter if the general comment yesterday is to be accepted as a criterion.

Although it is the common practice of the Governor and his supporters, when discussing reapportionment, to refer to the asserted "failure of the Legislature" to pass a reapportionment bill last year, the facts are that the administration's legislative program was so heavy and received such opposition that every move to bring up reapportionment was successfully blocked by administration representatives.

MACHINE IS BLAMED.

Having this condition in mind, Southern California legislators charge that the "failure" rests wholly with the executive and his wide-spreading machine.

His apologists in Los Angeles are eager to dismiss as "prejudiced"

FIENDISH CRIME REVEALED.

Weight Lashed to Neck of Battered Body of Retired Rancher Found in Surf Indicates Murder.

The discovery of the body of Julian F. Cumberland, wealthy retired rancher of Los Angeles, in the surf at Sunset Beach with a heavy weight bound to his neck confronted the Sheriff's forces of Los Angeles and Orange counties with a perplexing murder mystery yesterday.

Early developments in the investigation indicated that Mr. Cumberland might have committed suicide. Later clews have caused the officials to abandon the suicide theory for one of a murder, fiendishly committed.

The body was found by M. C. Brown of Bakersfield and J. W. Burrows of Los Angeles. It was lying on the sand with the head toward the water at a point ten feet from the highest water mark. A heavy piece of iron was bound to the neck with a piece of baling wire, and deep bruises were found on the head and wrists.

NOTE MAILED TO FAMILY.

Mr. Cumberland disappeared from his home at 131 West Avenue Fifty-one last Friday morning. A note, mailed in Los Angeles, was received yesterday morning by the dead man's family. It stated:

"Do not spend any money which I have produced by honesty and hard application in hunting for me. I am buried in the Pacific Ocean and will never be found."

The note was given to the authorities at the Sheriff's office and was later called for by Sheriff Jackson of Orange county. Sheriff Jackson expressed the belief that Mr. Cumberland was the victim of a violent death. The wound on the head indicated that it had been caused by a blow that had inflicted death. Bruises on the wrists suggested that the aged man's hands had been securely bound before the body had been thrown into the surf. The face also showed marks of having been severely beaten.

Sheriff Jackson is working on the theory that Mr. Cumberland had been slain by a brutal beating while the victim was bound hand and foot, that the bonds were later cut and the body was then thrown into the ocean.

Members of the dead man's family declared last night that Mr. Cumberland had no enemies, that he always enjoyed the best of health, had always displayed an extreme happiness in his life and family, and had never shown any indications of having been despondent.

He was reported to have possessed a fortune of $200,000. Three years ago he sold a 160-acre orange ranch at La Verne and since then had lived a retired life with his wife and one son.

If he was slain, the investigators believe that he was murdered by persons who had either succeeded in bunkoing him out of a large sum of money or were attempting to do so at the time of Mr. Cumberland's disappearance.

Shortly before leaving his home in Garvanza Friday morning he had taken a short trip to a grocery in the neighborhood for provisions. He again left home about 11 a.m., apparently in jovial spirits.

LAST SEEN IN BANK.

When last seen Mr. Cumberland was at the Highland Park Bank, where he had gone to open his safe-deposit box. Whether he had made the trip to the bank to de-

WHO WILL WED PRINCE OF WALES, TEA TOPIC.

English Dames Twitter Over Cups, Predict Future Princess; Many Girls Like Barkis.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, March 4.—Now that Mary is safely and properly married, the leading tea-time topic in Britain is the matrimonial future of Edward, Mary's brother. Soon now the subject will provide the chief conversational course at the world's dinner tables. For the future wife of the Prince of Wales undoubtedly will be disclosed within the next few days.

Already it has been promised that a definite statement regarding the event will be forthcoming on the Prince's return from India. The report, it may be added, though not officially made, was undoubtedly officially inspired. Further, it is reinforced by circumstances which lead one to believe that the lying jade who has lately been working overtime on the Prince's matrimonial prospects will some time this summer receive her final quietus, at any rate so far as the royal marriage is concerned.

WANT ENGLISH GIRL.

Right away it may be predicted with an unusual degree of assurance that the general hope obtaining in Britain that the royal bride will be an English girl will be realized. The fall of so many monarchs in Europe and the comparatively unstable condition of most of those that remain mean that romance will almost certainly be the governing factor of the Prince's marriage. He will marry for the same reason that the plain man marries—for love.

That cruel and senseless formula, "for purposes of state," which was a contributory cause of more than half of old Europe's troubles, will be the last and least consideration to affect his choice of a throne mate.

FEW ARE ELIGIBLE.

In any case there are exceedingly few eligible brides among the princesses of the reigning houses that have survived the world conflict.

Princess Yolanda of Italy, Princess Elizabeth of Rumania, Princess Margaret of Denmark and Princess Helen of Greece exhaust the list. None of them is likely to share the throne of Britain.

At one time perhaps there were real grounds for supposing that Princess Yolanda would be the Prince's choice. She is a beautiful dark-eyed girl, and during the war, while the Prince was on the Italian front, they were often together.

But the Prince's later travels in America, Canada, Australia and elsewhere, which brought him into contact with the cream of the world's womanhood, have turned his attention in other directions, with the result that the possibility of an alliance with the royal house of Italy is no longer seriously discussed.

FAVORS BRIDESMAID?

Another speculation that may be ventured with almost equal safety is that the future Princess of Wales is one of the eight bridesmaids at Princess Mary's wedding. They comprise the flower of Britain's girlhood, and it is not aiming a shot in the dark to assert that at least two of them will presently be the central figures in brilliant marriages.

It is certainly hardly creditable that the Prince's future wife is not included in the list of bridesmaids at the Lascelles wedding. The event marked the climax of the social season, and it is generally accepted by those competent to judge that Princess Mary had in her retinue the girl who one day will receive Her Royal Highness's homage.

Two of the eight bridesmaids being under age, the eligibles are reduced to six. Of these two are cousins of the Prince, namely, Princess Maud and Lady Victoria Mary Cambridge.

PRINCESS MAUD FAVORITE.

Princess Maud, a daughter of the Princess Royal, is a good-looking girl of 28 years. She is the favorite niece of the King, who delights in her company, especially on his holidays in the highlands. Together they have stalked deer, flogged salmon rivers—the Princess has the distinction of having landed the largest salmon ever caught on Deeside—and shot grouse, while the Princess further commands her royal uncle's admiration by reason of her horsemanship. She is an expert swimmer, a clever linguist and a skillful musician, and will have no difficulty in finding a husband when the time comes.

Lady Victoria Mary Cambridge is the elder daughter of the Queen's brother, the Marquis of Cambridge, and a god-daughter of Queen Victoria. Pretty, fair-haired, rosy-cheeked and only 24 years old, she has been very simply reared, and shines to better advantage as an ordinary, unaffected English girl than as a debutante.

There are no indications, however, that either of these decidedly charming princesses will be called on to assume the role of wife to the world's most interesting young man.

On the other hand, there are reasons for suggesting that the girl whose lot it will be to play this difficult and exacting part is to be found among the remaining four bridesmaids.

The charm and beauty of Lady Doris Gordon-Lennox, granddaughter of the Duke of Richmond, who entertains the King at Goodwood every summer, are proverbial in her circle. She is 24 and enjoys the distinction of being a tremendous favorite with the younger members of the royal family. She is a clever horsewoman and a good all-round sports girl.

SENSATIONAL DEBUT.

Another of the four on whom the Graces have bestowed no small share of their heavenly largesse is Lady Mary Thynne, whose father is the Marquis of Bath. She is 19 years old and made her debut in society a year ago, when she created rather more than a mild sensation in Mayfair. She happens to be the only one of the bevy of bridesmaids who affects bobbed hair, and very charming she looks.

Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, youngest daughter of Lord and Lady Strathmore, is 21 years old and wholly pretty. She is already well versed as a hostess, having several times deputized for her mother. Quite recently she entertained at Glamis Castle, her parents' famous Scots home, the Queen and the Duke of York, the Prince of Wales' brother. Glamis is a medieval stronghold, to which is attached the legend of a first-class mystery, the dark secret of which is said to be known only to the living Lord Strathmore and his heir.

A good many knowing people will be surprised if Glamis does not in the near future come into the limelight as a background to a first-class love romance.

Last, but not least, there is Lady Rachael Cavendish, daughter of the Duke of Devonshire, whose family has always been on terms of genuine friendship with the British royal house.

Lady Rachael is 19 years old and extremely good looking. She and the Prince of Wales were together a great deal during the Prince's trip to Canada, and it is betraying what in well informed circles is now only half a secret to say that the name of this charming and vivacious daughter of one of Britain's oldest and richest families is expected to be coupled with that of the heir-apparent when the royal nuptials are at last announced.

RACHAEL INTERESTS.

Undoubtedly there are tangible reasons for believing that the Prince is more than ordinarily interested in Lady Rachael. When he reached Canada, on his way to the United States of America, he stayed with the Duke, who was then Governor-General of the Dominion, and enjoyed an informal holiday with the five daughters of the house.

It was noticeable that he was most often in the company of Lady Rachael, and that he gladly seized an opportunity of returning to Ottawa at a later stage of the trip.

It is not at all unlikely that time will prove that during his stay with the Duke there was laid between the Prince and Lady Rachael Cavendish the foundation of a friendship which may quite possibly have a far-reaching effect not only on the fortunes of both families but on those of Britain and conceivably of the world.

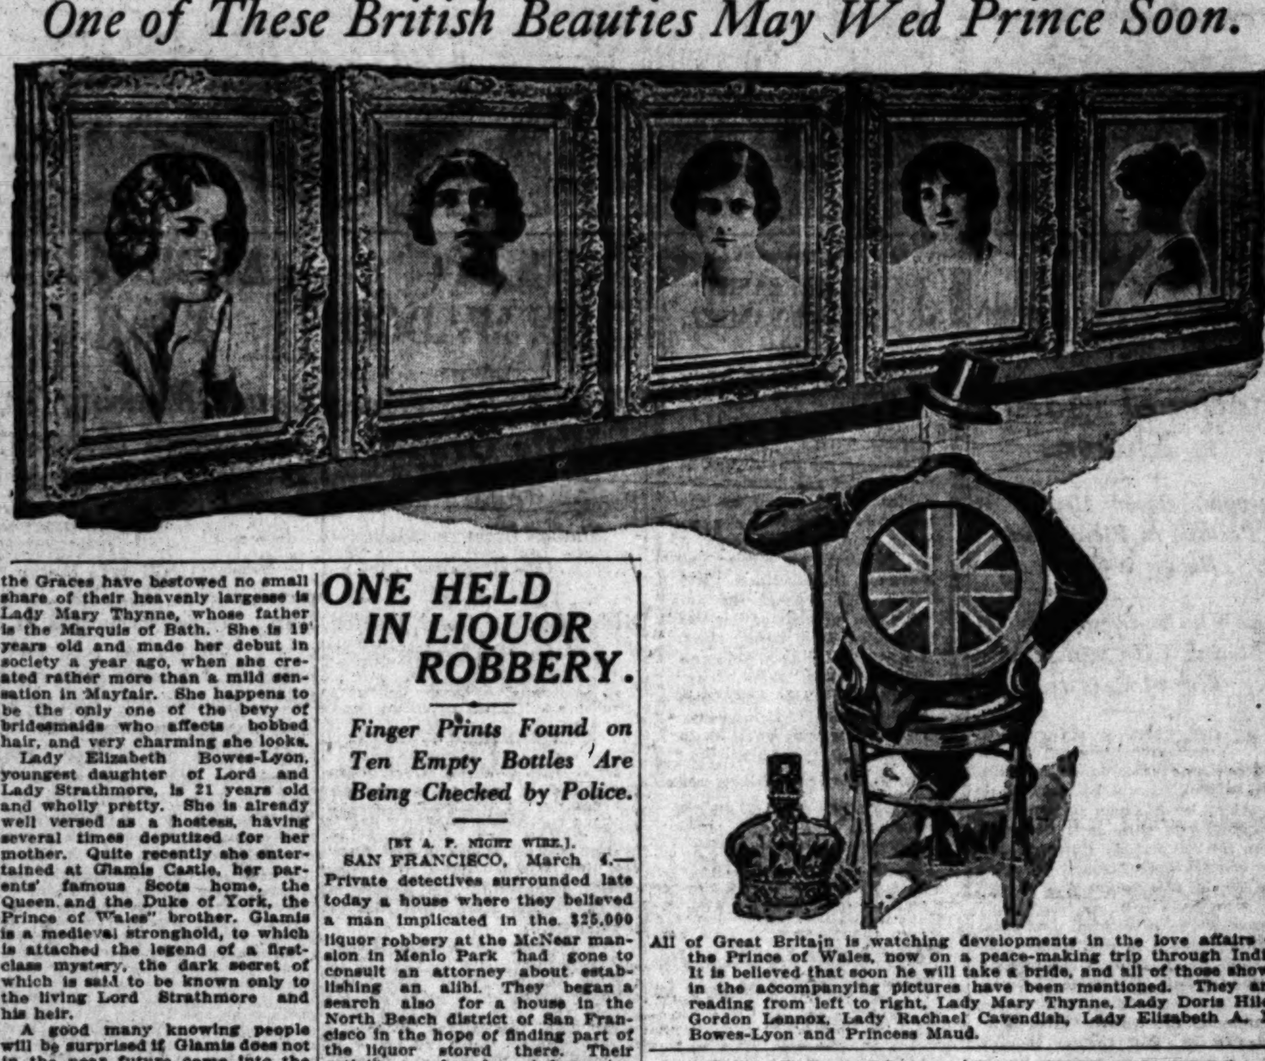
One of These British Beauties May Wed Prince Soon.



All of Great Britain is watching developments in the love affairs of the Prince of Wales, now on a peace-making trip through India. It is believed that soon he will take a bride, and all of those shown in the accompanying pictures have been mentioned. They are, reading from left to right, Lady Mary Thynne, Lady Doris Hilda Gordon Lennox, Lady Rachael Cavendish, Lady Elizabeth A. M. Bowes-Lyon and Princess Maud.

HUGE WIRELESS BUILT AT MAGDALENA BAY.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—Magadalena Bay, that remote harbor on the west side of the peninsula of Lower California, which was the scene of United States naval maneuvers several years ago, has come into new distinction.

Announcement is made by the Mexican government that it has about finished the construction upon the shore of the bay of the largest wireless station upon the Pacific Coast of this country. It is stated that by means of this station, wireless communication may be had with all other wireless stations in Mexico, also with Honolulu and other wireless stations upon Pacific island groups.

ONE HELD IN LIQUOR ROBBERY.

Finger Prints Found on Ten Empty Bottles Are Being Checked by Police.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—Private detectives surrounded late today a house where they believed a man implicated in the $25,000 liquor robbery at the McNear mansion in Menlo Park had gone to consult an attorney about establishing an alibi. They began a search also for a house in the North Beach district of San Francisco in the hope of finding part of the liquor stored there. Their activity was based on information furnished by newspaper men.

These developments followed the discovery of a truck and touring car thought to have been used by some of the nine bandits who descended on the McNear residence Wednesday evening, bound Julien Hart, a San Francisco silk manufacturer, who has leased the house, and members of his household, held an all-night drunken revel and broke open the concrete liquor vault of the McNear family. In the truck and touring car were revenue stamps and labels, apparently washed off liquor bottles, and a chisel.

Nine robbery warrants were received here today from San Mateo county authorities. One was for Adrien Goursolle, arrested yesterday in his home where $3000 worth of the stolen liquor was found, another for his son Antone, an automobile bus driver, who is still being sought, while seven were John Doe warrants.

The charge of possessing stolen property filed yesterday against the elder Goursolle was supplemented today by another of violating the prohibition law by having a still in his home.

The San Mateo county authorities found distinct finger prints today on ten empty bottles at the McNear mansion. The bottles were sent to San Francisco today so that enlarged photographs of the prints might be taken and compared with police records. This work the police expect to do Monday.

Ted Baisden, employee of a garage, tonight told detectives that he had rented the truck used in the liquor robbery to a man whom he knew by sight but not by name. Officers made plans for an arrest on the basis of the description furnished by Baisden.

RAILWAY CONCESSION MODIFIED BY MEXICO.

AMERICAN'S HEIRS TO BUILD LINE BELOW BORDER; FORM COMPANY.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MONTEREY (Mex.) March 4.—Information has just been received here of the modification by the Department of Communications and Public Works of the Mexican government of the concession granted in 1912 to the late Richard Honey for the construction of a railroad between Pachuca and Tampico.

The concession is now held by the heirs of Mr. Honey, who left an estate valued at several million dollars, consisting largely of mining and other properties in Mexico. He was the builder and owner of the Hidalgo and Northeastern Railway, which is now a part of the National Railways of Mexico.

The new line will be known as the Pachuca and Tampico Railroad, it is stated. The Honey interests have organized a company to carry the project to completion. In accordance with the modification of the original concession and in view of the fact that eighty-three kilometers of the line between Pachuca and Ixmiquilpan have been constructed, the company is to commence the general survey of the railroad within three months after the date of the contract, the complete plans to be submitted to the Department of Communications and Public Works within a period of nine months.

Construction work must be started within a period of two months after the plans of the first sixty kilometers have been approved, this extension to be completed within twelve months thereafter. The remainder of the line is to be built at the rate of seventy kilometers per year, the entire road to be completed within a period of four years.

WHISKY HIDDEN IN SHIP'S STEAM PIPES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—Customs officers boarded the liner Ventura in port yesterday from the Far East and noticed several seamen smelling escaping steam from the boiler. They investigated and smelled a strong aroma of Scotch whisky.

Investigation disclosed 120 quart bottles of whisky cached in the steam pipes. About a dozen bottles of the liquor were found to have exploded due to the excessive heat of the steam.

JAPS PLAN TO LEAVE SHANTUNG

Taking Steps to Carry Out Treaty Faithfully, Says Foreign Office.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TOKIO, March 4.—The Foreign Office has announced that Japan is taking steps to carry out the Shantung treaty in a most faithful manner. A commission composed of high officials has been organized to carry out the terms, commencing with the withdrawal of the troops.

"Not a Japanese bayonet will be left in Shantung within three months," a high official said. "Our response to charges of bad faith will be facts and actions which the world can see."

Later the committee will be enlarged to deal with the larger questions, the withdrawal of consular jurisdiction, etc., wherein it is intimated that Japan is likely to take the lead in co-operating with China as soon as the latter is politically reorganized.

"When that time will be is hard to say," the same official said. "The trouble is that so many persons appear to regard China in the same light as they do European countries whereas political and government conditions in China are entirely different."

Girl Mayor Has Black Eye; Mean Man is Blamed.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FAIRPORT (O.) March 4.—Dr. Amy Kaukone, girl Mayor of this village, has a black eye, according to village officers, the result of being struck in the face by an unidentified man. Her assailant escaped.

The attack, which took place yesterday, was not reported to the police until today. The man went to Dr. Kaukone's office, where he is said to have started an argument with the Mayor about a reported new ordinance regulating soft-drink parlors.

As the Mayor turned away, her assailant struck her and ran.

CEMETERY HELD AGED CACHE OF LIQUOR.

NEW ENGLAND FOREFATHERS RESTED WITH RUM, RYE, WINE, ETC.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BOSTON, Feb. 28.—Workmen excavating just across Tremont street from the old Granary burying ground, where repose the bones of Paul Revere and other New England forefathers, set up a cry of buried treasure.

They had turned up a fifty-year-old cache of liquor, said to have been stowed away at the time of the great Boston fire in 1872.

It consisted of two hogsheads of old New England rum and a quantity of Madeira wine, Thorndyke rye, champagne, gin and other rare liquors.

In the confusion that followed, the liquor disappeared mysteriously The diggers said pedestrians got most of it, although a spirit of gaiety and good cheer was said to have prevailed on the workings the rest of the day.

Old Institution is Gone.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

LEXINGTON, March 4.—Court day, a century-old institution in Kentucky, has suffered a painful jolt here. The Circuit Court, through an abatement order, has taken away from it Cheapside, a public square in the center of the business district, where farmers and traders for miles around gathered in numbers on the second Monday in each month to swap horses and to trade anything from harness to homes. And now, for the first time in more than 100 years, they are not permitted to meet in the historic old square. The lower court said they made of it a nuisance.

BAY CITY OFFICERS HAVE LOST FRIEND.

FALLON MADE HANDCUFFS HIS HOBBY; GAVE MANY TO POLICEMEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—Policemen of San Francisco lost a friend in the recent death here of Albert Fallon, property owner, who made handcuffs his hobby and who presented about 400 sets of the steel wristlets to local officers.

Fallon made a study of handcuffs, considering them an extremely important part of the police equipment. Whenever a new policeman was assigned to a beat on which Fallon had property, the latter would invariably get acquainted with the officer and send him a pair of handcuffs.

Fallon, it was said, loved to repeat stories told him by policemen of their experiences with handcuffs. Each year he sent for catalogues showing the new styles and would discuss the changes made in their manufacture.

Favors Taking Care of Ill, Injured or Jobless ex-Soldiers.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PITTSBURG (Pa.) March 4.—"I am sorry but I am not in favor of the soldier bonus bill," said Charles M. Schwab today. "I am in favor of taking the best of care of all injured or ill or jobless ex-service men, but if I had been a World War soldier and had come out unhurt I would be so proud of having had the opportunity to fight for my beloved country that I would not touch a nickel of a bonus.

"No doubt when the nation has recovered and the veterans are growing old the nation will aid them in the same way as it pensioned the Civil War veterans. I would be in favor of that. But I think the right spirit of young, strong Americans is to get out and make a way for themselves. No, I am not in favor of their receiving any aid in buying homes or farms."

DEATH LIST NOW FIFTEEN.

Two More May Die from Bus Collision.

Driver of Auto is Blamed by Watchman.

Criminal Prosecutions May Result, is Report.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CLEVELAND (O.) March 4.—The death list in the crash at Painesville last night between a New York Central Express train and an automobile bus mounted to fifteen, late today, when Mrs. Martin Steinbeck of Fairport, who sustained a fractured skull, in the collision, died in the Painesville Hospital. Of the four remaining injured, two are expected to die.

George E. McGhee of Medina, who died at the Painesville Hospital this morning of a fractured skull, was the fourteenth victim.

SAYS WARNING IGNORED.

At Coroner M. H. Bradley's inquest this afternoon to fix the responsibility for the tragedy, A. W. Barnes, New York Central Railroad watchman at the crossing, testified that the bus which was struck by the flyer, went on the tracks oblivious of the signal of a white lantern warning swung directly in its path for a full minute by him. Barnes testified that he saw the train's headlight when it was fully four miles away. He saw the bus coming down the street about two minutes before the crash, he said.

City Manager Thomas Wyman of Painesville, and other city and Lake county officials, also testified in substance corroborating Barnes.

In his opinion, Barnes testified, the train was going almost forty miles an hour at the time.

WEIGHT LASHED TO MAN'S NECK.

posit funds or to withdraw bonds or money from the deposit box could not be determined last night. The deposit box will be opened tomorrow morning, when the bank opens for business, and a thorough investigation will be made of its contents. If it develops that any large amount of money or bonds has been removed from the box the officers believe it will strengthen the theory that he was being victimized by bunco men or swindled in a fake business or charitable deal.

"Mr. Cumberland was the type of a man that bunko men invariably select as their victims," declared Rex Kratz, the dead man's son-in-law, last night. "He was a typical rancher, extremely honest, believing there is some good in all people, easy to make friends, garrulous at times, and in general, an 'easy mark' for crooks."

HANDWRITING DIFFERS.

The note received by Mr. Cumberland's family yesterday was not written in his ordinary style of penmanship, so familiar to his wife and his six children. This discovery also strengthens the murder theory.

"I studied the note very closely," said Mr. Kratz. "Though it was slightly similar to the handwriting of Mr. Cumberland, it did not appear genuine to me. In a way it looked as if it were written while the author was extremely agitated or had been forced to write it by some other person guiding his hand. Mr. Cumberland is an excellent penman and very neat in his writing.

"This note was untidy, splotched with ink and written on the back of a Goodyear Company advertisement. Mr. Cumberland has never in his life had any business with this company nor has he ever had such literature or advertisements in his possession. The signature was written in a different kind of ink than the ink used in the body of the letter and did not resemble his usual signature."

When the body was found, there was no money in the pockets of his clothes. Mr. Kratz stated that his father-in-law always carries money, sometimes large amounts, with him.

At the time of his disappearance he was completing a deal to enter the real estate business with C. W. E. Griffith of Highland Park. The deal had almost been closed and Mr. Cumberland had left all papers relative to the business proposition lying on top of his desk ready for signatures. Shortly before his departure from his home on Friday morning he had expressed a keen interest in once again "getting into the harness," by entering the business field, explaining he had been idle too long since selling his La Verne ranch.

TO STUDY TIDES.

In addition to the investigation into the status of his finances to determine if he had withdrawn an exceptionally large sum from the bank shortly before his disappearance, an inquiry will also be made tomorrow regarding the tides and currents on the coast at the point where the body was found. This will be made in an effort to determine from which direction the body had floated before being washed up on the beach. The point where the body was found is a lonely stretch of beach, rarely traveled and hidden from a road extending between Huntington Beach and Sunset Beach, which is seldom visited by travelers. No one had reported seeing the body in the surf.

The condition of the body indicated that it had not been thrown into the water while Mr. Cumberland was alive. If he had been alive when the body entered the water the air in the lungs would have caused it to float with the tide for a great distance. If it had been dead, the body would have sunk immediately and would not have floated for several days. These two facts strengthened the theory that Mr. Cumberland, after being slain, had been left on the beach, where the waves occasionally washed up to the body.

A Coroner's inquest to determine the actual cause of death will be held in Santa Ana tomorrow.

Scarf Pins, New and Attractive

Men of TODAY are not satisfied with the scarf pins of YESTERDAY. THEN, designs were so similar, so stereotyped, that one man's pin looked like every other man's. How different today, for now, no matter what the material used, to be desirable a scarf pin must have not only beauty of design, but ORIGINALITY and CHARACTER AS WELL.

For years the Davidson store has been known for its splendid stock of men's jewelry. The pin illustrated is one of many that are in every way charming and are without duplicates anywhere. We WOULD ENJOY SHOWING YOU THIS STOCK WHENEVER YOU CAN FIND IT CONVENIENT TO CALL.

Ten perfect blue white diamonds, one lustrous Oriental pearl. The exquisite design is hand wrought from purest platinum. A scarf pin of marked distinction, most reasonably priced at $100.

RADIO PHONE AIDS FARMER.

Will be Kept Informed on Grain Prices.

News to be Broadcasted Each Half Hour.

Radius of 500 Miles of Chicago Benefits.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, March 4.—The farmer following his furrow need be no more than 30 minutes behind his city brother in receiving news of the factors which determine prices of agricultural products, Robert McDougal, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, said tonight in outlining the board's plans to broadcast crop market reports by radio beginning Monday.

The radio system, which will cover a radius of 500 miles of Chicago, was characterized by President McDougal as the "greatest forward step in 2000 years," in bringing the farmer in contact with the factors that make the price of his product.

AIDS GRAIN GROWER.

President McDougal's statement follows, in part:

"The telephone and the automobile moved the farms closer to the cities. They will be brought still closer by our radio telephone service. It is our belief that our half-hour bulletins, giving not only quotations, but fundamental news of the crop and market situation throughout the world, will enable the grain grower to buy or sell as confidently and almost as quickly as if he were in Chicago.

"The radio system will cover the territory within a radius of 500 miles of this city. In this area there are, I am informed, thousands of radio sets in villages and on farms. Even on farms where there is no apparatus, there are telephones, and the nearby village will have the radio reports.

ELEVATORS WILL HELP.

"I believe that country grain elevators, which are scattered everywhere, will serve as stations for our reports, being distributed by them still further by telephone to such farms as have not their own radios.

"A day may mean much to the farmer in marketing his grain. Prices in an open competitive market adjust themselves at high speed in changing conditions.

"For many years the farmer has complained that his isolation left him at a disadvantage in marketing his grain."

LEADERS OF UNIONS ARE IN MEXICO CITY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—Walter J. Yarrow, adviser to California oil workers; J. W. Kelley, president of the machinists' union, and P. J. Marrion, president of the iron workers' union, have arrived in Mexico City, according to El Universal Graphic, to effect cordial relations between American and Mexican workmen.

They were received this morning by Senor Valenzuela, Subsecretary of Interior, representing Secretary of Interior Calles.

Want Anti-Alien Land Law.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) March 4.—An initiative petition for an anti-alien land law similar to that of California will be circulated throughout Oregon within a few weeks, according to announcement at the meeting here today of the State executive committee of the American Legion. The bill will be almost identical with that which was passed by the house at the last session of the State Legislature, but which failed to pass the Senate.

STEAMER IS REFLOATED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NORFOLK (Va.) March 4.—The Dutch steamer Baani, outbound from Baltimore, which went ashore today in a dense fog at the eastern entrance of middle grounds, five miles northeast of Cape Henry, floated herself this afternoon without sustaining damaged.

FORMER LOCAL WOMAN DEAD.

Woman 104 Years Old Dead; Agricultural Bill by Committee.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ZION (Ill.) March 4.—Mrs. Delia King, 104 years old, formerly of Los Angeles, died today from influenza. More than forty years ago she was said to have contracted an incurable disease and was told that she could live only a few months. Mrs. King was born in St. Johns, N. B., Jan. 23, 1818. Her living descendants are nine children, seventeen grandchildren and fifteen great-grandchildren.

Blow Taps for Ancient Frigate Prey to Flames.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—The charred hulk of the historic frigate Granite State, whose keel was laid for the debutante American navy more than a century ago, was towed toward the junk pile today from the spot in the Hudson at Ninety-sixth street, where she went up in flames and down in the mud. A bugler of the naval militia, which used the frigate as a training ship during recent years sounded taps as tugs pulled her across the river. On the opposite bank 300 tons of copper in the ship will be salvaged and her hardwood removed and sold to coffin manufacturers.

The Granite State never fired a gun at an enemy, nor was fired upon, in her long years of service. Her weight and cumbersome line—she looked almost like a bulky houseboat—kept her out of action, or that at least, is the explanation given by those familiar with the old ship's history.

When her keel was laid in 1814 the frigate was designated U.S.S. Alabama, and she bore that name until 1847, when she was rebuilt and rechristened, this time as the New Hampshire, a name which stuck until the Navy turned her over to the militia years afterward. Then she became the Granite State. It was not until 1855 that the frigate returned to sea. Three gold spikes were supposed to be encased by the aged wooden beams somewhere within the old ship. Each is reputed to weight two pounds, and to have been driven by a State Governor. These spikes will be sought during the salvaging operations.

EXTORTION CHARGE AGAINST JAPANESE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, March 4.—Six Japanese residents of Walnut Greve, Sacramento county, have been charged with extortion, it was announced today by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Shelley. It is charged that by threats to accuse Y. Yokoi with committing a statutory offense involving a young Japanese girl, they induced U. Ishida, a relative of Yokoi, to pay them $2000.

The accused are O. Murayama, father of the girl; J. Tachi, T. Namura, dentist at Walnut Grove; G. Endow, J. Oto, and J. Yishihara. The accused men had not been arrested today.

THIRD GIRL BEATEN AS RESULT OF TRIAL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—Anna Larkin, 14-year-old sister of two girls who were found unconscious and badly beaten in a vacant lot several weeks ago because, they said, they had testified against Antonio Navarro in a white slave trial, was taken to the Central Emergency Hospital today with bruises on her head and face.

She said she had been struck in the basement of her home by a man whom she recognized as one of those implicated in the mistreatment of her sisters, Irene and Winnie.

DETROIT WORKERS GO BACK TO JOBS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DETROIT, March 4.—The number of workers employed in the chief industries here has almost doubled since March 1, 1921, according to a report made public today by the Employers' Association. An increase of 8664 workers was shown for February, as compared with January.

The total employed by the seventy-nine association plants was given as 121,763 as against 62,878 a year ago. These plants normally employ 200,000 workers.

RETURN OF WINE URGED BY JORDAN.

Secretary of State Gives Views on Volstead Act as Applied on Coast.

Secretary of State Jordan incorporated in a written statement yesterday a plea for the return of "wholesome beer and good wines."

Only by permission to use these beverages will the State and the nation be able to check a growing discontent and contempt for the law among the masses, Mr. Jordan believes.

"I will not be a hypocrite," wrote Mr. Jordan. "I am not afraid to take a stand and act and express myself as my conscience dictates. I believe in temperance—not in prohibition: in regulation—not in suppression."

Mr. Jordan, who recently indorsed for re-election Gov. Stephens, ostensibly a 100 per cent dry candidate, presents his views on the prohibition situation as follows:

"The Volstead Act has now been in force for over two years. What has resulted? Today, because the profits of illicit trade are so great, there are thousands of places where liquor of some kind can be obtained, where, before the enactment of the law, there were but hundreds. In thousands of homes can be found intoxicating beverages, where, before the enactment, none was kept. The law is disregarded by all classes of people.

"Behind closed doors, in secret places, away from public observation, men and women, young and old of both sexes, many who never before indulged, are transgressing.

"The vilest concoctions are being sold everywhere. Conscienceless men are amassing fortunes and the public health is imperiled.

"Something must be done. The good people of our State and of the nation must realize the situation. There is only one way out. There is only one way by which the great army of bootleggers and law-breakers will be forced to discontinue their illegal traffic.

"Give the people wholesome beer and good wines. The instant their use is permitted there will cease to be a demand for the concoctions now being so generally used.

"I make this statement not for the approval of the men and women of California who opposed prohibition, but for the God-fearing, law-abiding, humanity-loving people of our great State who labored conscientiously for the amendment; asking, begging them to give it thoughtful, prayerful consideration to the end that conditions may be speedily remedied."

WHEAT FOR CHRISTIANS IS LOADED.

Shipment of Foodstuffs Consigned to Destitute of Transcaucasia.

One more "mercy cargo" of 1200 tons of foodstuffs and clothing, donated by Californians for the destitute Christians of the Near East, will finish loading tomorrow at the harbor where the American - Hawaiian intercostal freighter Kentuckian is waiting to set out with the shipment for New York, where trans-shipment will be made direct to Batoum, Transcaucasia. This is the third shipment of supplies to be dispatched from Southern California to the Near East.

The supplies gathered by the Los Angeles Molokan Relief Society will be included in this shipment. These supplies consist of several tons of flour, 3000 sacks of beans and seventy-seven bales of clothing and will be distributed among friends and relatives of the Los Angeles Molokans. Further shipments of supplies will be sent by the society from time to time.

Included in the supplies being loaded on the Kentuckian are 275 tons of beans donated mainly by Ventura, Los Angeles and Santa Barbara county growers.

Cash donations will continue to be collected by The Times for the relief of the Molokans. This fund is to be turned over to the American Relief Administration to be spent for the purchase of food and clothing for the Molokans. The fund now totals $925.91, yesterday's receipts being $15, as follows: Mary Bell Sherman, Claremont, $5; Anonymous, $10.

Mother Brings Body of Girl from Europe.

Mrs. William St. Clair Creighton yesterday arrived in Los Angeles from Paris, bringing with her the body of her daughter, Mrs. Audrey St. Clair Ryan, for burial in Rosedale Cemetery tomorrow. Mrs. Ryan died in Paris several weeks ago.

Mrs. Ryan formerly lived in Los Angeles and her mother returned here with the body for funeral services to be conducted tomorrow at 2 p.m. at St. John's Episcopal Church, by Rev. George Davidson. The body was taken to Bresee Brothers' undertaking establishment.

YANKEES LOSE LAND GRANTS IN MEXICO.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MONTEREY (Mex.) March 4.—Forfeitures of large land concessions held by Americans upon the peninsula of Lower California for failure to comply with their contracts are announced by the Mexican government.

It is stated in this connection that the government is considering a plan for the colonizing of Lower California exclusively with Mexicans. The proposition involves the construction of extensive systems of irrigation by the building of storage dams, canals and ditches, and the reclamation of large areas of waste lands.

Special efforts will be made, it is announced, to induce Mexicans in Texas, New Mexico and California to return to their native country and locate upon these lands.

NEWS OF THE STATE CAPITAL.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, March 4.—Buying tires for the State's fleet of 974 automobiles is one of the big items that enters into the annual upkeep cost of the land fleet.

Announcement has just been made by the State Board of Control that the tire bill for 1922 will be $75,000. This figure is based on contracts that have been awarded by the State Purchasing Department.

Besides keeping the automobiles in tires, the State has to purchase hundreds of gallons of oil and gasoline for their operation and pays out thousands of dollars in repair bills.

It also will cost considerable during the year to keep the State departments stocked with electric light globes, as a contract has just been awarded for $20,000 worth of lamps for 1922.

A long and bitter dispute between the State Board of Control and the State Board of Equalization, dating back to the time when John F. Neylan ruled the Board of Control, over allowing expense claims of members of the Board of Equalization has been settled by the Supreme Court in favor of the latter board.

Since the time of Neylan, who was the right-hand man of Gov. Johnson, the Board of Control has refused to allow the claims of members of the Board of Equalization for transportation and hotel accommodations in attending board meetings at the capital.

It was the contention of the Board of Control that Sacramento was the official headquarters for the Board of Equalization under the law and that therefore expenses incurred while attending meetings here could not be charged against the State.

In deciding against the Board of Control in a test suit brought by John C. Corbett of San Francisco, a member of the Board of Equalization, the Supreme Court ruled it has been the universal practice for the State to allow not only the railroad fare, but also hotel bills incurred by officials in attending such meetings as are held by the Board of Equalization.

Members of the Board of Equalization hold expense claims dating back for many years and totaling several thousand dollars, and in view of the Supreme Court's ruling the State probably will have to dig up the money.

California lands have been used in various ways to advance promotions schemes, but Edwin T. Keiser, State Real Estate Commissioner, has been requested to pass on a sales stunt that in his opinion is unique.

Ernest Loomis of Peekskill, N. Y., proposes to give away one acre of land near Forest Hill, Placer county, to every person who purchases from him a $250 phonograph and a $50 course of study in music.

Loomis wrote to Keiser asking him to visit and pass upon the 100-acre tract, but Loomis has been forced to abandon the idea. In spite of the glowing terms in which Loomis describes the property in the "land of sunshine and flowers," Keiser has just learned that at present it is covered with more than three feet of snow.

There are 827 Japanese minors owning real and personal property in California, according to figures compiled by Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan from reports filed in his office by guardians of these minors.

The value of the holdings and the acreage of the agricultural lands held in their names is not shown by a large majority of the reports, although the law intended this information should be given.

Sales and regulations have been prepared by State Surveyor-General W. S. Kingsbury to govern the leasing of minerals in State lands in accordance with the gas and oil leasing bill passed by the last Legislature.

Under the terms of this act the State reserves the mineral rights in all State lands, even when sold, and in order to develop oil, gas or other minerals, the holder must obtain a permit from the Surveyor-General. For the privilege of the lease the State exacts an annual royalty of 12½ per cent of the total production.

Automobiles and trucks owned by irrigation districts are not entitled to exempt motor vehicle licenses, according to an opinion given by Atty.-Gen. Webb to Charles J. Chenu, director of the State division of motor vehicles.

Regardless of the fact that the irrigation districts claim to be political subdivisions of the State, Webb says automobiles and trucks owned by them do not come within the exempt license provisions of the Motor Vehicle Act.

HUGE MEXICAN POWER PROJECT IS PLANNED.

ENGLISH CORPORATION WILL START WORK IN STATE OF TABASCO.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FRONTERA (Mex.) March 4.—An electric power project of considerable magnitude is planned for the State of Tabasco. An English corporation has taken steps toward constructing a hydroelectric plant on the San Pedro River. It is stated that the proposed plant will have a capacity of 31,000 horsepower. A system of transmission lines to the principal cities and towns will be built.

Much industrial activity is expected in this State, especially upon the northern part of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec as a result of the recent bringing in of a 30,000-barred oil well near Concepcion by the Mexican Aguila (Eagle) Oil Company in which Lord Cowdray is interested.

The site of the hydroelectric plant is at a waterfall on the San Pedro River. The same company which is arranging to build this plant has under consideration the erection of a large plant for the manufacture of wood pulp, and to utilize the hardwoods which grow in this State.

DEAD MAN "ACCEPTS" PARTY BID

Rev. James Martin Peebles, Deceased Spiritualist, to Celebrate Long Life.

The death last month of Rev. James Martin Peebles, spiritualist leader, has not prevented him from accepting an invitation to attend his 100th birthday celebration, according to an announcement issued yesterday by the Longer Life League.

Dr. Peebles died February 15. Had he lived thirty-six more days he would have been 100 years old. He was "incarnated," his friends state, March 23, 1822. Some time ago the Longer Life League planned to hold a centenary celebration for the aged spiritualist leader.

The league's plans remain unchanged. The party will still be held and Dr. Peebles has assured members that he will attend, it was stated yesterday, and the seat of honor will be reserved for him.

The birthday party will be held on the third floor of 648 South Broadway, at 8 p.m. the 23rd inst.

Rabbi Isadore Myers, Bishop Irving S. Cooper of the Liberal Catholic Church and Rev. J. H. Ryland will be among the speakers.

PLAN EMMET OBSERVANCE.

The anniversary of the birth of Robert Emmet will be observed today at 8:15 p.m., in the Music-Art Hall, 233 South Broadway, under auspices of the American Association for Recognition of the Irish Republic. W. Joseph Ford will speak. Leslie V. Barnes, dressed in costume, will recite Emmet's speech from the dock, and H. J. Donnelly, Mrs. William Higgins and Miss Mildred Lersey are on the program, which will contain several musical numbers. Postmaster O'Brien will preside.

HEARST FLAYED BY "JOHN BULL."

Paper Replies to Attack on the Prince of Wales.

Calls William R. Archenemy of All Civilization.

"Assassinates Peace Angel for Dirty Shekels."

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Feb. 18.—"John Bull" of this date contains the following reply to an article printed in the various Hearst newspapers of America on the Prince of Wales:

A CORRUPT JOURNALIST.

Such anti-British feeling as there is in the United States today is largely due to the poisonous emanations of a group of newspapers controlled by a man whom I have no hesitation in describing as an archenemy of civilization. No one who reads the imbecile ravings of the New York American, and its associated journals, can doubt that the world would be a cleaner place but for the presence in it of Mr. William Randolph Hearst. In the tragic and pitiable story of Anglo-American misunderstanding, I regard Hearst as the villain of the piece. For reasons of pique, which are notorious in well-informed circles in London, Mr. Hearst has for years past carried on an unceasing vendetta against all things British, no depths of scurrility being too low for his purpose, and no heights of mendacity beyond his lying reach. Thorughout the war this muck-eating sensationalist raked up every scandal that could be used to the discredit of Great Britain and—as was proved at the time when his "International News Service" was kicked bag and baggage out of London by the authorities—actually fabricated "news" which would redound to the honor and glory of the common foes of civilization. I have said hard things about Mr. Hearst before, and I shall say them again as often as he crosses our path. I have never seen the man, but I have read columns from his newspapers, and I go by the smell.

THE FINAL OUTRAGE.

In the past it has been the cue of this unscrupulous newspaper proprietor through his principal journals and magazines to make great play with the age-long Irish grievance, and now that this stick no longer serves to beat the British government with, he has had to find a new weapon. As usual, he has picked it out of the gutter. I find in a recent issue of the New York Sunday American a foul and slanderous attack, not upon the British government or its policy, but upon the person of the Prince of Wales. For sheer depravity this onslaught upon the heir apparent to the English throne beats anything Hearst ever did, and that is saying a lot. Wise in his evil fashion, he recognizes that the Prince is the idol of the British people, and for the gratification of his spite against this nation he does not hesitate to spit his venom into the face of as clean a specimen of British manhood as ever breathed. Observe the vicious cunning of this rascal, who, when he selects a British personage of eminence for personal attack, deliberately chooses one who is precluded by his high position from defending himself against the shafts of slander. I do not propose to insult my readers by quoting in detail from the article which, in its monstrous suggestions, approaches the border-line of rank indecency. Far better let it be buried in the files of the New York American, beneath the filth which has followed it. Suffice it to say that the most harmless episodes in the Prince's social life in London have been made to bear an interpretation which only the debased mind of a William Randolph Hearst could have imagined. To add to the insult, the whole thing has been decked out with fantastic pictures and sketches drawn for the occasion under the insiration of the French comic artists. Here we see Hearst at his slimiest and dirtiest. It is a damnable insult to the best-loved figure in the British Empire. With such scribes to serve him, I am sorry for Uncle Sam.

I would most strongly urge that the time has come when the civilized sense of a war-weary world should curb the unruly tongues and pens of men like William Randolph Hearst, who for the price of a few dirty shekels are willing to assassinate the Angel of Peace.

WILD SLANDERS.

There is just this to be said. Like most malicious liars, Hearst considerably overdoes it, and some of his slanders upon the Prince of Wales, if they were less base, would be positively ludicrous. There may be a small section of the American public who will accept the defamation of the Prince without protest, but for the most part the common sense of readers on both sides of the Atlantic will revolt from the sheer falsehood of the picture with which this son of Ananias bedaubs the pages of the New York Sunday American. We are asked to believe, for instance, that the Prince is perfunctory in the discharge of his public duties; that he evinces an impatient contempt for the obligations of his great position, and is entirely lacking in those qualities of self-sacrifice and industry which we look for in the heir to the British throne. And this, if you please, at the moment when this young man who, if he had chosen, might have lived at ease in England, has cheerfully undertaken a mission so difficult and dangerous that in the breasts of most of us fear for his safety has mingled with admiration for his splendid pluck. All this Hearst knows, as well as I know it. But a blow at the Prince is a blow at the heart of England, and so the foul-mouthed bully strikes. This time we get not studied slander, but mere inane scurrility suited to the taste of the grown-up children. who

SCREAMING SCURRILITY.

For years past, William Randolph Hearst has been known as a hard hitter—always below the belt. Clean controversy has no attraction for him. During the war, it was by a campaign of organized lying, carried on simultaneously through his network of newspapers, that he contrived to checkmate the efforts of those who, like Theodore Roosevelt, and, at a much later date, Woodrow Wilson, saw that for America, as a freedom-loving nation, there was no choice between war and dishonor. In the Hearst picture, flashed to every corner of the United States in successive editions of his sensational journals, the Germans were the fine flower of knightly chivalry and the British the hob-nail booted bullies of Europe, deaf and blind to the appeal of mercy. No indictment of German infamy was too heavy for Hearst to turn it upside down and call high heaven to witness that Britain was the villain of the drama. As a brilliant contributor to the New York Tribune wrote at the time: "To enforce his subtle arguments Hearst employs all methods, from distortion of facts to counsels of cowardice and despair, and always he is following Germany's lead and serving her need of the moment." Nothing has ever been too bad for him, no argument too mean, no weapon too scurrilous. For Britain he has a consuming hatred which, during the war, wreaked itself upon the nameless heroes of her armies, as now it assails the honor of her Prince.

But do not let us mistake this screech-owl for the true American eagle, or these hoarse shriekings as the authentic voice of the American nation. We—the people of Great Britain and the United States—can be friends and so remain if only we learn to recognize our common enemies. For William Randolph Hearst and his kidney are the foes of America no less than of Great Britain. There is such a thing as political arson—the deliberate setting fire to the inflammable stuff of human passion—and in every civilized land this crime ought for the future to rank as a capital felony. It will be a misfortune if the circulation of the Hearst newspapers in this country should betray unthinking people into the belief that this poisoner of the wells of human intercourse speaks for more than a small minority of the great American nation.

PLEA FROM PULPIT TO AID Y.W.C.A.

Volunteer Subscriptions Will be Asked Today in All Churches of City.

From the pulpit of every Los Angeles church represented in the Church Federation an appeal will be made today for volunteer subscriptions to the Y.W.C.A. campaign fund.

This plan is in accordance with the proffer of the Church Federation actively to co-operate with the association in its endeavor to raise $75,000 for the maintenance of the institution and for the completion of its new health building.

Owing to Saturday being a short day, a number of the campaign captains and their team workers continued their work through the noon hour and held over their reports until Monday, when a big mid-day luncheon meeting is scheduled.

The total report for yesterday was $3303.50 bringing the grand total to $20,462. The executive committee reported $1115 for the day, and the leading team, captained by Mrs. Smith, had an aggregate of $920 for the day.

Mrs John C. Urquhart, president of the Los Angeles district federation, was yesterday's speaker. She emphasized the spiritual and uplifting feature of the Y.W.C.A. work among women and girls.

LEADING MASON DIES.

Asaph H. Hill Succumbs at Home After Brief Illness.

Asaph Henry Hill, prominent as a Mason, died yesterday at his home 734½ East Seventy-second street. Mr. Hill was a Past Master of the Rob Morris Lodge No. 92 of Denver, and a member of the Los Angeles Consistory, South Gate Chapter, and of the York Rite Council. Mr. Hill had been ill only a few days. He was 68 years old.

Funeral services under auspices of the Masons will be conducted tomorrow at 1 p.m. at the chapel of Pierce Bros., 810 South Flower street, with Masonic services at 2:30 p.m. at the Masonic plot in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

Mr. Hill leaves a son, William A. Hill, and a daughter Mrs. Oscar Thye of Los Angeles.

TOKIO, March 4.—Prof. G. A. Marcolm, of the Philippine University, has gone on the record as the first foreigner who has won the Japanese degree of Hogaku Hakase, or Doctor of Law, for his essays on the comparison of the constitution in the Philippine and the western powers.

Prof. Marcolm presented to the authorities of the imperial board of academy his essays in question last summer, together with his other works on the subject covering some ten volumes, with an application for the Japanese scholarship title. The application has been considered favorably by the authorities of the board.

Klondike Still Greatest Gold in Alaska.

DAWSON (Y. T.) March 4.—Yukon's great silver tide is steadily rising and the Klondike continues the banner gold producing camp of the entire Northland, says a thirty-eight page special edition of the Dawson Daily News.

Silver mining has progressed at an astonishng rate in the last two years. Fifteen hundred mines, a large proportion of which are producing, have been staked. The fields have been covered by companies that hold most of the big producing claims and are pushing their development. A year ago the Yukon Gold Company was the only large organization engaged in quartz mining and exploration at Mayo, but since then two well-known American companies have obtained control of many claims which large crews are now developing.

The most notable strike on Keno Hill was the finding of the lode on the west end, or McQuestion slope. The finding of this rich mine was accidental as in the case of a great many mineral discoveries. A buckboard carrying two men skidded down a slippery embankment and turned up a piece of float which told the story. The ore assays from 200 to 500 ounces to the ton.

Italian Composer Dead.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Luigi Denza, composer of "Funicoli Funicola" which has been translated into almost every civilized language, has just died in London, aged 76. "Funicoli Funicola" originally was a Neapolitan dialect song and was composed by Denza in 1880 at the opening of the railway up Mt. Vesuvius. Denza was born in Italy and was the composer of numerous musical works.

With Perpetual Gravity Water Rights
(Easy Terms)

California's Inland Empire contains 90,000 acres of the most productive and diversified land in California. Rich river bottom land that is watered from the mighty Colorado River through a million-dollar gravity irrigation system at very low cost.

Two crops of grain, corn and beans a year from the same land; two bales of cotton to the acre and nine tons of alfalfa per acre are just a few of the big returns from Palo Verde acres.

Justly famous as the dairyman's paradise, a new $150,000 Creamery, Ice & Cold Storage Plant now being built in Blythe, will greatly facilitate the handling of these products.

The fertility of the soil, the abundance of cheap water, an all-the-year-'round growing climate, combined with present low prices of acreage make this an opportunity irresistibly attractive.

REHEARING ON ALCOHOL CASE.

Blair Takes a Hand in the New York Mix-up.

Fleischmann Orders Are Suspended.

Diverted Liquor, Charge; Permits Revoked.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Orders by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes revoking the industrial alcohol permits of the Fleischmann Company, Inc., of New York, and eleven of its agencies, were suspended until Tuesday tonight by Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair.

The orders were suspended, Mr. Blair said, pending a rehearing of the case on Tuesday. He added that he, himself, would hear the case.

Mr. Blair's action was taken with the approval of Secretary Mellon, upon the request of counsel for the Fleischmann company for an appeal from the hearings on the case held in Philadelphia before S. F. Rutter, former associate Federal prohibition director for Pennsylvania.

DECISION TUESDAY.

A final decision will be reached Tuesday, Mr. Blair said. Orders for the seizure of alcohol in Fleischmann agencies are being held up, the company agreeing not to dispose of any alcohol pending the determination of the proceedings.

Quantities of industrial alcohol diverted to nonmedical purposes by Fleischmann agencies during the past year, revealed in testimony before the hearing held by Mr. Rutter, were made public tonight by prohibition headquarters. At New York, out of 77,000 gallons of industrial alcohol handled, 42,000 gallons were said to have been diverted; at Brooklyn 836,000 gallons were handled and 132,000 gallons diverted; in New Jersey 105,000 gallons handled, 5000 diverted; and in Bridgeport, Ct., 69,900 gallons handled and 69,515 diverted.

RAPS OFFICIALS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—Henry Kaltenbach, vice-president of the Fleischmann Company, Inc., manufacturers of yeast and alcoholic by-products, tonight declared "the federal prohibition department is in such a bad muddle, it does not know what's going on. It doesn't know what it's all about."

His statement was occasioned by the announcement that Prohibition Commissioner Haynes's order revoking industrial alcohol permits of the Fleischmann company had been suspended by Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair and that seizure of alcohol in possession of the company and its eleven agencies would be held up.

"We shall continue to manufacture alcohol," said Mr. Kaltenbach, "although we shall respect the government's orders by not shipping any of it until Tuesday."

Concerning charges that several hundred thousand of gallons of alcohol had been diverted to nonmedicinal uses by the Fleischmann Company, he said:

"Apparently the prohibition department is under the impression that all alcohol not used as medicine is bootlegged. They seem to forget that it is extensively used in the manufacture of perfumes, tonics, and a score of other products.

"When they charge us with shipping alcohol on fraudulent permits they don't know what they are talking about. They're all mixed up."

Mr. Kaltenbach expressed confidence that the government would forget about the charges and that operations of the Fleischmann company would not be interfered with.

ALLEGED CONSPIRACY DEFRAUDS VETERANS.

COMPENSATION CHECKS ARE STOLEN FROM BUREAU IN ATLANTA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) March 4.—Details of an alleged conspiracy by which disabled World War veterans have been defrauded by theft of compensation checks from the Veterans' Bureau here totaling between $6000 and $10,000, became known today when Federal officials were notified of the arrest of John O. Locke at Cincinnati.

Three other men also have been taken into custody in connection with the alleged conspiracy, it was stated. Their names were given as Gerald E. Norris, former clerk in the finance department of the Veterans' Bureau here; Aubrey Guffin, also employed at the Veterans' Bureau, and William L. Wood, Jr., all of Atlanta.

Secret service agents declared they have evidence which will connect other persons, including women, with the alleged conspiracy. With the exception of Locke, the arrests were made several days ago, but were kept secret in the hope of capturing others.

SUSPECT IS IDENTIFIED AS HALPERN

Alleged Drug Trafficker Said to Have Operated on Coast in Past.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

JACKSONVILLE (Fla.) March 4.—Morrison Brown of Havana, held here in default of $25,000 bail after $40,000 worth of morphine and opium had been found in his room, was identified tonight as Morris Halpern, said to have been at one time an illicit drug trafficker on the Pacific Coast, according to an announcement tonight by J. D. Dickerson, Federal narcotic inspector.

Officials said they believed Brown had transferred his operations from the Pacific Coast to Florida because of the drive against the illicit drug trade in California. The drugs seized in his room, they added, were smuggled from Cuba through Key West.

Brown was taken into custody Thursday and was held for alleged violation of the Federal narcotic law after a preliminary hearing yesterday. The authorities continued their search today for an unidentified man believed to be a confederate of Brown.

Plan to Mulct Government of France is Told.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—Alfred E. Lindsay, under seven indictments for fleecing society women out of large sums of money, was accused today by his former associate, Dr. Knute Arvid Enlind, of having planned to sell the French government 3,500,000 tons of phosphates from mines pictured in the Florida everglades.

Dr. Enlind, indicted yesterday for grand larceny, was quoted by Asst. Dist.-Atty. Murphy as having said that Lindsay persuaded him to get out of the Army in 1919 in order to help carry out the plan.

Under the reported scheme, Dr. Enlind, who spoke French, was to go to France to conduct negotiations with the Paris government.

Dr. Enlind and Lindsay bitterly attacked each other today. Enlind asserted that he cashed certain checks only to take the money to Lindsay, and the broker avowed that he had virtually supported Enlind for years.

NICARAGUA ROCKED BY SEVERE SHOCKS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

SAN JUAN DEL SUR (Nic.) March 4.—A strong earthquake shock lasting about forty seconds was felt here at 1:50 o'clock New York time, this morning, the culmination of slight tremors which began at midnight. The shocks are attributed, as have been others felt within the past month or so, to the activity of the Volcano Ometepe, near Lake Nicaragua.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—An earthquake of moderate intensity was recorded early today at the Georgetown University Seismological Observatory, starting at 8:20 o'clock last night and continuing until about 9 o'clock. The Rev. Francis A. Teodorf, director of the observatory, said the earthquake probably was not the same that was felt today in Nicaragua.

Will Consider Extension of Alien Measure

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Senate Immigration Committee decided today to begin consideration next Friday of the House bill to extend the 3 per cent quota immigration law for another year. Chirman Colt said he was disposed to press the House bill immediately and leave for future consideration administrative amendments to the present law which have been recommended by the Department of Labor.

The committee has also before it bills introduced by Senator Harris, Democrat, Georgia, to prohibit all immigration for three years and to require entry of all immigrants in American vessels.

UNION LABOR LEADER ACQUITTED OF CRIME.

FREED OF ONE MURDER CHARGE, WILL BE TRIED AGAIN ON ANOTHER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, March 4.—Thomas Walsh, union labor leader, was acquitted by a jury today at his trial on a charge of killing Adolph George, Jr., saloon owner and politician. The jury took but four ballots and was out four hours. The slaying took place December 3 in George's saloon. At the same time George Gast, a bartender, was shot, and later died from his wounds.

After today's verdict Walsh, who was also accused in connection with Gast's death, was released on $15,000 bonds and his trial on a charge of slaying the bartender set to begin on Monday. Walsh has been held in jail since the slaying.

According to evidence the slaying resulted from a dispute that George had been shot by a "mysterious stranger."

PIONEER'S LAST RITES HELD HERE.

Charles Boland, Associate of Miller, Harte and Old-Time Poets of State.

A career rich in romance and achievement, in hardships and rewards, was brought to a close yesterday when the body of Charles Collins Boland, poet, miner, journalist, pioneer and business man, was laid at rest at the Odd Fellows' Cemetery.

Mr. Boland was 70 years old when he died. He came to California in 1869, making his way around the Horn in a vessel of the United States Navy. He remained in Los Angeles for a short time, drifted to San Francisco, from there to the South Sea Islands, South America and back to the United States. An associate of Joaquin Miller and Bret Harte, he led a life of a free lance poet and writer, later entering the profession of law and finally becoming an executive of the New York Life Insurance Company, a position he held up to the time of his death.

He was associated with the San Francisco bankers who financed the building of the railroads across the Andes. Upon his return from Chile, Mr. Boland was admitted to the bar in California and New York. Later he became associate counsel for the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad.

Mr. Boland was associated with Joaquin Miller in the publication of The Maverick. He wrote under the name of Septimus Shaw. Later he became a regular contributor to The Wasp. When the mining business boomed around Placerville and Dutch Flats he wrote, edited and printed newspapers in mining camps. In his early California literary experiences he met and associated with Robert Louis Stevenson. At one time he was in charge of the Bible instruction work for John Wanamaker.

Mr. Boland was also deputy County Clerk in several Southern and Northern California counties. He leaves a widow and two daughters, Grace and Ruth.

NOW is the time to make your summer reservations at the Beach Sea Spray Bungalow Court, Ocean Front and Sunset ave., Venice, California.

Dr. Albert Leroy Shelton.

MISSIONARY GIVES LIFE IN SERVICE.

Bandits Kill Californian in Tibet While on Way Through Wilderness.

Dr. Albert Leroy Shelton's two daughters and his associates in Pomona yesterday received details of the medical missionary's sacrificial end in the Tibetan wilderness. Dr. Shelton was killed by bandits last February 17 as he was attempting to reach Lhassa, capital of Tibet, where no missionary has ever been. He was traveling on muleback from Batang, where several years ago he established the first and still the only mission.

The Californian attempted the trip to Lhassa with full realization of its dangers. Two years ago he was captured by outlaws, held prisoner seventy days and left for dead to be rescued by friendly natives. It was necessary for him to undergo an operation by the Drs. Mayo at Rochester, Minn., before he regained health. He left Pomona last August to return to Tibet.

His widow is in India. His daughters have been studying to become nurses and teachers so as to join the staff of the mission-hospital their father hoped to establish at Lhassa. Dr. Shelton operated under the Christian Missionary Society. The morning service today at the First Christian Church in Pomona will be given over as a memorial service.

Aviatrix Only Giggles After Fall from Air.

Miss Aloysia McLintick, young Osage maiden from Oklahoma, after flying two hours over Los Angeles Harbor yesterday, attempted to land her airplane on the flat at the outer harbor. Eighty feet from the ground, while her airplane was at a sharp slant a gust of wind struck it and it fell swiftly to the ground.

Some sailors playing ball on the flat ran to the wreck, while others ran to telephones. When the Submarine Base ambulance arrived Miss McLintick had just wriggled loose from the broken sticks and torn canvas. She stood up and when the ambulance surgeon reached her side she giggled. She was not hurt a bit, but was rather dusty.

The Indian maiden aviatrix, who has been flying for sport in benefit of the chief petty officers' circus and carnival, will go up again today, unless there is a cyclone. Yesterday she did tailspins and other tricks in the air. She says she enjoys it.

CATTLEMEN TO MEET IN FIVE DISTRICTS.

PRESIDENT HUBBARD RUSSELL TO OPEN SESSION HERE THE 25TH.

Zone No. 5 of the California Cattlemen's Association will hold its convention Saturday, the 25th inst., in the lecture room of the Chamber of Commerce Building. The meeting will be called to order at 1:30 p.m. by President Hubbard Russell. Meetings in each of the five zones of the State are being substituted, this year by the association for the semi annual convention of the State body formerly held. Because of this fact each of the zone meetings will take rating as an official session of the association.

A group of the ablest live-stock men of the country, it is announced, will address the forthcoming meeting of zone No. 5. J. E. Robert, secretary of the Los Angeles branch of the California Cattlemen's Association, states that the complete program of the session will shortly be mailed to all members. Cattle owners and raisers who constitute the board of directors of the State association include James Sloan, Lompoc; O. B. Fuller, Los Angeles; N. R. Vail, Calipatria; Lloyd Summers, Bishop; Hubbard Russell, Triunfo.

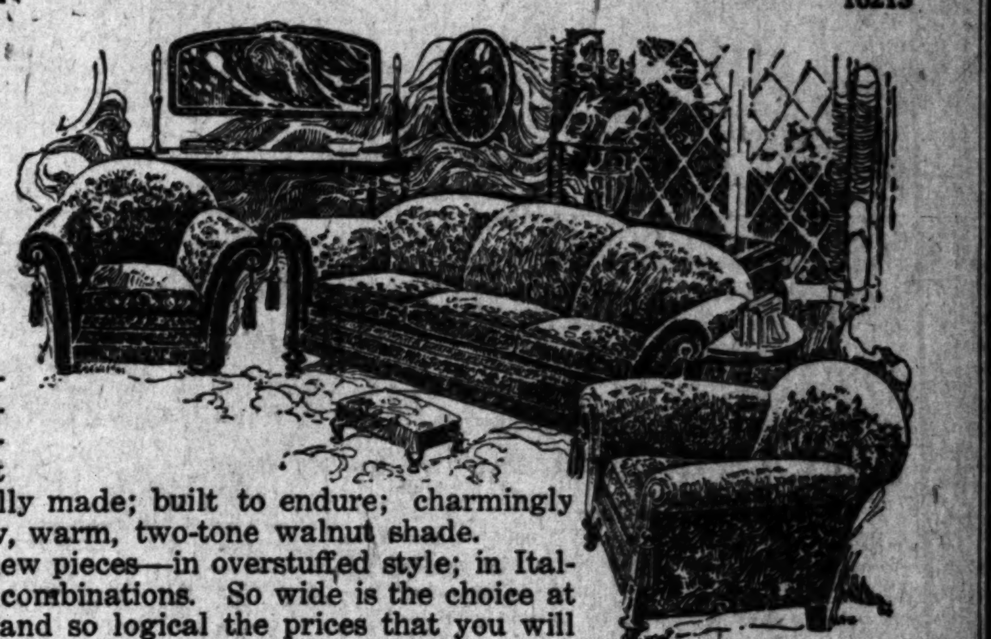
This Particular Living Room Suite

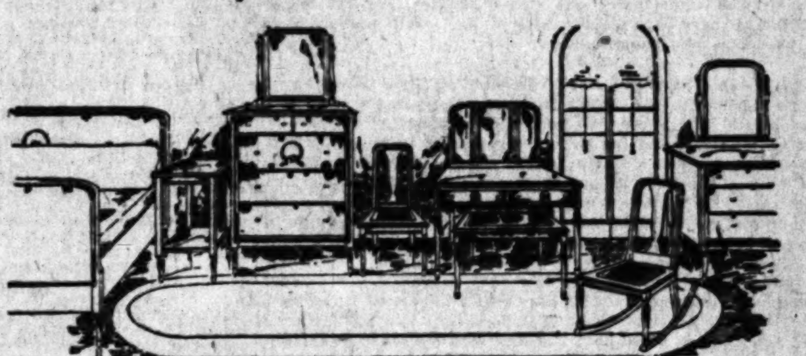


—is typical of the high order of over-stuffed furniture found at the Los Angeles Furniture Company. Luxuriously comfortable with its abundant springs and loose cushions; masterfully made; built to endure; charmingly upholstered in rich mohair in the new, warm, two-tone walnut shade.

—There are literally hundreds of new pieces—in overstuffed style; in Italian style; in rich cane and mahogany combinations. So wide is the choice at the Los Angeles Furniture Company and so logical the prices that you will find selection extremely easy.

8-Piece Windsor Bedroom Suite $398.50

Moderately Priced at . . . .



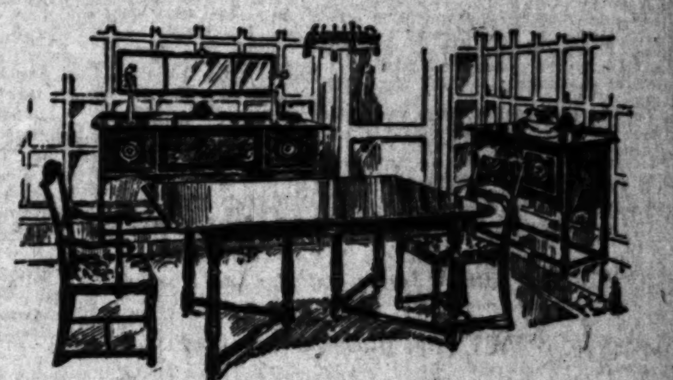
—This is a new suite that is particularly attractive, having several new features. It is made of hardwood throughout and is beautifully fashioned. The finish is a rich old ivory. The suite consists of

Dresser	Dressing Table
Chiffonier	Bench
Bed	Chair
Night Stand	Rocker

—The same Windsor pattern may be had in solid mahogany at $470.00 for the eight pieces if preferred.

—Bedroom furniture of all types—in mahogany, walnut, ivory, French gray and other styles—is found in great selection at the Los Angeles Furniture Company just now. Also new lovely pieces in Italian style. Marked within reach of the average pocketbook and intended for the typical California home.

The New Italian Oak



—is the wood used in this unusual dining-room suite. Italian oak looks very much like Italian walnut, having the same rich finish, and it has the gift of combining the substantial with the graceful in a most attractive way. This 9-piece suite, illustrated, is one of many new arrivals at the Los Angeles Furniture Company. It consists of a 66-inch buffet (with velvet lined sliding tray for silver), a cabinet serving table, an arm chair and five side chairs (upholstered in rich tapestry) and an 8-ft. table in the new, oblong style, trimmed with carved beading.

Nowhere is Italian Furniture more beautiful than in the Dining-room—especially in California Dining-rooms. There are many worthy examples of Italian art on display at the Los Angeles Furniture Company. The prices are surprisingly low.

FRENCH ASSOCIATIONS PLAN ENTERTAINMENT

SUCCESS OF MOLIERE FETE RESULTS IN LECTURES BY VISITORS.

The success of the French program in honor of the tercentenary of Moliere at the Polytechnic High School has resulted in plans for several lectures and entertainments under auspices of the French-speaking people of Southern California and the teachers and students of French. The next program will be given on the 20th inst. at the Kanst Art Galleries, 826 South Hill street. Prof. Albert Leon Guerard, one of the visiting professors from France, appointed by the French government, will speak on "La France Contemporaine." Tickets may be obtained from the French-language newspaper in Los Angeles or from the modern-language department of the city schools, 451 North Hill street.

The prizes to the young women who represented France and the returning cities at the Moliere soiree were awarded by Alsace-Lorraine Society as follows:

First prize of $20, Miss Lucienne Heiser, Berendo, "Strassbourg"; second prize, $15, Miss Louise Mitchell, Pasadena, "Mulhouse"; third prize, $10, Miss Marie Ange Duquette, French Colony, "Colmar"; fourth prize, $5, Miss Madeleine Tournoux, Los Angeles, "Sarreguemines."

SENTENCED TO PRISON.

James B. Wylie, a young mechanic, accused of a statutory offense against his sister, and with manslaughter of her baby, changed his plea yesterday in Judge Reeve's court to that of guilty. The court ordered him sent to San Quentin prison for from one to ten years.

INSURANCE REFUNDED ON AMNESIA VICTIM.

PAYMENT MADE WHEN DENTIST WAS THOUGHT DEAD IS RETURNED.

Dr. Harold E. Roy, the New York dentist whose remarkable case of amnesia led to the belief he was dead until he recently rejoined his wife in Los Angeles, last night said negotiations have been completed for the repayment to the Bankers' Life Insurance Company of Des Moines the $10,000 which his supposed widow received during his absence.

For almost a year Dr. Roy was missing and was believed dead as a result of the wrecking of his canoe by a vessel in the Hudson River. He said last night that his health and memory now are excellent and that he is still undecided whether to make his home here or to return to New York City.

Information from Des Moines was to the effect that notes protecting the insurance company in full have been prepared and depositions have been forwarded to Des Moines. Dr. Roy declined to divulge the details of the negotiations other than to say the settlement had been reached.

COMPLETE TARIFF NECESSARY—PEPPER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—No tariff will be really worthy of the Republican party until a definite, clean-cut theory of protective legislation is applied consistently to every schedule, U. S. Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania tonight told the Manufacturers' Club.

The pending tariff bill, he said, must be pressed to passage as rapidly as possible, and stated that it was a vast imrovement over the one now operating.

CASH, BONDS STOLEN FROM CUTLER BANK.

ROBBERS BLOW SAFE, CUT WAY INTO SAFETY DEPOSIT VAULTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

VISALIA, March 4.—The First National Bank of Cutler, near here, was robbed of more than $5000 in cash as well as Liberty Bonds, other securities and jewelry, the amount of which has not been ascertained, last night by robbers who blew open the safe and cut their way into the safety-deposit vaults.

Sheriff Court Smith of Tulare county expressed the opinion that the work was that of professionals and said there were virtually no clews with which to work. Entrance to the bank building, a small structure, was gained through a rear window. The safe doors were "soaped" and apparently nitro-glycerin was used. The explosion was not heard and the robbery was not discovered until shortly before the bank opened today.

The safety-deposit vault, a small steel strong box, was turned over and the robbers cut through the back of it, opened the individual boxes and rifled them.

The robbers obtained nearly all the cash in the institution, according to reports to the investigating officers.

A CORRECTION.

Through an inadvertence it was stated in The Times yesterday, in connection with an account of the Patterson will contest, that Lillian Arnold and Willistine McCrann Young, two of the contestants, are represented by the legal firm of Rohe, Yakey & Devin. Arthur M. Thompson represents these two contestants, the legal firm appearing for the third, Charles Patterson.

AUTOMOBILE CODE GIVEN TO SENATE.

ARIZONA LAWMAKER LIKES LAW AS ADMINISTERED IN THIS STATE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 4.—Senator Larson of Coconico today introduced an automobile code modeled on that of California. Another Senate bill would remove from the constitution the prohibition against election of any legislator to an office that has been created, or of which the salary has been raised, during his term of office.

A bill gives authorization for a State Fair this fall. It was abandonned last year for reasons of economy. The banking code is to be considered in open committee Monday and introduction of the new general appropriation bill is promised for next week.

LIQUOR IS PECULIAR.

Autoist Held When Justice Gets Scent of Liquid.

"If that stuff tastes as badly as it smells it would be no wonder if the defendant were intoxicated," Justice Baird said yesterday after getting a scent of a greenish, yellow liquid, said to be used as a liquor by Walter E. Raymond, accused of driving an auto while intoxicated.

Raymond was reported to have been hurrying to Santa Fe Springs to see an oil well fire there. He was stopped by officers, who assert they found four quarts of the liquid in his car. The defendant was held to answer on bail of $250.

JAP UNION LABOR LEADER CONVICTED.

GUILTY OF HAWAIIAN SUGAR STRIKE EXPLOSION, SAYS COURT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

HONOLULU, March 4.—Fifteen Japanese, including seven labor leaders, were convicted of criminal conspiracy today in connection with the dynamiting of the house of J. Sakamaki, a Japanese, at Olaa, Island of Hawaii, in June, 1920. The dynamiting was an outgrowth of the strike of sugar plantation workers at that time, Sakamaki having opposed the strike. The explosion destroyed Sakamaki's house, but nobody was injured.

Indictments were returned against twenty-one persons suspected of complicity in the conspiracy, but only fifteen were brought to trial, the others having died or fled. The trial began February 1, but was prolonged by the necessity of interpreting all proceedings into Japanese. The verdict was reached on the twenty-sixth ballot after seven hours' deliberation.

T. Murakami, formerly an official of the Ewa Cahu labor union, was charged with being one of three men who placed and fired the dynamite.

OCCIDENTAL UPSETS POMONA CINDER SQUAD.

Tigers Pile Up 77 Markers Against Sagehens in Annual Affair; Cliff Argue Features.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CLAREMONT, March 4.—Occidental's choice assortment of cinder crunchers jerked a handful of quills from the Sagehen's tail this afternoon on Alumni Field, the Tigers winning their annual track meet with Pomona by a count of 77 to 63. This victory is the first the Oxy athletes have chalked up against Pomona in something like twenty years. The meet was much more closely contested than it was doped out to be and loaded with thrilling finishes.

Cliff Argue, poor cripple, rheumatic creature that he is, was directly responsible for the Sagehens' downfall. This athlete struggled around during the afternoon and managed to grab four first places, two seconds and a third, for a grand total of 27 points. Rheumatism was never known to affect an athlete in this wise before and the Claremonters are wishing that some such disease would descend on their men. Argue copped the high jump, the javelin throw, the broad jump and the shot, in addition to taking second in the 100-yard dash and the furlong, and third in the discus heave. It was a splendid workout for the Oxy phenom.

NOT DISCOURAGED.

Considering the reputed power of the Tiger team, Pomona's supporters were well satisfied with the result of the meet. No one thought the Sagehens had a ghost of a chance against Pipal's million-dollar outfit, but when the Blue and White team started to make things decidedly interesting for the visitors in the first five events interest began to pick up. After the first ten events the Pomona crew was in the lead, the score standing 51 to 48. However, the Tigers got in some deadly work on the broad jump, 220-yard dash, and the javelin and managed to pull out ahead.

Undoubtedly the prettiest race of the day was the half-mile in which Phil Ellsworth and Paul Stroud hooked up in a wonderful contest. Stroud started strong and held the pole for the first lap. He continued in the lead throughout the last three-quarters of the final round, and then Ellsworth opened up with a terrific sprint. Both men thundered down the home stretch at a great clip. Coming within ten yards of the tape, Ellsworth put on all the steam he had and beat the Sagehen runner to the string by an eyelash. It was a wonderful race. Stroud made the fatal mistake more than once of looking back while he held the lead and this undoubtedly cost him the race. Lauren Handley, Sagehen miler, who had previously won the four-lap event, took third in this race.

DOES WELL.

Charles Daggs, star Sagehen hurdler, was third high point man for the day, grabbing a total of eleven points. Buckman, Oxy sprinter, took second honors in total points, the Tiger whirlwind annexing a total of thirteen markers. Daggs won the high hurdles, took second in the lows, and grabbed third places in the hundred, furlong and shot. Buckman's points came as the result of first places in the two dashes and second in the broad jump.

Oxy won all three places in the pole vault, Martin Goodenough and McClosky quitting after soaring over the bar at 11 feet, 3 inches. Pomona came near repeating this performance in the low hurdles, and but for an accident would have done so. Rounds, Daggs and Ron Walker were running in one-two-three order in this event, but on the second to last hurdle Walker stumbled and fell, Ridderhoff taking third place.

Capt. Frank Payne won the 440-yard dash for Pomona in the creditable time of 52 1-5 seconds. Art Garey gave him quite a race until the final quarter lap, but couldn't last. Art Martin, Oxy captain, took second in this race, finishing 20 yards behind Payne.

Buster Sloan and Hoyt Curtis, long-winded runners, gave a great exhibition in the two-mile grind. Sloan took the lead about the third lap, and although the Pomona man tried hard Sloan was not to be denied, crossing the line a winner by 30 yards. Both men took the final lap at a fast clip, the time of 10 minutes, 22 seconds being ten seconds faster than this event was run by any Southern California man last year.

The weather was very raw and made fast time out of the question, the athletes failing, in many instances, to get properly warmed up for their races.

CALLED OFF.

Occidental did not run the relay, Spangler, Powers and Martin being unable to do their lap of this event. With Spangler and Powers out, the Sagehens were a favorite to win. Coach Pipal didn't need the points and preferred not to run the event.

The summary follows:

Mile run—Handley (Pomona) first, Giffen (Oxy) second, Winslow (Pomona) third. Time 4m. 41s.

100-yard dash—Buckman (Oxy) first, Argue (Oxy) second, Daggs (Pomona) third. Time 10 1-5s.

Shot—Argue (Oxy) first, Bowman (Pomona) second, Daggs (Pomona) third. Distance 37ft. 4½in.

Hammer—Morgan (Pomona) first, Ridderhoff (Oxy) second, Biddle (Pomona) third. Distance 120ft. 10½in.

Javelin—Argue (Oxy) first, Ridderhoff (Oxy) second, Clarke (Pomona) third. Distance 142ft. 2in.

Oxy forfeited the relay.

CALTEK BOWS TO S.B.U.C.

Cubs Roll Up Cruel Score on Luckless Engineers in Conference Track Meet.

Caltek's track hopes faded into nothingness yesterday afternoon when S.B.U.C. won about everything on the program in the dual meet held at Pasadena High, the final score crediting the Cubs with 97½, while the Engineers had to be content with 42½. Fifteen of the sixteen events were taken by Harry Trotter's charges.

The Engineers' lonely blue ribbon came in the 440. Benioff scrambled across the line slightly in front of Wood, also of Caltek, in the unexciting time of 55⅗s.

Crissman was considered a sure bet in the 100-yard sprint, but was penalized for jumping the gun. Hurst of the Branch consequently won the event in 10 1-5s.

Miller and Denning, both of S.B.U.C., tied for first place in the high jump at 6ft. This was the best mark of the afternoon. Harlson featured with four firsts and a second for the Cubs.

Summary:

Mile run—Won by Jones (C.,) Squires (T.) second, Carr (C.) third. Time, 5m. 1 2-5s.

100-yard dash—Won by Hurst (C.,) Kemp (T.) second, Revere (C.) third. Time, 10 1-5s.

120-yard high hurdles—Won by Bowling (C.,) Fowler (T.) second, Hastings (T.) third. Time, 16 4-5s.

440-yard dash—Won by Benioff (T.,) Wood (T.) second, McElvain (C.) third. Time, 55 3-5s.

Shot put—Won by Harlson (C.,) Enns (C.) second, Baer (T.) third. Distance, 38ft. 8½in.

Hammer throw—Won by Bowling (C.,) Reed (T.) second, Great (T.) third. Distance, 115ft. 8in.

Pole vault—Won by Childs (C.,) Carter (T.) and Waddell (T.) tied for second. Height, 10ft.

2-mile run—Won by Hostner (C.) Dubois (C.) second, Jones (C.) third. Time, 10m. 57s.

Discus throw—Won by Harlson (C.,) Great (T.) second, Enns (C.) third. Distance, 114ft. 6in.

High jump—Miller (C.) and Tine (C) tied for first, Shears (T.) and Karnes (C.) tied for third. Height 6ft.

220-yard low hurdles—Won by Harlson (C.,) Tine (C.) second, Fowler (T.) third. Time, 27 2-5s.

880-yard dash—Won by Quinby (C.,) Mercereau (T.) second, McElvain (C.) third. Time, 2m. 9 4-5s.

220-yard dash—Won by Hurst (C.,) Buberman (C) second, Kemp (T) third. Time, 23s.

Javelin throw—Won by Harlson (C.,) Great (T.) second, Tolliver (T.) third. Distance, 154ft.

Broad jump—Won by Miller (C.,) Harlson (C.) second, Hastings (T.) third. Distance, 20ft. 10in.

Relay—Won by S.B.U.C.

Last batch of mail consisted mainly of inquiring and interrogative epistles from those desiring to know.

One desires an opinion as to the best trio ever seen in the Los Angeles outfield. Such an opinion would be charged with dynamite, and by no means conclusive.

However, we doubt whether the minor leagues ever have seen an outfield quite equal to the one boasted by Los Angeles a few years ago. Reference is made to Ellis, Maggert and Wolter. Ellis and Maggert were smart ball players and veritable ball hawks. Wolter was a hard, straightaway hitter and, with the inside stuff he pulled at the plate, unquestionably the most valuable batter in the league. Ellis and Maggert also were good inside ball players, and the three of them were fast in the field and on the bases.

Collectively and individually one season this outfield hit better than .300. And in those days a percentage of .300 meant something, a much less responsive ball being in use.

Other good men seen in the Angel outfield were Pete Daley, Rebel Oakes, Heinie Heitmuller and Curtis Bernard. Daley has retired and become a success in the grocery business. Heitmuller died in harness. Oakes is an oil magnate, and not so long ago sought to buy the Pittsburg Pirates with his accumulated profits. Bernard is a practicing physician. Wolter, I believe, is out of baseball, and Maggert is juggling anthracite in his father-in-law's coal yard.

Charley Magill, a brother-in-law of Ellis, tells me Rube has played his last game of professional ball. Mons. George Triggs, another brother-in-law, tells me the same thing. It isn't likely that both brothers-in-law are liars. The percentage would be against that.

So, regretfully, it seems that we have seen the last of Rube, who back in 1905 got his big chance in the post-season play-off between Tacoma and Los Angeles, when both Los Angeles catchers were injured and it was necessary to call Artie Ross in from left field.

Out of a long span of baseball years Rube drags a Rivera orange ranch with all modern improvements. According to Mr. Magill, Rube recently added an extra room and a screen porch to his ranch residence, and has a wash house with a clothes mangle in the back yard. That's extravagance. An average guy's pants get mangled too soon through nature's own processes. Possibly Rube fancies overalls with fringe on them.

Another correspondent with a wholesome and ingrowing desire to be shown, after referring to a recent article on brothers in boxing, comes asking for something concerning the family and domestic life on baseball and football.

There have been so many tribes on the diamond that the list would be too long starting this far down the column. Just a few cases close home. Meusel brothers are a local product. Aside from Doc and Jimmy Johnston they are the only members of the same family facing each other in a world series that I can recall. Mack Wheat, Angel catcher, and Zack Wheat, Brooklyn, are brothers.

Hughie High of Vernon and Charley High of Portland are outfielding brothers. Nick Dumovich of the Angels and Martin Dumovich of the Chicago Cubs will in all probability be seen in action against each other in one of the spring exhibitions. Sacramento Schang is a brother of Wally. Then there are the two new Los Angeles right-handers, Elmer and Bud Ponder.

In football it is nothing unusual to see a large brood of brothers charging across the gridiron. Often the stuff of which gridiron gladiators are made runs in families. Whole tribes have been bitten by the same bacillus. Coaches have been known to go out and pick football players from the same family tree in bunches like bananas.

The Nesser family tree probably was the most prolific in the football orchard. Five Nesser brothers and Old Man Nesser himself were once playing football at one and the same time, and some of them still are at it.

Princeton, of course, had its Poes, and Harvard none the less its Feltons. There was a long period in which a Harvard eleven without a Felton in its line-up read like ten men.

History of the Dole family at Riverside reads like the minutes from a family reunion staged in the shadow of the goal posts. Norman Dole, recently captain of the Riverside Boys' Polytechnic High School, perpetuated the illustrious history of an important football tribe. Walter Dole, the boy's father, made the varsity at Cornell, and an uncle, Herbert Dole, wears the imprint of letters gained in track and crew at Ithaca. Charles Dole, another uncle, won the "S" part of his alphabet at Stanford on the gridiron, as well as in track. Alfred, another uncle in this family so prolific in uncles, and there must have been a nephew or a niece for every uncle—otherwise they wouldn't call him uncle—was a football star at Stanford, and yet another uncle, Norman, held for a time the world's record for the pole vault. This is getting to be an uncles' field day, with aunts swarming all over the bleachers.

Wilfred and Ethelbert also chirographed football letters for themselves. Sanford, the eighth, due to the loss of an eye in childhood, did not engage in athletics, but, after this break in the line, Kenneth brought the Doles back into the athletic alphabet as captain of the Stanford eleven. Elwin, tenth, rounded out the muscular family achievements as stroke on the Cornell crew.

Fullerton High has or had its Hawkins brothers, Arch and John. When Los Angeles High was on the hilltop Mow and Stan Mitchell brought football fame to the Blue and White, and there was more than one Cass in the same line-up. Occidental had its Wiemans and Thomsons; Whittier its Renneckers; U.S.C. its Caleys, and Pomona its Cadwalladers.

Harvard has its Horweens, as Oregon well knows, and Oregon its Huntingtons, as Harvard and Pennsylvania are aware. Jim Robertson served as captain at Dartmouth, with Brother Henry as leader at Syracuse.

The Callahan family wore football halos in clusters—Tom being captain at Lawrence (Mass.) High School; Mike, captain of the Princeton eleven, and Tim, twice field leader at Yale. Mike and Tim, playing center on their respective teams, once clashed and proved that blood, while thicker than water, can yet flow more freely.

Then more anciently there were Bemis and Hawley Pierce, who shared the same government ration. The Steins gave us Russell of W. and J. and Earl of Pittsburg, both All-Americans.

TROJANS EXCEL ON CINDERPATH.

Kick the Redlands Bulldog Around in Dual Meet.

Final Score Favors U.S.C. by Juicy Margin.

Schiller Ties Bob Allen in Furlong Sprint.

BY CHARLES WEST.

Dean Cromwell and his cinderpath cohorts spoiled a perfectly good afternoon for Redlands yesterday at Bovard Field by trimming the Bulldogs in their first dual meet of the season by a margin of some twenty-three points. The final score tipped in U.S.C.'s favor, 72 2-3 to 49 1-3.

Redlands made a valiant attempt to trample on the Trojans and succeeded in taking a good portion of first places, but a flock of second and third places, in addition to a good list of blue ribbons, salted down the affair for the locals.

WILD EVENT.

Spec Schiller proved the biggest thrill of the afternoon by helping Bob Allen of Redlands bust the tape in the 220. Allen was doped to win the furlong easily but the best he could do was to finish in a dead heat with the U.S.C. marvel in 23s. flat.

However, Allen ran true to form in the 100-yard event, taking first honors in the amazing time of 10s. flat. Schiller followed him, and Raney bustled in third. Blalock, who was expected to give Allen a run for his change in the century sprint, was called away on urgent business, having struck oil or something in his back yard.

Waterman stepped off a fast half-mile in behalf of U.S.C., finishing twenty yards ahead of Troyer in 2m. 6s. Troyer managed to nose Patton out of second place by a matter of inches.

Redlands took most of the points in the distances, while U.S.C. scored heavily in the weights. All the field events were won by the Trojans, Dick Emmons taking the pole vault, high jump, and second in broad jump. Cap Rogers proved that he is still partly alive by winning the low hurdles, and doing it in 27s.

The relay went to Redlands.

BILL KENWORTHY GOES TO DUCKS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—Seattle has traded Bill Kenworthy for Heinie Krug of the Portland team. President Klepper notified Kenworthy to that effect yesterday and instructed the former Seattle manager to report at once in the Portland camp.

This undoubtedly will end the controversy pending as to the services of Kenworthy, for, with Seattle satisfied, that club will withdraw its claims now before Commissioner Landis. Kenworthy says he is pleased to play with Turner, the Portland manager, and denies there was anything in the gossip that he might be selected to manage the Beavers.

BREEZES FROM SPRING CAMPS.

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.)

SAN FRANCISCO SEALS.

BYRON HOT SPRINGS, March 4.—Manager Mitchell has a problem on his hands and is wondering what he will do with all his southpaw pitchers this season. Six hurlers of the particular brand are on his list and it is a foregone conclusion that all of them cannot land a regular job. Fred Combe, Ernie Alton and Mitchell are experienced hands and therefore have a better chance to stick than the unseasoned youngsters whose only hope is to make a great showing in training.

It is going to be a pretty race. Owner Charley Graham says the Seals are afte plenty of good pitchers for the coming season and that he doesn't care whether they are southpaws or northpaws. What he wants is class, and he believes he will get some of it out of the bunch.

Monday the rest of the line-up will be here and then the real business of training will begin.

SALT LAKE BEES.

MODESTO, March 4.—Rain greeted the Salt Lake Bees today; in consequence, all hopes of a workout in the open were abandoned. Manager Duffy Lewis was much disappointed, but he was somewhat cheered with the news that Paddy Siglin had accepted terms and is on the way to the training camp.

Discussing the team today, Lewis said he was well pleased with the manner in which the men are showing up. He is particularly sweet on the evident comeback of Big Sam Lewis, and is confident the big Texan will be a great help to the Bees this season. Lewis also likes the work of Middie Hoffer, the Pacific Fleet catcher, George Matthews of San Leandro, Perry Houts of the Drury Hatters of San Francisco and Stilman Light of Escalon, all recruits, have greatly impressed Lewis with their hitting and fielding.

Tomorrow, weather permitting, the Bees will move to the new ball park for their first game of the training season. Charley Schmidt, veteran backstop of the Detroit Tigers, will manage the Modesto Merchants, which will oppose the Bees.

Next Wednesday the grounds will be officially dedicated and from then on the Bees will play Thursday, Saturday and Sunday games.

OAKLAND ACORNS.

MYRTLE DALE HOT SPRINGS, March 4.—All-night rains last night put the local diamond in such bad shape that work for the full Oakland squad today was out of the question and the bunch instead was started out on hikes over the hills. The trip in the forenoon was a leisurely one and in the afternoon the entire brigade was ordered away to a stiff fourteen-mile jog. After the sun came out the catchers and pitchers were limbered up for a while where they would not make tracks in the mud of the diamond.

WASHINGTON NATIONALS.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A second squad of ten players, including Manager Milan, will join the advance guard of the Washington club at Tampa, Fla., tomorrow to enter the spring training grind. One of these, Pitcher George Mogridge, sent his signed contract to President Griffith yesterday after a delay due not to a difference over terms, but to an inclination to retire on the part of the player.

Zachary and Picinich also are arriving at Tampa tomorrow and although neither has yet given notice of signing up, Griffith said he expected this by wire before they reached camp. This leaves Joe Judge, the National star first baseman, as the only one of the fold who has not come to terms.

CINCY REDS.

CINCINNATI (O.) March. 4.—Members of the Cincinnati Nationals who are not going to the training camp at Mineral Wells, Tex., direct from their homes, mobilized here today for the trip, which starts tomorrow. About fourteen players will leave Cincinnati with Manager Pat Moran in charge. When Pitcher Cliff Markle reported he was handed a check for $4000, which the Reds were to pay for the hurler under the decision of Commissioner Landis in the controversy between the Reds and the New York Americans over ownership of the former Atlanta pitcher. Outfielder Ed Roush will be the only holdout.

DETROIT TIGERS.

DETROIT (Mich.) March 4.—The arrival of additional members of the Detroit American League club promises to be the only event to break the monotony in the Tiger camp at Augusta, Ga., where the athletes have been awaiting clearing skies for three days.

The squad, it appeared, would not get its first outdoor workout until Monday owning to wet grounds. Six players from California reached Augusta last night and others were scheduled to arrive today. The group from the West included Oldham, Blue, Bassler and Cutshaw.

ST. LOUIS BROWNS.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) March 4.—Seven more players arrived at the local Americans' training camp yesterday, according to a report from Mobile.

The newcomers are Bill Jacobson, Walter Gerber, Gene Robertson, Chick Shorten, Frank Ellerbe, Marty McManus and Claude Noel, a recruit. Inclement weather forced the players to idleness for the second consecutive day.

PHILLY NATIONALS.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—The Philadelphia National and American League baseball clubs were in action in their training camps in Leesburg, Fla., and Eagle Pass, Tex.

It was the first time the Athletics were able to practice because of the cold weather. Manager Mack called off the game planned for today and will open the exhibition season Sunday with a contest between the Regulars and Yannigans.

The Phillies were again put through a hard workout, Manager Wilhelm devoting most of his attention to the younger pitchers.

NEW YORK CLUBS.

NEW YORK, March 4.—The Yankees reported from their training quarters in New Orleans today that Pitcher Sam Jones had agreed to terms and that everything would be rosy if word would only come from Hot Springs that Slugger Ruth had affixed a scrawling Bambino to a contract. Manager Huggins still was busy with his Yannigan squad and expected to have a full complement of regulars in camp by Monday.

Zack Wheat, veteran outfielder, reported to the Brooklyn club at Jacksonville yesterday and rounded out a merry squad that played checkers and parchesi while waiting for a rain to pass.

John McGraw is driving his outfit through gruelling training programs at San Antonio. Jess Barnes still was on the "unsigned contract" list. He remarked that he was waiting for McGraw to say something.

CHICAGO TEAMS.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Everett Yaryan, second-string catcher of the Chicago Americans, set at rest talk of his being a holdout when he showed up for practice at the Sox training camp in Seguin, Tex. today, according to word received here. He signed a contract yesterday.

Edward Rafferty, an outfielder from Pawhuska, Okla., was another arrival while several regulars, including Harry Hooper, Johnny Mostil, Ernie Johnson and Eddie Mulligan, were expected to report before tonight.

The Chicago Nationals squad at Catalina Island, Cal., has been increased with the arrival of Carter Elliott, shortstop, and "Zip" Dumovich, pitcher, both of Los Angeles. Manager Killefer expected to stage a five-inning game today and nine innings tomorrow.

COAST LEAGUE BALANCED UP.

Tight Race Anticipated for 1922 Pennant.

Sacramento Looks Like Real Bona-fide Contender.

Angels' Hopes Hinge on Young Charley Deal.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

Giving the Coast League situation the horizontal and perpendicular gains one the idea that it will be a tougher race for all concerned than in 1921, with Sacramento as probably the real danger spot.

Some of the clubs may lack their class of last year, but the league looks a bit better balanced, due to strengthening processes in Portland and Salt Lake. These teams were easy picking last season. Right now we fail to discern a real soft spot in the league. The result should be a better race, although one can hardly conceive of a closer finish.

San Francisco, a really good ball team, would not have set the pace most of the way, except for the prolific picking found in Portland. The Seals seem hardly to shape up as sturdily as a year ago, although they may have better pitching. Oakland, it would appear, has not yet offset the loss of Hack Miller and Papoose Pinelli, and it is regarded as very doubtful that they will get Louie Guisto again. The Oaks hope to show more power in the pitching department, their chief weakness in 1921. But like the Seals, they look hardly as formidable. Neither does Seattle strike one as quite as well balanced, but the Siwashes are still a good ball team. Taking the circuit as a whole, one seems to find better balance, but no great improvement outside of Portland, and possibly Salt Lake.

VITAL COG.

But, if Los Angeles succeeds in enticing Charley Deal into the third base job, the Angels will be "made," and apparently an improved machine. While they have already been helped in other departments, third base is a vital cog, and without a skilled performer there, an otherwise classy team would be badly handicapped.

With Deal, the Angels strike us as the club to battle Sacramento. However, the signing of Dell enhances Vernon chances. Still, there are trouble spots. One of these is right field, which overnight developed into a problem through the suspension of Bodie and Schneider's holdout. First base is still open, due to the rather puzzling attitude of Leo Dressen, purchased from St. Paul. A number of veteran baseball men have pronounced Dressen the class of the minors at first base. Until these matters are settled it is difficult to count the Tigers one, two, if indeed, a real contender. They may show far above expectations. Essick has a fine batch of new help, which may solve his problems. A year ago the Tigers looked the class of the league, and then experienced most of those ills to which baseball flesh is heir. Right now their chances look none too bright, but again all of us may be fooled by the spring symptoms. We are speaking of things as they now stand. The Yanks may send some help later, and Schneider and Dressen may yield to persuasive powers.

Wheezer Dell Joins Bengals in Work-outs.

Wheezer Dell joined the happy Vernon baseball family in two fine work-outs at Washington Park yesterday.

P. Samson Schneider, hold-out and Pitcher Doyle, are now the only absent members, and Secretary Lorenz stated that Essick expects that heaver in not later than Wednesday.

There will be only one work-out today, and that in the morning, starting at 10 o'clock. Harder and faster practice will be the program tomorrow, when the squad will be divided into two teams, and daily games played. Hughie High will captain one of these clubs with Rollie Zeider as field leader of the other.

Vernon Blenkiron continues to make the rail-birds sit up and take notice with his stickwork and speed.

Capt. Clover is Expected to Cop in Turf Classic at Tijuana Today.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, March 4.—Captain Clover, three-year-old son of General Roberts, and product of the famed Pleasanton Stock Farm, will uphold the honors of California as the home of the thoroughbred in the 1922 running of the Tijuana Derby, feature event at the border course tomorrow afternoon.

The youngster went through his derby trial in great shape Thursday, and made a show of his eight opponents. His performance was of such high class that the turfwise brigade is figuring on the Dr. Lovell crack as a pronounced favorite when the classic is called to the post.

Next in popular fancy will come such great three-year-olds as Nan McKinney, South Breeze, Proclamation, Wedding Prince, Selota, Tom Craven, Indian Prince, Olympiad, Polly Wale and Little Florence. Ten and perhaps twelve of the youngsters will parade to the post. The derby will be run at a mile and an eighth, with a $6000 purse as the reward for the winners.

Derby day is always the biggest event of the season at any race course in the world, and Sunday at Tijuana promises to be no exception to the rule. For weeks the boxes and clubhouse reservations have been bespoken by society throngs from Coronado, Del Monte, Pasadena, Santa Barbara and other exclusive wintering centers.

TIJUANA RESULTS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, March 4.—Running the mile and three-eighths in 2:28⅗, the fastest time for the distance ever made over the Tijuana track, Bourbon Green won the fifth and feature race of the card this afternoon. Bourbon Green raced in close attendance on White Haven, the leader, until entering the stretch and then, putting on a fine burst of speed, went to the front to cross the wire half a length in front of Fannie Nail. White Haven, after being passed by by Bourban Green and Fannie Nail, hung on well and retained the show.

Charmant, at a long price, accounted for the fourth event. Virge came back to her good form in the third, a five and one-half furlong affair, to beat Lady Bourbon in the opener. Kimona sprung a surprise and came down to win at good odds.

The Derby—with a fair-sized field of sprightly 3-year-olds encountering for a purse of $5000 is the special attraction which will greet racing fans at Tijuana tomorrow.

First race, six furlongs: Kimona won; J. D. Suss, second; Chas. Cannell, third. Time 1:16 2-5.

Second race, six furlongs: Missoula won; Chrome, second; Olive D., third. Time 1:16 3-5.

Third race, five and one-half furlongs: Virge won; Lady Bourbon, second; Restful, third. Time 1:09 2-5.

Fourth race, five and one-half furlongs: Charmant won; Vera Mifa, second; Clear the Way, third. Time 1:09.

Fifth race, one mile and three furlongs: Bourbon Green won; Fannie Nail, second; White Haven, third. Time 2:28 2-5.

Sixth race, one mile and one furlong: Mike Daly won; By Right, second; Dr. Samuel, third. Time 1:56 3-5.

Seventh race, one mile and one-sixteenth: Vic von; Don Jose, second; Nellie Harper, third. Time 1:49 4-5.

Eighth race, five and one-half furlongs: Hazel Dale won; Trumpet Call, second; Bubber, third. Time 1:08 4-5.

MISSOURI CONSIDERS INVITATION OF BEARS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

COLUMBIA (Mo.) March 4.—Coach C. G. Clevenger of Missouri University today was considering whether it was possible to accept the invitation of the University of California to compete with the latter's track team in a dual meet at Berkeley, Cal., April 15. A decision, however, will not be made until Dr. J. C. Jones, president of the University here, returns from a trip to the East.

DAVE SHADE SIGNED TO BOX JIMMY JONES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CLEVELAND, March 4.—Dave Shade, California welterweight boxer, who held Jack Britton to a draw recently in New York, and Jimmy Jones of Youngstown have been matched for a 12-round go at Canton O., on March 17, according to advices received here. It also is reported Britton has agreed to meet the winner in the same ring a month later.

HORACE MAJOR MEETS FERTIG.

New Faces in Final Bracket at San Gabriel Today.

Patterson Loses Out After Being Well in Lead.

Modisette Raps McLoughlin, Former Tennis Shark.

BY PAUL LOWRY.

The comparative strangers to gallery golf will battle for honors in the final round of the San Gabriel invitation tourney today. Sam Fertig of Midwick and Horace Major of the Los Angeles Country Club are the gentlemen in question and they achieved this distinction by bumping off a couple of links gladiators yesterday.

Fertig tripped D. A. Jacobs of the San Gabriel club in a lengthy duel that went to the twenty-first hole, and followed this up with a victory over Harley Moore, who did his best to keep Des Moines, Iowa, on the map. Major accounted for J. J. Toy in the morning and then scored a surprising victory over George Patterson of Annandale, who won the San Gabriel tourney last year.

TRIUMPH SURPRISING.

Major's triumph was most surprising because the amiable Patterson had established a lead of 4 up when they hit the turn. But Major got this back, and won out on the home green by sinking a twelve-foot putt for a par 4. Patterson had topped his drive going to the eighteenth, and it took him three shots to reach the green. His approach putt was dead, and but for Major's successful putt, the match would have gone at least one more hole.

Major and Fertig will play thirty-six holes, but the finalists in the other seven flights will only go eighteen. They will play this morning, the afternoon being reserved for the second half of the final round in the first flight and best ball foursomes.

MAURY CONVINCED.

Bob Modisette, president of the Annandale club, convinced Maury McLoughlin, the former tennis champ, of his superiority on the seventeenth green and will meet H. N. H. Woodcock of Wilshire in the finals of the second flight. The results:

First flight (second round)—S. C. Fertig defeated D. A. Jacobs, 1 up, 21 holes; H. A. Moore defeated Max Behr, 2 and 1; Horace Major defeated J. J. Toy, 4 and 3; George Patterson defeated W. Moore, 1 up.

First flight (semifinals)—S. C. Fertig defeated H. A. Moore, 2 up; Horace Major defeated George Patterson, 1 up.

Second flight (second round)—Bob Modisette (10) defeated J. Nash (10,) 1 up; M. E. McLoughlin (8) defeated H. V. Gifford (12,) 3 and 2; A. C. Getty (10) defeated W. D. Whalen (8,) 4 and 2; H. N. H. Woodcock (8) defeated Neal Burns (8,) 4 and 2.

Second flight (semifinals)—Bob Modisette (10) defeated Maury McLoughlin (8,) 2 and 1; H. N. H. Woodcock (8) defeated A. C. Getty (10,) 3 and 2.

BOXING IS LEGAL IN HAVANA AGAIN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

HAVANA, March 4.—Prize fighting as a public spectacle in Havana was again made legal today. Mayor Liaz de Villegas, who banned prize fighting several months ago, annulled his decree this afternoon. A national boxing commission, named by the Department of the Interior and headed by Senator Collazo, will supervise the sport in the republic.

TROJANS SOUNDLY SPANKED.

California Makes Up for Friday's Defeat by Trimming U.S.C., 45 to 9.

California's basketball squad played furiously last night and smothered U.S.C.'s best melon talent under a 45-to-9 score in the Trojans' pavilion, making up in a measure for the lacing the Cardinal and Gold dished out to them Friday night. Coop and Talt made baskets almost at will, while Eggleston and Lehane, Bear guards, worked so well that the locals failed to get a decent score.

U.S.C. didn't have a chance. With the opening whistle California started to do things and rolled up seven points before the Trojans knew what it was all about. During the entire first half the U.S.C. men failed to score a field goal, the figures at the half-time recess being 20 to 1, with the northerners on the heavy end.

The second period was a repetition of the first, Coop and Talt adding to the Bears' score frequently.

The line-ups:

California (45)—		U.S.C. (9)—
Coop (14)	F.	White (3)
Talt (19)	F.	Campbell (3)
Lehane (4)	C.	Hendricks (2)
Eggleston (8)	G.	Axe
Le Hane	G.	Graham

Kuhne (2) for Graham; Boeck for White.

Illinois Relay Carnival Gets a Fancy Start.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ILLINOIS ARMORY, CHAMPAIGN (Ill.) March 4. — The fifth annual relay carnival in the University of Illinois armory got off to a flying start tonight, following preliminaries in the all-around championship in which Brutus Hamilton of Missouri took a good lead in the first two of the seven events with a total of 1477 points. H. M. Osborne, of Illinois, ran Hamilton a close second with 1351.

Penn State, the only eastern school to send a team, captured the two-mile university relay in the new record time of 8m. 1⅗s. Ames gave the eastern runners a hard battle, Wolters picking up a good lead in the third lap. Higgins lost it to Larry Brown, eastern intercollegiate half-mile champion, who took the event for Penn State by five yards.

CATCHER SUTTON ILL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—John Sutton, catcher of the Brooklyn Nationals, who suddenly left their training camp at Jacksonville, Fla., Wednesday, is ill at his home in West Philadelphia, it was learned today. He said he expected to rejoin the team shortly.

TRANS-PACIFIC POOL INTERESTS LASKER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—A. D. Lasker, chairman of the Shipping Board, will visit the Pacific Coast to take part in conferences on the proposed $30,000,000 trans-Pacific ship pool after Congress has acted on President Harding's ship subsidy project, according to Herbert Fleishhacker, who returned today from a conference on shipping at Washington.

Mr. Fleishhacker was one of a committee representing shipping interests of Pacific ports which proposes to pool finances for the purchase of ships from the United States Shipping Board and their operation in competition with foreign lines.

SEATTLE TELEPHONE RATES UNDER FIRE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, March 4.—Charges that telephone rates in Seattle are excessive and that the tariff now in effect is illegal, were made in a complaint against the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company filed with the State Department of Public Works yesterday by the city of Seattle. The complaint was said to have grown out of the State-wide campaign against telephone rates and service launched several weeks ago by women's organizations.

TROPHY WON BY BABY GAR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MIAMI (Fla.) March 4.—Baby Gar, owned by Gar Wood of Detroit, won the $5000 Fisher Allison cup today when for the third time Webb Jay's Adieu, a Chicago entry, dropped out because of engine trouble. Baby Gar was pulled up after the thirteenth lap of the fifty-mile heat.

OFFERS DEMPSEY $350,000.

Harry Frazee Makes Champion Huge Bid to Meet Harry Wills in September.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—Harry Frazee, owner of the Boston American League baseball club, announced late today that he offered Jack Dempsey $350,000 to defend his world's heavyweight championship against Harry Wills, negro heavyweight. Saturday, September 2, was mentioned as the date, the site to be selected later.

In addition to the Dempsey-Wills bout, Frazee said that he was ready to make suitable offers for title bouts between Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, and Lew Tendler of Philadelphia, and between Johnny Buff, American flyweight champion, and Jimmy Wilde, premier English flyweight. No date were mentioned.

Mr. Frazee said if these matches could be arranged, they would be held as preliminaries to the Dempsey-Wills contest.

The sum offered Dempsey for the Wills match is $50,000 more than he received for his battle with Georges Carpentier at Jersey City last July. It is the largest individual purse ever offered a fighter.

If Dempsey and Wills accept, Frazee said, the battle undoubtedly will be held in the East and out of doors. Boyle's Thirty Acres at Jersey City, where the Dempsey-Carpentier bout was held, and Fenway Park, Boston, the home of the Red Sox, were suggested as possible sites, providing the permission of the State boxing authorities could be obtained.

No offer has yet been made to Wills, Frazee explained, but added that if Dempsey's signature to a contract was obtained Wills would be offered a sum large enough to induce him to sign for a bout which would give him a chance at the world's heavyweight title.

Harvard Again Gets I.C.A.A.A. Championships

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 4. — The 1922 track and field meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America was awarded to Harvard University today at the annual meeting of the association. The games will be held in the Harvard stadium, Boston, May 26 and 27, with the javelin and discus throwers and the usual program.

Bates, West Virginia University, and the Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburg were admitted to membership in the association today. The application of Westminster College of New Wilmington, Pa., was tabled.

An amendment wiping out the constitutional regulation that requires a college to compete in the annual games at least once every two years in order to retain its membership, was adopted.

The following officers were elected:

President, Watson B. McFarran, Princeton; secretary, Abbott Southal, Columbia.

Records Fall at Illinois Indoor Meet.

ILLINOIS ARMORY, CHAMPAIGN (Ill.) March 4.—Nine University of Illinois relay carnival records fell tonight in a spectacular indoor track and field meet of Middle Western universities.

Four of the new records were in relay races, the University of Pennsylvania capturing the two-mile event, while the other three races were distributed between Illinois, Iowa and Ames.

H. M. Osborne of Illinois won the all-round championship with a new high total of 5454 points, after winning first place in four of the seven events and tying a fifth. Brutus Hamilton, the Olympic star from Missouri, was second with 5126 points.

The mile and four-mile relays were the bright spot of the evening. Coach Gill's Illinois runners winning the longer race and losing by a close margin to Iowa State University in the mile event. Both races resulted in new records, the Iowans clipping 1 2-5 seconds from the old mark of 3m. 29s., and Illinois bettering their own four-mile record of 18m. 35 3-5s. by 18 4-5 seconds.

SEASIDERS MIX WITH OVERSEAS.

Soccerites Battle Today at Vernon for Right to Enter Finals of Cup Play.

When Referee Jones starts the Long Beach Uniteds and the Overseas in the semifinal for the Spalding perpetual soccer trophy at Maier Park this afternoon, the fans are going to see two of the strongest teams battle for the right to enter the finals. Immediately following this classic, L. A. Uniteds will clash with Pasadena. The first game will be called at 1 p.m., with the second game timed for 3 p.m.

Overseas, who drew a bye in the preliminary round, will enter the race fresh and full of hopes. In their practice workouts they have been showing excellent form, and are seriously threatening to put a crimp on the cup aspirations of the beach squad. The latter are jubilant over their victory last week when they downed the Sons of St. George, and are expected to give the strongest kind of opposition to the veterans.

EXCELLENT BILL.

The game will be a battle between two elevens who delight in the kick and rush play. It is at least spectacular, and should prove and excellent bill for the fans.

The interest in the meeting of Pasadena and Uniteds is more than ordinary. It will be recalled that the league champions fell by the wayside in a semifinal last year at the hands of Pasadena, and the question is being asked can Pasadena repeat.

In cup tie matches it so often happens that the strongest elevens meet their Waterloo against weaker teams. This is to some extent accounted for by the fact that where so much depends on one game, a team under pressure will sacrifice combination effort.

UNITEDS HAVE EDGE.

Uniteds undoubtedly have the edge. They have the speedy wing men in Ramsey and Sheperd, and a brainy center half in Boner, together with a stonewall defense in Robinson and Brown.

Pasadena's backfield is good in Lyons and Murray, while Marshall and Wiegel are an excellent pair in the half line. Their weakness lies at forward.

Grain Markets Erratic During the Last Week.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, March 4.—Heavy selling of long wheat and corn by New York interests ran both markets into new-low orders. These carried wheat off 3¾ to 4⅞ and corn 3¾ cents from the previous close. The outside support was only fair, but week-end evening-up made a rally. The finish was at net losses of 2⅞ to 3⅞ cents on wheat while corn was off 2⅞ to 3⅜ cents, oats ⅜ to ⅝ cent and rye 1⅜ cents. Lard closed 20 to 27½ cents and ribs 20 to 25 cents lower.

Grain markets were decidedly unsettled the past week, the highest prices of the season being made for May wheat and all deliveries of corn early, but heavy realizing sales as the result of the big upturn of late brought about a good reaction and at the last wheat was off 5 to 5¾ cents, corn 3⅝ to 5⅜ cents, oats 1⅝ to 2 cents and rye 3⅜ to 4⅝ cents. Lard gained 2½ to 7½ cents and ribs lost 10 to 20 cents.

Wheat showed an easy undertone from the start, opening ¼ to ½ cent lower in sympathy with Liverpool and at no time were prices as high as the finish of the previous day. Trade was very heavy at times and sentiment has become pronouncedly bearish. There was some buying by houses with export connections to remove hedges against sales to Japan and other countries, but long grain came out freely on all the bulges.

The May-July spread narrowed to around 11 cents difference against 12½ cents at the extreme of the previous day with a leading local house selling May and buying July which accounted for the relative strength in the latter delivery in the face of better weather and crop reports from the Southwest.

There was nothing in the news to account for the eastern selling other than the desire to secure profits on grain bought lower down. The general run of reports on the cash situation were favorable with prospects of a better milling demand and smaller receipts. Private cables reported Russia and Austria had bought 4,440,000 bushels Argentine wheat in the past few days, and the local business from the seaboard during the day aggregated around 1,500,000 bushels.

Coarse grains were under pressure from the start with corn leading. At the inside figure July corn showed 5⅜ cents under the high of the previous day, and while the seaboard was a good buyer on the break and local handlers sold 810,000 bushels to exporters the undertone was not very strong even at the last as the confidence of the bulls has been greatly shaken by the heavy liquidation and persistent decline of the past few days. Cash corn was 1 to 2¼ cents lower with country offerings small. Trade in oats was mainly of a local character with an absence of the liquidation so pronounced in other grains.

Export demand continues for rye and with buying by the seaboard [illegible] for the day were not severe considering the decline in wheat.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE IS QUIET.

TRADING GENERALLY LISTLESS, BUT PRICES FIRM; GOLD ORE ACTIVE.

Gold Ore practically monopolized the trading interest at the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday. A total of 115,000 shares changed hands and the stock closed strong at 7 cents, a one-cent gain. This was the only exception to an otherwise dull and listless session. Prices were well maintained, but the volume of sales fell off sharply. Oatman United advanced 1½ cents to 81 and Adams climbed 1 to 7 cents. United Eastern was inactive, not a single sale being reported.

General Petroleum advanced ⅝ to 87¼, and Union Oil of Delaware was unchanged at 17½. Southern California Edison common closed at 97, a gain of ¼.

Ranch Quickly Sold at Auction

Last Sunday the L. A. Auction Realty Exchange advertised in The Times a nine-room house and ranch in San Jacinto for sale at auction.

The sale took place on Tuesday, February 28, and was bid in in five minutes to the entire satisfaction of the seller and buyer.

The sale was an unqualified success. We were surprised to learn that in the crowd assembled that 150 persons had come from a distance of 83 miles to attend the sale, which convinces us that by advertising auction sales exclusively in The Times we are sure of best results.

children, Elen, 6 years old, and Wilson, 22 months old, were turned loose in drawing rooms A, B and C, as soon as the party arrived. Mrs. McAdoo, excitedly happy, but undisturbed by the confusion of travel, brought out Elen to pose with her and Mr. McAdoo for a flashlight photograph. Wilson McAdoo, rid of a heavy overcoat and leggings, was not brought out for fear he would catch cold.

The photograph ended, Mrs. McAdoo returned to direct a "red cap" in the placing of three huge fur coats, two evidently Mr. McAdoo's.

Mr. McAdoo resumed his interview, interrupted only by a greeting or two from railroad or train officials, who recognized him as their war-time boss.

"No, there's nothing to that talk of my going West to further any Presidential boom," he said.

"Motion pictures?" he was asked.

"No, also. I was just attorney for a motion-picture distributing organization and I'm certainly not planning now to take any part in their affairs," he explained.

He made no reply to a reportorial suggestion that he who handled seven jobs of importance in war times, would be a good team-mate for Will Hays, the new cinema boss.

Attempts to continue political gossip were ignored, too. Mr. McAdoo intimated plainly that he would rather talk about beauties of California, his new home.

AIR MAIL SERVICE TO RECEIVE MONEY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Funds to continue the transcontinental air mail service are to be provided in the annual postoffice appropriation bill under agreements reached by Senate committee members in charge of the measure.

In passing the bill the House refused to provide for the air mail service, and former Postmaster-General Hays recently appeared before the Senate committee in its behalf.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—The tone was barely steady with week-end evening-up in the cotton market today. The general tendency was toward a somewhat lower level due to the influence of professional selling and the lack of new demand. Buying from spot houses and local shorts was hardly enough to absorb offerings. The list sold 2 to 10 points off early in the short session. Increased selling from weak-kneed longs was met in the last hour and the market dropped to new low levels for the session, 19 to 23 points off. Business was a bit more active on the way down. Final bids 20 points decline; New Orleans, 16.75c, 25 points decline; Savannah, 17.50c, 13 points decline; Memphis, 17.50c, unchanged; Houston, 17.50c, 20 points decline; Little Rock, 17c, for middling uplands.

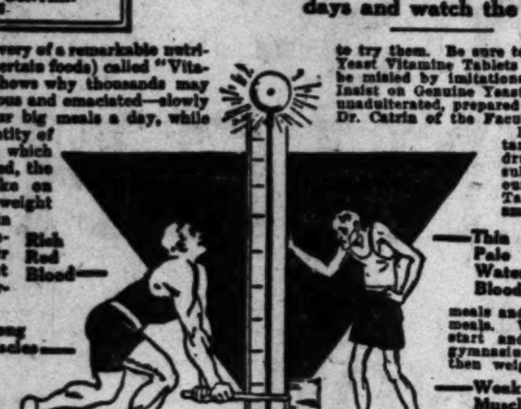
Have You The Power To Hit The Sledge Hammer Blows

that send the strength indicator right up to the top?—that makes a man feel keenly alive, full of "pep" and energy—

DO YOU WANT TO PUT ON GOOD FIRM FLESH and round-out face and figure?

Hundreds of thousands are taking Yeast Vitamines—They may be just what you need—Get a Free $1.00 package from your dealer at once, as explained in free coupon—try them for ten days and watch the results.



LACK OF A SINGLE MAGIC-LIKE SUBSTANCE IN THE BLOOD MAY BE THE PRINCIPAL CAUSE OF THE GREAT DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THESE TWO MEN

With the amazing discovery of a remarkable nutrition substance (found in certain foods) called "Vitamine," science at last shows why thousands may become weak, thin, nervous and emaciated—slowly starving—on three or four big meals a day, while with a much smaller quantity of exactly the same food, to which Vitamines have been added, the same people quickly take on good firm flesh, increase in weight and make a remarkable gain in strength, energy and endurance provided that their blood contains a sufficient amount of oxygenated organic iron to enable them to assimilate their food properly. Without organic iron both food and Vitamine are absolutely useless, as your body cannot change inert, lifeless food matter into living cells and tissues unless you have plenty of organic iron in your blood. Organic iron takes up oxygen from your lungs. The food you eat contains carbon. As digested food is absorbed into the blood the carbon in the food comes in contact with the oxygenated iron in your blood and the carbon and oxygen unite. By so doing, they give off tremendous power and energy, thereby giving you great force, physical and mental vigor and also resulting in the production of material which becomes active living cells, flesh, muscle, bone and tissue, thus performing one of the most remarkable miracles of life.

Blood examinations by physicians all over the country show that an enormous number of people are deficient in hemoglobin or iron content in the blood stream and this is often the real underlying cause of a thin, weak, emaciated and run-down condition, and it is for this reason that thousands of people may take Vitamines without obtaining results. It is not the fault of the Vitamines, but it is the fault of your blood. Therefore, in practically every case where Vitamines are necessary, organic iron is also necessary.

For centuries scientists tried in vain to produce organic iron. At last the problem was solved, so that you may now obtain pure organic iron from any druggist under the name of "Nuxated Iron," which is ready for immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood the moment it enters the system.

Where it is desired simply to gain greater strength, energy and endurance and increase the firmness of your flesh and tissues, we recommend that you take Nuxated Iron only. DO NOT TAKE VITAMINES UNLESS YOU WISH TO INCREASE YOUR WEIGHT up to normal. Vitamines are exceedingly valuable in putting flesh on thin people, who are too thin as a result of Vitamine deficiency. Some people are naturally too thin and will remain so in spite of Vitamines and everything else, hence Vitamines will not help everybody, but they cannot possibly do you any harm, and if you wish something to help increase your weight we would, therefore, advise you to try them. Be sure to take only "Nuxated Brand" Yeast Vitamine Tablets with Nuxated Iron. Do not be misled by imitations which often contain drugs. Insist on Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets, pure and unadulterated, prepared from the original formula of Dr. Catrin of the Faculty of Medicine of Paris.

If you have taken Yeast Vitamine Tablets, mixed with drugs, without obtaining results, such would not prove that our Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets would not help you. A small tablet which contains drugs might not contain a sufficient quantity of Vitamines to do you much good. In taking Vitamines with Nuxated Iron, always take Yeast Vitamine Tablets before meals and Nuxated Iron Tablets after meals. Weigh yourself before you start and test your strength on a gymnasium strength testing machine, then weigh yourself again after ten days and see how much you have increased your weight, strength and endurance. It is often remarkable what an astonishing difference it makes in a person's appearance to round-out face and figure with a few pounds of good firm flesh and it is often equally surprising what a tremendous amount of pep, vigor, force and energy a little more oxygenated organic iron will give a person whose blood is deficient in this magic-like substance.

Arrangements have been made with local druggists to give every reader of this paper, absolutely free, a large $1.00 package of "Nuxated Brand" Yeast Vitamine Tablets (containing all three Vitamines) with every bottle of Nuxated Iron. Cut out and use free coupon below today.

SPECIAL NOTE. If, after making the above test with Nuxated Iron, or Nuxated Iron and Vitamines, you do not obtain all and even greater benefits than you expected, the manufacturers will promptly refund your money. Cut out and use free Yeast Vitamine Coupon below, today.

FREE $1.00 COUPON

This Coupon, if used within FIVE DAYS, entitles you to one regular $1.00 package of Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets, absolutely free with each bottle of Nuxated Iron that you purchase. If your dealer does not have our Vitamine Tablets he can easily obtain them for you from any wholesale house.

MOVE TO STOP STREET WORK.

Pasadena Citizens Invoke Aid of Injunction.

Zoning Plan Up to Officials of Crown City.

College Head on Mission to Arizona City.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, March 4.—Chairman H. W. Wadsworth of the city directorate and City Atty. James H. Howard were served with papers today in an injunction action brought in Superior Court, Los Angeles, by certain residents of North Marengo avenue to prevent the widening of that thoroughfare.

This means a legal fight to prevent the widening north of Walnut street, an undertaking authorized by ordinance recently. The Marengo property owners included among those bringing the action are J. H. Salisbury, J. N. Salter, Lauretta Baranaby and others.

The court action to stop the street widening came as a surprise to city officials. City Atty. Howard indicated that the city would fight the injunction and endeavor to carry out its program.

ZONING PLAN UP.

The new zoning plan for Pasadena will come up for consideration of the city directorate some time next week. A commission appointed by that body has been at work on the subject for some time.

The plan, as decided upon, will divide the city into five distinct zones. There will be an industrial zone, for factories, shop and freight trackage; a business zone for the downtown retail stores and businesses, and three residential zones.

There will be certain restrictions and regulations, within the residential zones, such as the exclusion of apartment-houses from certain subdivisions and prohibition of stores and shops except in certain localities, where neighborhood shops may be maintained. Establishment of oil service stations in residential sections also will be restricted.

GOES TO ARIZONA.

Rev. A. O. Henricks, president of Pasadena University, the Nazarene denomination school here, left for Phoenix, Ariz., on college business today, to be gone several weeks.

He returned a few days ago from a business trip to Kansas. He said that in Lyons, Kan., where he had a speaking engagement, one of the familiar wintry blizzards turned itself into a realistic Kansas cyclone, twisting houses, telephone poles and uprooting trees.

HOSTS TO LADIES.

Pasadena Elks were hosts tonight to their wives, when Pasadena Lodge No. 672, held a special session at which members of the fair sex were admitted. Sweethearts of the unmarried Elks were their guests.

It is said that this is the first time that women have ever been admitted to a real meeting of the lodge. After the "special session" a ball was held at the Elks' clubhouse.

WINTER COLONY DANCES.

Members of the winter colony at the Pasadena resort hotels danced tonight at special social events arranged for them at two of the hotels. At the Vista del Arroyo was held a mimic inaugural ball, preceded by a dinner-dance, in observance of March 4. A replica of the White House portico adorned the front of the hotel. At the Hotel Maryland a South Seas dinner-dance and ball was held, with appropriate settings and music.

New lots of charming old Chinese jade, amber, crystal, carnelian, lapis and ivory beads, pendants, charms and bracelets are arriving this week at Grace Nicholson's Famous Pasadena Shop, 46 North Los Robles ave. Also new shades of brocade silk and girdles. —[Advertisement.

ELKS ELECT.

Redlands Lodge Chooses Officers for Coming Year.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, March 4.—Officers were elected by the Redlands lodge of Elks at the meeting last night. H. S. Williamson, the retiring Exalted Ruler, was named as the delegate to the grand lodge meeting, which is to be held in July.

Officers elected are: Dr. A. R. Shultz, Exalted Ruler; C. A. Maccubbin, Leading Knight; W. T. Thornquest, Loyal Knight; Ben Osbun, Lecturing Knight; Guy Stone, Inner Guard; W. V. Watson, Trustee; Lee Dague, Secretary, and M. H. Fitzsimmons, Treasurer. These officers are to be installed at a meeting to be held in April.

Plans are being made for a meeting here soon with representatives from the Elks' lodges of the citrus belt to meet the president of the State association.

MAKE COST SURVEY.

Committee Learns Amount Spent in Fight with Frost.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, March 4.—Citrus fruit growers are awaiting with interest the results of a survey of groves made yesterday afternoon by a group of fifteen business men, representative interests, with a view to determining the cost of firing during frost periods and the advantages that may accrue as a result of the adoption of such a precautionary measure.

A committee consisting of R. L. Webster, manager of the Riverside branch of the Hellman Bank; Irwin Hayden, managing secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; L. D. Batchelor of the State Citrus Experiment Station, and A. M. Lewis, was appointed to compile a report of the survey.

One orchard of twenty acres inspected fired 400 pots for eight nights, the average having been fifty-three burning hours per pot. The cost was found to be approximately $7.25 per acre per night. One ten-acre tract fired 300 pots for six nights, or forty-five firing hours per pot, at a cost of $12.65 per night per acre. At the grove of H. A. Lynn, manager of the Riverside-Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange, at Atlanta avenue and Marlborough street, comprising fifteen acres, an average of 300 pots were used. There were 5200 gallons of oil consumed, an average of two quarts per pot per hour. This represented a cost of $513.27, or $5.75 per night per acre. Other groves were visited and data collected regarding costs which will be used in making a tabulation for the benefit of growers generally.

FAITHFUL SERVANT.

Death Ends Career of Oldest County Officer.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, March 4.—A. M. Ruiz, Coroner of Santa Barbara county for thirty-five years, died here today at the age of 72 years. He had been in failing health for more than a year, but had attended to his public duties up to within the last six weeks.

Ruiz was a native of Santa Barbara and during his long tenure of office is believed to have investigated more death tragedies than probably any other Coroner in California. He was unmarried, but leaves scores of relatives scattered over the State.

FINISHES YEAR AS PRESIDENT.

First Twelve Months Prove Huge Success.

Humanizes Government of His Country.

Accepted Lincoln's Policy as to Cabinet.

him, the accomplishment both at home and abroad have been remarkable. His solutions have all been constructive, but his activities can be best summarized as teamwork at its best.

Long before he dreamed that he would be elected by an overwhelming avalanche, with a majority of 7,000,000 votes, the stupendous responsibility that confronted the President to be elected gave him much concern. He searched the public men of this country for the best material for the making of a Cabinet. His ambition was to have the best Cabinet possible to grapple with the perplexities at home and abroad.

The Cabinet he named has justified his expectations and has remained intact until today, when the first change came in the office of Postmaster-General.

How conscious he was of the necessity for care and prescience in the choosing of his official family is illustrated in a story told by one of his intimates.

LINCOLN'S SUCCESS.

"Riding on a train shortly after the election," said this friend, "the President-elect turned to me suddenly and said: 'There is one thing about Lincoln that I believe the historians have not emphasized enough. Lincoln, you will recall, picked the strongest men he could find for his Cabinet, and while he did not always agree with them, he kept them together in his official family.

" 'The splendid results of the Lincoln administration were due to that teamwork and the big-brained men in the Cabinet. I want that kind of a Cabinet and that kind of men, and I want to work with them. Lincoln's success was that he did not know it all, and I know I do not know it all, either.' "

President Harding built his Cabinet on those lines and the first year's experience by the American people of this administration demonstrates that problems have been solved and that the President, to use his own expression, "has kept his feet on the ground" and with his advisers has made history that will endure in the annals of this country.

The President from the day he took office has called into conference with him leaders of the House and the Senate, and has sought to get effective and concerted action.

OF THE PEOPLE.

Both President and Mrs. Harding hate sham. They like people. They enjoy meeting their fellow men and women. That is the reason White House gates are open. That is the reason for the old-time New Year's reception, when the rank and file, the high and low of Washington, were received in the stately halls of the historic home of Presidents. That is why Washington came by invitation to the simple stately garden parties on the White House lawns. That is why the kiddies took the White House lawns for their own on Easter Day for egg rolling. That is why the daily life at the White House is democratic day in and day out. That is why the President meets the newspaper men twice each week and takes them into his confidence.

Warren G. Harding was a human being when he was inaugurated and he is the same today after a gruelling year of overcoming obstacles greater than most Presidents face in a whole term. Both the President and Mrs. Harding sense their responsibilities, but their democracy is neither false nor affected.

Some one, in attempting to be satirical, said that with the inauguration last year "Main street had come to the White House." Those who have observed administrations come and go in Washington for a quarter of a century are praying that the following years of the Harding administration will present the same brand of Main street as in this year which has just become history.

Forty minutes after President and Mrs. Harding entered the White House the locked gates to the executive grounds swung open at his command, to the people of the country, and they have not since been closed. Nor will they be while President Harding remains an occupant of the executive mansion. The act is typical of the first year of his administration.

MONEY FOUND IN BACK YARD.

Surprising Source of Profit Revealed in Farm and Tractor Section.

Have you a back yard? If you have, no matter how small it may be, here's a tip: Now is the time to plant fruit trees. Many wise family men around Los Angeles are utilizing ground in the rear of their homes that used to go to waste by setting out a few trees. A few, properly planted, will thrive in an amazingly small plot of ground and become an increasing source of profit. How about some berries along the back fence? There's another way to hit the H.C.L.

This Sunday's Farm and Tractor section of The Times has some valuable advice for the home owner, city and country. Don't fail to read the part about tree planting. It means dollars and cents to you, and perhaps a new and absorbing hobby. It is written by experts; you'll find the answer to your particular problem there.

PLAN WILL WIN, SAYS GANDHI.

ment until the prisons can hold no more and refusal to co-operate with Great Birtain so long as she governs India in the present corrupt way will win all for us."

"What about Bordoli? Why was the test of mass civil disobedience abandoned there on the eve of putting it into operation? What of the two previous attempts?" I asked.

"Bordoli was abandoned because the country was not ready. The principles of nonviolence had not yet made themselves felt. Therefore we postponed the test, but it has not been abandoned. We will continue our work of sowing seeds, which will come to a sure harvest. We will continue individual disobedience and boycott. When the time is ripe we shall call all India to lay down its tools and British weapons and to refuse to pay taxes. When that time comes the wheels of the government and industry will cease to turn until Great Britain gives us what we want. We have made three errors, we will not make a fourth attempt until the time is ripe."

MUST TEACH PEOPLE.

"But when crops and homes are seized, fines collected and men imprisoned, how can your policy help from leading to violence?" I asked.

"It can and will. We must teach all our people that all they need to do is to cease working, suffer a little while and starve, if necessary. Then the battle is won."

"What do you ask from England?" was my next question.

"That depends. Barring two points we are willing to negotiate but on two points there is no argument. If Great Britain grants us these two demands, we are willing to accept the status of a dominion, with the right to complete independence, when we wish it. We are willing to enter into partnership with Great Britain and to become a nation in the British Empire with her to guarantee the peace of the world.

GANDHI'S DEMANDS.

"These are our two demands:

"The Punjab and Khalifat wrongs must be redressed and Islam must be restored to her proper dignity. Those corrupt officials who have robbed and laid waste the Punjab must be discharged and the pensions of those who have retired must be stopped. As to Islam, the Christian nations must understand that Mohammedism is a dignified religion. Turkey must be restored as nearly as possible to its prewar frontiers and the other Islamic countries must be given their proper places in the concert of nations. If Great Britain refuses these two points, then our goal is complete independence. There will be no peace in India, no terms with England until these ends have been achieved.

"As a dominion India would welcome the Viceroy but the actual government of India must be in the hands of Indians.

"We have no quarrel with the Englishmen. We trust that he would stay. We would want America also to help. We would welcome technical experts wherever found.

"The foreign corporations would not be touched. The government would retain the railways and no existing contract would be disturbed unless manifest unfairness was found. We do not want a revolutionary over turning. We merely want a complete voice in our own affairs that we may relieve the suffering and starvation of our people."

CYCLONE IN AFRICA IS FATAL TO MANY.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LOURENZO MARQUEZ (Portuguese East Africa) March 4.—Serious loss of life and damage to property were caused by a cyclone which recently swept the seaport town of Chinde in this territory, destroying the government offices and many other buildings, and causing the sinking of numerous launches and other craft in the port. At least five Europeans and thirty natives were killed, and it is feared more casualties will come to light when the details are known.

Havoc was wrought on the estates of the Sena Sugar Factory, Limited, which also lost nineteen lighters and two launches.

GOVERNOR IS ARTFUL DODGER

Will Call No Session of th Legislature.

Flouts the South to Curry Favor in North.

Mandatory Provision of Law Disregarded.

the many charges flung at the State's chief executive, but criticism is so widespread and general as to considerably weaken this form of contention. It is understood the Governor will, himself, hurry to Southern California in an attempt to undo, if possible, the damage done to his candidacy for re-election.

The question of reapportioning the forty State Senatorial and eighty Assembly districts in California has been a burning one every ten years, since 1880, when the existing method was adopted. The State constitution, providing for the districts, also stipulates that they shall be reapportioned every ten years following a Federal census and shall be as nearly equal in population as may be.

LOS ANGELES GAINS.

Thus, in Northern California, where there are numerous small counties, sparsely settled, one State Senator or Assemblyman may represent several counties, the total population of which may be considerably less than the population of one county in Southern California.

Under the reapportionment of 1910, Los Angeles county received eight Senators and fifteen Assemblymen, and a constitutional reapportionment measure under the census of 1920 would give this county a minimum of ten Senators and twenty-one Assemblymen, the gains for Los Angeles resulting in consequent loss of representation in other sections of the State where population increases were not so great.

Los Angeles county, with more than 1,000,000 residents and with industrial and commercial activities of every description, has a greater diversity of interest, and, consequently, a greater need for representation in the State Legislature, than perhaps, fifteen or twenty inland counties, where the occupations or enterprises of the citizens are largely of a similar nature.

INSPIRED BY JEALOUSY.

Inspired, it seems, by sectional jealousy, but operating under the political fiction that constitutional reapportionment would place control of the State in the hands of the metropolitan areas, a small group of agricultural politicians in the north several months ago started an agitation for a constitutional amendment limiting each county to one State Senator.

This movement, in open violation of the constitution, went unrebuked by the Governor and, it has been charged, may have actually been inspired to save Gov. Stephens the embarrassment of calling a special legislative session at which, if he urged the Legislature to do its duty, he might lose considerable support.

His recent telegram asking legislators to give their opinion as to the possibility of obtaining constitutional reapportionment at a special session, was so worded as to indicate, it is asserted, his earnest hope that the replies would be negative. Despite the apparent "leading" nature of his telegraphic inquiry, the Governor received unequivocal demands for the extra session from virtually every State Senator and Assemblyman in Southern California.

FAILURE UP TO GOVERNOR.

Regardless of the hot charges made by his opponents and of the exasperated defense of his adherents there can be no denying that his failure to call a special session will forever leave in doubt the probable action on reapportionment that would have been taken by the members of the last Legislature.

Legislators who were loudest in exclaiming against the extra session might still have proved faithful to their trust if called officially before the people of the State and made to register a vote either to fulfill the constitution and observe their oath of office, or to violate the constitution and make a legislator's official oath of allegiance "a scrap of paper." Such is the responsibility which the Governor takes into a campaign for re-election.

FLEET TO GO WITHOUT AID.

the maintenance of that ratio at least is absolutely essential to national preservation.

POWERLESS NATION.

"The nation that, before this ratio was fixed, was powerful at sea in battleships or in merchant vessels, if she lags behind, must inevitably find herself in a position where, in case war does come, she is powerless to keep back the aggressor.

"Great Britain still controls the sea, with Japan and the United States occupying relatively the same positions as they did before the Disarmament Conference, in that the number of sea-going vessels of 2000 gross tons and over twelve knots or over owned by the United States, is only 22 per cent of the number owned by Great Britain, while the number of vessels owned by the United States, of the same tonnage of less than twelve knots, is practically the same as those owned by Great Britain. But it must be remembered that speed and tonnage of the merchantmen combined is an essential element in the matter of national defense as well as of commercial development.

"It behooves America, therefore, to see to it, not for military purposes, but for the protection and development of her commercial as well as her national defense, to maintain her routes at sea by the upbuilding of her merchant marine and to keep up at least relatively with other maritime nations the ratio that has been established by the Disarmament Conference. This can only be done through a merchant marine the equal of that of other maritime nations.

"It follows that the man who becomes a party to any propaganda for the abandonment of an American merchant marine in favor of any maritime foreign power, or who is willing to say, that if foreign ships can carry American commercial tonnage at a less rate than American ships can do the same thing, or that American ships should be abandoned and the foreign ships encouraged, is disloyal to his country and its best interests.

"Therefore, if for no other reason than for pride in country, the preservation and protection of the vast heritage that has been left to us by the fathers of the Republic, every loyal American ought to insist upon the maintenance of an American merchant marine, or at least upon the basis of the present ratio, it would not be in violation of the agreement reached nor an attempt to display preparation for war, if by friendly rivalry with the maritime nations of the earth we still continue to build and operate merchant ships in an effort, not to control or dominate the sea, but to do our fair proportion of the business of the world.

"It is discouraging indeed to those who are attempting to build up and maintain our merchant marine when they are confronted by the suggestion of many of our business men, that there is no sense in attempting to maintain a fleet of American merchant ships when some foreign power, operating ships under foreign flags is willing to take cargoes cheaper than American ships can afford to handle them. Immense cargoes of cereals were shipped from the United States to the United Kingdom and other foreign countries during the past year, and foreign ships were underbidding both the Shipping Board vessels and those of independent American operators, with the result that the greater portion of these cargoes were carried by foreign ships.

"The American ship must, therefore, be operated at a great loss or it must go out of business, unless this differential is met by subvention, direct or indirect, permitted by Congressional action."

Remarkable Value in Pianos and Player Pianos

Wherever pianos are sold, the Washburn Piano is known for thoroughly dependable quality. By all ordinary standards, it belongs in a higher price class.

Outside of those expensive instruments laying great stress upon their claims to artistic pre-eminence, few pianos approach the Washburn in beauty of tone, skill of workmanship, and excellence of material.

At the new price level, a good Washburn Piano or Player Piano costs you no more than many of inferior grade. It saves you $100 from the usual price of competitive instruments.

Made by Lyon & Healy

More than a half-century's experience with fine pianos lies back of the Washburn. Together with the vast resources of the world's foremost music house.

It is as an ideal piano for the home that the Washburn has achieved its great success. Its purity and sweetness of tone help to train the child's ear to a true appreciation of musical quality.

"Made by Lyon & Healy" means much to the piano buyer. It indicates an understanding, second to none, of what makes for musical excellence.

A remarkable organization, with unequalled facilities for production. A sincere desire to serve the cause of good music by producing instruments of true worth.

"Made by Lyon & Healy" means that the Washburn comes from the same workrooms that have developed the superb Lyon & Healy Piano, as well as the finest harp, the finest mandolin, the finest banjo that the world has known!

In Use the World Over

The tone of the Washburn Piano—round, resonant, full, and sympathetic—remains unimpaired by time and use. So scientifically is it designed, so well built! It can never become "tin-panny," as do so many moderate-priced instruments.

That it is made by Lyon & Healy guarantees the goodness of the Washburn Piano. Into it has gone the knowledge born of 57 years of handling high grade instruments.

Because of this enduring goodness, you will find Washburns giving satisfaction under the severe climatic conditions of Asia—in South America, in Iceland, in South Africa. Truly, the Washburn's leadership in its class is beyond question!

In the Washburn Player Piano, you will find the same superiority. For the Lyon & Healy-made Player is a perfected mechanism. The first-time performer can play it with keen enjoyment, while, to the trained musician, it gives unlimited opportunity for the expression of his interpretive powers.

A Sound Investment

There is sure satisfaction—lasting satisfaction—in the purchase of a Washburn Piano or Player Piano. And the value, at the new low prices, is unmatchable!

Let us show you these good instruments—tomorrow!

RECRUITING FOR GUARD CAMP TRIP.

Infantry Regiment Plans Summer Training; Places Open for Two Hundred.

What may prove to be the greatest recruiting drive of the California National Guard, will be opened here this week, when the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry begins a campaign to enlist 200 men for maneuvers, which it is hoped will take place at Monterey the last two weeks of July.

Recruiting will be carried on at regimental headquarters in the Story Building and the Armory at Exposition Park, at the armories in Santa Ana, Glendale, Burbank, Alhambra, Pasadena and Redondo Beach.

"Membership in the California National Guard should be regarded by young men as highly desirable," said Col. Walter P. Story, regimental commander. "This country is now devoting a great deal of attention to the development of the men who constitute its guard. In line with the policy of the government, this organization is giving every possible advantage to young men.

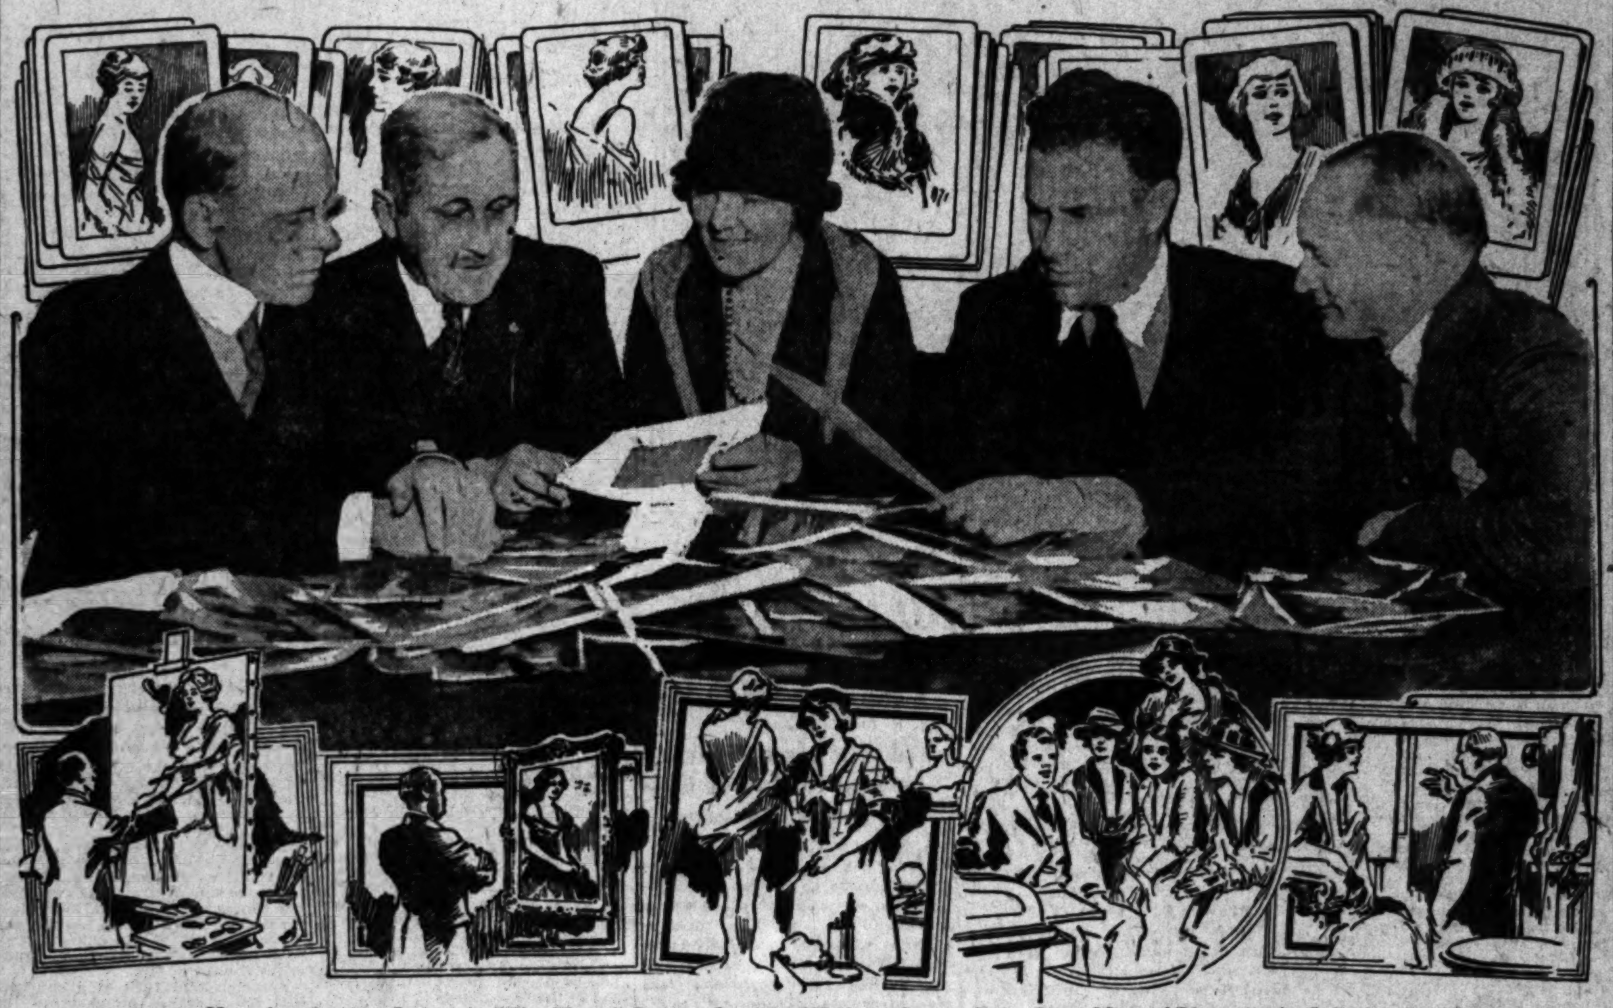
The Armory at Exposition Park is one of the finest and most completely equipped in the country. It has a gymnasium with full equipment, a swimming pool, shower baths, bowling alleys, indoor target range, radio-telegraph equipment, billiard tables, basketball courts, baseball diamond, in fact, every convenience that appeals to men who love clean sports. Here men can learn various trades, such as that of mechanics, book-keepers, telegraph operators, radio construction and the like."

WHITTIER ATTORNEY WEDS.

When Jefferson G. Wingert was acting City Attorney of Whittier and Superior Judge McLucas was City Attorney of Santa Monica, the two met. Yesterday Judge McLucas married Wingert to Mrs. Judd Woodruff Rhodes, an attractive young widow of this city. Wingert is at present City Attorney of Whittier. The ceremony was performed in Judge McLucas's chambers.

FIRST .. BEAUTY .. QUEST .. PRIZE-WINNERS .. NEXT .. SUNDAY.

Photographs of Six Prettiest Girls in Two of Great Southwest Zones to Appear in "Times" Rotogravure Section.



Here Are the Five Judges in "The Times" Beauty Quest at Work on Some of the Great Mass of Photographs Submitted.

PHOTOGRAPHS of six of the eighteen prize-winning beauties of the Southwest entered in The Times Beauty Quest, just concluded, will appear in the rotogravure section of The Times next Sunday.

These six winners will be those adjudged the prettiest of all the entries in two of the six zones into which the Southwest was divided for the purposes of the quest. Each zone has three prizes—first, $500 in cash; second, $100 in cash; third, $50 in cash. In other words, cash prizes amounting to $1300 will be announced next Sunday, and the money will be paid immediately.

The name and address of each of the winners will appear with her photograph and the amount of her prize.

It is hoped to be able to announce the winners in two more zones the Sunday following and in the two remaining zones the Sunday after that. All photographs will appear in the rotogravure section. Rotogravure is the last word in modern photograph reproduction methods, and is ideal for this permanent record of the Southwest's most beautiful girls.

As a grand finale the most beautiful of all the entries, irrespective of zones, will be named, and her photograph will occupy the entire front page of the rotogravure section. This girl, to be selected from the six first-prize winners in the six zones, will receive $1000 in cash in addition to her $500 prize, or $1500 in all, in addition to the honor of being proclaimed the most beautiful girl in the whole Southwest, home of the prettiest girls in the world.

The nineteen pictures to be printed in The Times roto section in the course of these prize anworthy of preservation as the best types of Southland beauty, as announcements will be eminently judged by competent artists and critics of all schools. It will also be of great interest to keep the pictures of the six first-prize winners in the six zones and see if you can pick the one the judges will declare the most beautiful of all.

CAMPAIGN FOR WILSON FUND OPENS

Meritorious Service to be Rewarded from Interest on Foundation.

Harrington Brown and Mrs. J. H. Stewart, selected by Franklin D. Roosevelt as heads of the men's and women's committees of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, have selected their committee workers and started the campaign to raise $30,000 in Southern California for the million dollar national fund. Subscriptions should be sent to the local headquarters, Room 806, Security Building. The local committee heads seek to obtain a large number of small subscriptions of $1 or more, rather than a few of large sums.

The fund raised will be used as an endowment. "The income," said an announcement issued last week, "will be used for making awards from time to time by a nationally constituted committee to the individual or group that has rendered within a specified period meritorious service to democracy, public welfare, liberal thought, or peace through justice. The purpose of the foundation is to honor a great American and create a method whereby public service will be encouraged and conspicuously recognized in this and future generations."

GOB IS WRECKED IN LOCAL SOCIETY.

"Windy" Hawkins Relates How "Bones" Wilson, Splendid Sailor but Gun-Shy of Women, Put Bluejackets "In Bad" in Los Angeles During World-Cruise in 1907-08.

BY LOGAN E. RUGGLES,

Editor of the "Mississippi Bulletin," U.S.S. Mississippi.

If you don't know "Windy" Hawkins, you don't know the Navy. Because "Windy," as he is familiarly known throughout the Pacific Fleet, is probably one of the best informed gobs on this side of the grand old United States. "Windy" is the yarn spinner of the battleship divisions, and is equally well known on one ship as another. His seventeen years of faithful service, during which time he has kept a log of his travels, has enabled him to earn the sobriquet of, "The yarn spinner, de luxe."

Hawkins swings his hammock aboard the "Home Ship" Mississippi and, unless there are movies, he has the crowd on the dope hatch spellbound with a weird tale of the seven seas. A few nights ago he had the gang cornered with a story of the famous cruise around the world of the "Big Sixteen," or perhaps better known as the Atlantic Fleet. This wonderful cruise took place in 1907-08, lasting nearly a year, and constituted some 45,000 miles. It is evident that there would be many stories to spin about such a wonderful cruise, and "Windy," being of the type that always takes cognizance of incidents, can rattle off "best records" with the ease and dexterity of a polished after-dinner speaker.

FOR "FIGHTING BOB."

It will be remembered that the good folk of Los Angeles made every attempt to entertain the sailormen from "Fighting Bob's" wonderful array of fighting ships. Those of you who recall it, will remember that a great barbecue was only one of the forms of entertainment and amusement tendered to Admiral Evans's sailors.

"BONES" MADE SOME VERY UNGENTLEMANLY REMARKS."

Many of the Mississippi sailormen were telling of their shore leave in different ports the other evening when the mud-hook was dropped in Los Angeles Harbor. It so happened that "Windy" was a listener, and not until some boot had warbled off his record did "Windy" start his salvos. They had hung a tag on "Windy's" angora by telling of shore leave in a northern city; they had contributed to his ire by attempting to score some of the Southern California cities. But "Windy" could see that it would take considerable salt-water diplomacy to get the good graces of his dope-hatch aggregation, and for this reason he started to tell of the great barbecue and the wonderful times experienced by the sailors of "Fighting Bob's" ships.

"Let me tell you birds about the barbecue that the citizens of Los Angeles gave us when we were makin' the cruise around the world," started "Windy." "We had a most wonderful time, and believe me, they showed us what a public-spirited bunch of citizens could do to entertain us!"

"Tell 'em about the race you had with the Chink in Hongkong," broke in a boot who had heard "Windy" spin the "Chink story."

"Never mind, you rubber boot," chirped "Windy." "Who's telling this yarn; me or you? I'm trying to pound into your ivory domes that Los Angeles is the sailors' paradise, and if you boots will treat 'em right they'll treat you right, and don't forget that."

The mustering of the anchor watch was a signal for "Windy" to muster his charges for the night. Eight o'clock reports were being made and Windy was interrupted temporarily.

EXPLAINS "DOPE HATCH."

The anchor watch mustered, ("Windy" was back at his favorite corner of the dope hatch. (It will not be amiss here to mention that the dope hatch is a part of the ship where warm air is emitted through a vent from the evaporators. This makes a very desirable place to "hang out" during the yarn-spinning hours.)

"TOBY FOSTER DID THE TALKING."

"Go and get the java, Skinny," called "Windy" to one of the watch, "and I'll tell ye all about the barbecue, and how an ignorant gob pretty near crabbed the act for the fleet. I want to show you how easy it is to get in bad with society folks if you don't understand 'em.

"The man I'm goin' to tell you about is 'Bones' Wilson. There never was a braver sailor. He was highly respected by the officers and enlisted men alike; he was one of the best gunpointers on the ships of Admiral Evans, and he never moved a muscle when the big guns began to roar. Wilson served with me on the Asiatic Station and I know him as well as any man in the service.

"There was only one thing that 'Bones' feared, and that was a woman. He'd never been around 'em, and he detested to be in a place where they were. On account of his sailor manners and the society people, he nearly got court-martialed right here in this harbor. His breach of society decorum, I suppose you'd call it, nearly got him disrated from coxswain, and he never meant a thing by his seemingly rude remarks. Of course, if the people had known more about sailors, their modes of living and their conversations, everything would have been all right.

"WINDY" IS THE YARN SPINNER DE LUXE OF THE NAVY.

"Wilson knew men—he'd always lived in a man's world—but he didn't know a thing about women, and with all my coaxing he remained on the ship for months at a time. He saved his jack and sent it home to his mother back East and, honestly, I never saw him speak to a woman, much less a young flapper. We all left the the ship to take in the big feed, and after hours I coaxed 'Bones' to go with me. He finally consented, but made me promise that there'd be no women in the party; he know that I liked the ladies and generally took 'em out for a speed run.

CHOW FOR THE GOBS.

"We arrived at the grounds. There was fine chow awaiting us. The gobs were directed to their seats by ladies and gentlemen, and I could see that the lady who escorted 'Bones' and me was a refined matron. She introduced her daughter, a very pretty girl of about 18 years. But lucky for all hands, as soon as the introduction was over, they went somewhere else and saw to it that other gobs were seated. So the chow was next in order, and we did justice to it. 'Bones' would only eat when there was no women near as he was afraid they'd watch him handle his mess gear. In a half hour, I should judge, we finished our dinner, and I went over to a stand to get some ciggies, which were being served out free. 'Bones' hung to his bag o' Bull and papers, and rolled one of his own.

"He had forethought enough to leave the tables, which were long, wide boards on horses and boxes, and which covered several acres of ground. 'Bones' went over to where there were a crowd of shipmates and finally, feeling like he needed a little horizontal exercise, stretched himself out in the shade and a large tree. He had no more than got flemished down until the little girl whom we had previously been introduced to come over to where he was, woke him up and wanted to know if he would care for some home-made cake. She said that her mother had baked it, and she knew that it was pure and good.

GEE, HERE COMES A WOMAN, I'M GOIN' BACK TO THE SHIP

"'BONES' WAS AFRAID OF WOMEN."

"Aside from being roused from the nap, 'Pones' was sore as a goat to think that a mere woman would dare wake him, and then offer him some o' that flapper bait, besides. So he sat up and looked at the girl with an air of disgust, and said:

"'Hell, no! I don't care for any o' that chicken food.'

"Wilson was right. He couldn't have eaten a bite. He was full as a tick, and all he wanted was to be left alone. But that did not help the situation any. The little 'flapper' got all excited, went away and found her mother and started to blat like a dying sheep. She exaggerated the remark as did her mother when she confided the story to another society woman. Soon the story went the rounds that Miss Blank had been insulted by a tough sailor, and it finally got to the wife of the Mayor, who was entertaining the Admiral's wife, and to whom she related the story as she had heard it. And by this time a mole hill had been built into a mountain. Mrs. Admiral imparted the story to her husband, but he only smiled. He knew sailors better than all of the society folk, and he had heard of the fire records made by Wilson, in fact, he has served with him down in Cuba.

"But he thought a personal or a relayed apology would be the right thing to appease the wounded feelings of the young lady and also her mother, who had never gotten the story right from the very beginning. The Admiral decided that he would appoint a man to represent Wilson at a given place to make the apology, and directed a first-class gunner's mate by the name of Toby Foster to do the talking. Of course, he picked a man at random, and he did not know that Toby would make a silvery speech or jazz up the works. So Toby was directed to meet the assembly at six bells and offer an apology for his sorrowed shipmate.

"Toby racked his brain for words as he ambled to the ap-

Will Hays has quit his job as Postmaster-General. We won't say it was the Gump contest that finished him, but let any fair-minded man take one look at the Gump editor's desk, that's all, and judge for himself. It seems quite a few folks know the Gumps—Andy Gump, Min Gump, Uncle Bim and the Widow Zander, not to speak of Aunt Martha, who only recently came to town for a spell. And they all wrote 'n, giving their advice as to whether Uncle Bim should be allowed, perhaps encouraged is a better word, to keep himself exposed to the Widow Zander's wiles, when it looks like an open and shut case of matrimony if they keep it up.

To those not in the know, as they say on Spring street, this was a prize contest. The prizes were the most remarkable ever offered. There have been fat purses, automobiles and houses given as prizes before in contests hereabouts, but the awards in this epistolary race of Gump fans were none of these. For the best letter was offered a regulation, unexpurgated bale of hay; for the second prize, a bird cage made with wires, and for the third prize a mouse trap, full movement, nickel jeweled, adjusted to all positions.

The magnificence of all these prizes, while spurring interest in the contest, nevertheless gave the Gump editor many sleepless nights. Many of the contestants demanded that the last be first and others stipulated that if they were awarded the second prize, could they arrange to exchange with the fellow who got the third? This was a hard problem, but newspaper work is that way, and we carried the burden stoically. One contestant wanted the hay, if he won it, given to charity, and the reader will readily see what a tremendous amount of time, thought and investigation this request involved. However, he didn't win it.

SLEUTHS ON THE TRAIL.

Who did win it? We don't know. Long days of labor and nights devoid of ease, testing, weighing, comparing, consulting, counting, enumerating and analyzing the hundreds of letters received failed to give us the name of the person who falls heir to this hand-tooled, sun-cured bundle of A-1 horse fodder. There it rests in all its splendor in The Times business office, and here the contest is over, and we can't tell the nervous, eagerly waiting thousands whose is it. But we've got the papers! We've got the letter the man who wins that hay wrote to us, and we shall track him down! He didn't sign his name, thinking, plotting and conniving to avoid his responsibility, but he cannot shirk thus, for the bale of hay has been most modern and intricate weapons of defense ever devised.

CLASS FIRES GUNS.

Merchants, bankers, professional men and salaried men in civil life, they have also become expert artillerymen, capable in an emergency of dropping their civil pursuits and literally rushing to the defense of the nation.

Six months of intensive training has equipped them well for their jobs of handling powerful coast defense guns, working out problems on the plotting board and operating the intricate and delicate precision devices that control the fire of modern coast rifles and mortars.

So rapid has been the development of this nucleus, and so proficient have the individual members of the class become that last September the War Department saw fit to authorize these business men, doctors, lawyers, bankers and other "mere civilians" to load costly shells into twelve-inch mortars and fourteen-inch rifles and fire at an "enemy." The action of the War Department was without precedent and created a stir in Army circles throughout the country. It was, however, considered a substantial tribute to Col. Hatch's idea and proof of the War Department's belief in its worth.

Now the modern high-powered disappearing gun has a pre-determined span of "life," carefully figured out by gun experts and every shot fired shortens the life of that very costly weapon. Steel shells, weighing several hundred pounds each, also cost considerable money. The valuation placed by the department on Col. Hatch's idea, then, can safely be measured by the yard stick of cost, in this day of rigid economy in the administration of Army affairs at Washington.

PARSON IS EXPERT.

There are those whose tastes do not run to fighting and the spilling of blood. There are others who draw the line at offensive warfare. But there are mighty few, as the late World War proved, who are not willing to shoulder a rifle or man a gun when the homes of the nation are threatened with invasion.

And the training idea worked out by Col. Hatch has just that appeal for those who have gone in for it—the appeal of "fitness to defend in an emergency." This is best illustrated by the fact that in Col. Hatch's class of civilian artillery experts at Fort MacArthur there is a Presbyterian minister, Rev. Oscar Bell, pastor of a church in Long Beach.

In time of war, feature writers would probably describe Dr. Bell as "the fighting parson." He is not exactly that, any more than are his classmates. But he is emphatically a believer in national defense. Not the so-called defense usually put up by an army of untrained men rushed into the field to meet an emergency, but of a defense directed and carried out by men who are thoroughly trained in that particular and serious business.

Hence, Dr. Bell is one of the most enthusiastic men in the artillery class and Col. Hatch pays him a compliment by saying he is one of the most expert in the handling of the guns and the operation of the instruments of all the class.

Although Los Angeles Harbor is the scene of the activities of this class of civilian artillerymen, which meets at Fort MacArthur every Thursday night for study and practice, Long Beach happens to be the home of the members. Recruited originally from among the members of the Long Beach Progressive Business Club and named the Civilian Artillery Club, the class has since broadened to include members of other clubs and men who belong to no clubs.

The president of the class is James Collins, a prominent civil engineer and late of the Army engineers in France. The secretary is Dr. Bell, the minister. Prominent among the other members who are becoming proficient artillerymen are Max Wallace, Long Beach banker; Judge Underwood, Benjamin Lewis, a jeweler, and others of the beach city.

PROFICIENCY ATTESTED.

Their proficiency as marksmen with big guns is attested by a letter of commendation written by Maj.-Gen. Wright, former commander of the Ninth Army Corps, with headquarters at San Francisco, to Col. Hatch. The letter came soon after the close of the official target practice last fall and in it Gen. Wright described the target scores of the individual class members as "remarkable." About the middle of this month the civilians will repeat the performance.

The War Department, in recognition of Col. Hatch's work, has called him to a higher place in the Army organization. On April 1, unless his orders are countermanded before that date, he will leave for Fortress Monroe, at Hampton Roads, Va., to become president of the United States Army artillery board. It is a high honor and there are those in the Army who are predicting that the advancement is just a forerunner of a higher step—to the post of chief of the Artillery Corps, U.S.A.

But Col. Hatch, while appreciating the honor bestowed, is probably the least enthusiastic about it of all the officers at Fort MacArthur. He wants to remain with the local coast defenses and carry out the work he has but so recently launched—the making of civilians into proficient defenders of the nation. He has told the War Department just that, but whether he is permitted to remain here is problematical.

At any rate, he is eager to see his idea developed still further at Fort MacArthur and he has asked the War Department, in naming a successor here, to appoint a commanding officer who will be in complete sympathy with the idea and one who is capable of carrying on the work until it is developed into a national proposition.

Col. Hatch came to the Pacific Coast in 1919 and joined the staff of Gen. Hodges, then district artillery commander at Seattle. Later he commanded Fort Casey. In November, 1920, he was transferred to the command of Fort MacArthur at the harbor.

HAS ENVIABLE RECORD.

His war record is enviable. Going to France as a temporary lieutenant-colonel of the Regular Army, he was promoted to the rank of colonel in February, 1918. In June of the same year he was commissioned a brigadier-general and placed in command of the now famous Fortieth Railway Artillery Brigade. At the close of the war he reverted to his regular rank of colonel and was assigned to duty in the office of the Chief of Artillery at Washington.

The need of properly trained groups of civilians for defense is emphasized, Col. Hatch points out, by the present status of Fort MacArthur and the recent action of Congress in threatening to cut the regular standing military organization to the bone. At Fort MacArthur the enlisted personnel is now about 20 per cent of the force necessary to adequately man the batteries in an emergency, he said.

The training of civilians for defense is absolutely necessary to the welfare of the nation if Congress has its way, Col. Hatch declares. But regardless of what is done at Washington Col. Hatch plans to continue the development of his idea with all his energy. He is in great demand as a speaker at meetings of clubs and business men's organizations in the Los Angeles district and on every occasion that offers itself he drives home to his hearers the need of trained men for defense purposes and the opportunities which his class at Fort MacArthur offers the Los Angeles business man and salaried man for becoming expert artillerymen.

A GENTLE HINT.

The young man had been "sparking" his girl for some months, and at last her father got tired of his frequent visits. He hardly ever came home without finding the young Lothario in the parlor with his daughter. Even the telephone was in use when he was away, and sweet nothings were sent in over the wires.

One holiday the young man had called on the phone oftener than usual, and nobody else had a chance at the telephone. At last the girl said to him:

"Please don't phone me again, dear; father is cleaning his gun."

There were no more calls, either in person or over the phone, that day.—[Columbus Dispatch.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

A Cincinnati Barber Tells How to Make a Remedy for Grey Hair.

A well-known resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, who has been a barber for more than forty years, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and 1-4 ounce glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the most delicate scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."—[Advertisement.

Matches versus Klearflax Rugs

Lighted matches, when accidently dropped upon the floor, have a way of burning themselves into the warp and woof of the average carpet.

Not so with a Klearflax linen rug.

You may drop a lighted match, cigarette or cigar stubs upon a Klearflax linen rug and they will burn themselves out—but not the Klearflax.

It is because a Klearflax rug is so closely woven of the strongest linen yarn with no pile that it is able to resist such hard wear—and even matches.

A Klearflax linen rug is sanitary because there is no thick pile in which the dust and dirt may collect. It does not wrinkle or buckle up on the floor and retains its shape indefinitely.

There are nine beautiful one-tone colors in which the Klearflax linen rugs are made, which are adaptable for use in homes, offices and public buildings.

FILM PRESS MEN PLAN BIG FROLIC.

Publicity Agents Announce Purpose to Present Girls Who Soon Will be Stars.

Under a banner of thirteen stars of the cinema the infant organization of motion-picture press agents known as the Western Motion-Picture Advertisers announced yesterday that the first annual Wampas Frolic will be held the 15th inst. at the Ambassador.

Predicting that they will become the "stars of tomorrow," the press agents have named a baker's dozen of film girls who will be officially presented to the public under that prophecy at the frolic. The girls are Claire Windsor, Lois Wilson, Louise Lorraine, Maryon Aye, Helen Ferguson, Jacqueline Logan, Colleen Moore, Lila Lee, Mary Philbin, Patsy Ruth Miller, Katherine McGuire, Bessie Love and Pauline Starke.

Another feature of the Wampas Frolic will be an animated "news reel," in which notables of the motion-picture community will appear in person. Pictorial news that is "not a motion picture" is expected to have a unique appeal to the much-photographed stars, directors and famous writers of the studios.

A newspaper is to be published on the premises and delivered to the dancers on the floor, promise the Wampas, taking the place of the usual program and illustrating that press agents retain their "nose for news" even after losing their journalistic chastity.

Victor Herbert, the composer and orchestra leader, who recently completed an engagement here, has wired Harry Wilson, chairman of the entertainment committee, his willingness to make a special trip back to Los Angeles for the frolic. Mr. Herbert will conduct an original composition, as yet unnamed, but dedicated to the publicity men. The Hale Dewey Orchestra has been engaged to play for the dances.

"Wampas" is cinema slang for Western Motion Picture Advertisers, an organization with international affiliations, although it is only one year old. The frolic is the first public social event given under the new regime of officers, headed by Arch Reeve, president. Ray Leek, retiring head of the organization, is manager of the frolic.

BEERBOHM PROTESTED.

Amusing Writer Wanted No Book Written About Him.

"You might have waited for my demise instead of merely hastening it," remarked his subject—or victim, as you please—to Bohun Lynch, when the latter communicated the news that he was about to write "Max Beerbohm in Perspective."

But admirers of Beerbohm will agree that the Beerbohmian protests against its publication in themselves justify the volume. Here they are:

"I remember several books about men who, not yet dead, had blandly aided and abetted the author; and I remember what awful asses those men seemed to me thereby to have made of themselves. Two of them were rather great men. They could afford to make awful asses of themselves. I, who am 100 miles away from being great, cannot afford such luxuries.

"My gifts are small. I've used them very well and discreetly never straining them and the result is that I've made a charming little reputation. But that reputation is a frail plant. Don't over-attended to it, Gardener Lynch. Don't drench and deluge it! The contents of a quite small watering can will be quite enough.

"Gardener Lynch," however was not to be deterred, and his readers may rejoice therefor. He has produced an amusing study of an amusing writer, not a flippant study, but not a painfully serious one, either.—[Living Age.

Nobody Wanted Tripe.

The battalion was in camp. Tents had been pitched and all made shipshape.

The cooks had lighted their fires. The sergeant-major made his rounds.

"Tripe and unyuns for supper," he said. "Get the tripe ready."

One of the cooks looked up in surprise.

"But where's the tripe, sir?" he asked.

"Hanging up on that tent pole," was the reply.

"Lor'," said the cook, "and I just been wiping me 'ands on it! Thort it was a dirty towel!"—[Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

DEFENDS FILM WORLD PEOPLE.

Pastor Urges Charity for Those Who Fall.

Fair Deal for Profession is Speaker's Plea.

Harvard Headmaster Talks at Lenten Service.

"Condemning thousands of people in a profession because of the immorality of a few is not the part of Christian charity," said Rev. Robert B. Gooden, headmaster of the Harvard Military School, speaking yesterday at the third of the noon Lenten services being conducted by the Episcopal churches at the Morosco Theater.

Speaking on the subject, "Charity is Kind and Thinketh no Evil," Mr. Gooden said that Abraham, pleading with God for the salvation of a wicked city, if peradventure ten righteous men might be found therein, stood out as a shining example to many so-called Christians of today who are ready to stab one of the greatest and best industries of California because of the evil acts of a few persons in the moving-picture field.

"The motion-picture business is here to stay," said Mr. Gooden. "You cannot drive it away, nor can I, nor any newspaper or church, or any combination of people or institutions. Rightly and properly handled, motion pictures can be and are a tremendous force in the educational and religious world, not to speak of their value from the standpoint of entertainment and recreation.

"Since this industry is going to remain with us, let us give it and the people engaged in it a fair deal. To speak or even to think evil of actors, actresses and producers is certainly not in the heart and mind of true Christianity.

"It is never the duty of a true citizen to blind himself to conditions nor to condone wrong wherever and whenever he sees it, but it is unwise, not to say uncharitable and un-Christian, to condemn the members of any business or profession simply because certain men and women engaged therein do not prove themselves true to the best that is in them.

PLACES RESPONSIBILITY.

"It would be well for us all to remember that when one man or woman falls it is that individual who should be held responsible and, if possible, lifted to a better life and not 100 or 1000 individuals who happen to be in the same business. For my part, I would rather seem to defend two or three wrong-doers than to sweepingly condemn 1000 people against whom no evil has been proved.

"How strange and despicable is that streak in human nature that gloats over the sins and the misfortunes of others! However, the religion of Christ is bigger than human nature, so-called, and the practice of those virtues which He possessed and exemplified can lift us above the petty meanness, the gossiping and the uncharitable thoughts and words in which, without His guidance, we are so likely to indulge."

No noon-day meeting will be held at the Morosco today, but the services will be continued next week.

THEY HAVE THE HABIT, TOO.

A joke that blooms each January and July in the funny papers is the changed disposition of women in sale times. A good deal of it, of course, is just joke and nothing else, but there is a certain layer of truth at the roots of it. One never does actually see shoppers hitting each other with umbrellas or stamping on the assistants, though on the opening day of the sales this week there were women with firm fingers jerking blouses away from limp, tentative fingers and elbowing through crowds in a manner that even a trolley boy would regret to see in a tram queue. Rich silk petticoats spilt off the counters on to the dusty floor, and women tramped over them just as though they were clumps of buttercups. Little frail bits of lingerie were tugged at the seams in a way that was simply asking for trouble; flimsy blouses were tossed into crumpled heaps. It seemed scarcely possible that any of the goods displayed could survive the tumult and battle of this, the first day.—[Manchester Guardian Weekly.

Woman's Slogan.

Woman's dress nowadays may begin a little late and end a little early, but the cynic exaggerates when he says the modern girl's motto is, "Never put off till tomorrow what you can put off today."—[London Opnion.

HAIRLESS PATE DIVIDES HOME.

When Husband Lost Flowing Locks is Question in Divorce Action.

A bald head has apparently scuttled the happy wedded life of Mrs. Sadie Weiner and her husband, Meyer Weiner. Her husband's glistening and denuded dome was named yesterday in a divorce complaint as the cause of her unhappy married life.

According to the complaint, the couple discussed Mr. Weiner's polished dome at a dinner party. Mr. Weiner declared that he had long, flowing locks at the time of his marriage, but that he had lost them worrying over domestic affairs.

The complaint states that the couple were married in June, 1920, and separated last October 8.

It is expected that witnesses will be called to testify when Mr. Weiner lost his hair.

Wilshire Mason Lodge Starts on Building Plans.

First steps toward the erection of a modern residence as a home for Wilshire Lodge, No. 445, Free and Accepted Masons, were taken yesterday with the filing of articles of incorporation with the County Clerk. The lodge was represented by Attorneys Paul Burks and J. Karl Lobdell.

Arrangements have been practically completed for the erection in Wilshire district on a site already obtained of a structure having the appearance of a high-class residence rather than a temple and embracing all of the conveniences of a modern lodge room and community club.

Chartered in 1914 as a community lodge with a membership of seventy-five, Wilshire Lodge now has more than 400 members and has attained an enviable position in the affairs of the Masonic fraternity. Its present master is Judge Weyl. J. Karl Lobdell and Sydney B. Brown are its wardens; Edwin Fowler, secretary, and William J. Worsham, treasurer. These officers, together with Past Masters Will H. Fischer, J. Lynn Van Norman, Buford A. Tucker, Warren D. Gill, Clarence E. Cronkite and Paul Burks and Thomas A. Dille and A. L. Smith constitute the board of directors of the newly created building corporation.

CORRESPONDENCE.] (Ariz.) March 3.—Further inquiry into the Hunter-Mar- claims to one-half of the lands occupied by the Papago is being made by George Fraser, special agent for the of Justice. Mr. Fraser, past month, has been making headquarters at the pueblo Rose, in company with Agent F. F. McCormick, depositions on behalf of the of the Interior. Accompanying him for several weeks was a Los Angeles counsel for the claimants. a short time there is to hearing in the Supreme Court District of Columbia on affecting the disposition of acres of land, mainly in county, in addition to eight- deeds asserted to have Col. Robert Hunter, 1890, by Jesus Maria Ochoa, chief of all the Papagos, subchiefs or capi- villages. All these chiefs and only one man is living had any connection with transactions. He is Santiago notary public before acknowledged the that represented the signa- various grantors. Ainsa resident of San Francisco, he had no knowledge at of the contents of the doc- signed before him.

CLAIM IS DENIED.

Interior Department absolutely refuses to consider the claim any legal value, reciting the Papagoes are mere wards of government, without power own land or to convey it. legal contention of the is that the Papagoes were citizens of Mexico at the of the Gadsden purchase and to the United States of the country south of the In effect, the suit is for restitution of possession of lands al- to have been wrongfully di- from the Indians by the government.

years ago, according to Fraser, three-quarters of the Hunter interest was acquired by R. H. Martin. The remainder is still held by heirs of Col. Hunter.

MANY CLAIMS SOLD.

Claim rights have been sold very generally, in order to procure funds to push the litigation. Headquarters for the claimants and the residence of most of them are Los Angeles.

In the event the claims are sustained by the court, there will be serious menace to important holdings outside of the present reservations lines, including a number of valuable cattle ranges and ranches and much mining ground, including the New Cornelia Copper Company. There will be inclusion of the San Xavier district of Tucson, the city water farm, a part of the Nogales Railroad right of way and a number of valuable irrigated farms in the Santa Cruz Valley.

EXTEND TRADES TRAINING.

Definite agreement between the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the Board of Education for enlarging the vocational education in the high schools of the city was announced yesterday, following the resolutions passed by the board of directors and indorsed by the Board of Education.

Detailed plans of the curriculum to be established in the high schools is to be announced at an early date.

In general, the program will make it possible for students to obtain thorough training in a chosen trade during the last two years in high school and enable them to make a living wage on graduation.

This will entail rearrangement of the courses so that students will be entitled to a certificate of graduation for entering trade or college at the end of the fourth year. Science and mathematics will be applied to the various trades, making technical training highly practical.

Introduction of the new educational plans in the city schools will be the most advanced work in vocational training adopted by any city of the country.

The special committee on vocational education, appointed to arrange the suggested circulation in detail is composed of three members of the Board of Education, three teachers and five Chamber of Commerce representatives. The committee members are: Arthur Gould, L. J. Muma, Helen S. Watson, W. S. Keinholtz, Mary C. Millspaugh, M. C. Bettinger, Dr. Julius Koebig, Henry W. Louis, John C. Austin, Allan Culter and Joseph Specht.

SCHOOL PLANS MUSEUM.

Los Angeles High Students Gather Many Specimens.

Los Angeles High School has completed arrangements to open a museum in the tower which, it is said, will be the only museum in any Southern California high school. The work is being done by students under the supervision of J. Z. Gilbert of the faculty. The museum will contain many specimens from the Brea fossil pits, one of which is the exceedingly rare saber-toothed Tiger. Several years ago certain classes of the school worked in the Brea deposits and assisted in cleaning the fossils under the supervision of the Exposition Park Museum curator.

pointed spot. He was somewhat wrought up over the whole matter for the athletic events were coming off at that time and he had a tug-o'-war team in the field to compete against another vessel's aggregation—in fact, he had several kopecks hung up on the outcome of the fracas. But he went, and he thought as he went; he took off his little white hat to give his brain a chance to function properly, but it would not work. He thought if Wilson had made such a horrible mistake that he would probably make it worse. The more he thought the worse he got, and finally when he arrived and saw all of those present, he was of the opinion that he would be all but murdered; he thought he saw dangerous breakers ahead.

"Taking off his hat he started to speak, but words failed him; he couldn't think of a single thing that he'd figured he'd tell 'em. But he managed to warble out in a low tone:

"'I want to make a opology fur my shipmate what insulted the gal what made him eat the cake aginst his will, and I want to say fer him that he's a helluva fine feller, but he don't know a damn thing about society, but the — — — — is a crackerjack gunpinter—made six bullseyes outen as many shots at 15,000 yards.'"

Mrs. Anna Armstrong of Camden, N. J., recently elected Supreme Commander of the Shepherds of Bethlehem, is the third woman to hold that office since the order was founded.

BALE OF HAY IS AWARDED.

Also Bird Cage and Beautifully Plated Mouse Trap for Letters on Uncle Bim and Widow Zander.

awarded to him anonymously! Trained investigators, may he know, are now on the trail; his identity shall be revealed!

Little did he think, perhaps, when he wrote that letter, that one word might betray him. He called Mrs. Zander a pistachio-nosed vamp. Now it is well known that no one would call anyone a pistachio-nosed unless he was a pistachio eater. It is also well known that a pistachio eater is incurable, the habit grows, and grows, until the addict eating more and more, devours as many as twenty pistachio nuts a day! The chase will be simple. Find a man who eats twenty pistachio nuts a day, and we have the owner of a bale of hay!

THE WINNING LETTER.

Seeing this, perhaps the first prize winner will come forward and confess. Here's the letter he wrote:

Hon. Syd. Smith:
Los Angeles Times:
THE??????

Why should Bim marry that pistachio-nosed, chronic vamp? Why make him lick the platter, eat the left-overs, the discarded, meatless bones of another Yewman? Give him youth and life; he still has pep; it's not all in his head. Look at that brow; if the paleontologists ever dig him up they'll class him with the highest civilization the world ever knew. Let him taste the deserts of the deserving. Shave him clean, put a red neck-tie on him and he can deceive the sightless Sues seeking soft suckers. Don't let him marry the Widow; that nose denotes conceit, destruction, determination to rule or ruin the roost. Only one chance for Bim if he does—flatten that nose!

Doesn't that convict him?

The second prize also goes to a person - who - has -to-be-nameless-for-the-present. The writer signed it "Adieu," and we had it so listed, "Mr. Adieu, box 142, Hemet, Cal.," until the office boy put a doubt in our mind. He said "Adieu" was Latin for "turnip," and that the writer was making a joke of a serious matter. We have not had time to look this up. However, if we know our Shakespeare, he didn't steal the rhyme he wrote, and he has got to take the bird-cage. He're his effusion:

Dear Sydney Smith: Keep up the myth,
Don't you dare to spoil our fun,
Making Bim and Zander one.
Keep her angling; keep him dangling.
Lead them straight up to the altar!
Oh, the joy to see her falter
In the grand accusing scene,
When Don Carlos steps between!
Send the hay to one-four-two
Hemet, Cal., or not. ADIEU.

That's all of it. It scans, and every line starts with a capital. He even rhyhmed the address on the envelope, darn him.

GIRL GETS MOUSE TRAP.

Third prize, you win, Rose Arden, and will you call for the mouse trap or have it sent? Now don't deny it, here's what you wrote:

LOS ANGELES,
1259 West Forty-first street.

Dear Mr. Smith: Oh, it isn't fair to discriminate against Mrs. Zander! Aren't the Gumps just as crazy about Uncle Bim's money as she? Don't they talk about it all the time and plot and scheme to get it? You know they do! Besides, isn't a man always sure he can make any woman love him if he wants to? Let Bim have his Heaven Eyes! They'd both be happy—awhile. And marriages aren't permanent any more. Oh, Mr. Smith shoot a scare into Min and Andy—they're so darn smug.

Sincerely yours,
ROSE ARDEN.

So ends one of the most sensational brain-clashes in the annals of contemporary journalism. Interviewed last night as to whether the marriage of Bim to the widow was favored or opposed by the majority, the Gump editor said:

"It was a very close thing, very close. I should say sentiment was evenly divided. By the way, what the devil is a paleontologist?"

REBUILDING OF MISSION IS PLANNED

Organization is Formed to Restore Old Landmark and Park at San Fernando.

To restore San Fernando Mission and plant a seven-acre park around this historic landmark an organization of some of the leading citizens of Los Angeles was formed yesterday in Ramona Hall. Mr. Herman Lichtenberger, president of the Los Angeles chapter of Sons of the Revolution, was made temporary chairman and Mrs. Earl McClintock was elected secretary. The permanent organization will be effected at Ramona Hall, 349 South Hill street, next Friday evening.

The definite movement for restoration has been started by representatives of the following organizations of the city: The Native Sons and Daughters, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, San Fernando Chamber of Commerce, Women's City Club, Ebell Club, Wednesday Morning Club, Women's State Federation, the Landmarks Club, Pioneer Society, Federated State Societies, Park Commission, Knights of Columbus besides well-known residents of this section.

Launching the campaign for raising funds the organization will hold a three-day fiesta at the San Fernando Mission, May 5, 6 and 7. Spectacular dramatic presentations, Spanish dancing and all the historic display of color and living peculiar to Southern California in the days of the Holy Fathers are being arranged.

Records of the mission indicate that San Fernando's gardens were the most beautiful of all the mission estates and plans for restoration will follow as closely as possible the description of those early gardens and the fountain, partially destroyed. The palms still standing near the mission and planted by the padres will be included in the landscape plans. Articles of historic interest that have been collected over a number of years will be placed in a museum adjoining the mission.

WESTERN-AVENUE MEN TO HAVE TRADE SHOW.

Members of the Western-avenue Business Association will conduct a business and trade show at Western avenue and Third street from the 18th to 25th inst. A fashion show presenting models from stores in the association will be a part of the program in the large tent in which the show will be staged.

The principal merchants of the district are preparing to display their wares and show their customers what can be bought in the Western-avenue district.

"Trade in the Western-avenue district" will be the slogan of the show. Electrical night will be one of the special events at which the electrical dealers of the district will combine to present a spectacular program.

CHILD BADLY BURNED.

Trailing Nightgown Ignites at Gas Heater.

"Give baby her breakfast; mother," shouted little Province Orleans, 5 years of age, yesterday morning as she rushed from her bedroom in the Orleans home at 1415 East Fifty-first street through the kitchen and into the dining-room.

On the way through the kitchen, the child with her eyes still dim with sleep, dragged her trailing night clothes through the flames of an open gas heater.

Instead of seeing the smiling face of her little daughter peeping around the door jamb Mrs. Orleans seized a rug and threw it over the child. Neighbors rushed the child to the Receiving Hospital. Police Surgeon Dorn declared that she would live.

DAMAGE ACTION FAILS.

Judge Walton J. Wood yesterday granted the motion for nonsuit made by Gertrude C. Ruter, defendent in a $20,250 action for malicious prosecution brought by Stephen Da Costa. The action grew out of a dispute over a line-fence. Mr. Da Costa was arrested for disturbing the peace and was later released after a hearing in Justice Court.

Citizens' Natl. Bk.
Parmelee-Dohrmann Co.

Our wonderful method of bridgework is so comfortable that the wearer forgets that they are not his own teeth, and cannot, in many instances, tell where the bridged teeth begins and his own end. If this statement is true, why should you have your own few strong teeth in either jaw extracted? Do not sacrifice these strong teeth and be burdened with a plate.

The teeth will be as firm as your natural teeth were. If you have only a few teeth left in either jaw, don't have them extracted until you consult us. With these bases to start from we can replace all of your lost teeth and we will defy dentists or laymen to tell the substitutes from the original ones. Our office has every modern equipment equal to the best.

Our X-Ray Department is equipped with the latest type machine for discovering abscesses and defects of the roots of your teeth. Our prices are always reasonable and our examinations free.

MYTHOMANIA.

Death of a Noted French Authority on Habitual Liars.

The recently deceased French psychiatrist, Ernest Dupre, who died at the comparatively early age of 59, began his medical life as an internist, writing a monograph on biliary infections; thence he passed to neurology and ultimately to psychiatry. For the last twenty years he had been identified with the latter, including its forensic aspect.

The subject which greatly interested him and for which he is largely responsible in French psychiatry was the conception of the mythomaniac—of the habitual liar who relates tales of persecution and accuses others of crimes. He once held a series of conferences on forensic psychiatry in the Pallas de Justice, going especially into criminal anthropology and sociology. Crime he presented from the viewpoint of etiology, symptoms, prophylaxis and treatment. Certain psychoses naturally tend more to crime than others and present delicate forensic problems. Gross crimes are not in question here, but the more subtle ones in which self-mutilation, hysteria, false accusation and pathological lying are concerned.

Mythomania as conceived by Dupre is a pathological tendency, more or less voluntary and conscious, toward lying and relating fabulous experiences. This tendency is practically normal in childhood as a natural consequence of the unfolding of the psyche, and gradually being attenuated becomes extinct about puberty. Hence, of course, the common refusal to allow children to testify.

The statement that "fools and children tell the truth" is true only to a very limited extent. Beyond the child period mythomania is invariably seen in the disequilibrated and corresponds to a mental stigma f degeneration. This activity may be innocent but readily lends itself to crimes when the unbalanced and unstable individual has vicious tendencies.

Ordinary mythomania in which the subject has more or less durable and systematized inventions passes into a higher degree known as delirium or imagination. Dupre also upheld belief in the existence of a special emotional constitution. —[Medical Record.

RAG BOYS SHINE SKATES.

After the Atlantic Ocean has run out of water youngsters will still be discovering new methods of making money. The latest enterprise is that of supplying rags to the ice skaters on Indian Lake in Crotona Park in the Bronx.

Knowing that their skates will corrode unless they are gone over with a rag after being used, many of the skaters bring the wipers along with them. But an appreciable number of skaters neglect to do this, either through forgetfulness or lack of desire to lug the rags along, and it is from these that the children draw grateful coins. The youngsters can be found all around the edge of the frozen lake soliciting business. The usual cost of a cleaning is 5 cents. "on'y one nickel, ladies 'n' genmen."

"Comin' along to the movies?" calls out one kid.

"Wait'll I get one more customer," replied the other. "I gotta 'nuff for the movies right now, but I wanna get some pretzels."—[New York Sun.

MARCH OF SCIENCE.

The fact that it is thought necessary to have a commission to arbitrarily assign wave-lengths and license broadcasters for radiotelephones indicates that, whether the earth be round or flat, it does move. That suggestion would have startled Edison twenty years ago.

IN GENERAL.

When a man has filled the office of Postmaster-General or Attorney-General he is likely to carry the title of "General" to his dying day. It is probable that the armies of filmland will now be commanded by Gen. Hays. Will Hays is not as imposing and impressive as Gen. Pershing, but he used to lick his weight in postage stamps.

RUNNING FOR SHELTER.

The Pacific Co-operative League, which essayed to operate forty or fifty stores on a community basis, appears to have fallen by the wayside. These co-operative ventures are fine-spun in theory and sometimes pan out fairly well in practice, but they cannot stand the pinch of adversity. Once on the shoals the individuals all scurry for themselves. One bad season appears to have broken the league.

MAKE IT UNANIMOUS.

In the registration of voters it appears that there are more than three and one-half Republicans to one Democrat in Southern California. It is known also that there are more Republicans who do not state their politics than there are members of all other parties combined. Between those who boast their Republican allegiance and those who accord it at the proper time the State comes as near being solidly Republican as States may well become. A little bit more and it would be unanimous.

ARTIFICIAL THUNDER.

Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, has created an artificial thunderstorm in his room. He says it is possible to harness the thunderbolt, but not worth while. It is short-lived and useless. He can make a better one. That's the way it goes. We talk about the bolt of Jove and how fine it would be if man could harness the lightning and then an expert comes along with a tuning fork to pick the thunderbolt to pieces and find that it is stuffed with sawdust. It hasn't power enough to run a top.

AMONG DEAD ONES.

French and American archaeologists are to combine in a campaign of exploration amid the ruins of Carthage. They are after the archives of the pioneers of commerce. They even hope to exhume the tomb and remains of Hannibal. But there are a lot of people from Missouri who insist that Hannibal is not yet dead. If Mark Twain were here they would make an issue of it. Why browse around looking for buried cities and the skeletons of has-beens while the jazz is going in Broadway? Our old pathfinders didn't have so much lost motion.

TREATY TANGLES.

The ratification of the Yap treaty in the Senate was accomplished with comparative ease and a minimum of yapping. But the path of the Pacific quadrapact is beset with thorns. Some of the Democrats are seeking to assemble campaign material. They must have something to fuss about in the Congressional elections this fall and they are rather hoping that they will be able to squeeze something out of the Washington Arms Conference. They haven't found it yet, but if our relations with Japan can be sifted still finer they hope to discover something in the residue. So they are examining the quadrapact under the microscope, hoping they may discover the yellow finger print of the Mikado. They have been encouraged in this by Senators Johnson and Borah, who, with La Follette, form a trinity of wasps forever buzzing about the administration and embarrassing its program. It was said that William Jennings Bryan was the best asset of the Republican party. By combining forces Senators Borah, Johnson and La Follette are like to be as effective for the Democrats.

NO COAL FOR WARSHIPS.

That a cruel, monstrous and unnecessary war should have been followed by a revulsion of feeling against all that has to do with war is a natural reaction.

But there is a danger that this feeling may be carried to absurd lengths in the United States.

As, for instance, the determination of Congress to dismiss the graduating class of Annapolis without commissions and to cut down the naval appropriations to the point where the warships are obliged to remain permanently at anchor for lack of fuel to go anywhere.

This policy is both shortsighted economy and extremely illogical. It is a compromise and, like most compromises—vicious.

Either we should boldly make up our national minds that the millennium has arrived, sell the warships for junk and turn the soldiers and sailors back to civil life and depend upon the lion to behave with the lamb, or we should not.

In the event that we do not decide that the millennium is here, it would seem to be folly to build a great fleet of warships at terrific expense; then strip them of all possibility of efficiency.

To refuse to keep warships in a state of effectiveness lest somehow they might get themselves into a war is in much the same line of reasoning as the man who refused to take out a life insurance policy lest it might make him die.

BEWARE THE POISON OF HATE.

WHEN the glad tidings were flashed around the earth on the morning of November 11, 1918, that an armistice had been signed and that the World War was at an end, there was a period of universal rejoicing unequaled in the history of the world. For a brief space there were no victors and no vanquished. All hearts were light. Even those wearing black or purple pinned a rose to their somber garments and smiled through their tears. For the vision of tragic deaths of violence faded and Peace, radiant in her robes of white, descended on the wings of the morning to solace an earth scorched by flame and soaked with human blood.

An armistice formulated on principles of right and justice was to be followed by a peace under whose terms tyrannical governments were to be overthrown and the right of self-determination was to be granted with equal guarantees to every people. Civilization had risen to a height never before attained. Through four years of heroic sacrifice it was believed that hate and envy had been driven from the human heart, that generous and noble influences would henceforth dominate all peoples. Cities and villages were decorated in all the countries lately at war and services of thanksgiving were held in all the places of public worship.

But before the reverberation of the peace cannon had ceased diplomats of thirty nations were meeting in secret conferences to consider what individual advantages could be gained from the new world alignments. In some countries the war of nations was followed by a war of classes. A peace of equity was forgotten in the demand of those with the strongest arms for a peace of victory.

Seldom has there been a more tragic spectacle than that of President Wilson, exalted by his vision of a League of Nations in which all the great powers of the world would unite to guarantee equal justice to every people, sitting in conference with those animated with a desire to secure the greatest advantage to their respective governments.

Never, probably, have national hatreds been so embittered in Europe as during the three years that have elapsed since that armstice was signed. Never in modern times has the world, as a whole, been so badly governed. Never have so many perished of ills that could have been evaded, of preventable diseases. Never, it is reckoned, have there been so many deeds of violence. Never has the lot of the poor been so wretched and never have life and property been so insecure, in Europe.

II.

WHAT happened to the vision of peace, so radiant in the skies on the morning of the Armistice? Why have the months that followed been so filled with misery, disease and blood? Why has the world turned frivolous, with the places of amusement and debauch filled and the churches empty? Why did civilization fail at the most critical point in world history?

We have seen these things come to pass. Flowers of kindness are stifled on every side by a rank growth of poison vines. Our cheeks blanch at the horror that fills so many parts of the world; yet our lips are dumb. It is as though a whole race were repeating that agonizing cry, "My God, why has thou forsaken me?"

We suffer because the love of humanity was chilled by the draughts of venomous propaganda quaffed during four years of seething war and hate. During that period every known force of destruction was loosed upon the earth. People were mobilized against people and the exigencies of war demanded that no compassion should be shown to the vanquished. When a division charged the trenches of the enemy the order was issued "Take no prisoners; leave only dead men at your backs." After a charge was repulsed the guns were played on the wounded left in "No Man's Land;" for medical science had made such advances that 80 per cent of those who crawled or were carried away were able to return later to the battle line. Humane impulses were stifled. It was war to the death. Those who showed mercy were set down as emotional weaklings. Even the Red Cross ceased to be international. Each country cared for its own and its allies first. The President of the American Red Cross was the commander-in-chief of the American armies. The Red Cross of Geneva, that knows no country, that maintains a strict neutrality, that has no choice of combatants and passes through all lines with impunity—the Red Cross under that form practically ceased to function.

While the war was conducted with poison gases and the bombarding of unfortified cities at the front, the venomous propaganda was impregnating the populations back of the lines. The heroism displayed in the first-line trenches served to exalt souls and counteract in part the malignant influences of hate; but the poison fumes of embittered propaganda filled the lungs of the rising generation on the home front. With the Armistice the actual fighting ceased, but the malignant forces continued to claim their prey.

America was far removed from the fighting line and the effect of the villainous propaganda was less felt here than among the peoples of Europe. Yet we have had in our own country a wave of crime and violence that is without precedent. For four years the rising generation was schooled in the arts of destruction. Deeds of violence were glorified; love of country was exemplified by hatred of its enemies. Children were taught, not "Love them that hate you," but "Destroy your enemies, lest they destroy you."

III.

SUCH methods were deemed essential to the winning of the war; but they left behind a heritage of hatred and crime. Those who have visited Europe during the last three years return with the almost unanimous report that the peoples are so impregnated with hate and distrust that a resumption of peaceful production seems impossible. Nations are divided into factions that seek by any means to destroy one another. And hatred between peoples of different nations is raging with relentless fury. They seem to be gangrened by its effect. The distrust fostered through four years of warfare cannot be allayed. Whole communities are starving; but their plight does not awaken the sympathy one has a right to expect to find among Christian peoples. Each community, each country, seems to be imbued by a desire only to care for its own.

The whole world is suffering from a dearth of love and an excess of hate. For four terrible years the forces of destruction were mobilized and the generous impulses that make for the brotherhood of man were stifled. Love is a sensitive plant that must be watched and tended. Hate is a hardy poison ivy. Love descends with the sunlight and starlight from the vaulted heavens. Hate flourishes in the dark, dank swamps and fens, where it creeps out of the slime of the earth. Love sacrifices itself for others. Hate destroys others for selfish gratification. Love carries a scepter. Hate is armed with a dagger. Love gives birth to justice. Hate is the sire of force. And it is written on a hundred pages of history that a people that has lost the power of compassion is doomed to self-destruction.

For a period of seven years love has been confined in a cell underground in Europe while hate has plundered nations and peoples.

That mental condition is one which must be taken into consideration in planning for the regeneration of Europe. The peoples must be healed of the mental diseases contracted during the World War. They have lost sight of the fundamentals on which civilization is based. "Love thy neighbor" is a forgotten creed. Before Europe can again become a safe place of abode for the honest and industrious poor that creed must be restored.

IV.

SUSPICION has replaced a feeling of security in the breasts of the European populations. There have been so many outbursts of radicalism that the people do not trust their own governments. So rampant has been the spirit of plunder that men with capital fear to invest in an industrial enterprise, lest their plant be sovietized and all their fortune confiscated. In addition to this, no people is willing to trust to the commitments, made by treaty or otherwise, of any other.

There was a time when several peoples of Europe placed honor above even life itself. But the radicals came with their preachment that "honor is only a bourgeois prejudice;" with the result that no people is willing to trust to the honor of any other for the fulfillment of any pledges or obligations.

V.

THESE are the conditions that militate, more than poverty or bad seasons, against the rebuilding of Europe. The peoples there are suffering from an unhealthy state of mind as much as from physical ills; and mental maladies are the most difficult of all to heal.

Radicalism, giving birth to mutual distrust, has done more harm to Europe than fire and sword. For it left peoples without faith, even in their own leaders.

Every great epoch of history is the reamalgamation of old elements and their resurrection under the empire of a new idea. And the new idea that is so necessary to effect the regeneration of Europe is a feeling of confidence that war with its scourges is passing from the world, that the spirit of national aggression is dead, that the honor of their fathers can be reborn in the sons, that the old guaranty of life and property is to be renewed, that no class in any country will be permitted to plunder the others, that the spirit of hatred is passing and that the peoples are ready to listen again to the admonition: "This a new commandment I give unto you, that you love one another."

BUSINESS AND THE ARISTOCRACY.

There is a good deal to be said on behalf of an aristocracy whose patriotism takes the form of practical responsibility, hard work and efficient enterprise. And among all the lugubrious stories coming out of England anent unemployment doles (by which so many British workingmen find it more profitable to remain idle than to accept temporary work) with narratives of strikes and malingering and slowing up on the job there are also instances of capable and enterprising aristocrats of both sexes who are passionately mindful of the urgent necessity for the restoration of industry, for production, for hard and continuous endeavor.

All over England just now the aristocrats are throwing themselves into new trade enterprises, restoring old industries, creating new ones, exhorting the people to new enthusiasm, inspiring others to work and working themselves.

But perhaps it is mostly the enterprise of British peeresses who, in spite of their social advantages and temptations to ease and indifference, are rising quite remarkably to the occasion. For everywhere they are turning the practical efficiency they acquired during the war in Red Cross and relief work to commercial account.

Take the case of Lady Courtney Honeywell. She has lifted the debt on her husband's estate in two years by taking over dozens of the little run-down countryside inns in England, once famous in the old coaching days, and restoring them to charm and efficiency. She has revived all the picturesque adjuncts of those old days, with the added charms of electric lighting, modern bathrooms, model kitchens, exquisite linen, British draperies, British cutlery, British furniture and British cookery, with such success that the tourists are spending lavishly and gratefully. Numerous industries have been indirectly given a push toward prosperity, hundreds of people have been given employment and her own purse has been filled. Her name is becoming a household word in Britain, and it is even rumored that she has been invited to come to the United States and perform the same service for some of our run-down old hostelries in country towns, which, under prohibition, have become objects of apology.

Or there is Lady Rhondda, England's foremost business woman, who is on the directorate of nearly fifty important industrial corporations, including coal, shipping, printing and publishing and proprietary remedies. She is the daughter of the first Viscount Rhondda and a peeress and still fighting to establish her right to a seat in the House of Lords, in which she has popular public opinion very much on her side. She married Sir Humphrey Mackworth in 1908 and is affectionately known as "Meg Mackworth," every corporation with which she is associated being not only solvent, but enjoying peculiar loyalty from its employees.

Duchesses and countesses are taking up and reorganizing the women's industries, especially the lace-making and rug-weaving and those numerous industries that can be performed at home. They are efficiently active in the housing problems, in co-operative buying schemes, in market gardening—Lady Warwick's hostel for training women on the land having grown into a vast institution.

GOING STRONG.

California is the eighth State in population, but is second in the possession of motor vehicles. There are now 747,000 of them and we are almost abreast of New York, which has more than three times the population of California. New York has only 754,000 and, with the help of Los Angeles, it may be passed before sundown. Los Angeles county is not only the richest county in America in its farm products, but is foremost in buzz wagons. It has 230,000 of them, which means one to each four persons. There is nothing like that in the world. Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania all had more autos than California a few years back, but now we top the bunch.

THE TAX GROUCH.

My income tax has now been paid and when I dug the money I said, "This life's a thing of shade that once was fair and sunny. The way they cinch an old fat bard is something fierce and bitter; there is no sense in working hard—far better be a quitter. The burdens thrifty men endure call out for language ranty; true wisdom lies in being poor and living in a shanty." A beggar stopped me in my tracks; in my kind heart he trusted; I said, "I've paid my income tax and, like yourself, I'm busted." The pastor asked me for a bone to help to paint the steeple; I said, "My taxes make me groan, I walk with ruined people." My wife declares the friends she meets smile at the lid she's wearing; I show her then my tax receipts and shed some tears despairing. The village live wires come and say they need some coin for boosting; I sigh, "My rubles are today with tax collectors roosting." This is the way the voter feels when modern law's bereft him; with zealous care he hoards the wheels the tax collector left him. But in a while he looks and sees what other lands are doing, marks how the foreign voter flees, with taxes still pursuing; he blushes for his discontent, for tears that he let trickle and gives the beggarman a cent, the clergyman a nickel. WALT MASON.

Snobs and Snobbishness.

To most of us the word "snobbish" (which is almost as much in use today as if it were the latest slang) suggests, as the dictionary intimates, either one who toadies to the great, or one who patronizes the humble.

Between these two extremes of vulgarity there is a large social area inhabited by the rest of us; but even here, in this zone of excellence, there are far too many who, before daring to do the simple and the appropriate thing, ask themselves the essentially snobbish question, "What will people think?"

What a refreshing relaxation of over-tense nerves would result from the abolition of slavery to conventions—not the conventions which are standardized good manners, but the conventions which ordain that perfectly unimportant things should be performed in exactly the same way by totally different people!

The woman who will not ask Mrs. Goldcoin to lunch, because she has to give her peas from the can instead of from the South, is quite as much of a snob as Mrs. Goldcoin would be, if she declined the invitation for the same reason.

THE LANCER.

Chicago has created a "law enforcement commissioner," the Rev. John H. Williamson, a Methodist preacher, of mild and gentle demeanor, whose duty is to see that the laws are obeyed.

His first announcement is that he will go the limit to see that any illegal conditions reported by citizens, who are willing to stand behind their information, are promptly remedied.

It is a tragically comic situation. Chicago, admitting that her District Attorney's office, her police force, her judiciary and her city government are weak and incapable to deal with the wholesale law violation that is rampant, turns in anguish to a mild and kindly preacher to save her from herself. And the joker, of course, is that it is still up to the citizens, still up to the law violators, still up to Chicago to see that the mild gentleman makes a success. It is still necessary that citizens see, mark, disapprove, protest, name, blame and come out in the open as accusers before the gentle law-enforcer can inspire the police and the prosecuting attorneys and the judges to do the duty for which they are hired and paid by said citizens.

And after that, if the mild pastor can induce such courageous virtue in Chicago citizens, all the rest of the law-enforcing paraphernalia should be a trifle superfluous.

For instance, several worthy citizens in good standing, one in particular, a lawyer of prestige, tell me gloomy stories of law enforcement conditions in Los Angeles. They give the most specific and shameful instances about officials. "Good," I say, "make a public protest. The Times will print it—under your name."

But that is another matter yet again. They could not afford to be mixed up in anything like that. It would create enemies, create scandal, create embarrassment and take up too much of the accuser's time. "But the newspapers can easily verify the facts for themselves."

So it is all right for newspaper men to create enemies, create scandal and civically, patriotically become crusaders against abominable conditions, but we must leave honorable, busy citizens out of it.

I wish the Rev. Williamson luck in his new job if he is dependent upon Chicago's best citizens to stand openly behind their accusations and protests.

Rather an attractive idea, this swapping of appointive offices for undated letters of resignation. So pleasantly calculated to fill these offices with the humble and docile, the obedient and the meek, those engaging qualities that can so endear one to a political nabob.

But there ought to be some gentleman's agreement to the effect that such letters would never be exploited. Otherwise the humiliation game hardly seems worth the candle.

John Cooper Powys, an Oxford man with a slightly overdone esthetic appearance, is again due to lecture in Los Angeles. At present he is having a wonderful time startling San Francisco. His line is easy and inexpensive—taking the form of administering knock-down blows to all the popular fictional favorites whose recent books have proven peculiarly profitable.

Chiefly and mainly Mr. Powys abhors the Puritan conscience—scorns it, blasts it with contumely, heaps insults and contempt upon it in Oxonian epigrams. Hence any literary work with the merest trace of a Puritan conscience lurking through its pages finds him at his scintillating best in shattering its highbrow reputation. No highbrow, he would have us understand, could endure anything with even the remotest earmarks of the Puritan conscience.

Nevertheless John Cooper Powys is very popular with the ladies. The women's clubs, which find a dash of the Puritan conscience rather becoming and satisfying and who read and proclaim the works of popular fiction that Powys so confidently ridicules and cheapens, are the chief sources of income to the esthetic iconoclast. Without them we fear he would be unknown. Yet, when he is through, he cannot possibly leave them with a shred of intellectual self-respect—if they accept his verdicts.

Which merely goes to prove that John knows women better than women know themselves.

The New York Custom Cutters' Club has sent forth its sartorial edict. Men's clothes are to have more pockets, little pockets, big pockets, practical pockets, fancy pockets, ostentatious pockets and secret pockets in every available spot where a pocket can be inserted

One recalls that the great complaint the men made about their United States Army uniforms was that they were so shy on pockets. And it is well to remember that American war speakers everywhere have assured us that the United States Army boys had a monopoly of all the virtues while in France—courage, honor, purity and all the rest of it. And all the other armies had lots of pockets and they weren't at all pure.

Don't let your tailor lead you astray, young man. It is better to be pure than fashionable.

It is difficult to arouse the proper amount of sympathy with the ladies who have lost their fortunes—such sizeable fortunes, too—at the hands of Alfred E. Lindsay, "the ladies' broker" in New York. How dare charming society women be so greedy?

TRACING "BRAINS" OF BOMB PLOTS REVEALED.

Anarchists Behind Death-Dealing Dynamite Disasters Known to Secret Service.

BY WILLIAM J. FLYNN.

[This is the seventh of a series of articles by the former head of the United States Secret Service. Another will appear in The Times next Sunday.]

One of the most difficult individuals the United States secret service has ever had to deal with, because he was the brainiest, was Luigi Galleani. When the rank and file of Americans hear the word anarchist or are told of assumed or proved anarchist plotting their minds almost invariably produce the names that they have learned to consider synonyms for anarchy — Goldman, Berkman, Schmidt, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn (to whom I have not the distinction of being related,) Carlo Tresca and possibly Enrico Malatesta. Save for the last-named exponent of chaos I have sufficient reason to believe that not one of the others I have mentioned possesses the virtue of deep sincerity. Comparing them with Malatesta, I would classify them as hippodromers, almost fakers, who made professions of their accredited political beliefs, who converted their so-called ideals into bread and butter jobs. Goldman, Flynn and Tresca were bright, but far from intellectual. They were smart rather than clever. As leaders, in so far as an anarchist can be said to lead, they lacked almost all the essentials of leadership save glibness.

Lest that you do not consider me unfair to these popular names, I merely desire to indicate as clearly as I may their inferiority when compared with Malatesta, who was an anarchist without reservations. At least he was sincere, possessed of a fine mind, capable of clear thinking along his own line of thought and utterly fearless(?). When he left America to return his place was filled by Luigi Galleani, and entirely filled.

MALATESTA'S PRIZE PUPIL.

Galleani was Malatesta's pupil, his prize pupil. He was deported in 1919. It was his group of radicals that distributed the bombs on the occasion when the attack was made upon the home of A. Mitchell Palmer in Washington, one of the bombers. It was the Galleani Reds who conceived and carried out the Wall-street outrage. Both Sacco and Vanzetti, the New England radicals, studied in the Galleani school. I am not making these statements merely for effect. The United States government has conclusive evidence of the truth of what I say. It is lamentably true that we cannot single out the murderers who actually committed the Wall-street crime, which, by the way, is not solved, despite the recent dispatches from Warsaw.

But we could get this far: I can trace the name of Galleani through the preliminary plottings that culminated in the Wall-street explosion up to a certain point, and then the inevitable anarchist

To illustrate, my readers may recall that Leon Czolgosz, before being executed for the murder of President McKinley, announced his belief in the speeches of Emma Goldman. Czolgosz declared that he had decided upon the assassination after listening to Goldman talk four or five times. But I was never able to fasten upon Goldman the direct responsibility. I was never able to prove that she had said that President McKinley should have been assassinated. In brief, we were unable to trace Czolgosz's crazy deed back to the source defined.

But there was no reasonable argument against the belief that it was Goldman who planted the seed in the assassin's mind.

PLOTTER KILLS SELF.

You will recall Andrea Salsedo, the anarchist-printer who committed suicide by jumping from one of the windows of the Department of Justice offices in Park Row. Salsedo admitted to us that he was a member of the Galleani group of radicals. I learned from sources too impressive and reliable to be disbelieved that it was Galleani who not only sowed the seed that grew into the attack upon Wall street, but he plotted the thing and forwarded his suggestions to America.

I might have connected Salsedo with that outrage more closely than we could connect Czolgosz's act with Emma Goldman or Emma Goldman with the actual assassination of President McKinley, but between the actual outrage and the anarchists we questioned there was, as there always is in such affairs, that vague span of probability for which we could find no solid foundation. In other words, evidence of the sort the court would require was missing.

We were certain, but we had little to hand to a jury. And to say that we tortured or otherwise harmed any of the Reds was to be too absurd to consider. They were well cared for. We held them because we were after evidence that they were helping us to get. He wanted us to hold him. Two things caused Salsedo to jump from the fourteenth story of the Park Row building. Of course, he was dead three months before the Wall-street explosion. But he knew that the plot existed.

One was that he decided we were getting too close to his own trail and the other was because he feared torture and most unpleasant death at the hands of the radicals, who believed him to be turning informer. He had sufficient liberty to make it possible for him to receive innumerable threats from radicals who thought he was betraying them.

ACCUSED OF RIOTING.

Luigi Galleani came into newspaper prominence first in Paterson, N. J. During the silk-mill strikes in that town in 1902 he was arrested for inciting to riot. He fled, not to be found until 1906, when he was arrested in Barre, Vt. He was tried in Paterson in 1907 and the jury disagreed.

Thereafter Galleani confined his efforts to soft, provocative speeches and newspaper work that showed him a thinker and a master of rhetorical effect. He failed to create furores because the people whom he sought to reach were of a class incapable of understanding his fine innuendo and indirect urging. He was a master of double meaning and ambiguous inference.

He wrote cleverly, profusely and continuously. We watched him until we were sick of it. That is all there was to his case—watching. Much fun was poked at us for our vigilance, but you must understand that had he not realized that we were observing him he would have abandoned his ambiguity and roundabout methods.

It was clearly a case of eternal vigilance being our most effective defense against a man ready to start something if left unguarded. To be sure, we did certain things that appeared absurd at the time. Now that I look back at them they look absurd to me. But you must remember that the average detective is not a Sherlock Holmes or a Father Brown; nor is he anything like any of the sleuths of fiction.

He is nothing more nor less than a man sent out from a bureau to learn what he can about an individual or an incident. His failures, like his shortcomings, are many. But he has persistency and courage and, after all, these two qualities are infinitely superior to this sixth, seventh or eighth sense stuff that our fiction detectives are armed with.

GOES TO RED MEETING.

I like to think of the night I decided to invade a meeting of radicals in Twenty-sixth street. Galleani was to be the principal orator so far as we knew, but probably the meeting was to be purely anarchistic—without organization, or program, or leader. I had been traveling around listening to much vague red talk, and was somewhat proud of my knowledge of the Malatesta following. There was no announcement of the meeting I proposed attending; in fact, I was not at all certain there would be one.

Nevertheless I girded myself in most approved disguise. I donned overalls, a bandana handkerchief, a queer-looking hat of some sort or other, and brogans, which I took good care should be coated with plaster and otherwise made to look like the boots of a laborer.

I went to the Twenty-sixth street place and walked in. Probably I had better say that I brushed in. There was a long, weedy man on the door. I said nothing to him—just brushed past and went in.

"How do you do," he greeted me most courteously.

"How do you do, comrade," I returned.

"Dather surprising to see you here," he commented.

"Yes," I replied, "I have been away, you see, and—"

"Quite so," he interrupted, "and might I ask to what precinct you are attached these days?"

Of course I got out. He didn't know me, but he knew I was from some branch of the police. He was a very polite man and did not laugh until I was beyond hearing, at any rate. I assure you I was frightfully chagrined. I had rather prided myself on that disguise. That doorkeeper might have made his fortune as a sleuth.

After all, one never learned much of real importance by sitting around listening to radicals. I doubt very much whether Galleani or any other prominent anarchist in this country since the Hawmarket disaster in Chicago worked up to a bomb outrage from a definite plan. I mean to say that they do not start out, as you might, to accomplish an end and cleave to a definite line until that end has been gained. They work deviously.

SUGGESTIONS MADE.

Galleani, for instance, will suggest. One of his close companions will pass on the suggestion. The idea will pass hither and yon until eventually a particularly wild man or woman will touch off the bomb or ignite the fire. Trace it back and you become lost in the most complicated labyrinth of indirect statements, evasions and plain lies, and you learn sooner or later that you are destined to emerge from the maze at the same spot you entered, having gained nothing.

We know that Galleani was in full possession of all the facts of the San Francisco bomb plot, for which Tom Mooney and others went to jail. At the time that outrage was perpetrated Galleani was writing for one of the numerous ephemeral newspapers he either founded or edited. This particular journal was the Cronaca-Sovversiva, and that he was more or less informed regarding the San Francisco affair we gather from one of his editorials, wherein he declared that neither Billings, Mooney, Nolen, Weinburg nor Rena Mooney were guilty.

That statement in itself was not particularly impressive, inasmuch as newspapers of the so-called capitalistic class had said similar things about the affair. But his editorial continued to say that the preparedness parade that was bombed that day in San Francisco contituted "a triumph of shame, of vileness, treaon and cowardice."

"And do you think," the article went on, "that no one had the courage to interrupt this festivity? That day a man who has never been known, saturated with anger and hatred against the untiring tortures of the populace, wanted to tell to the tryants and to the slaves equally . . . that if violence is befitting when it reinforces the dominion of the rich he must protest on behalf of his class. And that message he entrusted to the roaring of dynamite," Later on, Galleani told us the men he referred to had left the country.

Inasmuch as I had nothing to do with the San Francisco affair I am not in a position to hold forth thereon. But this I do know, Galleani and Galleani knew it whoever did it was well known to was about to be perpetrated and who was to do the actual work.

When Galleani fled from Paterson after the silk mill riots he established himself in Barre, Vt., after a year or so in Canada. He had succeeded to the crown laid aside by his mentor, Malatesta, and was undergoing the same troubles as had that master. He was an intellectual, and as such was surrounded by the radical intelligentsia. He made speeches warranted to bring about action. Just as long as he had an excited mob to deal with he remained the idol of the anarchists, but in more peaceful days he wrote and talked in a less fiery and more academic manner.

ROUGH ELEMENT DISPLEASED.

That was pleasing to other intellectuals, but the rough element failed to appreciate it. The latter faction was constantly straying after other leaders. Galleani became involved in a newspaper wrangle with one Pedro Esteve, editor of La Questione Sociale, and started his own organ, the Chonaca Sovversiva.

I shall not attempt to follow up this fight except to say that the battle of phrases that ensued ruined whatever unity, peace and concord there may have been among the thousand and one anarchist factions that Galleani was supposed to hold together. Fearful internal chaos resulted. Erstwhile popular anarchists began running off with the wives of other popular anarchists.

Meetings broke up in general fighting. As an organized menace the anarchists became something of a ribald joke. The greatest danger lay in the possibility of any one or dozen of them going a little more berserk than their normal state had been and blowing up a town or a ship or a railroad—anything.

The so-called confessions of certain of them (who were gathered in on various occasions by the police and confronted with jail sentences, with hard labor and daily baths attached thereto) read like the small scandal of a Gopher Prairie. Sometimes the transcripts of these confessions read like ravings.

I have never met an anarchist yet who had a sense of humor. I am convinced, as you would be were you to take the time to read these blithering statements, that no person with a sense of humor could be an anarchist, at least not the type we had and have here in America.

For several years before the Wall-street explosion there were two principal groups of anarchists here in New York—the Galleani and the Bresci groups. The former adhered to their creed of violence—direct action. The Bresci group, while by no means pacifists or reactionary, were less ready to touch off bombs.

During the time we were examining Andrea Salsedo we corralled members of both groups and learned that a few months before the Wall-street explosion one of them, a member of the Bresci group, met a Galleani in New Haven.

URGES DIRECT ACTION.

The former had something of a reputation for manifesto writing—a sharp, pithy style that was noted for its ability to stir up those who believed in that sort of literature. The Galleani man asked the Bresci to abandon his less direct leader and join the direct action mob, and, in coming, to fetch his trenchant pen along.

"I am flattered," said the Galleani anarchist. "Why do you want me?"

"To write of the immediate future."

"What is in the air?"

"Well, I can trust to your discretion. We are preparing another bomb plot—something like San Francisco."

"Listen," replied the Bresci man, "you people are crazy. If the liberty of the press and speech is further suppressed it is your fault."

"Well, that is all there is to it. You are very stubborn."

"Do you intend really to accomplish this plot?"

"Not now, because we cannot find the material, and maybe we cannot find the material for another job."

TAUGHT ANARCHISM.

Roberto Elia, a follower of Galleani and particular chum of Andrea Salsedo, was deported some time after the Wall-street explosion. The chances were that it was he who wrote the leaflet, "Plain Words," found on the streets and in mail boxes the day of the Wall-street explosion. We had every evidence that he even printed the leaflets. But it is quite another thing to gather the evidence that a jury would demand.

But to get back to the man Galleani, we find that he conducted something of a school at Barre, Vt. There he taught anarchy as he saw it. His pupils when asked to define anarchy would invariably reply something like this:

"Anarchy is unimposed government; a society liberally constituted. Any individual can donate to the society his intelligence, his knowledge and his work and he will get in return his necessities."

"What is society?"

"Mankind."

"Can't you be more specific regarding anarchy? Will it not do away with all forms of organized government?"

"Anarchy is the philosophy of opposition to that form of violence known as organized government."

Galleani taught his pupils that he embodied all the philosophy of such of his predecessors as Kropotkin, Malatesta, Herve, Bakunin and Ferrer, and topped all this erudition off with his own superiority of intellect.

"I am the most intellectual man in America," was one of Galleani's modest statements.

I believe the man was sincere in his belief. I seldom came into contact with a person quite so superior.

Galleani encountered discouragement along with the rest of us. Watched as he was, he lacked freedom of action. Some time before his deportation we asked him whether he did not think he was taking upon himself a rather difficult task when he essayed to bring about such a radical change in the American government.

"I do not admit the authority of government," he replied, "but I do think it is almost impossible to remove this government at present, because society is not in condition to live without government. Whenever men will all be persuaded, then will come a better form of government—individualism, anarchy. But mankind is too stupid now."

This remarkable egotist was born in Vercelli, in the province of Novara, Italy. He studied law in the University of Turin. His social and political theories expanded faster than his knowledge of the statutes, so instead of getting his degree he was banished by the Italian government to the convict settlement of Pantelleria.

The rocky shores and the forlorn isolation of this bit of land did not restrain Galleani one night from putting to sea in a small boat while the guard was suffering from carelessness. The next land he stepped upon was Egypt. He came to America in 1901, when about 30 years old.

NEW DRY LAW PROGRAM.

There is a new hand at the headquarters of the local prohibition enforcement agents, F. A. Hazeltine, and he says there is to be a new program of enforcement of the national enactment.

There has been criticism in the past in that there seemed to be a specialty of going after the little violator, the man with a bottle on the hip, while what are known as the big game have been allowed to proceed unmolested. This is to be changed.

While all cases turned in by the local police involving minor offenders will be vigorously prosecuted, going after this class will no longer be a specialty, it is stated.

Mr. Hazeltine's office is full of complaints, citing instances and giving names and locations, and he declared that he intends to play no favorites.

SITE FUND DRIVE NEAR COMPLETION

Campaign for New Building for Chamber of Commerce is Great Success.

Another long step toward completion was reported yesterday in the campaign for the building site fund of the new Chamber of Commerce project. It was estimated that some $50,000 was pledged since the last meeting of the team captains and that within the next few days the last gold notes necessary to raising the $544,000 will have been placed.

New lists will be supplied to the team workers tomorrow. These will be composed of about 2000 members who have not yet been reached by any team. All of the subscribers to the gold notes will be segregated and the teams will concentrate on the leading names in the Chamber of Commerce list who have not yet been visited.

Team captains will meet at noon today at the chamber, to receive the revised lists and to be given final instructions by W. T. Bishop of the "committee of 5000," in charge of the raising of the money for the proposed site at Broadway, Twelfth and Hill streets.

In speaking of the campaign, Mr. Bishop said yesterday: "We hope to raise the last of the funds needed in the next few days. Our team members have worked well and faithfully and certainly deserve great credit for the time they have devoted to this purely civic task. The members of the teams are busy men, whose time is valuable, but they have given freely of their services and time in this laudable enterprise.

"The campain has required time because of the enormous number of persons to be seen personally. The committee's idea is to have the ownership of the new chamber building vested in as many as possible of the members. We want every one in the organization to feel a personal interest not only in its work, but its property and ideals. We hope that every member of the chamber will cooperate with us in the next few days in our efforts to raise the rest of the building fund of $544,000."

STUDIOS TO BE MADE SAFE AGAINST FIRE.

COMMERCE CHAMBER SAFETY BUREAU INSPECTS CINEMA PLANTS.

Making Hollywood safe against fire in the motion-picture studios is the program of the department of safety and fire prevention in the Chamber of Commerce, and according to the reports made yesterday thirteen studios have been supplied with special bulletin boards and posters by the chamber.

Fire equipment has been inspected in each studio by Chamber of Commerce officials co-operating with the city authorities. Where conditions are unsatisfactory safety experts make recommendations, and employees are instructed in every studio where safety boards have been placed.

Over fifty studios in the city will be supplied with safety bulletin boards. Those receiving posters to date are Universal City, Mack Sennett Studios, Fox Studios, Warner Brothers, Francis Ford Company, William Horseley Company, Century Film Corporation, Christie Comedies, Famous Players-Lasky, Berwilla Film Corporation, Pickford-Fairbanks Studios, Hollywood Studio and National Film Corporation.

SCHEDULE TEACHERS' TESTS.

Saturday, April 8, and the week following have been set aside by the City Board of Education for holding examinations for kindergarten, elementary and high school teachers, physicians, dentists, school nurses, librarians and attendance officers. All applicants eligible by means of certificates, license or registration, training and experience will be permitted to take the examination. A formal application must be filed with the superintendent of schools, Room 716, Security Building, before next Wednesday.

YOUR FRECKLES
Need Attention in March or Face May Stay Covered.

Now is the time to take special care of the complexion if you wish to look well the rest of the year. The March winds have a strong tendency to bring out freckles which may stay all Summer unless removed. Now is the time to use Othine—double strength.

This preparation for the removal of freckles is usually so successful that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Get an ounce of Othine—double strength, and even a few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles even vanishing entirely.—[Advertisement.

DRAWS LIKE HOT FLAXSEED POULTICE
HEALS SORES FROM BOTTOM UP.

Just like a flaxseed poultice, Allen's Ulcerine Salve draws out poisons from sores, boils and wounds and heals them from the bottom up. Allen's Ulcerine Salve is the oldest in America, and since 1869 has been known as the only salve powerful enough to heal chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing. Because it draws out the poison and heals from the bottom up it never leaves a scar. By druggists or by mail, 65c; Book free. J. P. Allen Medicine Co., Dept. [illegible], St. Paul, Minn.

HARBOR EXTENSION URGED.

Congressman Osborne Outlines Port Needs Before House Committee at Washington.

Data covering trade through Los Angeles Harbor and needs for expansion of the harbor were presented before the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the House of Representatives at Washington by Congressman Osborne in his plea for an appropriation for a complete survey of the harbor. Mr. Osborne pointed out the necessity for extension of the breakwater to inclose an area of safe anchorage equal to demands of the port shipping. He gave figures showing how much Los Angeles had expended at the harbor and stated the city has appropriated much larger sums than has the Federal Government in carrying on work usually done by the government.

Following Mr. Osborne's speech it was believed at the Capitol that the pending Rivers and Harbors bill will carry the authorization for the necessary survey for completion of the outer harbor breakwater.

Mr. Osborne's speech was in part as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee: On behalf of the Los Angeles and Long Beach harbors, which are in reality one harbor, I am asking your consideration at this time of the only new project recommended by the board of engineers and the Chief of Engineers in House Document No. 1013, Sixty-sixth Congress, and a survey of Los Angeles and Long Beach harbors, looking to further improvement.

RAPID GROWTH OUTLINED.

"The growth of the shipping interests of Los Angeles Harbor is very rapid. At the time of the signing of the armistice, Nov. 11, 1918, there were but six regular off-shore lines making this port. It is true that shipping at that time was at a low ebb, as all available steamships had been commandeered for the use of the government in Atlantic waters. Between that time, however, and Jan. 1, 1931, sixteen additional lines had been added, making twenty-two in all. During the single year of 1921, twenty-three new services were added to the shipping business of Los Angeles Harbor.

"In addition to these commercial lines, Los Angeles Harbor is made the headquarters of the Pacific Fleet of the Navy a great deal of the time. The adjacent waters are particularly favorable to the maneuvers of the fleet, and the harbor now presents a most animated appearance between the large number of commercial vessels entering and leaving the port, and the magnificent fleet of the Navy, or a large part of it, anchored outside the entrance to the inner harbor.

"The large increase in steamship facilities is naturally reflected in the increase of the tonnage of the port. During the year ending June 30, 1919, the total commerce of the port was 2,880,622 tons. For the year ending June 30, 1921, two years later, it was 4,306,134 tons, an increase of more than 80 per cent.

GREAT TRADE INCREASE.

"For the year ending June 30, 1919, the imports into Los Angeles Harbor from foreign countries amounted in value to $2,181,428. For the year ending June 30, 1921, the imports amounted to $9,411,282, an increase of 331 per cent in two years.

"The exports to foreign countries from Los Angeles Harbor increased from $5,835,143 to $19,984,677, an increase of 242 per cent.

"The customs receipts at the port of Los Angeles increased from $196,670.18 during the year ending June 30, 1919, to $1,047,319.53 in the year ending June 30, 1921.

"The growth of Los Angeles is illustrated by the fact that Los Angeles was in 1921, the third city in the United States, in building permit valuations, being exceeded only by New York City and Chicago.

"I desire to call to the attention of the committee the public-spirited co-operation which has been given to all harbor improvements, which the United States government has undertaken at Los Angeles and Long Beach harbors. The government has built a breakwater nearly two miles in length, costing in the neighborhood of $2,000,000, and altogether from the beginning, including $1,080,000 for silt diversion works, has appropriated $7,721,600. The following table shows the amounts which have been expended by the city of Los Angeles, the city of Long Beach, the State of California, and by private interests, amounting to date to $11,000,000. The city of Los Angeles has recently voted bonds for harbor improvements to the extent of $4,500,000, and this with balance from a former bond issue places about $7,000,000 in the harbor funds of the city, and shows an aggregate of local appropriations of $15,500,000, nearly twice the amount which the government has appropriated.

"Rear-Admiral Eberle, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, has recommended harbor dredging and extension of the breakwater.

ASKS SURVEY MONEY.

"Gentlemen of the committee, on behalf of the great commercial interests of the Southwest, I am asking you to place among the authorizations in the bill the following item:

"Los Angeles Harbor, California, in accordance with report submitted in House Document No. 1013, Sixty-sixth Congress, $730,000.

"I shall further ask, in view of the rapid changes that have occured since the preceding preliminary examination and survey was made, to have a new preliminary examination and survey of the Los Angeles and Long Beach harbors with a view to further extension of the breakwater and deepening of the harbor, and such other improvements as the board of engineers may deem wise and necessary."

HEAVY ALL YEAR TRADE INDICATED.

Railroads and Hotels to Provide for Great Spring and Summer Business.

While railroad and hotel men are predicting the heaviest spring and summer tourist business here in years and are giving much of the credit for this to the advertising being done by the All-Year Club of Southern California, the All-Year Club has already received gratifying proof of the way in which the East may be expected to respond to the invitation to visit Southern California this summer.

This is shown in the immediate response to the all-year advertising. Only a few of the magazines containing the club's advertisements have thus far been published, but already several hundred inquiries have come into the club in response to this advertising.

Because of the definite indications already given regarding the response that may be expected to the all-year advertising the leaders of the all-year movement believe they can count on much broader financial support than that given at present.

Marius De Brabant, assistant general traffic manager of the Union Pacific here, has just returned from the East and has reported that the all-year advertising campaign is bringing a notable flood of inquiries about Southern California to the information and tourist bureaus throughout the East. Also, Frank A. Wadleigh, passenger traffic manager of the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad, while here last week, predicted a big volume of summer business this year on account of the all-year advertising.

POSTOFFICE ARCADE STATION PLANNED.

The interior plans for the proposed new Arcade station of the local postoffice establishment, to be popularly known as a terminal station, having been finally approved, the work of clearing away the ground at Third street and Central avenue, will begin this week. The contractors have promised that the structure shall be ready for complete occupancy in time to install the new furniture and have the entire establishment ready for operation by June 1.

Under the new arrangement all of the railway mails will be delivered at the Arcade station, and the present establishment at the Federal Building will be more of the nature of a substation. The entire second floor of the Federal Building, now occupied by the postoffice, will be utilized by the Collector of Internal Revenue.

FEDERAL COURTS WILL BE OPEN THIS WEEK.

Both departments of the local Federal Court will run continuously this week. Tomorrow the time of the court will be taken in the setting of cases for the term calendar and a number of important trial dates will be fixed. At the afternoon session, there will be a session of the Federal Police Court disposing of liquor-law violations. The juries will report in both departments Tuesday morning and the trial grind will continue all week.

WHITE SLAVERY CHARGED.

Lee R. Carr was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Long yesterday on the charge of being a fugitive from justice and held in a bond of $1500. A Mann white slave charge is pending against Carr in Tacoma, Wash. It is alleged that he took Mrs. Goldie Dryden from that city to Portland, Or., for an immoral purpose.

THE GUIDE'S REASON FOR POSITION OF STOVE

When the party of three, which included two college professors, entered the hunting-camp in the Maine woods, their attention was attracted to the unusual position of the stove. It was set on posts about four-feet high.

One of the professors began immediately to comment upon the knowledge woodsmen gain by observation.

"Now," said he, "this man has discovered that the heat radiating from the stove strikes the roof, and the circulation is so quickened that the camp is warmed in much less time than would be required if the stove were in its regular place on the floor."

The other professor was of the opinion that the stove was elevated to be above the window in order that cool and pure air could be had at night.

The host, being of a practical turn, thought that the stove was set high in order that a good supply of green wood could be placed beneath it to dry.

After considerable argument they called the guide and asked why the stove was in such a position.

"Well," he said, "when I brought the stove up the river, I lost most of the stovepipe overboard, and we had to set the stove up there so as to have the pipe reach through the roof."—[Wayside Tales.

POLITICS.

THE WATCHMAN.

Trend of Political Thought and Action.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

Mayor Rolph of San Francisco seems to be casting about for an opportune moment to announce his candidacy for the Governorship, whether as the nominee of the Democrats or the Republicans he has not made known. For many months the story has been current that Mayor Rolph could not himself finance a gubernatorial campaign and that financial interests friendly to him were unwilling to have him enter the race. It is now reported from various sources that the said "financial interests" have relented or repented, or, on all accounts, had a change of heart, and that the San Francisco Mayor intends to "get in" at a very early date.

From all reports, Charles H. V. Lewis, defeated candidate in former elections for Board of Education, for City Council, for State Assemblyman and for State Senator, has become a sort of phantom candidate in so far as the next general election is concerned. He is reported variously as a candidate in opposition to Assemblyman Elmer P. Bromley, as a candidate in opposition to Assemblyman Richmond P. Benton and as a candidate in opposition to Assemblyman Roberts. Further uncertainty as to his future political plans is caused by a report that he is residing in one Assembly district while having his registration in another district.

Former Assemblyman Peter C. Phillips, who has conducted the information bureau in the Hall of Records for some time, has been made a deputy sheriff and assigned to Judge Valentine's court.

Ralph Swing, brother of Congressman Phil Swing, is said to have things in good shape to succeed State Senator Lyman King of Redlands, provided Mr. King does not seek re-election—and it seems fairly certain that the Senator either will retire or run for Congress in Congressman Swing's district.

Justice of the Peace Guy Crump of South Pasadena is understood to be in a receptive mood relative to running for the Assembly in the district formerly represented by Supervisor Wright. Also, Charles Dawson, Los Angeles newspaper man, who opposed Mr. Wright two years ago, may make another try for the job this year.

Two San Francisco Assemblymen, each with a burning ambition to be Speaker of the next Assembly, may give the administration some worry. They are, respectively, Clarence Morris, a candidate for the office at the last session, and A. A. Rosenshine, Speaker pro tem. at the last session. Mr. Rosenshine has a longer and a prior claim on the State machine, but it is reported that Mr. Morris has been flirted with to some extent.

Some people are fond of describing Alex McCabe, State Insurance Commissioner, as "the Napoleon of California politics." Granting him the right to be so termed, it is the opinion of politicians hereabous that "Napoleon McCabe" found Los Angeles a Waterloo a few days ago, when he came down from San Francisco to line up organized labor for Senator Johnson.

Councilman Allen, it is said, has aspirations for a seat in Congress.

"I don't know whether I will or won't," says Edward D. (Teddy) Zehner, referring to his reported intention to become a candidate for Sheriff. And Sheriff Traeger, who also will be a candidate, says he is not worried over the outlook.

Collector of Customs Goodcell, who takes office tomorrow, made a real hit at a meeting of the Republican Woman's Study Club last week. The women heard him speak on "The Millenium" and were greatly taken with his ideas on the subject, not so much, certain of them said, because of his understanding of his topic, but because of the interpretation he gave of American ideals and the nation's present condition and future outlook. He qualified as an optimist and as a practical idealist, according to Study Club members.

Former Mayor Snyder, who has established headquarters in San Francisco as the Pacific Coast manager of the wholesale drug company, of which he is an officer, is expected to return to Los Angeles within a few weeks to make his home here. There are reports that Mr. Snyder would not prove unreceptive if he were offered a chance to seek the Democratic nomination for Governor.

A minor phase of California politics passed last week with the resignation of Martin Madsen as private secretary to Gov. Stephens. Mr. Madsen had a peculiarly strong penchant for offending people; so much so, in fact, that the administration's warmest supporters admitted that he "lacks tact," but this was a most charitable admission as compared to the motives and characteristics ascribed to him by administration foes. His presence in the outer office of the Governor's sanctum in the State Capitol created an atmosphere of heavy mystery that surrounded alike the important conferences or the trivial amenities of the chief executive's office. It is believed that Mr. Madsen had a genuine distaste for Southern California and a most cordial dislike for many Southern Californians. Those who think they detected these sentiments in his breast are ready to blame him for much of the Governor's purported discrimination in favor of men and affairs north of the Tehachepi.

The State machine is said to be utilizing the talent of some of its foremost representatives in drawing up a proposed change in the system of raising State taxes.

State Treasurer Richardson is pursuing his candidacy of the Governorship through Northern California counties. He will return to Southern California in the same interest within two or three weeks. While in Santa Rosa a few days ago Mr. Richardson called attention to the fact that he is driving his own automobile at his own expense and otherwise personally bearing expenses which, in the case of Gov. Stephens, a candidate to succeed himself, are paid directly or indirectly by the taxpayers of California.

For over 40 years Henry Seibel has devoted his inventive genius to the problem of mechanics.
Ten years ago Mr. Seibel started to solve the problem of the air spring. Countless failures by other inventors was no obstacle. On May 7, 1917, Mr Seibel made application to the U.S. Patent Office on the SEIBEL AIR SPRING.
After a thorough search the Patent Office on December 17, 1918, granted to Mr. Seibel three basic patents (Nos. 1288445, 1288446, 1288447). Today, after three years of laboratory and road tests the SEIBEL is placed on the market

AIR SPRINGS

The Invention that has Solved the problem of Vibration!

The problem of vibration that inventors have tried to solve since 1860 has at last been mastered. An international demand for a practical cushion air spring has been met.

After ten years of development and perfection the SEIBEL Air Spring is brought onto the market. It comes to the industrial world as a finished product to take its place with the great achievements of the day. The SEIBEL has definitely and finally overcome the great obstacles of spring construction—recoil—rebound—vibration.

There is nothing in the world like it. The SEIBEL is simple in its construction, fundamental in its idea and positive in its action. It is a tested and a proven success.

The SEIBEL Air Spring will find its need wherever the problem of vibration exists. It is adaptable to the tractor, motor truck, automobile, motorcycle, bicycle, and numerous other uses that fulfill many economic needs.

The SEIBEL Air Spring is protected by basic patents which have been granted in the United States and sixteen foreign countries.

See The Practical Demonstration of the SEIBEL Air Spring at Our Los Angeles Headquarters

When you see the practical application of the SEIBEL Air Spring you will instantly recognize the great need that it has fulfilled in solving the problem of Vibration. At our Los Angeles Office we have installed a comprehensive demonstration of the SEIBEL in action. Orders for immediate delivery and equipment are now being taken.

CAMPAIGN FOR BOND ELECTION.

Imperial Irrigation and Drainage Program Urged as Constructive Work.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL CENTRO, March 4.—Preparations for an intensive campaign to put over the proposed great irrigation merger and drainage program, requiring a bond issue election to provide a fund estimated at $7,500,000 were begun today by the Imperial Irrigation District.

Petitions calling for the bond election will be in circulation next week for signatures, Secretary McIver announced this afternoon.

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the district Tuesday notification will be given the board by State Engineer McClure definitely apprising the district officials of the amount fixed by the State Bond Commission and authorized to be raised by a special bond election.

It is considered quite certain that the Bond Commission, of which Dr. McClure is a member, will act on his recommendation of $7,500,000 and will fix the amount of the bond total at that sum.

Immediately following notification of the amount, the board of directors of the irrigation district will call a meeting of directors of Imperial county farm centers. An organization of bond campaign teams in each township in the county will be effected with a captain in charge of each to comb his township with petitions for signatures.

A whirlwind five-day drive is planned and indications were today that with such a campaign inaugurated shortly, the bond election can be called probably for the early part of May.

Twenty per cent representation of a $48,000,000 property valuation in the irrigated district as well as between 500 and 1000 names must be obtained to authorize the calling of the election, it was explained.

With almost united support given the project for absorption and drainage, the directors feel that success of the issue is assured.

SECOND BORAX CLAIM COURT BATTLE LOST.

REOPENING OF DEATH VALLEY PROPERTY CONTEST IS DENIED.

J. P. Hughes has lost in his second attempt to get possession of some of the borax mining claims owned by the United States Borax Company in Death Valley.

Yesterday, U. S. District Judge Trippet decided the action brought by Mr. Hughes to reopen the case against him and this disposes of the matter unless the contention is taken to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeal.

In his petition for a rehearing, Mr. Hughes asserted that perjured testimony had been given by a number of the witnesses that appeared in behalf of the borax corporation on the occasion of the first hearing, several years ago, that resulted in a judgment by Judge Trippet in favor of the defendant company. Among the witnesses so charged was Jack Davis, one of the superintendents who was in charge of the work of development.

The initial hearing required weeks before Judge Trippet and a score of tanned Death Valley miners were among the witnesses. In that hearing it was charged by Mr. Hughes that the borax company had not done the necessary amount of development work on a number of the claims and that he had a right to the claims.

The United States Borax Company is an English corporation that has many borax claims in Death Valley, that are said to be very valuable. Thousands of tons are mined every year. Mr. Hughes drifted into the territory some years ago and proceeded to develop claims.

One of the chief contentions in the original trial was just what constituted a day's work. It appeared that the corporation had done the required development, but Hughes claimed that there had been a skimping of the job and that the mineral laws had not been complied with.

TO EXPLAIN BOMBING.

Chamber Expert Scheduled to Speak on Tests With Planes.

The monthly luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce at the Alexandria Wednesday noon is expected to be one of the most interesting meetings of the year. Dr. Ford A. Carpenter, manager of the department of meteorology and aeronautics of the chamber, will be principal speaker. He will give an account of the bombing tests made recently at Hampton Roads, at which he was present. Films made during these experiments of the Army and Navy will be shown by Dr. Carpenter at the luncheon. The importance of results learned from the trials will be explained by Dr. Carpenter and the purpose that military bombing planes will serve in combating naval forces.

Tickets may be procured at the Chamber of Commerce.

Two Men Hurt; One Has Skull Broken at Base.

One man was believed fatally injured and a second was painfully cut and bruised in automobile accidents yesterday morning. Both were treated in the Receiving Hospital.

Garrison W. Mitchell, 50 years of age, a stationary engineer, living at 245 South Spring street, was found by pedestrians unconscious on Los Angeles street near the Plaza. In the Receiving Hospital he was treated for a basal fracture of the skull and other injuries. He was removed to the County Hospital and according to police surgeons has small chances for recovery.

Patrick Coady, 51 years of age, an attorney living at 1017 Mohawk street, was painfully injured when he was struck at Seventh and Los Angeles streets by an automobile driven by E. H. Skinner of 1240 West Forty-seventh street. He was treated at the Receiving Hospital and then removed to his home.

DR. HARLEY SHAPLEY GETS HARVARD CHAIR

Dr. Harlow Shapley, formerly of the Mt. Wilson Solar Observatory at Pasadena, has been elected by the governing board of Harvard University to the Paine professorship of practical astronomy, which has been vacant since the death in 1919 of Prof. Edward C. Pickering, former director of the observatory.

Dr. Shapeley left Mt. Wilson a year ago to accept the post of observer at the Harvard observatory, of which he was subsequently appointed director. His researches in the size and structure of the stellar universe have attracted widespread attention among astronomers.

BEGIN HEALTH WEEK.

In view of the announcement of health week beginning tomorrow and continuing through the week, in the Y.M.C.A. boys' department, the statement of Physical Director Russick that an average of fifteen men a day come to him for physical examination and that five business men of this city were sent to the Y.M.C.A. last week by their doctors for a health course is worthy of note. The boys' department endeavors by its annual health emphasis to get growing boys into the systematic exercise habit before they become men.

THINGS DOING IN POLITICS.

say concerning the administration of Gov. Stephens:

"Millions of dollars of the people's money has been squandered in building roads under imperfect plans. Notwithstanding many years of experience, the highway department stubbornly refuses to learn and sticks to a cement slab that always cracks down under certain soil conditions. The State Harbor Commission and other bodies appointed by the Governor are under fire.

"If elected I promise to give the people an economical administration and I point to my record as State Printer and Treasurer as an indication of what I will do.

"To effect economy it will be first necessary to kick out of power the greedy and reckless political machine which now dominates the State. Useless commissions and unnecessary officials should be removed from the pay roll.

"Growing State expenditures are something to give every taxpayer cause for alarm. During six years under Gov. Stephens the budget has jumped from $35,000,000 to $91,000,000. This great increase has been made without adding a single new function of government or any new commissions. And notwithstanding the great increase, the efficiency of the State government has been weakened. In short the people are paying more and getting a poorer administration.

"In the last campaign the Governor pledged himself to economy. After election he forgot his pledge and increased State expense 74 per cent in two years. Last year when the great budget was being considered he pledged the people that the corporations would bear the load of increased taxation. This pledge has also been violated."

THE WATCHMAN.

Reason Why Your Hair Turns Gray

There are three chemical elements, which, in certain proportions, are furnished by the body through the hair follicle or root and which determine the color of your hair. All these three chemicals, Iron, Sulphur and Magnesia, are in everyone's hair, whatever color it may be. If brunette, Iron predominates; if blond, Magnesia, and if brown, Sulphur. Black-haired people usually turn gray before blonds or brown-haired people because Iron is the element the body first fails to furnish.

An American chemist found that if the lost chemicals could be restored to the hair in right proportions it would return to its former color, in a natural manner. After many years of patient experimentation he at last perfected a compound containing these chemicals, together with other ingredients, in right proportions and thousands of practical tests have been made which prove that it does restore the original color by feeding and nourishing the follicle with these chemicals. He aptly named it NOURISHINE. He also found that it unfailingly removed dandruff, and prevented the hair from falling. All drug and department stores sell Nourishine at $1.25 per bottle. Try it and be convinced that you no longer have to use harmful dyes.—[Advertisement.

Dr: Franklin Bobbitt Discerns Isolation Between Community and Teachers of Cit

VOCATIONAL HIGH SCHOOL STUDY HELD NECESSITY.

"Educational Objectives" and How to Attain Them is Specialty of Curriculum Maker.

BY HENRIETTA BOECKMAN.

> Here are some salient things Dr. Franklin Bobbitt, author of the pamphlet, "Educational Objectives," says in an interview with The Times:
> "Los Angeles has recovered from the feeling that Latin and Greek are necessary to strengthen the mind. Note the dwindling number of teachers employed to teach these subjects.
> "As regards the solving of a geometric problem, there is gained a certain discipline from doing a useless thing, but that same discipline might have been obtained in doing a useful thing.
> "Subject obsession is one of the things we must eliminate. In vocational training this is being rapidly done."
> Dr. Bobbitt's research of the educational situation here has caused unprecedented interest among Los Angeles teachers.

The city's 1200 high school teachers are being subjected to a "quiz" of their opinions such as they never before experienced through the issuance of a pamphlet entitled, "Educational Objectives."

Dr. Franklin Bobbitt is the compiler of the disconcerting pamphlet and probably the leading national authority on curriculum making. He is in this city revising the study courses of both senior and junior high schools by a method never before applied to the schools of any city.

The making of a curriculum suitable to the times is a baffling, serious problem, declares this consulting educational engineer as Dr. Bobbitt is sometimes pseudonymed.

Efficient citizenship is the most difficult problem of the whole business of curriculum-making.

Civic education no more than any other should be mere firing into the air with the hope that it will hit something. It should aim clearly at definite civic abilities to do a definite civic thing.

SCHOOLS ISOLATED.

The isolation between the community on the one hand and the schools on the other has been one cause for the layman looking upon schools as a matter consisting of simply teachers, text-books and classes in which he has no part to play.

Teachers do most of their thinking in school subjects instead of thinking in terms of producing human abilities.

Educational people must keep their feet squarely on earth. There is too much of the utilitarian note: education should not be made a thing of class utility.

Illustrative of Dr. Bobbitt's work is the admission of one Los Angeles teacher who says this man, who has been professor of educational administration in the University of Chicago for thirteen years, has made her think of education in terms of children instead of in terms of subjects.

LAUDS PRACTICAL MAN.

"I want," said Dr. Bobbitt yesterday in his office in the old Olive-street school building, "to get the attention of the practical man. The practical man is, I have found, a good deal more of an idealist if the thing is practically put; I have noticed this in the Rotary Club meetings. Then take 'Industrial Management,' which is one of my favorite magazines. In it I can find as high a character of idealism as is to be found in any publication in the world, and it is owned and edited by practical business men. The idealism in this pamphlet on educational objectives is of the same sort. I have tried to get it out among business people, but my returns in receiving their opinions have been rather meagre, for the public feels that the schools are something apart in the regulating of which they can have no hand. This isolation between the community and the schools has not been the fault of the public alone. The schools have worked more or less apart and consequently have not served as they should. On the other hand lack of support in supply sufficient building and other material necessities has caused the estrangement.

"And yet the public is not so apathetic as some would think in the matter of making study courses. Drop arithmetic and see what a volume of protest would ensue." And there appeared the professor's droll and scarcely discernable smile, before he continued:

SHOULD ASK PUBLIC VIEW.

"First, we should avail ourselves of the experience of the teachers. Then I feel that the laymen, then men and women of the city, should preference civic function, for this has no connection with schools. For example, a business man can tell better than anyone else what is required of a good stenographer, what her abilities should be. In this same way the print shops should cooperate with us for they can supply the best information as to what abilities a young man need possess to be a good printer. And so in working out the curriculum we try to state matters in terms of human abilities.

"The part the public should play in the school system is to me only a part of the genius of our democracy," concluded Dr. Bobbitt.

Newspapers, declared Dr. Bobbitt, could be of great help in bringing about a better understanding between the schools and the public. "We of the teaching profession," he said, "must talk in terms of things so that the public can understand. Then I think we can gain a hearing."

TEACHES TEACHERS.

From his university classes, where men and women receive training in administrative supervisory work, Dr. Bobbitt has drawn the ideas for the pamphlet, which has been distributed among the local high school teachers that they might express their opinion on what should and should not be included in their study subjects. Upon one teacher remarking that it was the human way of handling the matter, Dr. Bobbitt replied it is the human way, but also the scientific way.

From each school a teacher for each subject is appointed to compose the committee of twenty-five of his or her study to go into consultation with Dr. Bobbitt. These teachers on the committees may also hold meetings to consult wtih other teachers of their respective schools on their particular subject.

OPINIONS READILY GIVEN.

It was agreed between interviewee and interviewer that this pamphlet would require a stimulating siege of thinking on the part of those teachers who had jogged along, accepting his or her course of study "as is," to make use of that expression attached to tables in department stores when merchandise is accepted exactly as it is, no matter how full of flaws it may be. "It is so easy to go along in a rut—so much easier than to get out of one," added Dr. Bobbitt, again making use of that slight smile of raillery, itself an altogether human ability.

The teachers on the whole have been prompt in submitting their opinions, but some appear to have been negative. These, however, have taken hold of things with keyed-up interest in meetings, stated the curriculum chief.

No bigger problem exists in school systems than that of knowing how to train boys and girls how to become efficient citizens. In training a boy to become a plumber, his necessary abilities are evident. For instance, if there are 165 different things which go to make a good plumber, these will be the objectives in the course of study laid before him by his instructor.

"But we are not all agreed," stated Dr. Bobbitt, "as to what citizens, ought to be do think the sum and sub citizen's function is go polls, paying the taxes, a daily newspaper; have a slightly differen

Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds' Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. George Reynolds entertained at the polo dinner-dance and ball at the Huntington on Thursday, the affair being given in compliment to the visiting polo teams in the south just now.

Dainty favors and decorations typical of the occasion were used effectively and covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Paul Nourse, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cass, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Lobdell, Miss Catherine Fullerton, Mr. Fullerton, Mrs. Charles Hewitt, Mrs. T. P. Phillips, Miss Marie Nichols, John Hammond of Los Angeles and others.

Miss Craig and Brother Entertain.

Miss Isabelle Craig and her brother, Ross Craig, who, with their parents Dr. and Mrs. Burdette Post Craig, are spending the winter at the Maryland, entertained with a charming dinner on Saturday at the hotel, when "A Night in Jungleland," with many novel and interesting features, was given, their guests including Misses Helen and Beatrice Horst, Muriel Westbrook, Helen and Margaret Kiernan, Catherine Crowley, Virginia Moorhead, Lillian Coulston, Elizabeth Curtis, Bonita Brackett, Messrs. Harry Cammann, Cecil Wolfe, O. S. Waters, John Owsley, Tim Matson, Capt. E. Le Febre, Philip Mulkey, Donald McCoy, Eric St. Clair, Edwin Gaffney, W. Hume.

Admiral and Mrs. Twining Return.

The numerous friends of Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Nathan C. Twining, who were so popular here while the admiral was attached to the Pacific Fleet, will be interested to learn they have returned from England and are to reside in New York.

They left here for London where Admiral Twining was naval attache at the American Embassy. Mrs. Twining, however, could not stand the climate and the admiral requested an assignment in America. Several of their Los Angeles friends have met and entertained them in New York since their return.

Trip Deferred.

Because of having been summoned to Washington, Henry Dockweiler, secretary at the American Legation at Tokio, who was to have sailed Wednesday, his sister, Miss Rosario Dockweiler and Miss Marie Rose Mullen, who were to have accompanied him, have postponed their trip to the Orient where they were to have remained many months.

In honor of Miss Rosario and Mr. Dockweiler, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Young gave a dinner party Thursday evening. Their table was centered with pink roses and Chinese lilies and plates were set for the honor guests, and Mr. and Mrs. William K. Young, Miss Amelia Hogan, Miss Janet Prendergast, Lyndol Young and Forrest Murray.

At Fashion Show.

A Dutch treat party at which Mrs. Thomas Ridgway is to preside is arranged for tomorrow night's Fashion Show at the Ambassador for the benefit of the Children's Hospital. The company will occupy a box for the pageant and will attend the supper-dance later. In this group will be Mr. and Mrs. Ridgway, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Naftager, Mr. and Mrs. Walter McPherson, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred K. Barnard, Mrs. Ruple, Miss Myra Ruple, Archer Barnard, Mrs. William Barnard, Miss Gwendolen Laughlin, and George Ennis.

Mrs. Edwin Francis Holmes will occupy a box with eight guests from Pasadena, whom she will entertain later at the supper-dance. The pageant is in charge of Mrs. Granville MacGowan and promises to be a brilliant success, socially and financially. Miss Mary Forve has the afternoon program in charge, while the evening performance is being managed by Miss Cecile McLaughlin. With Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Newlin in their box will be Judge and Mrs. Charles Monroe, Dr. and Mrs. Hill Hastings. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene O. McLaughlin will have with them Mr. and Mrs. Secondo Guasti, Mr. and Mrs. Waller Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. Schneider. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jewett Schweppe are to have in their box and at supper Dr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. Allan C. Balch, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schweppe. With Dr. and Mrs. Wayland Morrison will be Mr. and Mrs. Jack Macfarland, Dr. and Mrs. John Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller and Dr. Lyle Macneil. With Mr. and Mrs. Ben Meyer will be Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lawler, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Schoder, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Martin and Miss Lady Jane Lawler. Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonnell Taylor are to have as guests Mrs. Frederick H. Smith, Ernest Dupont, and Mr. and Mrs. James Reed. With Mr. and Mrs. Herman Janss will be Mr. and Mrs. J. Ross Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Featherstone. Others who are to have parties are Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Karckhoff, Watson

The Mirror Reflects the Charm of the Home

The mirror is the diamond in the home setting—scintillating evidence of the owner's taste.

Its selection should receive the same discrimination as the purchase of a diamond, for it commands the same constant observation.

Mirrors are important factors in decorating the home. Correct mirrors properly placed duplicate the charm of the surroundings and accentuate or soften lines and angles as needed.

At the "California" may be found the largest assortment of exclusive mirrors anywhere in the west, each personally selected for its individual character.

Beautiful Hall Mirrors to welcome the arriving guest—Mirrors to compel admiration of friends when dining—Mirrors of most unusual types to embellish and duplicate the refinement of the Living-Room—exquisite Boudoir Mirrors, dainty decorations of perfect imagery.

And, as is true of all the stocks throughout the "California," the exclusive character of these distinctive mirrors bears no price premium for exclusiveness.

Here will be found mirrors to meet every requirement at prices covering a very wide range from the inexpensive to the finest masterpiece. Value comparisons are always cordially invited.

Jeweled Lorgnettes

THERE was a time when the ornamental purpose of lorgnettes largely overshadowed their practical value as convenient mountings for eyeglasses. But now, although they are still of prime importance as a personal adornment—a finishing touch to the perfect attire—they have serviceable advantages that are by no means negligible.

Those we offer permit the mounting of lenses, either rectangular or octagonal, that have been carefully adjusted to individual requirements. For the finest jeweled effects, of course, one turns to those lorgnettes of the encased type.

When not in use they hang suspended quite like a pendant or locket. And they are equally brilliant in effect, with a paving of diamonds in platinum and settings of larger diamonds or colored stones, such as emeralds, rubies or sapphires. A simple adjustment makes them ready for immediate use.

The exclusive designs original with Brock and Company give our lorgnettes an added charm and value.

Visitors Welcome.

News from Abroad.

Friends of the former Miss Dorothy Webb of this city, who was married last Thanksgiving Day in New York to Alec P. Cruger, American Consul at Marseille, France, will be pleased to learn that she and her husband have just arrived in France and have taken a beautiful villa on the Mediterranean where they will be at least two years. The young couple made the voyage on the steamship America.

Mrs. Cruger is the daughter of Mrs. Lillie T. Webb of the Albermarle Apartments on Scarff street and is well known in this city, where she was born and reared. She distinguished herself in overseas work in the World War and it was while in Paris she and Mr. Cruger met.

While visiting her sister, Mrs. Jason S. Day of Jersey City, N. J., last year, she and Cruger again met and their marriage followed. Mr. Cruger comes from one of the old Dutch families of New York and he is also a relative of John W. Wannamaker.

For 44 Years The China Store of Los Angeles

The name Parmelee-Dohrmann Company has been synonymous with "fine china" in Los Angeles for considerably more than a quarter century.

This house stands today—with the makers of fine china the world over—as high as any buyer and seller of dinnerware in America.

Certainly the enormous volume of our purchases entitles us to, and gains for us considerations and advantages which many splendid and reputable houses do not enjoy.

Surely you as the buyer—have everything to gain—and nothing to lose by coming to such a house as ours for your dinnerware needs—no matter what they may be.

The lowest priced dinnerwares it is advisable to buy—are here in much more extensive variety of patterns than you will find in the ordinary store. And likewise the finest dinnerware—for it stands to reason that our large patronage justifies us in carrying larger assortments than lesser patronage would justify.

A visit to our interesting dinnerware section will convince you that what we say is very conservative.

The selection of your dinnerware is of sufficient importance to warrant a trip of inspection before you buy.

You will be welcome here.

New York Matron Is Hostess.

Mrs. Ernest V. Chamberlain of

Fully $650,000.00 Worth of Feagans & Co. Fine Merchandise Is Included In This Sale and In Many Cases Prices Are Cut In Half

The Reason

We could easily have concocted some plausible sugar-coated excuse for this sale. We could have given it some fictitious name—but this is not that kind of an institution. Nothing is more wholesome than the truth.

The Feagans & Co. reputation for exclusive merchandising is well known—not only in Los Angeles but to a large degree throughout the country. It is generally recognized that this store enjoys the elite patronage of Southern California. And this would not be the case if Feagans & Co. did not deserve this patronage. But Feagans & Co. do not believe that this prestige and dignity should keep them from adopting the same good merchandising measures which big stores in other lines of business adopt when it becomes necessary to speed up the turnover.

The "Feagans" reputation can not suffer, for the standard of "Feagans" merchandise and of "Feagans" service is not, and will not be lowered one iota.

Feagans & Co. make plain the truth that the need for this sale is occasioned by over heavy stocks—(and almost every jewelry store in the country has this same problem today).

And because it is supposed to be the high class thing to do—are Feagans & Co. going to sit and wait—for stocks to reduce? No. That is not the Feagans way.

Profits are necessary to the permanent conduct of any business, but there are times when a sacrifice of profits is justifiable. And Feagans & Co. are willing to go even further than a sacrifice of profits to accomplish the substantial reduction of their stocks NOW.

Although this sale has been in progress now for some time—and stocks have been reduced by many thousands of dollars—its full purpose has not yet been accomplished.

Many lines of merchandise which have been withheld from the sale will from now on be included, and in many cases reduced prices have been cut still deeper.

Included in this Sale are

Out-of-Town Society.

PASADENA.

Many social affairs have marked the past week in Pasadena. There are many society folk here from Burlingame, Piedmont and other places for the polo matches at the Midwick Country Club.

A number of social affairs are being given, with the polo tournament as the motif. These affairs include a polo dinner-dance and ball last night at the Midwick Club, at which Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Stevens entertained a dinner party of eighty; Mr. and Mrs. Keith Spalding entertained fifty guests; Mr. and Mrs. Stuart O'Melveny entertained twenty guests, and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Gail Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Garretson Dulin also entertained large parties.

A polo dinner-dance was held at the Hotel Huntington Thursday night at which many brilliant dinner parties were given.

One of the large social affairs of the week was the anniversary inaugural dinner-dance and ball held last night at the Hotel Vista del Arroyo. A portico in replica of that at the White House, Washington, was erected at the entrance of the hotel, and the reflection of smart official and diplomatic corps life at the capital carried out in other ways during the evening.

Mrs. Daniel M. Clemson of Cleveland, who is spending the winter at the Huntington, entertained at a luncheon at the Midwick Club Tuesday in compliment to Mrs. George E. Shaw of Pittsburg and Mrs. J. Franklin Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison B. Riley of Evanston, Ill., who are spending the winter at the Maryland, entertained at a large dinner party at the Maryland Monday night.

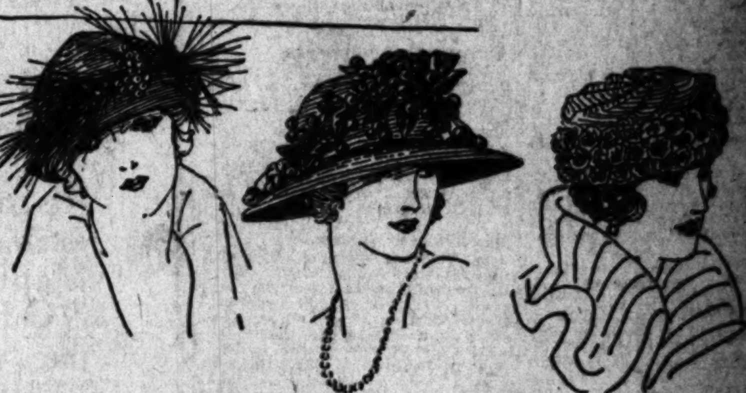
New Bags for Spring

With Lots of Color the Keynote

—The widespread flair for novelty effects in Bags has resulted in the increasing demand for the new Swagger and other smart designs in patent, pin seal and grain leathers.

—Silk Bags with decided moire tendencies, distinctive in fashion and a style leader in Bags that must be reckoned with. Some of the more distinguished Bag modes have 14-kt. gold mountings, others with embellishment of cut steel, rhinestones or colored beads.

FIRST FLOOR—BLACKSTONE'S



Presentation Flower Trimmed Hats $25.00

—A display that is a triumph of the Blackstone Spring Millinery season—Hats typically expressive of the mode as it is applicable to California—a showing so thoroughly complete and varied, yet marked with that distinction attained by the elimination of all doubtful styles. There are exquisite sports Hats for those who watch and take a part in the progress of sports—captivating models expressly designed for street and dress wear in the loveliest of braids and silks, used either separately or in combination. Every smart whim and fancy in flower trimmed Hats is taken care of satisfactorily in this collection at Blackstone's.

—The first Hat in the picture is of black Milan, trimmed with black wheat and shiny black berries. The Hat in the center is a rough novelty straw in jade color made entirely charming with bagatelle satin, cire ribbon, grapes and leaves. The little turban on the end is of tagal braid in the new shade of Mohawk, with tucked crown and small roses—it is a dream of becomingness.

SOUTH PASADENA.

Mrs. Juanita Shelburne of 727 Brent avenue had as her guests on Monday evening the members of the Monday Evening Musical Club. An excellent musical program was rendered. Mrs. Esta Kite-Carr and Mrs. J. S. Brittain were heard in soprano solos. Ben Wheatley gave several very pleasing baritone solos. Miss Esther Tobler rendered several selections on the violin, while Miss Miriam Burgess gave several very pleasing selections on the 'cello. Refreshments and a very enjoyable social time followed.

Mrs. Walter A. Gillette of 1207 Fair Oaks avenue gave a very delightful luncheon at her home on Monday in honor of her house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Warren of Fox Lake, Wis.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Don S. Gates, 515 Monterey Road, was the scene of a beautiful wedding on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, when their daughter, Miss Velma D. Gates, was married to Harold P. Cass, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cass of 1601 Fair Oaks avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. B. D. Snudden of the local Methodist church. The decorations throughout the house were carried out with masses of peach blossoms. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was charmingly attired in a gown of white Chantilly lace over white silk. She wore a long tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet of sweet peas and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Cornelia Gates, as maid of honor, and two sisters of the groom, Miss Emily Cass and Miss Marcia Cass, as bridesmaid and flower girl. Miss Cornelia Gates was gowned in pale blue organdie; Miss Emily Cass in pale green organdie, and Miss Marcia Cass in orchid. They all carried spring flowers. Louis Cass acted as his brother's best man, while Lester Sanson was assistant to the groom. The wedding marches were played by Mrs. Leslie Gardner of Whittier. The marriage was witnessed by about 125 persons, relatives of the two families. Mr. and Mrs. Cass are very well-known in this city, both families being prominent in the social and civic life thereof. The young people are graduates of the local high school and very prominent among the younger social set. After the honeymoon they will make their home at Blythe, Cal., where Mr. Cass is engaged in business.

Mrs. George C. Bush and Mrs. J. P. Whitmore entertained Chapter AA, P.E.O., at luncheon on Thursday at the Whitmore home, 1143 Fairview avenue. The following day Chapter AX ladies were guests of Mrs. B. D. Snudden, 1114 Stratford avenue. In view of the fact that the State convention of the organization is to meet in South Pasadena in April much time was given to the discussion of plans and business matters pertaining to the same.

MONTEBELLO.

A brilliant and elaborate affair was the 500 party given Friday afternoon by Mrs. C. B. Ford and daughter, Mrs. Charles Becker, at their home on Date street, complimentary to Mrs. Fred Clifford Ewald of Los Angeles. A decorative scheme of yellow was used with charming effect, the rooms embellished throughout with a profusion of acacia blossoms and marigolds. The golden note appeared also in the score cards and in the delightful collation, which was served at the small tables. Card prizes were won by Mrs. Fred H. Howard and Miss Lillian Billings, and a gift from the hostesses to the honoree was a lovely cut glass dish. Those invited for the happy occasion were Mrs. F. H. Allen, Mrs. George F. Bartlett of Los Angeles, Mrs. N. J. Brown, Jr., Mrs. R. G. Brown, Miss Clarissa Bridge, Miss Lillian Billings of Los Angeles, Mrs. Helen Brum, Mrs. E. L. Cash, Mrs. Truman Cole, Mrs. Louise Cain of Salt Lake, Mrs. C. J. Cole, Miss Emily Cole, Mrs. F. F. Darcy, Mrs. John Dunlap, Mrs. C. T. Dykes, Mrs. C. A. Graham, Mrs. Fred H. Howard, Mrs. L. G. Oswald, Mrs. Herbert Parker, Mrs. M. R. Parmelee, Mrs. R. M. Robinson, Mrs. C. L. Robinson and her mother and sister, Mrs. L. H. Malan and Miss Mary O. Malan of Manchester, Eng., Mrs. A. H. Southworth, Mrs. Max Hartvig of Long Beach, Mrs. W. D. Stephens, Mrs. Fred Sproul, Mrs. C. W. Schaack, Mrs. H. O. Smith, Mrs. C. E. Stivers, Mrs. G. E. Wilfert, Mrs. L. T. Williams, Mrs. W. H. Whitney, Mrs. G. S. Walker and Mrs. Glenn Wallerstedt of Los Angeles.

The golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Miller of Washington avenue served as the inspiration of a most enpoyable party which was arranged as a surprise for them at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Rohleder. After a pleasant evening of games and music at the Rohleder home all repaired to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wyer, next door, where long tables had been made ready for the serving of refreshments. The venerable honor guests were the recipients of some beautiful gifts. Relatives and friends asked to participate in the joyous event included Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. William Miller and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. Vern Vincent of Covina, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Vincent of Covina, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. ALHAMBRA.

Coming as a surprise to their many friends was the announcement on Monday of the marriage in Riverside on January 30 of Miss Inez McKnight and Stanley H. Webber. Mrs. Webber is well known in musical circles, having resided here for the past ten years. Mr. Webber, who is on the staff of a local newspaper, was a commissioned officer in the air service during the World War.

The marriage of Miss Genevieve Maas, daughter of Mrs. G. Maas, and J. N. Friedman, was solemnized Saturday morning in Los Angeles. After the ceremony, the young couple departed for a wedding trip to San Diego. They will make their home at 908 South Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Asheley of Portland, Or., who are spending several weeks in the south, furnished inspiration for an evening of bridge, at which Dr. and Mrs Chester Lea Magee entertained on Wednesday evening at their home on Broadway, San Gabriel. Violets and acacia blooms were used in decorations. Bidden to meet the guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Barber, Mr. and Mrs. George Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Whitehead, Mr. and Mrs. Albert May, Mr. and Mrs. George Nottage, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Richardson, Mr and Mrs. W. F. Marmion, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Grimes, Mrs. R. W. Thomas, Everett, Wash., and Mrs. Mary Root, Pasadena.

Two affairs of unusual charm were given at the home of Judge and Mrs. T. R. Owen, 220 South Wilson avenue, on Thursday and Saturday afternoons, respectively, the past week, when Mrs. Owen, assisted by her daughter, Mrs Clyde Forsythe, and Mrs. Harold Gay, entertained at luncheon and bridge. Lovely flowers were used in profusion to adorn the rooms. Among the guests were a large number from out of town.

A George Washington party was given by Mrs. Maurice Marquis at her home Wednesday. Bridge and needlework were the amusements of the afternoon. A dainty lunch was served at small tables concluding the afternoon's program.

Mrs. H. J. Goudge entertained charmingly at luncheon Wednesday in honor of Mrs. Zella Z. Dodge, director, and the members of the cast who recently presented three one-act plays before the Round Table and Wednesday Afternoon Club.

EAST WHITTIER.

The Hacienda Country Club has been the scene of much pleasant informal social activity during the past week, when the sunshine again made playing golf possible, by drying the greens, and lending a general air of cheerfulness to the club grounds. The members perhaps again played with renewed zeal after an enforced idleness, owing to the immense amount of rain this season. Among those who find much pleasure at the cosy club and who are frequently seen upon its attractive grounds are Mrs. Alphonso Bell, wife of the president of the club; Mrs. Sada George Wilson, president of the East Whittier Woman's Improvement Club; Miss Florence Swain of East Whittier, who has recently returned from an extended visit in the East, and many of the members from other near-by cities, for the popular club draws its members from Whittier, Santa Fe Springs, Rivera, Puente, Anaheim, Fullerton and surrounding territory.

Mrs. Lester C. Baldwin, formerly of East Whittier, but now residing at Huntington Beach, very happily entertained at her seaside home Tuesday evening in celebration of her husband's birthday anniversary. Some twenty local people were in attendance, and those from East Whittier were the Misses Miriam McWhirter, Aura Baldwin and the Messrs. Carroll Scott and William Fortson.

Mr. Sylvester Mendenhall and his daughter, Miss Vera Mendenhall, who have recently been the house guests in the home of his brother, and family, the Omar Mendenhalls, left the first of the week for their home in Idaho.

It will be of pleasant interest to a wide circle of friends to know that Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neushutz of Azusa intend returning to East Whittier. Mrs. Neushutz has been confined to the home of her mother, Mrs. F. S. Wood of Whittier, on account of illness.

GLENDALE.

Miss Eva Green was the complimented guest at a surprise linen shower given by Miss Lois Webb Monday evening. The motif of St. Patrick's Day was prominent in the house decorations and table appointments. Miss Green's engagement to Mr. John Jenkins was announced recently. The invited guests included Misses Pearl Pollock, Elaine Hudson, Jane Snyder, Billy Gregg, Helen Vrendenburg, Dorothy Haig, Harriet Barnes, Edith Hageman, Evelyn Williams and Elizabeth Allen, Mrs. D. H. Webb, Mrs. Marshall Pearson and Mrs. Dolliver Webb.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dibbern gave a farewell party Tuesday evening at their home, 612 North Orange street, as they are moving to a smaller place this week, having disposed of their Orange-street property. Thirty-six guests were in attendance, and cards were played, Miss Verle Hammond and Mr. Walter Jones making high scores. At midnight a delicious supper was served.

Last Saturday afternoon a bridge and five hundred party was given at the home of Mrs. John Robert White on North Orange street by nine hostesses. The rooms were decorated with the lacy acacia bloom, and refreshments were served at the close of the game. There were fourteen tables of players. The hostesses were Mmes. A. H. Montgomery, R. A. Puffer, Walter Jones, Helen Campbell, C. E. Norton, Charles Meadows, C. A. Parker, Mabel Rudy and Mrs. White.

The members of the Mary Jane Gillett Tent No. 18, Daughters of Veterans, held a most successful meeting and card party Tuesday evening in the American Legion clubrooms. Mrs. Susie Peck is the president of this organization. Cards were played the earlier part of the evening, and dancing was enjoyed after a hot supper was served. Mrs. Queen Danner and Mrs. Cora Jones were the hostesses of the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Meeker, 1320 East Colorado street, gave a dancing party last Friday evening for their daughter, Evelyn. Acacia blossoms were used in profusion to decorate the rooms. Light refreshments were served at the close of the evening. Miss Mildred Meeker assisted the young hostess in receiving the guests, who were Helen White, Betty Glade, Portia Chambers, Rebecca Brant, Dorothy Forbes, Elizabeth Waltman, Katherine Kitterman, Nellie Jepson, Virginia and Mabel Horner, Jeannette Yarbrough; Wallace Trau, Preston Hanning, Dana Van Loon, Charles Hart, Samuel Colburn, Howard Rettberg, Harold Campbell, Harry Lisser, Frank Wycoff, Leslie Roice, Donald Murray and Drew Walstrom.

Mrs. R. F. Cullen of 530 North Maryland avenue was hostess at a luncheon party Monday, complimenting Miss Margaret Kunts of Johnston, Pa. Jonquils centered the table, where covers were placed for Mmes. W. A. Tanner, C. A. Redmond, R. L. Young, T. J. Keleher, and Lionel Wolfe of Glendale, Mrs. George Melford of Hollywood, Mrs. Lillian Stone of Honolulu, the guest of honor; Miss Kunts and Mrs. Howard Oswald of Burbank.

WHITTIER.

Seldom has a home wedding in Whittier been more beautifully appointed than that of Miss Nellie Elizabeth Beckett and Mr. Patrick Murphy which was solemnized at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Evert Hinshaw, 627 Terrace Place, Saturday evening, before an assembly of more than one hundred guests. Preceding the entry of the bridal party, Miss Ina Jean Peelle at the piano, and Miss Opal Iris Hinshaw, saxophonist, played Mendelssohn's celebrated "Spring Song," and later Miss Hinshaw played Lohengrin's wedding march. An aisle for the party was formed with ropes of smilax, held in place by six little girls clad in pastel colored organies; they were Mildred and Barbara Jane Moffit, Eleanor and Mildred Tebbets, Ruth Annis Wilson and Nella Sands, the last two from Los Angeles. Little George Evert Hinshaw carried the wedding ring buried in the heart of a mammoth rose. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Evert Hinshaw. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank Dell, pastor of the Friends Church. After the congratulations, an attractive collation was served, and during the evening the musicians played "Because," "O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly." The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mettie Beckett, and has a host of friends in Whittier. Mr. Murphy, who is an oil man, recently came from San Francisco. After a honeymoon journey Mr. and Mrs. Murphy intend making their home in Whittier.

The annual reception to Past Matrons and Past Patrons of Lyra Chapter, O.E.S., Whittier, was held at the Masonic Temple Friday evening and was largely attended. The reception committee was composed of Mrs. Ginevra Rees,

RESOURCES

MANUFACTURERS who interpret Wetherby-Kayser style ideas in terms of leather are those whose fine business integrity, superior skill and high spirit of service has brought them unquestioned leadership among the world's footwear crafters.

These organizations deem it a privilege to place the Wetherby-Kayser label in merchandise of their making, not because of the great volume of our purchases, but because of the position of authority this house has attained. Next to the friendly loyalty of our patrons, we count this close association with these famous organizations our greatest & most cherished resource.

MADE IN LOS ANGELES

Just a few years ago—no further back than 1914—Los Angeles was known almost only as a city of Sunshine, Flowers and Fruit. While holding tenth place in point of population, it occupied twenty-sixth place industrially.

Now all that is changed, and there is every reason to believe that Los Angeles now occupies the same place industrially as in population.

Hamburger's—one of the oldest Department Stores in the city has always held forth the glad hand of Welcome to local manufacturers.

As these same Local Manufacturers have planned for March 6th, 7th and 8th, special displays and promotion work to interest buyers at home and from all parts of the country, it seems fitting that Hamburger's should pledge anew ready co-operation at this time.

Therefore, it is the hope of Hamburger's that all Los Angeles' Manufacturers shall consider this an invitation to make the acquaintance of the Merchandise Management, if they are not already known—or to ask consideration of any lines not now included in Hamburger stocks.

Even Native Californians do not often realize the variety, quality and value of Los Angeles' products. This week Hamburger's directs your attention to 56 window displays of the Store, exploiting Los Angeles-Made Merchandise as it is carried in regular stocks.

Cash Buying and Cash Selling Mean Cash Saving to You

The "Bargain Basement"—that is what Hamburger's former Downstairs Store will hereafter be called.

A store destined, in every sense of the word, to live up to its name "Bargain Basement"—the result of high specialization in Cash Buying, Cash Selling, Quick Turnover and Great Value—creating Big Volume.

To effect this, a complete re-organization of the policy and conduct of the former Downstairs Store has taken place. Even the physical equipment has been changed to conform with the new principles.

Already a store known for its great values, Hamburger's New Bargain Basement will go far beyond that which has been accomplished in the past and prove conclusively to the people of Southern California the POWER and ACCEPTABILITY of a store in which every overhead and operating expense is cut to the minimum, in which only specially purchased merchandise is featured and in which only BARGAINS are procurable.

Cutting Down the Overhead Expense

In the interest of low prices, the Bargain Basement will be conducted as nearly as possible along the lines of self service.

There will be no deliveries, except at a minimum charge of 10c per package—an item of saving in price to you.

Merchandise will be sold only for "Cash." This works two ways—not only is the price lowered proportionately to you, but the immediate cash returns to us, make it possible for our buyers to keep active in the market with the "money that talks."

Specially Purchased Merchandise Only

What is meant by "Specially Purchased" Merchandise? It is that merchandise around which there are various circumstances that contribute to lower its price. Surplus lots—cancelled orders—"seconds" and "sub-standards"—sample lines—as well as retail and wholesale stocks, that through trade accidents, may be bought at lowered prices for cash. These are what the Bargain Basement will seek "at a price" and sell "at a price"—aiming to sell merchandise at the lowest prices in Southern California, for like quality.

All merchandise thus bought and sold, no matter how cheap, will have to measure up to standards of reliability and be such as can be given the Hamburger Guarantee of Satisfaction and Reliability.

Only Bargains Will Be Sold

Nothing will be sold at its regular value! Every item of merchandise sold will be at a genuine "bargain" price.

You may not always find exactly what you want, but, if you can find it, it will be a real bargain. Every day will be bargain Day in the Bargain Basement—with hundreds of unadvertised items daily placed on sale.

Walk through often and watch it save you money.

Trained Specialists Form the Buying Organization

A New York organization is daily in the market, with the cash and authority to buy for the Bargain Basement. A corps of especially trained "Basement Buyers" is at this end of the line to advise with the New York office. A value-sure combination that insures "bargains" and plenty of them. If merchandise can not be bought cheap enough, it will not be bought at all.

No Regular Stocks Carried

By that we mean no claim will be made for full and complete lines of merchandise. There will be plenty of first quality, regular merchandise—and in the case of "seconds" or substandards, it will be guaranteed and dependable and plainly marked as such. But the merchandise will be jobs and short lines bought and sold at a price, with no aim toward keeping a complete line of any one brand, kind or make of goods.

This means quick selling—quick selling means quick turnover and big volume—all of which means

Lowest Prices in the Bargain Basement Always

Manufacturers and Wholesalers are asked to consider this announcement as an invitation to confer with us on any merchandise that meets these requirements of sale.

Prof. John H. Austin's Ivor Beauty Preparations

Buy tomorrow—take advantage of the specially reduced prices on these high-grade toilet preparations.

"Ivor" Beauty Preparations impart the "complexion atmosphere" that is so desired. They will keep the skin soft, velvety and alive with the natural beauty-glow of health.

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN'S

IVOR Freckle Cream 45c

—Makes a dark skin lighter, clearer, purer. Removes unsightly facial blemishes and creates a new skin.

—Tan, freckles, moth and liver patches, pimples, muddiness and all skin discolorations are banished in the only practical way known to dermatologists.

—Removes the discolored cuticle in small unnoticeable particles and promotes a growth of new skin as clear, velvety and healthful as that of youth. It is different from any and every other face preparation. It is a medicinal luxury for the toilet. Will not grow hair on the face and is perfectly harmless.

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN'S

IVOR Wrinkle Treatment 1.25

Just a few applications of Prof. John H. Austin's Ivor Wrinkle Treatment, and "almost like magic" wrinkles really vanish. It is a scientific beauty treatment for fine wrinkles and deep lines—made in accordance with a French plastique formula. Ivor Wrinkle Treatment draws up the sagging muscles—imparts new life to a skin that has lost its elasticity—brings back the look of youth. Bottle, 1.25.

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN'S

IVOR Flesh Builder 85c

—A preparation that will assist in rounding out hollowed or thin cheeks, plumping the neck and shoulders with firm, healthy flesh and removing wrinkles from the face and hands.

—It is not a face powder, cream, cosmetic or bleach, and it will not grow hair. It is a natural beauty maker for removing tan, freckles, pimples, blackheads, sunburn, roughness and skin imperfections.

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN'S

IVOR Hair Destroyer 85c

—A smooth, hairless skin now possible for every woman.

—With the aid of Prof. John H. Austin's Harmless Hair Destroyer it is an easy and simple matter to rid the skin of unsightly hair growth. The result is a clear, healthy skin so sought after by the fashionable women of today.

—It is put up in glass-stoppered bottles so that it will not deteriorate.

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN'S

IVOR Vegetable Meal Pack 85c

Removes Tan, Sunburn, Freckles

—It invigorates and stimulates the blood vessels, drawing from the skin all discoloration and every foreign particle. You will find Prof. Austin's Vegetable Meal Pack Beautifier beneficial in building up the tissues and in eradicating all substances foreign to the skin, color and complexion. It is also an invisible whitener for the hands and arms, leaves the skin soft, white and velvety.

The First Few Gray Hairs

How one regrets their appearance. No need to worry long, though, for Co-Lo will restore the natural color in a very, very short time.

Prof. John H. Austin's
Co-Lo
Hair Restorer

Restores the color, life and luster to the hair in a mild, healthful manner.

Prof. John H. Austin's
Co-Lo
Hair
Restorer

A scientific process perfected by Prof. John H. Austin, 43 years a bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist.

Co-Lo is a wonderful liquid as clear, colorless and greaseless as water—a pleasing and simple remedy to apply. Co-Lo cannot be detected like ordinary hair dyes; contains no lead or sulphur; has no sediment; will not wash or rub off; will not injure the hair or scalp.

Co-Lo Hair Restorer can be had for every natural shade of hair—

A-6—for Black and all dark shades of brown.

A-7—Extra Strong, for Jet Black Hair only.

A-8—for all Medium Brown Shades.

A-9—for all Very Light Brown, Drab and Auburn Shades.

HAMBURGER'S—SECOND FLOOR

Co-Lo Hair Restorer at Hamburger's, Main and Second Floors—Owl Drug Co. and all Druggists

Prof. John H. Austin, Bacteriologist, Hair and Scalp Specialist of Chicago

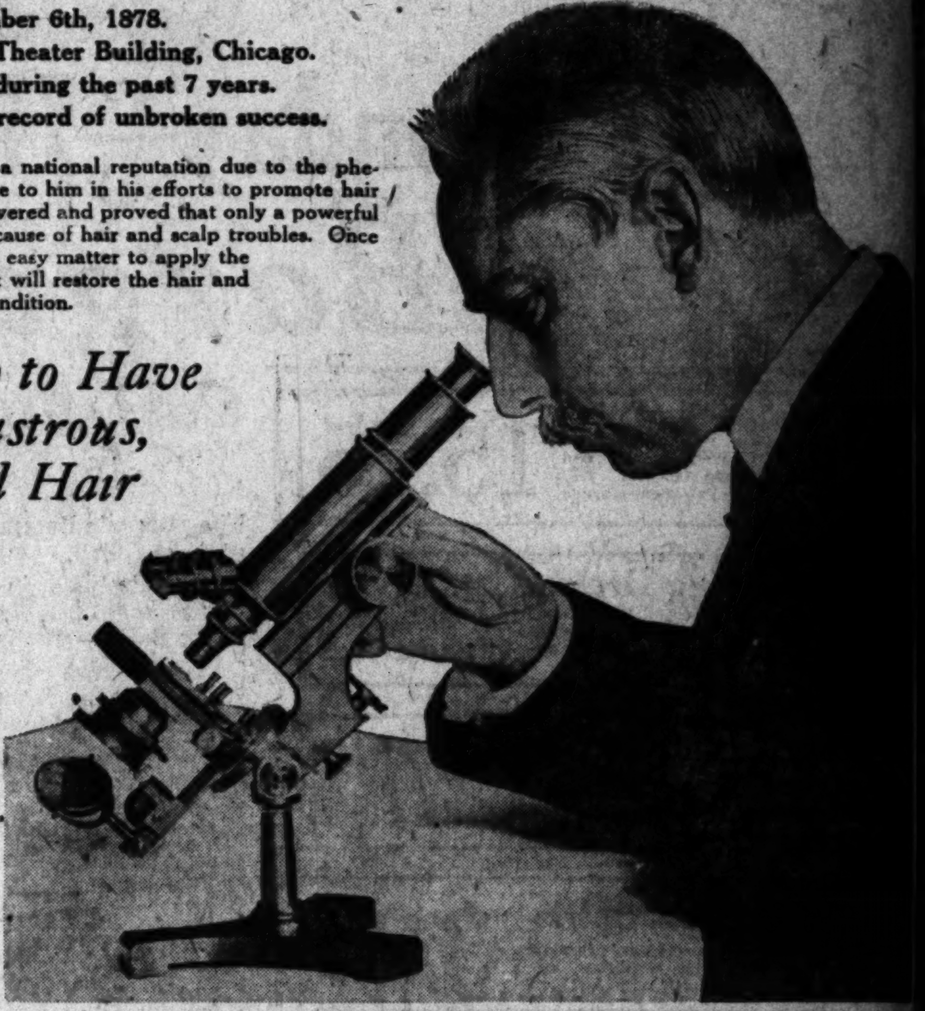
—Established since December 6th, 1878.

—26 years at McVicker's Theater Building, Chicago.

—Offices at Hamburger's during the past 7 years.

—43 years a specialist—a record of unbroken success.

—Prof. Austin has established a national reputation due to the phenomenal success which has come to him in his efforts to promote hair and scalp health. He has discovered and proved that only a powerful microscope will reveal the true cause of hair and scalp troubles. Once the cause is known, it is then an easy matter to apply the proper corrective treatment that will restore the hair and scalp to the normal healthy condition.



Learn How to Have Thick, Lustrous, Beautiful Hair

The honor guests were the Past Matrons all of whom were present with the exception of Mrs. George Lawhead and Mrs. Robert Way, who were detained on account of illness. The District Deputy Grand Matron and her husband were also present and counted among the distinguished guests.

Mrs. J. E. Little entertained at her home on North Greenleaf avenue Tuesday afternoon at bridge, and following the card games an attractive collation was served. The guest-list included Mmes. Myron J. Haig, Frank G. Swain, A. T. Charlton, W. F. Blaich, John D. Gregg, Merle Allen, J. M. Kemmerer, Edward Keasby, J. A. Gurley, Leon Abbott, Gorden McLeish and Miss Lillian Dunlap.

EAGLE ROCK CITY.

An event long anticipated by the younger music lovers of Eagle Rock occurred last Saturday when the annual juvenile piano and violin contest was held at the Woman's Twentieth Century clubhouse. Gold pins as prizes were awarded to Ruth Newhouse, violinist, and to May Caldwell and Havwin Man, pianists. Judges for the contest were: Miss Adelaide Trowbridge, head of the music department of the University of Southern California, and composer of one of the contest selections; Miss Eva Francis Tike, president of the Los Angeles Teachers' Association, and Mrs. Bertha Wilbur, pupil of Godowsky.

Mrs. Claude I. Williams was the charming hostess Friday at an artistically arranged luncheon at her home in North Kenilworth Drive. Out-of-town guests included Mrs. W. Rucker Edwards and Mrs. Eva Ellison of Los Angeles and Mrs. Arthur Stone from South Pasadena.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin C. Hamer are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a son, born Tuesday at the Angelus Hospital.

The Community Players of Eagle Rock presented three one-act plays last Tuesday evening in the Central School auditorium. Each selection was enthusiastically received and the individual players received high praise for their efforts.

Miss Marie C. Brehm of Long Beach, nominated at the last general election as the Prohibition party's candidate for vice-president, was the principal speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association. Her topic was, "Brains vs. Money."

FULLERTON.

Beneath an arch of palm leaves, ferns and peach blossoms, Miss Mildred Fordham of Fullerton and Arthur Weaver of Anaheim were wedded last Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Fordham, 820 West Commonwealth avenue, Rev. W. M. Perry of the First Baptist Church performing the ceremony.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white beaded satin and wore a flowing veil, caught in her dark hair with a wreath of orange blossoms, which had been worn by her mother on her wedding day, thirty-six years ago. She was ushered to the bridal bower to the strains of Medelssohn's Wedding March, played by Miss Edna Welton. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and maidenhair fern and was attended by her matron of honor, Mrs. E. Chambers, who wore her wedding gown of ruffled georgette draped over white satin and carried pink carnations and fern. Foster E. Chambers acted as best man.

The single-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Perry, and Roy Fordham, the bride's brother, sang "Oh, Promise Me," accompanied by Miss Edna Welton. Little Majorie Fordham, the bride's 5-year-old niece, who was to have been ring bearer, was unable to participate in the pretty ceremony, due to illness.

A bridal supper was served to the twenty-five guests, after which the bride and groom departed for unknown lands. They will be at home to their friends after March 6, at 433 South Hope street, Los Angeles.

One of the prettiest weddings of the year was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Porter of Orangethorpe at 7:30 o'clock last Wednesday evening, when their grand-daughter, Miss Blanche Porter, and William E. A. Patterson of Westminster were united by Rev. F. R. Holcomb.

The Porter family are among the oldest settlers in the community, having come here over fifty years ago. This is the third wedding in the family of forty-five members at which Rev. Holcomb has officiated, and he has the record of having performed the first wedding ceremony to occur in the city of Fullerton, thirty-one years ago.

BREA.

Problems of the school and the child are being discussed by interesting speakers at the meetings of the Brea Parent-Teachers' Association. Rev. G. R. Messias, rector of St. Michael's Church, Anaheim, was honor guest and speaker at the last meeting held Tuesday at the school-house. His topic was "The Influence of the Home on the School." At the next meeting, to be held on March 7, J. A. Cranston, superintendent of city schools in Santa Ana, will give an address of "The Old and the New in Child Training." At Tuesday's meeting Mrs. J. F. Schweitzer and Mrs. George Hennigan gave a musical program. A campaign for funds to equip the school cafeteria is one cause to which the association is lending its efforts at present.

Guests were entertained over Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Sexton, including his mother, Mrs. W. Sexton and sister, Mrs. Campbell, Wichita, Kan., who have been wintering at Long Beach.

Members of the Fullerton Ebell Club who reside in Brea assisted in the serving of refreshments and supplied program numbers Friday afternoon when the out-of-town members entertained the club. Mrs. G. E. Hennigan, pianist and chairman of the music department in the Orange county federation, was one of the artists to appear. The Brea members include Mmes. Ellwood J. Munger, T. B. Watson, Anderson, J. Burquist, E. A. Gurley, Theodore Salveson and Mrs. W. W. Jarvis.

Among those who enjoyed the pretty affair given the first of the week by Mrs. H. R. Williams of Anaheim were several Brea women, including Mrs. J. Burquist, Mrs. E. A. Gurley, Mrs. L. M. McIntyre and Miss Ray Dwyer.

PLACENTIA.

With its slogan "a stranger but once" being successfully used, the Placentia volunteer Bible class which meets in the Round Table club is concluding an interesting series of lessons. The book of "Ruth" has been studied under the leadership of Charles E. Fuller, the teacher. One unusual feature of this organization is the weekly bulletin which it issues. Seventy members is the total of enrollment for the association. The officers are: Mrs. C. L. Green, president; Mrs. O. W. Lillie, vice-president; Miss Enid Cohoe, secretary; C. L. Green, treasurer. Social meetings are being featured, the next one to be given on next Monday evening.

Spring was reflected in the decorations and appointments Thursday afternoon when Mrs. John Lempke entertained the members of her 500 club at her home on Placentia avenue. Masses of acacia bloom were used through the rooms. Awards were given Mrs. Hansen first and Mrs. Lempke second for the two highest scores. A delicious luncheon was served after the game. Those present were Mrs. C. Hansen, Mrs. George Wagner, Mrs. C. McFarland, Mrs. George Annin, Mrs. O. Schumacher, Mrs. L. Lempke, Mrs. McCabe, Mrs. A. Edwards, Mrs. George Clark, Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. C. Stone and Miss Lucy Ammes.

To commemorate the birthday of Washington a patriotic program was given Wednesday afternoon by the Placentia Round Table at its club home. Mrs. C. A. Cuff was in charge. She was assisted by Mrs. William Berkenstock, Mrs. Sidman and Mrs. Bowen. Community singing under the leadership of Miss Howarton opened the program. Mrs. Connelly gave two readings. Clever games following the idea of the day were enjoyed. Refreshments were served by a hospitality committee, Mrs. C. McFarland chairman.

YORBA LINDA.

Refreshments served by the ladies during the informal reception which followed the meeting of the Yorba Linda Farm Bureau Tuesday evening, added a pleasantly social phase to the event. The session was held at the home of Dr. Lester Keller on the Richfield Road. About fifty members and guests were present. A talk on gophers was given by M. Jackson with Mr. Wahlberg, Orange county Farm Adviser, taking up proper methods of caring for "gophered trees." John Hale told of a co-operative telegraph system and a committee composed of Arthur Morris, M. Remacker and Mr. Florey was appointed to investigate the idea. The hostesses were Mrs. Christofferson and Mrs. E. P. Yerrington.

Officers for the coming year were chosen by the members of the Yorba Linda Woman's Club Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. E. E. Knight was retained as president. Others to serve will be Mrs. Aiker, vice-president; Mrs. Gertrude Selover, recording secretary; Mrs. Clara Shook, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lillian Quigley, treasurer. The trustees and their terms are Miss Marcia Vernon, three years; Mrs. W. J. Hargrave, two years, and Mrs. Gertrude Selover, one year. Amending of the by-laws was another important feature of the meeting. Tea was served toward the close of the afternoon. Mrs. M. Yerrington and Mrs. Aiker were hostesses.

Sunday was visiting day for many Yorba Lindans. Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Knight and children, and Miss Loretta Cram were visitors at the San Bernardino Orange Show. The B. S. Bemis family were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Bemis of Chino. Mrs. J. F. Connelly visited relatives at Harbor City and Long Beach. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Walker spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Walker, Sr., in Pasadena. Mr. and Mrs. Rawl Madsen, with the Misses Eva Madsen and Julia Buckmaster, were Los Angeles visitors.

GARDEN GROVE.

Ninety-eight guests enjoyed the well-arranged banquet given Friday evening by the Woman's Civic Club of Garden Grove. The dinner was given in the Y.M.C.A. hall and was in compliment to the husbands of the members. "Community Spirit" was the topic of an address given by the Rev. J. A. Stevenson of Santa Ana.

In honor of their daughter Dorothy, aged 7, and the hostess's brother, George Richardson, both of whom celebrated their birthdays on the same date, a dinner party was given Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Knapp. Those who enjoyed the pleasant family occasion were Mr. and Mrs. George Richardson and Miss Ella Horstman of Santa Ana, Mr. and Mrs. P. M. German, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Pollins, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Christensen, Miss Dorothy Joy, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Knapp and sons, Robert and Elmer, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Knapp and daughter.

Decorations in memory of George Washington and a chicken dinner vied for first place of attraction Thursday evening when Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Stillens entertained members of the Santa Ana High School football squad with a dinner at their home here. After dinner games and music were enjoyed. Mrs. Stillens had her daughter, Miss Dorothy, and Miss Helen Mateer of Santa Ana as assistants in serving the warriors of the gridiron. The boys for whom covers were laid were Howard McDonald, Sam Millens, Walton Finn, Buck Armstrong, Earl Jabs, H. Sheets, Roy Lebard, Jeff Cravath, David Metz, Tommy Watts, Elliott Best, Newton Stark, Buck Fipps, Calvin Bell, Carl Black, Donald Wasser, Francis Selway, Joe Smith, Tel Cliffman,

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Stucky and children, who have been guests for the past three months in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Searcy and Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Searcy, left Sunday for their home in Platt City, Mo.

The marriage of Miss Jeanne Trapnell and Mr. Charles Simmons was solemnized Friday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Trapnell, of Badillo and Grand avenue. As bride-elect, Miss Trapnell was the recipient of several dainty miscellaneous showers, given by Miss Lilian Douglas, and a handkerchief shower by Miss Winifred Bowring.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Matthews of Covina were treated to a complete surprise Wednesday morning by their daughter, Genevieve, who has been a student at the University of California. The young lady reappeared at home, in company with Mr. Byron Letchworth, a fellow-student, whom she duly introduced as her husband. They had been married at Berkeley Tuesday, and came down home to make the announcement. The bride is the only daughter, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Letchworth of Covina, with important connections in Boston. The young people will spend a honeymoon at the Arlington, at Santa Barbara, after which the groom will probably resume his studies at the University of California.

RIVERSIDE.

A dinner of unique appointments was that planned by Supt. F. M. Conser and Mrs. Conser of Sherman Institute, Tuesday afternoon, in honor of Dr. Eliot and Daniel Smiley, members of the Board of Indian Commissioners, who were here in an official capacity. The dinner was served in the domestic science building by Indian girls. During the repast music was furnished by Indian students who compose the school orchestra. Mayor Evans acted as toastmaster for the occasion. Both honor guests spoke in complimentary terms of the institution, which Dr. Eliot characterized as a crowning achievement in Indian education. Among the other speakers was Mrs. H. A. Atwood of this city, who told of her work as chairman of the department of Indian welfare of the National Federation of Women's Clubs.

The formal dancing party given at the Woman's clubhouse Friday evening under the auspices of the music committee, proved a smart affair. Bridge tables were arranged in the dining-room of the spacious new clubhouse for those who did not care for dancing. Nonclub members were admitted on invitation, and the number who availed themselves of the opportunity to enjoy the evening's festivities, which included a buffet supper, proved the general interest taken in the event.

The costume ball at the Mission Inn Saturday evening was a brilliant affair. Among the special dances the most notable, perhaps, was an Egyptian dance by Miss Dorothy Dunbar and Burt Harger. A Zulu dance was the contribution of DeWitt Hutchings who, in black paint and grass skirt, was in truly ferocious form. Lieut. Labourchere of Holland appeared in his uniform as an officer of the Dutch Hussars. Among the ladies who wore striking costumes were Miss Anna Burghard, who impersonated a flaxen-haired Dutch girl; Miss Katherine Davis, in the garb of a coy Chinese maiden, and Miss Dorothy Ambs, costumed as a senorita from Spain.

Members of the faculties of the Junior College and the Boys' and the Board of Education and those Girls' High Schools were hosts to connected with the office of the county superintendent of schools, Saturday evening. The program was of a highly diverting nature, a colonial pantomime being especially mirth-provoking. Those composing the dramatis personae were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bull, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. O'Brien, and Messrs. W. C. Wigley, J. Douglas Wilson and A. M. North. Refreshments of brick ice cream, coffee and home-made cakes were served at the conclusion of the fun.

After a three days' stay at the Mission Inn, Ensign C. J. Strang of New York and Miss Irene B. Fleming of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., who were wedded in the music-room of the Mission Inn Saturday evening, left this week for their honeymoon trip. They will make their home at Long Beach. The groom is an officer on the battleship Arizona.

Seventy-five members of the Musicians' Association enjoyed a social gathering Monday evening in Woodman Hall. A feature of the musical program were the pianologues of Miss Adelaide Clark. The numbers were interspersed with dancing, and refreshments were served at the conclusion of the program. The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Mrs. Ray Alcorn, Mrs. R. R. Fry, Miss Gertrude Ridgeway, Mrs. Gustav Hilverkus, Alfred Sofield and Ray Alcorn.

Take It In Time!

Do you know that by far the larger number of the common ailments of women are not surgical ones; that is they are not caused by any serious displacement, tumor, growth, or other marked change?

Do you know that these common ailments produce symptoms that are very much like those caused by the more serious surgical conditions?

Do you know that many women and young girls suffer needlessly from such ailments? More than that, they endanger their health by allowing their ailments to continue and develop into something serious.

If treated early, that is, within a reasonable time after the first warning symptoms appear, serious conditions may often be averted. Therefore, at the first appearance of such symptoms as periodic pains, irregularities, irritability and nervousness, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken. It is prepared with accuracy and cleanliness from medicinal plants. It contains no narcotics nor poisonous drugs, and can be taken with perfect safety.

The Vegetable Compound acts on the conditions which bring about these symptoms in a gentle and efficient manner. The persistent use of it shows itself in the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms. In a word, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts as a natural restorative, relieving the present distress and preventing more serious trouble.

Why not give a fair trial to this medicine

HERE'S A PAGE OF MIGHTY GOOD MERCHANDISE ALL OF WHICH WAS "MADE IN LOS ANGELES"

—During all the twelve months of the year Jacoby's is a veritable exposition of Los Angeles Made merchandise.
—We stock it—and display it—and advertise it because we believe it to be made better, and priced fairer—and year after year our faith in it grows stronger and stronger.
—Jacoby's extends a special invitation to the thousands of buyers who are here to attend Los Angeles' Semi-Annual Market Week to visit our store and see Los Angeles merchandise as it is sold.
—Everyone at Jacoby's will be glad to tell you about Los Angeles Made merchandise and by whom it is made.

We're just as proud of these

Charming Frocks

as is M. Hirshfeld himself

—The smartest materials in the colors most used this Spring and there's a complete range of sizes.
—This firm is noted for the originality and distinction of its styles and also for exceptionally high-grade workmanship.

$29.48, a chic slipover model that is just the sports wear. It is made of Crepeknit and in a contrasting color.

$44.98, a dress of peblette having collar and contrasting color which are edged with ac- pleating. The hem is finished with knife and a jet girdle adds a pleasing finish.

$38.48, a clever model of peblette effectively in gold thread and piped with contrast- The broad belt with fringed sash, also em- in gold, gives a final touch of distinction.

charming model at $39.48 is of Canton basque effect with vestee of filet lace. The sleeves are scalloped and caught up with bows velvet ribbon. The skirt is generously wide a scalloped hem.

another $39.48 frock is of Canton crepe em- with gold thread and set off with a rosette braid.

$35.00, a party frock of taffeta, that darling of debutante's heart, combined with tulle. The waist shows a touch of tinsel and the bouffant overdraped with ruffled tulle with a flower coyly here or there.

From Los Angeles Manufacturers

Breezy Organdy Frocks

A really wonder group of dainty

Organdy Frocks

for this sale at

$5.00

—One of Los Angeles' best known makers sent them to us at a big concession but with the understanding that we were not to mention his name as he would not be able to offer other values that would in any way compare with them.
—There are models of both plain and figured organdy—Note the two pictured above.

—We have been asked time and time again why we feature "Los Angeles Made" merchandise so extensively—and in every case we have let the merchandise in our stocks answer that question.

—And now during LOS ANGELES MARKET WEEK, we take special pride and pleasure in presenting these delightfully sophisticated organdy frocks which were designed and wrought in the studios and shops of Hirsch & Stein, 129 W. Third St.

—Four of the above illustrations are Hirsch & Stein dresses and if we had been fair to them, we would have pictured four times four—for there is no end of pretty styles and each one has a charm that will win "Oh's!" and "Ah's" from feminine lips—and other exclamations not a whit less enthusiastic from the men!
—The prices begin at $9.98—and don't allow yourself to judge these dresses by their price—for it's been a long, long while since such dresses have been within speaking distance of $9.98.
—These Nine Ninety Eights are in delicately blended blues and orchids and are as altogether lovely as the morning itself.
—The next price is $14.98 and what a surprise is in store for you! Demure little Niles, orchids and irises are in striking contrast to the dazzling beauties in tangerine, aurora and flame.
—When we come to the $18.48 frocks, we find the organdies in many cases have called on the taffetas to emphasize their crispness and beauty and the combination is so bewitching that we should like to be able to send them to you along with this word.
—Our windows hold many of these dresses today—come see them and revel in their beauty—then you'll know why we are so partial to Los Angeles Made Merchandise.

We're wonderfully proud of the

which the Myers Mfg. Co., 228 So. Los Angeles St., made especially for us.

—Some are of smart tweeds, others of the old, yet new, flannels which every woman loves so well.
—You'll be delighted with the models we are displaying in our windows today.

Many of Our Prettiest

New Silk Frocks

Are from the Rite Maid Mfg. Co.

—These very chic models will call forth many a thrill of pride not only because they are made in Los Angeles, at 224 South Spring Street—but because they are dresses you'd call "smart" in any company.
—At $25.00 there are three styles in frocks of Krepeknit with touches of contrasting color. A quaint basque effect, a scalloped skirt and clever bloused lines are their leading features.
—At $29.48 there are charming Canton crepes with accordion pleating of contrasting color.

Third Floor, South—Jacoby's

Splendidly Tailored

Polo Coats at $34.98

—They are made by the American Dress and Suit Company at 122 West Third Street, and your approval of their smart lines and wonderful material and tailoring is as certain as can be if you but see them!
—Have the raglan sleeves, leather buttons and other "earmarks" of up-to-date designing.

Tweed and Tricotine Suits $25.00

Also from the American Company

—The tricotines are in the popular navy, exceptionally well tailored and lined with radium.
—The tweeds are distinctly mannish in cut and material and every detail shows the hand of an expert.

HOME SEWING WEEK

We set out to see just how much we could help you with your Spring Sewing—and we've done far more than we ever dreamed we could! You're going to be mightily pleased with the miles and miles of new fabrics and with the really astonishingly low prices we've been able to name. And to help still more we've arranged so that—

Mrs. Latham of The Ladies' Home Journal Studios will be here all this week to help with your sewing problems

—Whether or not you have any purchases to make during this event, we want you to feel free to come and talk with Mrs. Latham—she has a world of ideas about sewing in general and about the new Spring Styles in particular!

Silks of a dozen different sorts have been grouped and reduced to $1.29

—The Silk Buyer and the Adman argued it out and the Adman won a "carte blanche" to make a silk special of his very own for Home Sewing Week!

—So he took Georgettes, fancy dropstitch tricolettes, Cheney's printed Florentines, printed radiums, printed satin de chines, checked taffetas and plain satins—yards and YARDS!

—"Some were $. . . and some were $. . . and some were $. . .," he said.

—And how your eyes would glow with surprise and interest if we might only whisper the actual figures!

UPLAND.

The home of Mayor and Mrs. A. H. Johnson, 448 Third avenue, was the scene of a beautiful wedding Wednesday evening when their daughter, Miss Frances Johnson, became the bride of Arlon Springer. The Rev. Charles A. Kent, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, was the officiant. The bride was attired in a gown of white Canton crepe draped in Spanish lace and carried a shower of sweet peas and maidenhair fern. Miss Harriet Johnson, sister of the bride, was gowned in pale green georgette crepe and acted as bridesmaid. Darrel Springer, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Just before the ceremony Miss Harriet Johnson and Edward Middough sang "O Promise Me," accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Bert Schilling, who played the wedding march from Lohengrin to herald the approach of the bridal party, which took its place beneath a bower of blossoms and fernery for the ceremony. Just at the close of the ceremony, Mr. Middough sang "All for You." A reception and wedding supper followed, after which Mr. and Mrs. Springer left on a motor honeymoon. They are to make their home later on a ranch in Southern Wyoming.

A pretty wedding was solemnized Wednesdlay afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Duncan, 393 First avenue, when their daughter, Miss Ruth Duncan, became the bride of Frank Kenneth Nichols. The Rev. Charles A. Kent, pastor of the First Methodist Church, read the marriage service. The ceremony was witnessed by members of the two families only. The rooms were decorated in pink roses and fragrant sweet peas. The bride wore a smart frock of white Canton crepe and carried brides' roses, lilies-of-the-valley and maidenhair fern. Little Miss Margaret Brest, niece of the bride, as flower girl, was the only attendant. A collation followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Nichols left for Catalina on their honeymoon. They expect to reside later in North Laurel avenue, Ontario, where Mr. Nichols is building a new home.

Mrs. Harold Clark Moore was hostess Tuesday afternoon at a bridge tea of charming appointments at her home, 755 Euclid avenue. Fragrant sweet peas were used in decoration. Mrs. Jedd F. Mehl, Mrs. Samuel B. Rowe, Mrs. Robert Bruce Wallace, Mrs. M. Donald Shannon Mrs. H. R. Henderson, Mrs. William Howard Craig, Jr., Mrs. James Lynnward Grahame, Mrs. John B. Craig and Mrs. Moore.

In compliment to her cousin, Miss Ruth Janice Gerry of Pasadena, Miss Judith Bordwell entertained a merry party of young friends Saturday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reid B. Bordwell, 458 First avenue. Prizes in a guessing contest were awarded Miss Mary Marshall, Edwin Elliott and John Mehl. Fifteen young people enjoyed the affair.

BAKERSFIELD.

About 200 residents of Oildale and the immediate vicinity gathered at the Standard school to enjoy cards and dancing. The hostesses for the occasion were the members of the Parent-Teacher Association of the district. Progressive whist was the game played, at which Mrs. E. L. Willow and F. A. Walters won first prizes and second prizes were awarded Mrs. F. A. Walters and C. B. Bradford. Dance music was provided for those who did not care to play. At 11 o'clock, delicious refreshments were served, which concluded the evening.

In honor of Mrs. Myrtle Acree of Los Angeles, Mrs. D. S. Gulley entertained at luncheon recently at her home in Kern River oil fields. A social afternoon followed the pleasant affair. Present in addition to the guest of honor were Mmes. Guy Henry, Ervin Curry and Ida Salalhe.

A charming four-course luncheon was given by Mrs. L. G. Hass at her home on H street, in honor of Mrs. Anna Roller of Topeka, Kan., who is the house guest of her daughter, Mrs. G. L. Hottle. Roses and violets were attractively arranged upon the table. The afternoon hours were spent informally. Guests in addition to the honoree were: Mmes. P. A. Matlack, G. L. Hottle, Kenneth McDonald and C. Foley.

Miss Lovie Sornberger, whose engagement to Gerald Stotts of Taft was announced recently, was complimented at a china shower given at the home of Miss Irene Epperson. The early part of the evening was spent in writing notes of advice to the bride-to-be, each of the guests having something humorous or serious to contribute. The reading of the missives occasioned much amusement. The honoree was then given the end of a string and told to follow its windings. On doing so, she found the other end attached to a basket of beautiful miscellaneous pieces of chinaware. Gam s followed, and at the close of the evening dainty refreshments were served. Pink hearts and kewpies in festoons throughout the rooms supplied the proper atmosphere.

Mrs. Frank Hagen entertained for Mrs. George Milberger of Peoria, Ill., who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Paul Fechtner and Mrs. Jay Mahler, and has been the inspiration for many pleasant affairs this winter. Sweet peas and heather were used in decoration and numerous games helped the afternoon to pass swiftly. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. Those who enjoyed the affair with Mrs. Milberger were: Mmes. Paul Fechtner, O. R. Kamprath, Marie Heinleke, C. E. Real, Chris Mattley, Fred Kamline, H. G. Muller, E. H. Limity and Jay Mahler.

ONTARIO.

Miss Clara Benson, whose marriage to Edward Scholin of Juneau, Alaska, is to be an event of the near future, furnished the inspiration for a tea of charming appointments with which Mrs. Harry Allen and Miss Zephyr Allen entertained Friday afternoon at their home, 547 East D street, a linen shower featuring the affair. A pink color note was used effectively in decorations and appointments. Cecile Brunner rosebuds were the predominating blossoms. Dainty baskets in a delicate shade of pink containing confections were favors. The bride-elect received many beautiful pieces of linen. The afternoon was spent informally at music and chat and toward its close a delicious collation was partaken of. Assembled to honor Miss Benson on this occasion were: Mrs. Frederick R. Rummell, Mrs. Mark C. Allen, Miss Ruth Schaefer, Miss Celia O'Neill, Miss Mildred Benson, Miss Hilda Minter, Miss Ethelwyn Minter, Miss Bessie McCann, Miss Jennie Currie, Miss Zephyr Allen and Mrs. Harry Allen.

In compliment to Miss Blanche Murphy on the occasion of her birthday anniversary, Mrs. Katherine Sapp entertained with a dinner of charming appointments Friday evening at her home, 212 East F street. Pink-shaded candles lighted the table and the place cards were in the same tint. Dinner was announced at 7 o'clock and was served in six courses. Covers were indicated for Miss Murphy, Miss Dorothy Doolittle, Miss Jane Currie, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McNulty, Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Foster, J. A. Gibbs, A. E. Petremont, William Rahrig, Harwell Harris, Marshall Strong and Mrs. Sapp.

Of more than passing interest in Ontario was the marriage Wednesday in Pomona of Miss Clara L. Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Williams, 143 Miramonte avenue, this city, and Alphonse J. Germain of Pomona. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Shehe of St. Joseph's Catholic Church and Mr. and Mrs. Germain left immediately for San Diego on their honeymoon. The bride is one of Ontario's fairest daughters and is vastly popular here. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Germain are to reside in Pomona.

Members of the board of governors of the Community Players were hosts Tuesday evening at the Hotpoint Club with a reception to the members of the organization. Mrs. Charles Eugene Grier was chairman of the reception committee and was assisted by Mrs. Robert Gray, Mrs. Harry Reese, Mrs. John Dawson Howe, Miss Ardis Richardson, Miss Jessie Fallis, Miss Ophelia Toomey, Miss Jean Schnitker and others. The presentation of "Sham," a clever one-act satire, with Eugene Nisbet in the lead and under the direction of Miss Bess K. Fredendall, featured the delightful program, which was enjoyed by 200 members. Vocal solos by Miss Verna Jacques, soprano, and numbers by Miss Mamie Pollock, whistling soloist, added to the pleasure of the evening.

In compliment to Miss Irene Perkins, who is shortly to remove to Los Angeles to reside, the Misses Lucie and Marie Millard entertained a merry company of friends Friday evening at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Millard, 226 East G street.

TAFT.

W. J. Wilson of Taft, and Miss Madeline Seisinger, recently arrived from Indiana, were married in Los Angeles a few days ago, according to announcements received by friends of Mr. Wilson. The wedding is the result of a war-time romance, the two having become acquainted when Mr. Wilson was stationed at one of the naval stations near Chicago. After a few days spent in the south on their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will return to Taft to make their home.

Word has been received from the south to the effect that Herbert L. Bender, formerly of Taft, and Miss Peggie Ortman of Los Angeles were married at the First Presbyterian Church in Los Angeles. Bender, who left the fields a few months ago for a better position in the south, was at one time connected with the Citizens' Laundry here. The young couple will reside in a pretty new bungalow in Los Angeles after the conclusion of their motor honeymoon trip.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Teaderman entertained the members of the Neighbors of Woodcraft and a few other friends at their home on the Mrs. William G. Ferguson and little daugheer Mary Jane of Visalia are spending a few days on the West Side, the guests of Mrs. J. B. Newton.

Ira Miller, pioneer of the West Side fields, who left here to engage in business in Los Angeles five years ago, spent Friday in the Midway fields calling on old-time friends. He was formerly secretary of the West Side Gas Company. Miller may locate in Taft again.

Mrs. Percy Williams and sister, Miss Fraser, have returned to their home in Los Angeles, after visiting at the home of Mrs. Mays on Center street. Mr. Williams, formerly superintendent of the G. P. lease, is in South Africa, where he is managing a large oil company.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Shaler have returned from a three weeks' visit with relatives and friends at Denver and Kansas City. They were pleased to get back to California. They expect to remain here and again enter business.

MONROVIA.

Mrs. F. Terner of South Canyon Drive was hostess at a daintily-appointed dinner, complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Haid and daughter, Miss Lottie Haid of Winnipeg, Can. Places were marked for Mr. and Mrs. Haid and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Schachter of Pasadena, James and Melville Terner.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Love sent out a number of invitations last week to old friends who live in Southern California to meet on Sunday in Monrovia Canyon Park for a picnic dinner in honor of Mr. Love's brother, E. H. Love, and his wife of Worthington, Ind., who are visiting California for the first time. After dinner short talks were given by several members of the party. Seventy-two people responded to the invitations and were present with well-filled baskets and a most enjoyable day was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Yanke of New York City, Mrs. E. A. Wayne, Mrs. Mae Parker and Miss Margaret McGee and Mrs. Jessie Crawford of Los Angeles were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bynum of North Myrtle avenue on Sunday.

The Daughters of the Revolution were charmingly entertained at an exquisitely appointed luncheon at the home of Mrs. George B. Kalb of Prospect avenue on Monday afternoon. Mrs. Louise P. Merritt of Pasadena gave an interesting talk on the "Tercentenary Celebration of the Landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock." Mrs. Merritt is especially interested in the subject, as she had seven ancestors on the Mayflower. She took part in the pageant given at Plymouth and showed her own paintings of scenes in Plymouth, scenes from nature including Plymouth Rock itself. The Kalb home was attractively decorated with baskets of roses and smilax, and red hatchets marked the places for twenty-eight guests at one large table and two small tables. Favors of George Washington hatchets were given the guests. Mrs. Powell of Berkeley, Mrs. Merriam of Ohio and Mrs. Whitehill of Pennsylvania were the out-of-town guests. Mrs. Kalb was assisted by Mrs. Reed, Mrs. J. P. Seymour, Mrs. F. A. Dupar, Mrs. Castillo and Mrs. Dolde.

The members of the Shamrock Club were royally entertained on Wednesday evening by the Misses Mildred and Irma Brown of South Mayflower avenue.

Miss Margaret McGee of Los Angeles, who has been the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bynum of East Hillcrest avenue for the past week, returned to her home on Thursday, accompanied by Mrs. Bynum, who will be her guest over the week-end. Mrs. Bynum and Miss McGee are sisters.

R. J. Dreweon entertained a party of young friends from this city at dinner in Los Angeles on Tuesday evening. A most delightful time was-enjoyed.

Mrs. J. P. White was hostess at a delightful Washington party on Wednesday afternoon at her home on North Encinitas avenue. Her guests were the ladies of her social group of the Presbyterian Church, one of about thirty-five groups organized to promote friendship among the members of the church and to aid the strangers in making acquaintances. Fragrant spring flowers and old-fashioned blossoms decorated the rooms. All enjoyed the Washington games. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Mrs. George Kalb, Mrs. S. O. Beckman, Mrs. Scott Gleeten and Mrs. Park Densmore were the invited luncheon guests of Mrs. John W. Walker at the Gates Hotel in Los Angeles on Saturday.

One of the smart parties of the week was that of Miss Eva Harvey and Miss Opal Rives, who assembled a number of friends at the home of Miss Harvey on Wednesday evening for a very delightful bridge party. The George Washington motif was used in the tally cards and also in the dainty little in dividual ice cream cakes that were a part of the delicious supper served late in the evening. Mrs. Hart Bellinger won the prize at bridge for high score. Invited for the charming affair were Mrs. LaVerne Watt, Mrs. Bartle Harvey, Mrs. W. G. Coming as a surprise to his many Arcadia friends was the announcement of the marriage of Charles H. Maple and Miss Minnie Shiffler on Saturday. The couple were married in Los Angeles, where the bride has been making her home, and spent their honeymoon at the Mission Inn at Riverside.

AZUSA.

Mrs. Dean Wadsworth of Puente entertained at her home on Saturday afternon with a miscellaneous shower in compliment to Miss Helen Raney of this city, who is soon to become the bride of Mr. Frederick Heth. The rooms were attractively decorated with daffodils and acacia. Cards were enjoyed during the afternoon. Miss Raney won first prize in bridge and Miss Lucille Close of Glendora was awarded the consolation prize. Later in the afternoon the guests were seated around the long table which was prettily decorated. From the candelabra hung streamers of yellow tulle ending in the tiny banquets of daffodils. A delicious luncheon was served. After the luncheon little Bernice Robinson came into the room dressed in yellow tulle, pulling an express wagon loaded with gifts.The invited guests numbered about thirty-five.

Miss Margaret Alexander entertained with a taffy pull at her home on Monday evening. Games, music and dancing were enjoyed tertained with a taffy-pull at her after which they pulled taffy. Each guest was given a bag of peanuts and on opening them they found their fortunes. Lemonade was served throughout the evening. The invited guests were the Misses Virginia Bonner, Clarabelle Beck, Violet Miles, Clara Kneiling, Eloise Andrews, Constance Sutton, Eleanor Barnard, Leslye La Verte, Irne and Doris Farren.

Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Powell were among the guests present at a 6 o'clock dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Chambers of Glendora on Thursday evening.

YUCAIPA.

The Colonial tea which took place at the home of Mr. G. D. Lee of Sixth avenue was a charming affair. The guests had been requested to come in costume to meet Lady Washington, bringing their "samplers" to work on. In keeping with the period to be represented, there would be a "tax on tea" of fiftene cents. Wednesday afternoon found a large group of ruffled and befrilled ladies arriving to greet Lady Washington, who proved to be Mrs. J. L. Messenger, charmingly gowned in a blue and white costume of the style of 1770. This was also a farewell for Mrs. Messenger, who is leaving for Los Angeles. Mrs. G. D. Lee, in a gown of yellow and white and Mrs. Joy Ebermayer in pink, received. The home was artistically decorated in flags and pictures of George and Martha Washington.

Week-end guests at the H. M. Seely home on Eighth avenue were Mrs. Hannah Barron of El Monte and Mrs. M. J. Shaul of La Verne.

Mr. and Mrs. James Duff charmingly entertained at dinner Sunday relatives and friends from Los Angeles. Covers were laid for Miss Verna Williamson, Miss Myrtle Duff, Messrs. Howard Edwards and Paul Bostwick, the out-of-town guests and Miss Roberta Williamson, Miss Daisy Duff and Donald Duff and Mr. and Mrs. James Duff.

On Friday evening a splendid banquet was enjoyed in the social hall of the Methodist Church. The hall was decorated in flags befitting the occasion. The tables were artistically decorated with red white and blue. Ladies were in the quaint and befrilled costume of Lady Washington, while the men wore red, white and blue neckties. Following the dinner the program opened with "America," followed by a play, "The Woman Who Never Knew" presented by a number of ladies. The Yucaipa orchestra, led by Prof. Strang of Redlands, rendered several pleasing selections and Rev. Nelson Hoffpauir gave a short address on "Washington."

A most charming dinner was recently presided over by Mrs. W. F. Cruickshank at their home. The color scheme was red, table decorations, place cards and chandeliers, and a five-course dinner was served by the charming hostess. Places were laid for Miss Margaret Arnett, Mrs. R. H. Arnett, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Cruickshank.

FRESNO.

Mrs. M. K. Harris and her niece, Mrs. Arch Jack, received sixty guests Tuesday afternoon at the home of the former on O street, when they entertained with a buffet luncheon. The after-luncheon hours were enjoyed informally and the guests had the pleasure of hearing Mrs. Francisco and Mrs. J. Rollin Fitch give some delightful duets and later Mrs. Tibbett gave a reading. Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Jack were assisted in receiving their guests by Miss Myrtle Harrel, Miss Anne Meux, Miss Anne Tupper, Mrs. A. O. Warner, Mrs. J. J. Ambrose, Mrs. J. J. Alexander, Mrs. W. H. Martin, Mrs. Norman Ginn and Mrs. Edwin Einstein.

Mrs. Herman Kersken of San Jose is visiting relatives and friends in this city, her home for several years, while her husband was engaged in the motion-picture theater business. Mr. Kersken is director of advertising for the largest movie theater in San Jose.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Riege left Friday for San Francisco, where they will visit their daughter, Miss Frances Riege, who is a student at Mills College. On Wednesday they will sail with a number of other people from Fresno for a trip to the Hawaiian Islands. Included in the party will be Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Maupin, Dr. and Mrs. Montgomery Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Holland and daughters, Miss Virgie Lee Holland and Ernestine Holland; Frances Hipert, Rose Harp and Mr. and Mrs. H. U. Maxfield of Piedmont.

Mrs. Chase S. Osborn, Sr., of Sault St. Marie was the guest at a luncheon which Mrs. George A. Osborne gave last Thursday at her new residence on Home avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Wingate Lake had as their guests for a dinner at Hotel Fresno last Sunday night a group of congenial friends, who afterward enjoyed the performance at the White. The guests included Messrs. and Mmes. Emil Kehrlein, Jr., Ivan McIndoo, Montford Crowell, F. E. Twining, S. P. Frisselle and W. O. Blasingame.

OLINDA.

With Mrs. Garnet Barrett of Olinda as the honoree, a pretty shower was given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. H. B. Williams at her home in Anaheim. A number of Olinda women were among the guests. A shower of miscellaneous gifts was accorded the favored

The Best Recipe in the World for Wrinkles, Furrows & Crow's Feet

Old Time Recipe of Buttermilk Cream in a New Way—A Gentle Massage with Fingers Before Retiring Makes Many a Woman Look Years Younger.

The old-time application of Buttermilk and Cream to whiten and preserve the skin and remove harsh little wrinkles and ugly sallowness is grandmother's recipe and women throughout the country are again using it to ensure a beautiful complexion and snow-white hands and arms.

Buttermilk, however, is not always obtainable, but a specialist has at last perfected a method of concentrating buttermilk and combining it with a perfect cream, which you can buy in small quantities ready to use at any first-class drug store by simply asking for "Howard's" Buttermilk Cream.

No matter whether you are troubled with wrinkles, hard little lines around the mouth and eyes, coarse, sallow, faded looking skin, or simply roughness and redness caused by wind and sun, you will find that all these trials quickly disappear with the use of this old-fashioned beauty recipe brought up to date.

To prove this to your complete satisfaction get a small quantity today at any first-class drug store or toilet goods counter with the understanding that they will freely return the purchase money to any dissatisfied user. Should you have any difficulty in obtaining this wonderful Cream locally, we will send a full sized package of both Cream and Soap for $1.00. In any case don't hesitate to send 10c (silver or stamps) for generous trial package and convince yourself of their merits. Howard Bros. Company, 24 Main St., San Francisco, Cal.—

guests. Delicious refreshments were served. Mrs. Barrett's approaching marriage to J. H. Collins, a well-known Olinda resident, will be an event of interest for spring. The guests from Olinda were Mrs. Barrett, Mrs. J. Harryman, Mrs. J. Hitchcock, Mrs. A. H. Broadbent, Mrs. W. L. Burton, Mrs. G. Collins and Miss Alice Clark.

Thursday afternoon the Women's Association of Olinda met at the home of Mrs. William J. Travers on the Olinda lease. Mrs. Henrietta H. Kapp of Los Angeles addressed the members on "Home Environment for children." A musical program with Mrs. Schweitser and Mrs. Reynolds of Brea giving vocal duets and Mrs. Barman of the Santa Fe lease piano solos, was also enjoyed. A second quilt for the relief work in Southern Europe has been completed. The work of the association is conducted by committees, and the chairmen include Mrs. J. E. Welin, program; Mrs. Paul Vanatta, refreshment; Mrs. E. A. Scott, hostess, Mrs. Charles Robb, entertainment, and Mrs. R. E. Longstreet, special activities.

Olinda friends are greeting Mrs. William Abbott of San Bernardino, who is here for a time visiting her son, Earl Abbott of the Columbia lease.

HYDE PARK.

The intuition and talent of the ladies of Hyde Park are to be united with the business enterprise and judgment of the men of the Chamber of Commerce in boosting for a greater Hye Park if the ideas of the Chamber of Commerce are carried out in accordance with a resolution passed at Monday night's meeting. The resolution expressed the sentiment that cooperation is the only method by which progress can be made in a community, hence the influence of the women cannot be ignored as the best there is in community life is closely allied with the homes, the schools, art, beauty and culture which are peculiarly within the domain of the ladies.

Mrs. L. E. Carey, 2226 West Sixty-seventh street, entertained very charmingly Friday evening in celebration of the seventy-second birthday anniversary of her father, Frank J. Koehl, of Los Angeles, music, games and general jollification being enjoyed. The outstanding event of the evening was the splendid birthday dinner served by the hostess, covers being laid for Mrs. Carey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Koehl; her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gardiner; her brothers, Paul and Waldo Koehl; her sister, Miss Georgie Koehl, and cousin, Leonard Fisher.

Mrs. L. P. Gillig, 2715 West Sixty-sixth street, entertained in honor of Mr. Gillig's birthday anniversary Tuesday evening at cards and luncheon, the delightful affair being a surprise to Mr. Gillig. The party was unique in that the honoree was left to entertain the gentlemen at cards while the hostess entertained the ladies in an adjoining room. Mr. Gillig's guests included L. Decker, A. Decker, L. Traefer, F. Meyer, A. Woods, E. W. Woods, George Georgen, George Baum, George Winkler and Prof. Reichter.

VENTURA.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Everett, daughter Dorothea and son Wilhelm, and Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Gerry and the latter's aunt, Mrs. May Sheldon of Madera, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Aratus Everett at their ranch near Moor Park Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gwyn Thurmond made up a party of a dozen friends for a dinner-dance at Shepherd's Inn Tuesday evening.

The marriage of Miss Lillias Waters and Clarence Winans took place in Pasadena Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Waters, the bride's parents and her sisters, the Misses Gertrude and Irene Waters, went down from Ventura for the event. The wedding was held at the home of a sister, Mrs. Lippiatt.

Mrs. George Medley entertained the members of her card club and substitute players on Saturday afternoon.

The spring convention of the county federation of women's clubs which was to have met in Fillmore on Monday of this week, has been indefinitely postponed, owing to the widespread epidemic of influenza, now quite severe in some parts of the county.

About 300 women attended the February meeting of the Ventura Club League. This was held at the American Theater and the chief entertainment number was the presentation of Percy Mackaye's "Washington, the Man who Made Me," by Elizabeth Eaton Burton and Alice Muma.

On Monday, the board of the big Sisters' Hospital were the guests of the board of the Cottage Hospital of Santa Barbara and dinner guests of Col. Graves at the Montecito Country Club.

IMPERIAL VALLEY.

Mrs. Fred Jarboe of Holtville was hostess last Thursday at an elaborate bridge luncheon honoring Mrs. Arthur J. Schaetzel, who is leaving to make her home in El Centro. Jonquils and ferns were combined in the artistic table decorations. The prize scores were made by Mrs. J. G. Hall and Mrs. H. T. Jones. The guests included Mrs. J. W. Griffin, Miss Emma Cavarly, Mrs. H. T. Jones, Mrs. Eleanor Stevenson, Mrs. Coy Swindle, Mrs. E. E. Harden, Mrs. J. K. Fahring, Mrs. M. C. Blanchard, Mrs. J. G. Hall, Mrs. Gordon Schneider, Mrs. J. Fred Eaves, Mrs. W. F. Mosher and Mrs. Schaetzel.

Mrs. J. M. Edmunds of Calexico was hostess to the members of the twice told tales section of the Woman's Improvement Club last Wednesday afternoon. The program of the day was in charge of Mrs. E. W. Gleason, who gave a short address on James Whitcomb Riley and read a number of the favorite poems of the Hoosier poet. Following the program, a social hour was enjoyed, during which refreshments were served.

Mrs. J. D. Moughmer of Seeley entertained with a luncheon Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. William Moores, who is leaving Imperial Valley. Mrs. Moores has been the president of the West Side Country Club since its organization six years ago, and is popular socially. Other guests at the luncheon were Mrs. J. D. Vaughn, Mrs. C. W. Whitecotton, Mrs. E. A. Hull, Mrs. Williard Hayes and Mrs. Sidney Goddard.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Holt of El Centro entertained with a bridge-dinner last week at the Barbara Worth Hotel. Spring flowers and foliage adorned the table and dainty favors marked the places for Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hickcox, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Salomon, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lavayea, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Conway, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Edgar, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Kellar, Mr. and Mrs. Allen P. Nuffer, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Holt, Judge Franklin J. Cole and James Holt.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Boyce Aten Post, American Legion, entertained with a delightful party last Saturday evening at the Legion Hall in El Centro, which was brilliantly decorated for the occasion with bunting and innumerable flags. Cards and dancing were enjoyed throughout the evening. The supper table was centered with a huge ornamented cake, surrounded by garlands of spring flowers and Washington hats served as favors. The hostesses of the evening were Mrs. Norman E. Dupont, Mrs. Minor M. Sweeney, Mrs. Vaughn Thompson, Mrs. Rex Ragan, Mrs. D. Kenyon, Mrs. John Rice, Mrs. J. D. K. Perry and Miss Marjorie Brewer.

Motoring to Laguna Salada in Mexico, a group of Calexico residents formed a picnic party last Sunday. Those enjoying the outing were Mr. and Mrs. George Pulliam, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Clements, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Clancy, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Graham, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Richardson, Mrs. Harry Wright, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Atchison, Ralph Swearingen, Charles Cockley and Jack Spencer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Ritzinger entertained the members of the Present Day Club Friday evening at their pretty country home near El Centro. E. L. Garthwaite, County Farm Adviser, gave an interesting talk on the farm bloc movement in Congress, discussing its probable effect on Imperial Valley. Following the program, tables were arranged for bridge. Supper was served at midnight. Guests of the evening were Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Burritt Allen, Dr. and Mrs. L. C. House, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Garthwaite, Mrs. Hook, Dr. and Mrs. Apple and Judge Franklin J. Cole.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Lee of Brawley entertained with a delightful dinner party Wednesday evening. The table was centered with a huge basket of peach blossoms and pink candles in crystal holders emphasized the attractive color note. Cards and dancing were the diversions of the evening. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Baughman, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Hausmann, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril T. Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gates, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Willebrandt, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Divver, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Carey and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stilgenbaur.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Beal of Holtville entertained with an elaborate dinner party Wednesday evening. The rooms of the house were brilliantly decorated, the patriotic colors being employed throughout. Bridge was the diversion of the evening, the prize scores being made by Mrs. B. M. Gruell, Mrs. O. C. Harris, Mrs. H. T. Jones, D. B. Roberts, M. V. Oakley and M. C. Blanchard. Harold Burnham, Wylie Weaver, John Kepley, William Reed, Robert Bowman, John Franklin Baker and Clarence Ives.

LA HABRA.

Honoring Mrs. Joseph J. Carter, prominent community worker of Hollywood, an attractive luncheon was given Friday at the home of Mrs. W. L. Rhodes. Mrs. Carter addressed the Fullerton Ebell Club in the afternoon as a part of the program arranged by the club members from La Habra. Her topic was community work. Florence Rhodes Wilson and Mrs. Edwin R. Bishop, La Habra musicians, were also on the program. Mrs. Rhodes was assisted in entertaining by her daughter, Mrs. Leonard Hart of Los Angeles. Those enjoying this preclub event included the Ebell members of La Habra, Mrs. F. E. Proud, Mrs. D. A. Davis, Mrs. W. L. York, Mrs. Delphia Redfern, Mrs. Rhodes and their guests, Mrs. Carter, Mrs. C. E. Tower, Mrs. R. M. Phillips, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Bishop and Mrs. Hart.

Although the ceremony was a very quiet one, the wedding of Cecil Allen, son of Mrs. Delphia Redfern to Miss Willa Mae Reed which took place Monday evening holds much interest for La Habra, as the groom's family are prominent residents. The service was read by the Rev. C. A. Smith of the La Habra Methodist Episcopal Church at the home of Mrs. Redfern, with only immediate relatives present. After the wedding a delicious supper was served. Mrs. Allen is the daughter of Mrs. Ruth Reed, recently from Oklahoma. The young man went through the La Habra grammar school and Fullerton Union High School, being well known among the young people through the northern part of the county. He and his bride are to make their home in Exeter, where Mr. Allen has ranching interests.

Landmarks of Southern California was the topic of the program given Tuesday afternoon for the Woman's Improvement Club of La Habra under the direction of Mrs. Eva Akers. Mrs. C. E. Gurley and Mrs. Akers both gave interesting papers. An amusing discussion regarding personal reasons for liking or disliking Southern California followed. A business meeting preceded the program, at which a vote of thanks was given the committee in charge of the dinner when the club catered to the Associated Chambers of Commerce last week with a turkey dinner as the event was a decided success.

REDLANDS.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Barker, formerly of this city, have just received announcements from them of the marriage of their son, Charles A. Barker, Jr., to Miss Ruth Farnsworth of Salt Lake City, which occurred February 22 at Shanghai. Mr. Barker is connected with the Chinese-American Bank and met Miss Farnsworth on a trip to China last fall. She was on her way to Manila to visit a brother. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Barker plan to leave soon for Shanghai to visit their son and his bride and will then go on to Shantung to visit their daughter, Mrs. Clarence A. Gauss, whose husband is American Consul for the Shantung Peninsula.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Cherrier entertained at their cottage in Newport over the week-end for Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Yerxa, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Sewall, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman King and Mrs. G. C. Wilder.

Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Burke were guests during the week at a ball given by Mrs. Harvey Hewitt at her home, Oak Knoll, Pasadena.

Sloane, Miss Sara Sloane, Clifford, Arthur and Roscoe Crim, Raymond Gravers, Eugene Bedal, Richard Sering, Junior Shultz, George Willimason and Grant Bell.

The wedding anniversaries of Mr. and Mrs. N. Leo Lelean and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Brock were celebrated with a progressive dinner party during the week. The dinner was given at the homes of Mrs. Clinton Smith and Mrs. H. C. Emm. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCauslin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Settelle, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Van Leuven, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Rau and W. C. Warner.

Mrs. Walter Nordhoff and daughter, Miss Mary Nordhoff of Highland avenue, are planning to leave Redlands soon to spend the entire summer abroad, visiting England and the Continent.

Mrs. Silas Williams entertained at her home on San Bernardino avenue with a luncheon for several friends.

Mrs. James Buffington of Fall River, Mass., guest of Mrs. Frederick Harley, was honored by Mrs. A. G. Hubbard, who gave a luncheon with fourteen guests at her beautiful home on the Terrace.

Mrs. Frank Moore presided at the team hour of the Redlands Country Club during the week.

Miss Alice Boland, formerly of this city, and Jay Waite, son of Mrs. Katherine Waite of Center street, were married at De Kalb, Ill., during the week. They will make their home in Chicago.

Mrs. E. P. Whitey entertained with a bridge party for a number of her freinds at her home on West Lugonia avenue during the week.

A luncheon was given Tuesday for a number of the girls of the city at the Y.W.C.A. to meet Miss Ethelynn Mills of New York.

The junior league of the Contemporary Club entertained with a most delightful dance at the clubhouse on Saturday night, the patronesses being Miss Dora Kerwin, Mrs. J. A. Kimberly, Mrs. U. F. Lewis, Mrs. S. Ronzone and Mrs. P. B. Hasbrouk.

TERRA BELLA.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Randall and two sons, Leon and Lawrence, left Wednesday night for Los Angeles, en route to their home in Pennsylvania, after having been house guests at the home of A. L. Brooks of Terra Bella.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ensign of Los Angeles were week-end visitors in Terra Bella. They have business interests in this vicinity.

Simple Home Treatment That Strengthens Eyesight in a Week's Time in Many Instances.

Do you wear glasses? Do you hold your newspaper or the needle you wish to thread at arm's length? What would you give to strengthen your sight so you could do without glasses and forget your eyes? We use our eyes every waking moment, day and night, but seldom do anything for them. No wonder vision grows blurred and dim and that eyes grow bloodshot, watery and inflamed; no wonder that glasses are worn by tens of thousands yet in their teens, or that headaches and pains caused by weak, weary, work-strained eyes drive thousands to distraction and make failures of them.

How can human eyes work incessantly if nothing is done to relieve the strain and repair the waste of constant use? If you want to save your eyes before it is too late; if you would like to discard your glasses; strengthen your eyesight; ward off the dim vision of increasing have returned to their home in Roseburg, Or., after a visit in Terra Bella, where they have improved property.

Mrs. C. A. Curl left for Los Angeles on Wednesday, having been called there by the illness of her daughter, Miss Lorna De Vana, who is down with influenza.

Carl H. Gerdes, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Gerdes of the Terra Bella district, and Miss Hilda Binger, daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Binger of Bakersfield, were married Wednesday at the Lutheran church in Bakersfield, Rec. Mr. Kueftner officiating. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother. The groom is an ex-service man and is well and popularly known in this vicinity. The bride is a charming young lady and a social favorite in her home town. Following a brief honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Gerdes will be at home in a newly built residence on the W. G. Gerdes property, east of Terra Bella.

LINDSAY.

Friends of Miss Mayme Virginia Allston and Edward Nuvel Bolin will be interested in the announcement of their marriage, which occurred February 18. They will reside on North Mirage avenue in Lindsay. Both young people are well known here and are receiving congratulations from their many friends.

A happy time was spent at the Arboretum Wednesday evening when Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rhode entertained a party of young folk in honor of their son, Manly's fifteenth birthday. Dancing formed the diversion of the evening. Favors were significant of Washington's Birthday and added to the merriment of the occasion. Pleasing refreshments were served. A number of out-of-town guests were present.

The masque ball given by the Edison Club Saturday evening was one of the most enjoyable social events of the week. Over 100 members were present and four prizes were awarded for artistic and uniquie costumes.

Especially delightful was the Washington party given Tuesday evening by the Business Girls' Auxiliary of the Tuesday Club. Guests included members of the Tuesday Club and their escorts and a number of Lindsay's younger business men. The affair was in charge of the executive committee of the hostess club, with Mmes. W. S. Cairns, Ralph Wolf, W. W. Newlee of the Tuesday Club as patronesses. Decorations, favors and refreshments were in keeping with the season.

SAN LUIS OPISPO.

At a pretty wedding at the Arroyo Grande Episcopal Church Sunday afternoon, Miss Frances Ella May Cox and William Merrill Conley were married. Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Cox. Mr. Conley was a resident of this city until recently, when he went to South Pasadena, where the young couple will make their home. Mrs. Conley has been in training at a local sanatorium, and has a host of friends here.

A quiet ceremony was that which united Joseph S. Carvao and Miss Rose A. Berta Saturday evening at the Old Mission, the Rev. Father P. M. O'Flynn officiating. The bride is a sister of John A. Berta of this city, with whom she has made her home. Mr. Carvao is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Carvao of this city, and is an ex-service man, being one of the survivors of the ill-fated Tuscania.

Mrs. Luise Gray is spending the week in San Francisco, visiting her daughter.

A delightful surprise party was given Friday evening by Miss Dorothy Trueblood in honor of the birthday of Miss Violet Benadom. The evening was spent playing games and delicious refreshments were served. Those who enjoyed the affair were Misses Violet Benadom, Doris Westendorf, Dorothy Trueblood, Margaret Trueblood, Margaret Meck, Helen McIntire; Messrs. Joseph Branch, John Meeker, Roy Trueblood, Chester Davis, Lester Spillers and Herbert Trueblood.

Miss Gertrude Day of Oxnard was the week-end guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Day.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Mitchell are rejoicing in the birth of a little granddaughter, born on Tuesday to Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. Mitchell at Jamestown, N. Y. The little girl has been named Imogene.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McCabe, who have been guests at the George W. McCabe home for the past week, have left for their home in San Diego. They were accompanied by the George W. McCabes, who will spend the week in the south.

Mrs. C. H. Harmon and two sons of San Francisco are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Russell.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Awalt have returned from visiting relatives in Kansas.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Phillips, who are out here from Indiana to spend the winter in California, are guests for a few days at the W. H. Awalt home.

Mrs. May Hoyt is spending a fortnight in San Francisco, visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Austin have returned from a stay in San Francisco.

Mrs. Edward Dawson and little son have left for Kingman, Ariz., where they will meet Mr. Dawson and will make their future home.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Black of Los Angeles, who have been guests at the J. L. Anderson home, have returned south.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. King of Roseville have returned north after spending several days as guests at the W. V. Scott home. The Kings were formerly residents of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Miller are receiving congratulations on the birth of a nine-and-a-quarter-pound son.

STRATHMORE.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Flint entertained the Tri-K's at an informal card party Friday evening. At the close of the games the prize for high score went to Gilbert Watrous while Miss Nina Brock took the prize for low score. Refreshments were served.

The Strathmore branch of the Tulare County Teachers' Association was entertained by the Grammar school at the Union High School on Monday evening. Games and an interesting program formed the diversion of the evening and delightful refreshments were served. At the business session decision was made to hold no meetings during this school term and the first meeting for the fall term was set for the last Tuesday in September.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Marble, accompanied by Miss Esther Ventling, are visiting in Richmond and San Francisco.

Miss Corine Rockey who has been visiting for some time with relatives in the Strathmore district is en route to her home at Wyreka, Kan.

Mr. and Mrs. William Stites of Strathmore were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Regby of Porterville.

Bertil Lindquist of the Strathmore High School has returned from Santa Barbara where he attended the convention of the Student Body Presidents. He will make a report to the local student body in the near future.

W. Purdy of Strathmore left Saturday for a brief visit with friends in Los Angeles and other southern points.

TULARE.

Miss Alice Beck, a student of the University of California in Berkeley, spent the week-end as a guest at the home of her father, Dr. J. E. Beck of Tulare.

The High School Alumni held a business meeting and social Friday night at the H. A. Charters home in the Elba Vista tract. Cards and dancing made the evening most merry. Light refreshments were served by the hostess.

H. H. McDonough, customs inspector in charge of Port Los Angeles, who, with his family, has been visiting with C. W. Cobb and family in this city, returned by motor the first of the week to the southern city.

Mrs. G. W. Darlington, house guest for several weeks at the home of her brother, J. C. Kendricks of Tulare, returned Saturday to her home in San Pedro.

Celebrating the Fifty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the Knights of Pythias order, local Knights and Pythians enjoyed a social evening Saturday night at the Odd Fellows hall. A pleasing musical and literary program was given and luncheon served in the banquet hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Farment are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a ten-pound son, whom they have named Leonard Wesley Farment.

Mrs. J. L. Frank, who has been visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elmo R. Zumwalt of Tulare, returned Friday morning to her home in Los Angeles. Mrs. J. E. Zumwalt of Richmond, mother of Dr. Elmo R. Zumwalt, is being entertained at the home of her son.

VISALIA.

Miss Hazel Mills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Wiesner of Farmersville, whose wedding to Burch W. Hart, also a resident of Farmersville, is to be an event early in the spring, was the incentive of a delightful miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. V. A. Sims, assisted by Mrs. Charles Watson, Wednesday afternoon. Many beautiful gifts were bestowed upon the bride-to-be and needlework formed the diversion of the afternoon. Light refreshments were served.

One of the most attractive parties given in Visalia for some period was that given Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Elks' Patrol. Decorations, favors and refreshments were significant of Washington's Birthday. Dancing and music furnished entertainment.

Mrs. H. D. Conring of South Court street entertained with a delightful luncheon on Tuesday in honor of her sister, Mrs. Morris J. Scott of Pennsylvania, who is wintering in California. Covers were laid for twelve and a red, white and blue color scheme was attractively used. The afternoon was devoted to cards.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Wing of Three Rivers was the scene of a lively house party last week-end. The guests attended the old-fashioned dance at the Three Rivers hall Saturday night and enjoyed the hills the following day.

PORTERVILLE.

One of the most pleasing club events of the season was the celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the Inter Se, the oldest reading club and women's organization of the valley, Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. M. Schulz, one of the charter members. Mrs. W. W. Brown is another resident charter member. Each of the twenty members present responded to roll call with an appropriate comment on birthdays. "Our First Birthday," by Mrs. W. W. Brown; "Other Birthdays," by Mrs. M. Schulz; "History of the Club," by Mrs. M. K. Shuey, nonresident charter member; "A Thirtieth Birthday," by Mrs. C. E. Lewis, and a review of important inventions, discoveries, current events, which have transpired since organization of the club by Mrs. W. P. Bartlett added to the interest of the occasion. Popular musical favorites of thirty years ago were a part of the program. A lovely birthday cake formed the central attraction of the dainty refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Brough celebrated their twentieth wedding anniversary Thursday at their home on East Oak street with a family reunion, which took the form of a dinner party. This occasion also marked the sixty-second wedding anniversary of Mrs. Sarah MacFarland, mother of Mrs. Brough.

DELANO.

Miss Lotta Harris of Bakersfield was the principal speaker before the Parent-Teacher Association of Delano here Friday night. A delightful program was given, during which Miss Harris also sang several songs.

Miss Janet Struthers has been presented with a beautiful gold wrist watch by her Methodist friends in appreciation of her splendid services to the church. Miss Struthers has been pianist for the church for a number of years, and her work is well done and greatly enjoyed by church-going folk.

Mrs. H. M. Schalwitz entertained the drama section of Delano Woman's Club on Thursday afternoon, at her home on Tulare street.

Mrs. Ida Westrup of Clovis was in this district last week looking after her ranch property.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall and children, who have been occupying the Crow house on K street, have bought a lot on upper Tulare street, and have built a small house there, and are now living there.

Mrs. John Serano is home from Sacramento, where she passed a few days with friends.

Mrs. D. R. Cook and daughter Dorothy and father, Mr. Lusk, have returned from a motor trip to Woodland and other points north.

The Seamstress

Mrs. Rip Van Winkle as a Warning

"No'm thank you. I've had my breakfast. I was just athinking as I come along this morning, about that man they called "Rip Van-Winkle." If you've heard about him you remember how mean they said his wife was to him. And it looked like to me that after he had ben away and had'nt give her no trouble for twenty years she could a ben a little bit decent to him.

You knok it would take a mighty hard-hearted wife, I thought, to say to whoever happened to be in the kitchen at the time, "Just give him a cold potato and let him go!"

Well, I thought if it had of ben enduring the war why she would of ben even meaner at that. Why she wouldn't never have offered him a potato because they was so high couldn't nobudy afford them hardly.

But it looked like that she couldn't of thought of anything meaner to do, even if he was a drunkard and sumebudy might of lied on him a little.

Well, as I say, it wasn't enduring the war that she offered him a potato, why then a man would a fallen on the neck and wept on anybudy what had offered to give him a potato. No'm it was when potatoes was dirt cheap and that made it call the honerier of her.

That's a pretty color, that yellow. And yellow is going to be all the style this summer. Its a little hot looking, yes'm—

Ma'm? You aint going to button it, are you? Why I wouln't. You know most everything slips on over the head. And my land! Aint it a comfort to get 'em on thataway? Yes'm, its nice to see crepe de chine made thataway. You know that was a time when the placket was a plaguer sure a'nough. And now a woman don't have to bother. And things used to look just like my mother used to say, "like a sack with a string tied in the middle. But she didn't mean it for a compliment." She meant it didn't have no shape.

Well for this yellow crepe I would have it made just straight lengths of side pleating. I mean, that would make the whole dress back and front flat and pleated. Then you could cut a slit in the front in the neck two or three inches and the neck boat shape and bind it with a little narrow binding of the same and set in long, wide sleeves bound and all you would have to do would be to have a girdle of some fancy kind or mebbe a ribbon sash and your dress would be made. If you wanted that dress to be awful sweet you could make the slit at the back instead of the front and you could finish it with two narrow folds around the neck, spaced a little apart. And at the back set four little bows without ends made of the folds. Then you could put on the ribbon sash and tie it at the side with two short loops and two long ends. 'Course it takes right smart goods to have it pleated but you don't need no other trimming.

Mam? Cape? Yes, indeed, I think it would be fine to have a cape to match your dress. But that would take two more yards of goods. Some folks just have that two-yard length picot-edged all around. But I think it's nicer to have it bound or hemmed. It gives it a little weight. All you got to do is to gather it in the middle, taking it lengthways. Then you can sew it to a wide band and trim the band with flat roses made of the crepe or some ribbon rosettes like the sash. I saw a sand-colored one with brown satin ribbon.

Looks like to me that after that experience of Rip Van Winkles, that men would of ben a little more careful what they did. Law, I should hate to think that my wife was so glad to git shet of me, if I was a man. You know they ort to be a little more careful. It looks like to me that women are a talking a dangerous lot about being free. Yes'm, and of gitting tired of home and doing the washing and cooking the meals. Yes'm, it's pretty dead monotonous and that's the reason Lonny (that's my husband) says he don't mind me a going out to work a little because I might git plum tired of home or him. Ouch, these pins are sharper than common. That one nearly went through my lip.

Ma'm? Why I ain't afraid to hold 'em in my mouth. Where else would I hold 'em.

Why, no'm, I have to keep this little tomato pincushion I got pinned to my side for the needles. And I don't want a pincushion on each side.

Yes's, of course, husbands is some trouble. The trouble with most of 'em is they think too much of their stomachs. And they always like things what are the highest priced at the time. No'm, I'd think that, that man would of ben quite a lesson to men who want to drink and then wander away and ask too much of their wives. In this day and age, it looks like to me a good many men got to take what they can get—onless it's with the wives what don't do nothing, but rock and massage and run around all day. They couldn't earn their living if they had to. But you take most women. They would find out after their husbands was gone a little while (let alone twenty-years and never sent 'em nothing) that they would be glad to have 'em go for good. Yet and still, it looks like to me I couldn't be that cruel; to tell 'em to give him a cold potato and let him go. I haven't took care of Lonny altogether yet, because he works when he is well enough, what, with a troubled spine, but I reckon if he was no count I might not miss him so much after he'd ben gone twenty years. And it looks like the more prosperous people is and the less women have to do at home the more they complain about wanting to git out and be free to go to work. Them what hasn't any work and has a easy time is looking for some other kind of trouble. And them that has to work, thinks all they would need to make 'em happy is to stop work.

Well, I feel sorry for them women what is a fretting and chafeing and wanting to git out of their home sphere and have some excitement and some mixing with other people whether they are pore or rich. I can tell 'em it ain't all milk and honey to have to be on the run so much. But ruther than be set up to do nothing so's I could think of all the things I could do if I was some where's else and could git shet of my husband; I'd ruther be pore and have to dressmake.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hairs disappear, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.—[Advertisement.

NOSE WIGGLER'S SKULL FOUND.

Rhodesia Discovery is Aid to Darwinism.

Wife's Jaw Accompanied Him in Death.

Prehistoric Male Was a Regular Man.

BY EVAN GRIFFITHS.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, March 4.—The whole old controversy of man's ascent from the monkey and the problem of the missing link bid fair again to thunder on the scientific platforms and in the technical press of Britain and other countries as the result of the study of the "Rhodesian skull," brought from Africa and pronounced by English and other savants to be one of the earliest known human relics.

Modern science is getting an extraordinary group of prehistoric skulls to study and from them is learning many details but few basic facts.

NUMEROUS SKULLS.

There are, for instance, in addition to this so-called "Rhodesian skull," the "Pittdown skull" (found in England,) the "La Chapelle skull" (found in France) and the Neanderthal skull" (found in Germany.)

Each of these fascinating human relics, all so extravagantly prehistoric that no intelligent guess can be made as to their actual age in years, has had its interesting message to deliver to the scientific student.

A. Smith Woodward has just announced some of his observations—they scarcely can be called conclusions.

One point, as he states it, seems important to the lay mind and even is acknowledged to be important for the same reason by the scientific mind.

This is the fact that seen from the front the brow ridges of this skull are more like those of a gorilla than any noted in any other prehistoric human skull yet found. Is this of epoch-making importance, or is it a coincidence?

One can imagine what satisfaction Charles Darwin would have got from the discovery of this skull if it had turned up during his lifetime. It is definitely one of the things which he predicted.

HAD TOOTHACHE.

A living man, a thousand living men, undoubtedly millions of living men, if they all hear about it, will get a grim and miserable satisfaction from learning that the skull of this very ancient man shows unmistakable signs that he suffered as they are suffering today from ulcerated teeth.

They are no modern luxury. The disease "caries" has been thought to be one of the penalties of civilization, but this ancient chap, who antedated the stone age, suffered from it.

It is interesting to note that probably he was a fine singer, for that part of the skull which is technically known as the "palate" is very large. It should have given him magnificent voice tones. Prof. Woodward calls it the largest "palate" he has ever seen, in any skull, ancient or modern. Not even Caruso's "palate" approached this.

The chance which preserved this inconceivably old skull in almost a fresh state—the bone is white and firm—is that its owner died in such a place that his skull was protected from much of the decay which would have destroyed it by lead and zinc ore, luckily depositing themselves on it in microscopic crystals.

The skull bone, Prof. Smith Woodward finds, is of the thickness of today, its brain cavity indicated a brain not developed in size quite to the average of now. The higher faculties especially were imperfectly developed; the ancient man was of low grade.

COULD WIGGLE HIS NOSE.

There is, in this skull, an extraordinary detail, unknown to human beings of today.

The nose unquestionabbly is human, but very different from that of the "Neanderthal man" of Europe in the possession of a "nasal spine" never before seen in a human skull, and in the possession of a gutter, down the nose bridge, not characteristic of men, but always found in apes. This man could wiggle his nose and perhaps use it for purposes other than smelling.

Here is another detail which would have delighted Darwin.

The "orbits" of this skull also resemble those of a gorilla, while those of the "Neanderthal man" are like those of a chimpanzee.

The base of the skull is so formed as to give incontrovertible evidence of the humanity of the being of which the mysterious bone is the only relic and certain details of it prove that this man walked upright and not upon all fours.

Obviously it would be unscientific to form settled theories as to the mentality of all men living at the time he lived from a study of this man's skull.

Almost all kinds of skulls may be found among human beings of today.

But if this man was an average of his time, then the man of then had climbed unmistakably, but not very far, into the human realm.

It is interesting to note that near the skull was found a bit of bone belonging to the then "female of the species," but it is too small to be used as the basis of even a theoretical reconstruction of the prehistoric woman to whom it belonged. So we don't know what the "Rhodesian man's" wife was like.

According to Prof. Woodward, the presence of this bit of a woman's jawbone near the man's skull may be accepted as evidence that this relic is not that of a freakish creature, but, in all probability, is typical of a race of human beings forming a definite link in the chain of man's development. These creatures, the professor is convinced, were "regular members of the human race."

Upon the dressing table in the bride's boudoir stood a small, shallow cut-glass vial. In the bottom of the vial could be seen, some pinkish-looking substance resembling plastering that had been dried and pulverized.

"And what is that?" asked the curious friend.

"I read," said the bride simply, "that one should keep one's wedding-day complexion. That is mine."—[Strickland Gillilan in Wayside Tales.

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON.

An Appreciation.

BY KATE VANNAH.

Fame is in many instances mere posthumous fulsomeness. George Eliot once wrote in a letter to a friend: "But one may sooner expect encouragement from the dead than from the living."

Edwin Arlington Robinson is a rare, and conspicuous example of the axiom that the exception proves the rule. Fame has come to his quiet sanctum and lifted the latch of his door. Fame is feminine—"Fly, and she'll follow; follow, and she flies."

On the morning of Dec. 21, 1919, which marked the fiftieth milestone of Mr. Robinson, the New York Times printed the following editorial:

"Edwin Arlington Robinson will be fifty years old tomorrow. His first book appeared twenty-three years ago. In the interval he has made his way slowly to a place of honor and distinction. To the general public he is 'hard to read.' There are many thorny passages in his works.

"There is a solid intellectual content, a subtle metaphysical quality in much of his verse, 'as much of Browning as of Donne,' Prof. Bliss Perry tells us, and 'the thought is packed tight.' Yet he is a master of form as well as a profound thinker, a not unkindly ironist. And he is a hero worshiper, as a poet should be. Mr. Roosevelt was one of his heroes. Among American poets Mr. Robinson seems to have been President Roosevelt's favorite.

"It is not so much Prof. Perry's felicitous praise as the kindly chorus of 116 fellow-poets that will perhaps please the reader, and perhaps Mr. Robinson himself, who is understood to be rather careless of approbation or blame.

"Among these fellow-poets are not only famous figures of the newer schools, like Miss Lowell and Vachree Lindsay and Edgar Lee Masters, but of the elder, like Edwin Markham, and of the younger and still more conservative generation of verse makers, such as Percy MacKaye and Herman Hagerdorn.

"Literary folk have a hard road to travel. If they praise one another they belong to a mutual admiration society. If they do not, they are mean, envious and jealous, neurotics and meglomaniacs. It is good to see them as they are, kind, with a sincere capacity for admiration for what they find admirable."

Still mindful after two years of that high tribute, it was deeply interesting and highly satisfactory to the friends and admirers of Mr. Robinson to read in the January 27 (1922) issue of the New York Times the following notice:

"AUTHORS' CLUB HAILS POET.

"The Authors' Club announced at its thirty-ninth annual meeting last night, at Carnegie Hall Building, that a large majority of its 260 members had voted that the book of most enduring value to American literature published during 1921 was the collected poems of Edwin Arlington Robinson. Mr. Robinson, who was born in Maine, is the author of "The Torrent" and "The Night Before," "The Children of the Night," "Captain Craig, and Other Poems," "The Man Against the Sky," "The Three Taverns," "Merlin" and "Avon's Harvest." He is a graduate of Harvard University and a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters."

How many poets, painters or musicians have enjoyed a viva-voce commendation while they were still alive, at their very best moment, having it in their power, Deo volente, to promise much more work of excellence and distinction?

In his fifty-two years Mr. Robinson has never made a bid for public notice!

He writes for very love of his work and not for notoriety.

Of a fine, recluse spirit, this man has shunned the limelight, in whose hateful, ephemeral glare moths of every profession, who offer things of no lasting beauty, die. He has pursued the even tenor of his student way. Faithful to his friends, he has been rarely seen in crowded gatherings of literary folk.

I recall him as a boy who was verging on his teens. His family moved from Alna, the quiet little village where the poet was born, to Gardiner, Me. His father possessed an unusually keen business acumen and I think that admirable qualification was not inherited by the son.

From his mother Mr. Robinson has inherited many envirable, sterling qualities. From her comes a rare modesty which will always scorn pretension and the cheap egotism of smaller artists.

The poet's mother was of medium height, fairhaired, blue-eyed and slender.

There was about her a certain quiet reserve, a notable dignity, tempered by rare sweetness and unfailing courtesy. From this same source the son inherited the virtue of industry, a virtue incompatible with habits of dissipation of one's energies. Edwin Arlington Robinson has made an irrefutable record for constant care, for technical finish, for high and cleanly thought in all he has given us. Lord Alfred Tennyson once admitted that he had smoked forty 50-cent cigars meditating upon a quatrain in his immortal "In Memoriam."

Studying Mr. Robinson's unwrinkled fit of phrase to sentiment, one can easily believe he might be guilty of a like extravagance in the solacing weed.

He has heeded the advice of that wise man who, in the long ago, gave this advice: "File your verses thrice before they reach the tongue!"

Every poem in Robinsonia is rich in reflections born in the sweet solitude of such quiet beauty spots as he, in his young manhood, haunted by wood and stream in the grand old State of Maine, of which her children feel so thrillingly proud!

The first man greatly his senior to appreciate and encourage the early literary ventures of Edwin Arlington Robinson was Alanson Tucker Schuman, whose name appeared in the columns of the Boston Transcript for many years as the author of sonnets of rare beauty and polish. Both Mr. Robinson and the writer of this heartfelt tribute received great assistance and earnest encouragement in our early adventures in literature from that clever writer and faithful friend. I distinctly remember my disapproval of the title, "Captain Craig," which slender volume, with his autograph, young Robinson sent to me. To me the title jarred, as invariably the name "Pinkerton" jars upon my ear in "Madame Butterfly."

I ventured, in a note of thanks, to say as much to the young poet—a small thing for me to have done, once it was printed! His written response was even then, in university days, as serene and courteous as it would not fail to be in this laurel-crowned day were some one to send him a frank criticism! Neither praise nor censure would, I suspect, tip the scales of his evenly poised spirit. In the years of my living in England I heard Mr. Robinson referred to as "the John Masefield of America," a fairly appropriate comparison, although Mr. Robinson's work, to my mind, indicates a more profound scholarship, a greater strength, a keener power of analysis of human motives. Robinson's searching analysis is kindred to that of Balzac.

In a long interim both the poet and the present writer had been disciplined by various losses and gains. I noted with deep interest what changes the years had wrought in his physical, his spiritual, his mental make-up.

His tall, slight figure is notably distinguished. Lady Blessington once wrote of Lamartine: "He dresses so like a gentleman that one would never suspect him of being a poet." His face has the delicacy of an early picture of Leigh Hunt. One feels conscious of his highly disciplined character. John Oliver Hobbes in his description of one of her heroes, Robert Orange, a devout Roman Catholic, pronounces him a "recollected" character.

Concerning his own work he

GRAND PIANOS HEAVILY HIT.

Excessive Luxury Tax is Placed on Them by Reds.

BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

MOSCOW, March 4.—Grand pianos are heavily hit by the new luxury taxes framed by the Moscow soviet. Each owner of a grand piano must pay an annual tax of 750,000 rubles, which exceeds the annual wages of many government employees. Ordinary pianos are taxed 600,000 a year and phonographs must pay 200,000.

You are invited to take advantage of the augmented facilities afforded in our enlarged and beautiful new Piano, Phonograph and Record Department.

—entire main and mezzanine floors of the north double building.

The consummation of the Sohmer Reproducing Grand is comparable with epoch-making achievements of past or present time. In possessing this wonder instrument the greatest geniuses of the piano may be summoned at command to play in their best style, such compositions as the owner may select.

(c) Marceau

On the moment, Paderewski may be called to execute his famous "Minuet;" Liszt's "Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody" or Chopin's "Polonaise;" Greig, his finely phrased "Bridal March;" D'Albert, the superb compositions which made him famous and so through the list of the world's greatest pianists—Lhevinne, Busoni, Hofmann, Carreno, Gabrilowitsch and many, many others.

With changing mood, the owner may listen to snatches from a popular opera or delight in the rhythm of a dance melody.

And finally, any chosen selection is glorified by the rippling, flute-like mellowness of Sohmer tone—the tone exclusive to Sohmer pianos—the tone that for half a cenutry has entranced music lovers.

It also achieves in its architecture, that connection which has been heretofore missing between pianofortes and the Home Beautiful, being created in wonderful Period Designs and fine-art woods to harmonize with otherwise artistic and decorative fine Home Interiors.

A special Sohmer Recital Room has been set aside expressly for demonstrations of this wonderful instrument, and music lovers are invited to see, hear and judge for themselves the remarkable merits of this master musical achievement.

Do Your Mattress and Spring Fit You?

Perhaps you never realized the importance of sleeping equipment that really fits. It is as essential for healthful restorative sleep that you provide yourself with correct, comfortable sleeping equipment as it is to eat right food or have proper clothing.
It may be a "pretty good bed" for some one else. Your Mattress and Box Spring should meet your individual requirements. You won't require a lot of sleep if you are prepared with the proper Mattress and Box Spring—which produces the requisite quality of sleep.

Barker Bros.' Own-Make Box Springs and Mattresses Are Scientifically Right—

Hindered Relaxation

Note upper curve line of the body—hip and shoulder almost together, ribs telescoped inside hip. Then note lower line of the body—hip and ribs stretched far apart! See the crescent-shaped spinal column, through which all nerve sensation is transmitted to the brain. Imagine the tension on millions of nerves protesting to the brain! And the strain on the muscular system caused by the hammock-shaped surface of bed. This posture is the greatest cause of unrefreshed sleep and the result of the wrong type of bed.

because they are made to meet individual requirements. Moderately priced, indeed, for such superior dependable equipment. Proper mattress filling is the first essential to comfort. Three worthy fillings are—Floss or Kapock, White Staple Cotton and Hair. None of these more fully meets the majority of individual requirements than the buoyant, resilient White Staple Cotton. It is thoroughly comfortable; moderately priced, too!

Study the accompanying figures and you will realize the necessity of careful selection of your sleeping equipment—for health, for comfort, for complete relaxation.

Perfect Relaxation

Note how the coils support the waist-line—the body rests in its natural curve-lines—the spinal column is held in proper alignment. The bed is correct because, no matter what the position of the sleeper, the tension of the springs carries the body straight, never allowing it to sink beyond the natural curve-lines. Springs are so tied that each coil acts independent of the other, insuring perfect fitting qualities—and complete relaxation.

The mattress has the proper resilient filling and weight.

Beauty

THE GREEN garb of the hills, melodies from the full throats of the birds, the warm caressing sunshine that has in it the promise of happy days here and to come—all tell of a newly awakened season. Every living thing clothes itself in new color and beauty.

Women's apparel reflects the splendor and happiness that is a-thrill upon the land. Exclusive Modes may be seen at Robinson's.

HOSE

ROBINSON'S have anticipated the trend of mode and are showing plain and two-toned Silk Stockings in styles that have the decided impress of a new season.

Two-Tone Silk Sports Hose are in 1 and 1 rib, in black and red, polo and cerise and Russian calf and white. $8.00.

Imported from Scotland are Hose of extra heavy quality in 5 and 1 rib. The Silk Stockings come in beige, pearl, navy, black, white and brown. $12.50.

FIRST FLOOR

GLOVES

TREFOUSSE is a name which English women, French women and American women know as a label which makes quality and workmanship certain.

Beige, being in order for costumes, is shown in the Trefousse. One-clasp Trefousse Gloves come in beige with brown embroidered backs, cream with brown, black with white and other combinations. They are marked at a figure considerably lower than that of last year: at $3.25 a pair.

FIRST FLOOR

SHOES

DIPPING low at the sides, yet always having in view artistic proportions, the Princess ankle-strap Pumps delight in being different.

They are of black satin in Baby French and Louis XV heels. Dull grosgrain ribbon as a binding for the top gives a particularly modish finish. Priced at $13.00.

A similar model in black brocade satin with Louis XV heel is priced at $14.00.

FOURTH FLOOR

Millinery

THE MILLINERY SECTION becomes a center of interest through its exceptional showing of new Hats for a new season.

They comprise Hats of dignity for formal occasions; Hats for golfing shopping, motoring, dancing—in short, Daytime and Evening Hats in the late shapes and colorings.

In this showing, which includes a group of models from Paris, Robinson's particularly feature Hats for afternoons of bridge.

THIRD FLOOR

Color

GENEROUSLY giving of their best loved tints, the gentle flowers provided many shades for milady's dress. Still, not content, the pampered maid of fashion followed Romance into fairy worlds and brought back more new colors with which to praise the Springtime.

Dandelion

THAT merry little messenger of spring, the dandelion, has given its gold and its name to a color that will brighten every fashionable gathering of the new season. Dandelion glows with the warmth of the sun. It is a new color for both blondes and brunettes.

Orchid

DELICATE pinks with only a tint of lavender; soft blues with the pinkish cast; rich orchids that take their beauty from the tropics; and all the lovely orchids in between—these will have their way in enhancing the charm of spring 1922 apparel.

Beige

THE vogue of Beige in spring apparel brings to the fore a shade that becomes every face. If one has not a suit or cape or skirt or blouse of it, a touch upon one's costume will suffice. But a note at least of Beige for spring.

Periwinkle

DELIGHTFUL as its fairy name is Periwinkle. It hints of moonlight caught among hydrangeas; a blue, though light, that holds the witchery of night within its depths. A blue that touches with its magic many of the new garments at Robinson's.

Ladybird

SPRING has mingled sunshine with henna and called the new shade Ladybird. A tone it is that's rich and warm, yet not too warm for light spring frocks. Or for the warmest of new spring wraps. A red for maids with Titian hair.

Algonquin

A COLOR with the name of an Indian Tribe must needs, of course, be red. Algonquin has the glow of copper that in the deep pile fabrics of the spring wraps gives a richness that belongs to sunsets. A red that tinges silks and cotton, too.

Spring

ALL the world of fashion reflects in its brilliance of style and color the joy of the awakening year. Robinson Apparel, meeting the urge of Springtime in a thousand different ways, cannot but charm the woman who loves the new and beautiful.

THIRD FLOOR

Frocks

SLENDER Frocks of soft knitted silks or wools. Frocks that gracefully combine freedom of swing for springtime sports with Parisian smartness. Frocks of tweed with flaring capes; Frocks bouffant of light crisp taffeta. Robinson Frocks, $39.50.

THIRD FLOOR

Coats

MANNISH Coats of camel's hair; Coats of tweed and sturdy English mixtures; Wraps of softest wools, sometimes combined with silk, and Wraps of silk that wear long collars of light hued fur; and Capes. Robinson's Coats begin at $49.50.

THIRD FLOOR

Suits

COME now for spring the Suits of tweeds, homespuns and mixtures that every out of doors maid will delight to wear. Rough corded silks in the brightest hues and wool twill cords with short, boxed coats and trimmings of braid or tassels. Beginning at $29.50.

THIRD FLOOR

Sweaters

IN A land devoted to the out of doors and in a season devoted to sports wear, what may one not expect to find in Sweaters? New weaves and all of the new colors, Dandelion and Capri blue, ladybird, beige and orchid, cobweb and Algonquin. Beginning at $10.

THIRD FLOOR

Skirts

KEEPING pace with the sweaters of spring, Skirts outdo themselves in being fanciful. A sweater may wear stripes. A Skirt may wear two and have them running either way! Besides the rough sports weaves, there are the silken ones for dressier occasions. $8.95.

THIRD FLOOR

Blouses

FOR sports wear even white Blouses wear a bit of color in the way of a checked piping at collar and cuffs. And for dress, the hues of spring take complete possession! Jade Canton crepe with beads of old gold. Orchid, ladybird and beige—always beige—$4.95.

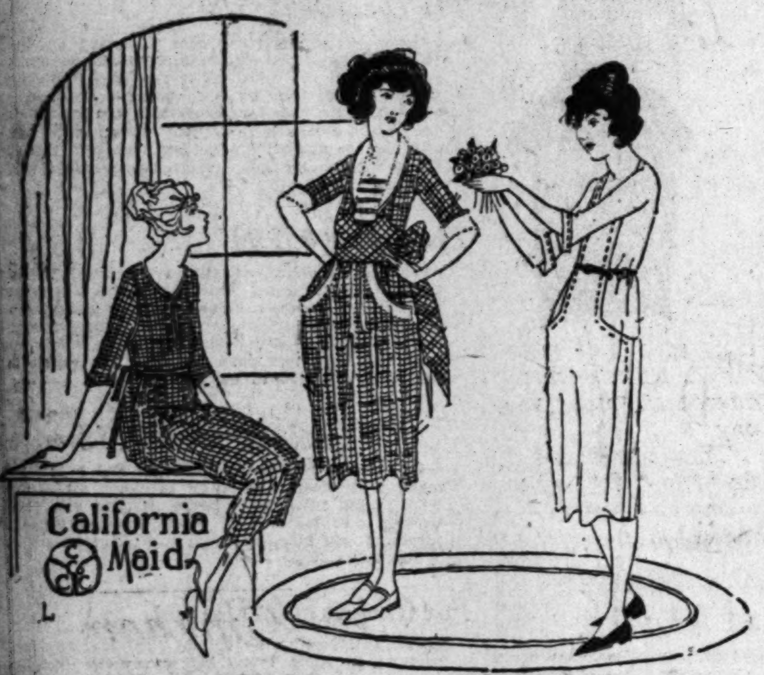
FEATURING MADE-IN-LOS ANGELES MERCHANDISE

Many Lines At Lower-Than-Usual Prices

Presenting exceptionally attractive opportunities for wise buying and showing the Los Angeles public the sort of merchandise that has helped to make this city the eleventh, industrially, in the United States.

A Market Week Feature of Decided Importance Is a Three-Days' Offering of

"California Maid" Porch Dresses at $5.95 to $11.95



—That dresses such as these should be made in our own city—they are the output of the well-known firm of Cooper, Coate & Casey—makes us feel very proud, indeed. They are so charming in every way—their lines so attractive, their materials so fine in quality—that 'tis not surprising to us that their reputation for excellence is more and more widespread, as time goes on.

—It is a matter for keen satisfaction, too, that the makers of these attractive house dresses should have made us decided price concessions on the lines to be offered by us during Market Week; it's only because of these concessions that we've been able to mark them at $5.95, $6.95, $7.95 and $11.95.

The Materials are Checked Gingham and Solid Color Linene

—In the ginghams you may choose from red, green, mauve and black checks; the linenes are in various bright colors. Dainty touches of organdie or pique give adornment to many of these dresses, pretty pearl buttons do their decorative part, too. They are ever such likable frocks—so you'll agree when you see them, as we hope you will do on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of Market Week.

—The Broadway—Third Floor.

Few there are within the borders of Los Angeles who know of the city's industrial strength.

Here are a few facts in this connection:

Close to 100,000 workers are employed here with a payroll of from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 a month

Last year's manufactured products totaled $788,652,000.

—And Los Angeles has only begun to win its spurs, industrially!

—Many of our local manufacturers, co-operating with The Broadway, will, during the coming Market Week, feature various lines of merchandise at less than usual prices.

—This week will afford you an opportunity of knowing Los Angeles merchandise better—and to save money while making its acquaintanceship.

A Group of Made-in-Los Angeles

Hats at $10.00

—No laggard in millinery manufacture is the Los Angeles Hat Co., from which firm we secured the hats to be featured during Market Week at $10.00—'twas a lowered purchase price that made this marking possible.

Of Horsehair Braid, Cellophane, Tuscan Braid and Novelty Braid

—are these hats made. There are, too, some of the fashion-favored hemp plaques in the array. All are hand-made, the shapes exploiting various new ideas. There are large irregular models, little bonnet and mushroom effects, medium roll brims, off-face lines, close-fitting models and Mitzi sailors.

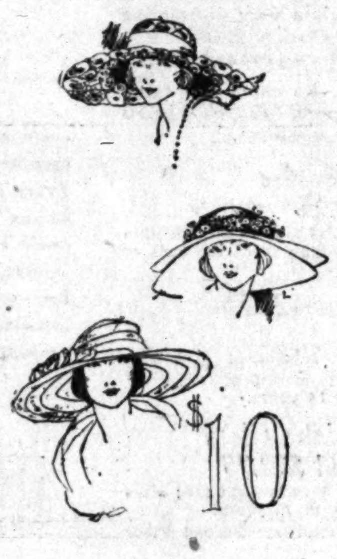
Flowers and Foliage Supply Trimming

—in many cases; glazed fruits and bows of piquard or cire ribbon in others.

—The bright new colors—canna, beige, bronze, periwinkle, poppy, wistaria, tortoise shell, blue, jade, and orchid—are represented, as are the always-in-demand brown, navy and black.

—Let us emphasize the $10.00 pricing of these Made-in-Los Angeles hats—it's as attractive as they are themselves!

—The Broadway
—Third Floor.



Lisere Sailors Priced at $12.50

—These good-looking hats came to us from H. Glick & Co.—they're exceptionally attractive in every way.

—They may be had with wide and medium brims, and are available in solid colors as well as in combinations of shades. Crushed bands of heavy silk provide trimming.

—Choice of black and white, navy and white, brown and sand and of all navy and all brown.

—The Broadway,

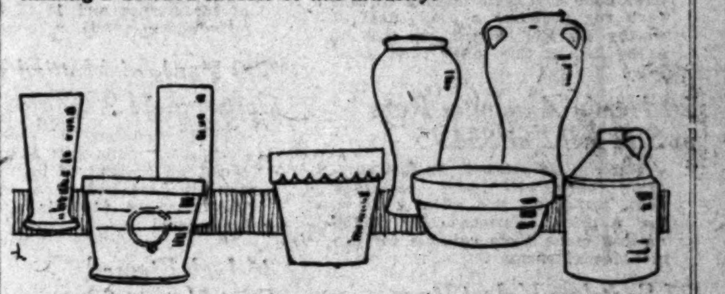
ARTISTIC POTTERY

That Has Been Made in Los Angeles

Attractively Priced

—All signs point towards our city's making a decided success of the making of pottery; the clay of our locality is said to be particularly well adapted to the making of practical jars, vases and so on—as a matter of fact, the J. A. Bauer Pottery Company, which supplied us with the Made-in-Los Angeles merchandise to be featured during Market Week in the China Section, is now making a decided success of this industry.



—Here are details of the various lines to be featured at lower-than-usual prices:

"Market Week" Will Be Celebrated in the Men's and Boys' Clothing Section by an Offering of

KLASSY KLOTHES

For Young Men and Boys At Attractive Prices

—and not only are the prices decidedly appealing, but these well-tailored suits and overcoats are such as commend themselves to particular young men and mothers of boys, quite apart from the interesting fact that they are Los Angeles made products. They were delivered to us by the local firm Rosenbaum and Co., and embrace

High School Boys' Suits With Long Trousers At $22.50 and $25.00

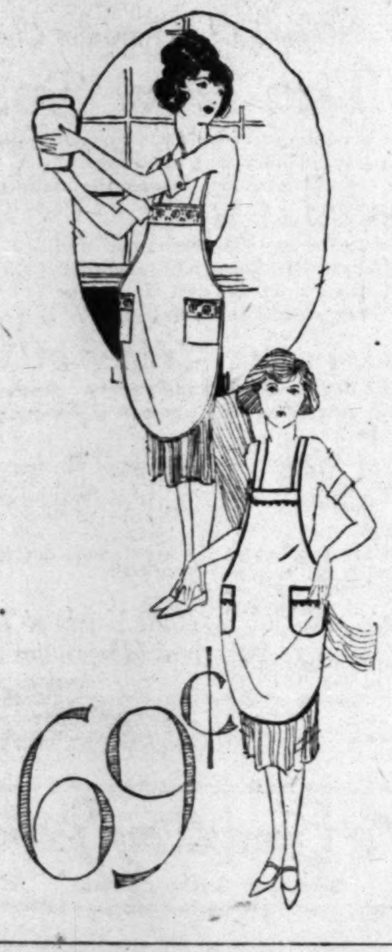
—These suits were designed for lads wearing their first long-trouser suits, being in sizes 15, 16 and 17 years. The coats are cut on Norfolk lines, with all around or half belts. The materials are of excellent weight, in good-looking striped patterns that boys like.

Boys' All-Wool Suits With Two Pairs of Knickers At $15.00 and $20.00

—Clever new spring styles are evident among the finely finished suits in the two groupings mentioned. The coats are in Norfolk effects, and well lined; two pairs of knickers accompany each suit. Sizes are for boys of 8 to 17.

Little Chaps' Topcoats Made by The Klassy Klothes Co. Priced at $12.50

—Attractive coatings in light tan, brown and dark mixtures have been used for these likable sports models with raglan shoulders and all around belts. In 2½ to 8-year sizes, at $12.50. —The Broadway—Second Floor.



Two Attractive Lines of

Made-in-Los Angeles Aprons

Will Be Offered on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday

At 69c and $1.69

—We are indebted to the courtesy of The Normandin Co. and of The Oesterreich Co. for being able to quote these lowered prices for Market Week, the first named firm having sent the $1.69 aprons, the last named those at 69c. Regularly, both lines are appreciably more.

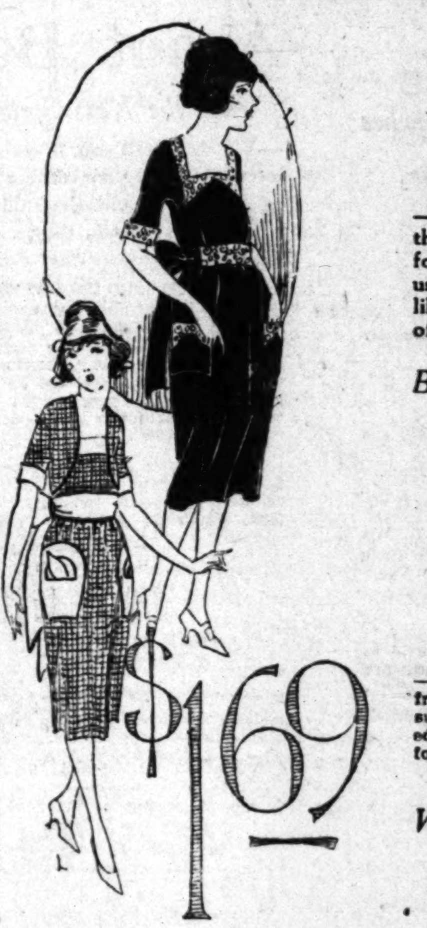
—The aprons are so extremely likable in every way that you will agree with us in thinking them exceptional at these prices.

The 69c Aprons Are Made of Fine Gingham and Percale

—in a delightful range of colorings; some in unbleached muslin, too. They are buttonless, being made with two adjustable straps which slip over the head; rick-rack and figured bandings provide trimming.

The $1.69 Aprons Are Made In Dress Style of Gingham

—chambray and black sateen. Some of them are trimmed with rickrack braid, others with pipings; still others show the effective use of cretonne. There's a choice of slipover and button-back models. —The Broadway—Second Floor.



The Broadway Department Store
BROADWAY—FOURTH AND HILL ARTHUR LETTS, PRESIDENT

Made in Los Angeles, Too, Were These

Hats and Caps for Boys at $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50

—Many new spring styles are embodied in this showing of hats for little boys, and caps for their older brothers. They were made for us by the Los Angeles Cap Company. You'll like their appearance and their moderate prices of $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50.

Boys' Sweaters at $8.50

—Made by the Pacific Knitting Mills in our own Los Angeles, these are good-looking sweaters in high school color combinations and solid shades.

—The Broadway—Second Floor.

Little Girls' Frocks

Made in Los Angeles

Priced at $4.95

—This is a lowered price for these pretty little frocks; they're made of imported organdie, silk tissue and fine checked voile. Dainty rufflings and lace edgings trim them in various effective ways. Sizes for little folks of two to six.

—The Broadway—Second Floor

Wool Slipon Sweaters at $3.95

—These sweaters are regularly priced. They're of fancy weave and have adjustable collars. Stripes of contrasting color finish the lower edges. Choice of navy, rust, brown, orchid and white.

It's in the Spring That Madam Housekeeper Realizes the Insistent Need of New Rugs and Draperies

So She'll Doubtless Be Delighted With Our Three-Days' Opportunities of Buying Such Things at Lowered Prices.

at Lowest Prices

—Our arrangements for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week include, as of leading importance, the featuring of rugs and draperies at prices attractively less than usual.

—And the buyer of such merchandise has spared no efforts to provide such offerings as will prove attractive to those needing new carpets, new hangings for their homes and who will be very happy indeed to save money on their purchase!

—Here are details of the various offerings:

12 Seamless Wilton Velvet Rugs at $59.75

—Beautiful oriental tones and colorings have been remarkably well blended in the designing of these fringed seamless Wilton velvet rugs, to be had in first quality, in size 9x12. Worsteds, carefully selected, have gone into their making so that each rug promises a great deal of worthy service. There are only 12 to be had at this lower than usual price.

20 Heavy Axminster Rugs in Size 9x12 at $34.75

—You will be pleased, we feel sure, over these artistically patterned rugs, which we are offering at so low a price. Various color combinations make them suitable for use in different rooms.

27 Seamless Velvet Rugs, in Size 9x12, at $23.95

—The skillful choice of colors and patterns apparent in the designing of these rugs gives them every appearance of being rugs of a much more expensive nature. The price of $23.95 is unusually low.

12 Axminster Rugs, in Size 6x9, at $19.75

—People interested in the furnishing of small rooms should not fail to see these wantable rugs, to be had in choice designs and colorings. Priced low at $19.75.

34 Body Brussels Rugs Low Priced at $41.95

—Effectively subdued in color, these desirable rugs, in blue, rose and mulberry, will take their place, quite fittingly, in rooms of various kinds. They may be had in sizes 9x12 and 8.3x10.6. There are 22 of the former and 12 of the latter to be had at $41.95.

500 Yards of Mottled Velvet Carpet at $1.95 Yard

—This carpeting is especially desirable for halls and stairways because, on account of its mottled effect, it does not show soil easily. The price of $1.95 is much lower than usual.

36-Inch Figured Filet Nets at 29c

—This offering of filet net at so low a price is one of the outstanding features of this three-days' drapery event. The patterns are new and very desirable while the quality of the net is unusually good. It is available in ivory and ecru.

Floss Cushions at 59c Each

—Muslin covered cushions filled with 100% pure floss. These cushions are available in the following sizes: 16x16 inches, 16x18 inches and 18x18 inches.

The Broadway—Fourth Floor.

45-Inch Colored Madras at $1.29 Yard

—Madras can be effectively used in so many different ways that we have no doubt but that good housewives will avail themselves of this opportunity to save on its purchase. This madras is 45 inches wide and may be chosen in gold, green, brown, mulberry, blue and rose designs.

Dotted Grenadine at 49c

—A material shown much favor for the making of ruffled curtains. It has, however, many other possibilities for use as an effective drapery material. The price of 49c is much lower than that usually associated with dotted grenadine of this quality.

Cable Marquisette at 29c Yard

—The very heavy weight and firm weave of this material make it especially desirable for curtaining windows. It is procurable in white, ivory and ecru at the low price of 29c.

48-Inch Plain Drapery Material at $1.55

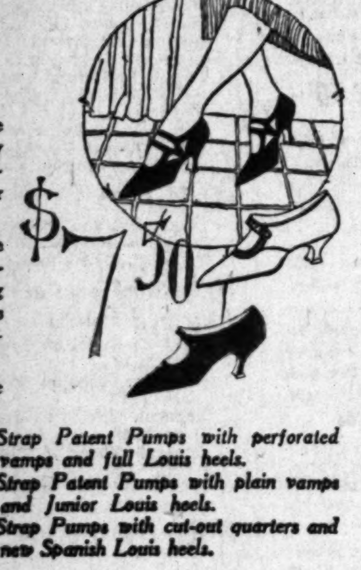
—Women find this drapery material to be especially practical because its width allows for splitting. The low price at which it is now offered should make it doubly attractive to them. It may be had in gold, brown and mulberry at $1.55 yard.

We've Been Fortunate in Securing a Lot of Unusually Dainty

Strap Pumps For Street or Dress Wear

At So Favorable a Price-Concession That We Are Able to Mark Them

at $7.50



—These one and two-strap pumps are Brooklyn made—they are distinguished by the excellent workmanship that marks footwear from factories which make the finer kinds of shoes.

—Patent, mat kid and gun metal kid are the leathers used, all being made with hand-turned soles and medium vamps. Among the various models, Baby Louis, Louis Junior and full Louis heels find representation.

—The following styles are available at the very moderate pricing of $7.50:

- 1-Strap Mat Kid Pumps with beaded vamps and Baby Louis heels.
- 1-Strap Mat Kid Pumps with plain vamps and full Louis heels.
- 1-Strap Gun Metal Pumps with perforated vamps and junior Louis heels.
- 1-Strap Patent Pumps with perforated vamps and full Louis heels.
- 1-Strap Patent Pumps with plain vamps and Junior Louis heels.
- 2-Strap Pumps with cut-out quarters and new Spanish Louis heels.

The Broadway—Aisle Eight.

New Dress and Sports Capes in Juniors' Sizes at $10.75 to $34.50

—Various wanted woolen materials are used in their making. At $10.75 there is a very attractive model in blue or tan, with collar and trimming of fancy checked cloth.

—At $14.95 are capes of navy and brown velours, capes at $34.50 are of bolivia, silk-lined.

Knitted Capes Are Priced at $8.95

—In many pretty shades and effective color combinations. Sizes for girls of 10 to 14 years.

Sports Coats at $22.75 to $29.75

—Smart new models in light and dark tan sports materials. Sizes for girls of 14 to 18 years.

Coats of Polaire Cloth at $12.95 and $22.75

—In blue, and dark or light tan; sizes for girls of 8 to 12 years.

—The Broadway—Second Floor

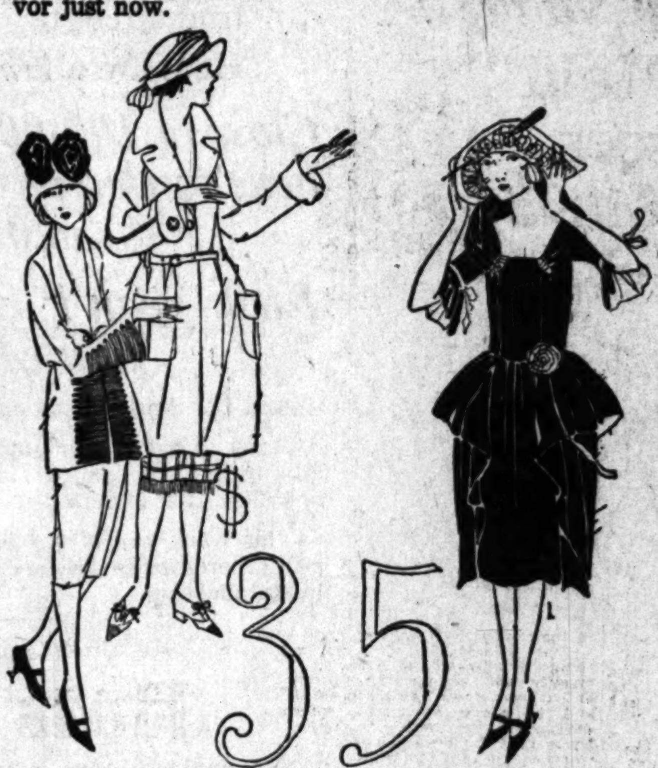
When We Say That on Monday the Garment Section Will Feature

COATS, SUITS AND DRESSES AT THE LOW PRICE OF $35.00

—It must be admitted that we do so with a great deal of pleasurable assurance as to the interest such an announcement will create. For there's no getting away from the fact that $35 is generally conceded to be a price uncommonly satisfactory to the average garment purchaser. Perhaps it is because it is not unreasonably high, yet high enough to assure one of the dependability of the desired garments.

—Additional satisfaction is promised in that the garments offered are of the sort usually associated with a price much higher.

—Wise and careful buying accounts for the fact that we are able to group them at $35. Incidentally it might be added that both styles and materials are those high in Madame La Mode's favor just now.



The Coats at $35.00

—Particular attention has been paid to the materials of which these coats are fashioned, such practical and effective weaves as Toile-de-laine, tweeds, tricotine, chinchilla and bolivia, being chosen to do service. Brown, deer, sand, sparrow and navy are the colors favored; some in black, too. Both wrappy styles and flare backs are shown as well as the popular cape effects. Sizes 16 to 44 are included.

The Dresses at $35.00

—Some of the buoyancy that is spring finds expression in these frocks of taffeta, crepe, crepe knit, poiret and tricotine, so youthfully are they fashioned, so gracefully are they draped, corded or paneled, whichever the case may be. Overskirts, tunics and ruffling are also in evidence. Long waist lines, girdles and novelty sleeves mark them as fashion's own this spring. Black, brown and navy dresses are trimmed with contrasting shades.

The Suits at $35.00

—The charm of individuality makes itself felt in the showing of tricotine, Poiret twill, twill cord, tweed and fancy diagonal suits. Sports models are apparent as are styles marked by conservatism. All are well finished and beautifully made. Navy, brown, deer and light and dark mixtures are visible in the array, in sizes 16 to 44.

Skirts at $9.75

—Of velours, prunella, garbardine and basket weaves made with deep pleats, or in plain styles finished with smart pockets. Checks, stripes and plaids in various combinations of black, navy, brown, [illegible] pigeon, Japan blue, platinum and pheasant are shown. Waist sizes 26 to 32.

Fox Chokers at $25.00

—Fox promises to be one of the leading furs for spring and there is no gainsaying the fact that its almost universal becomingness is probably the reason. Our showing of fur chokers for spring includes black, taupe and lighter shades. The price of $25 is unusually low.

The Broadway—Third Floor.

Attractively Priced for Monday Are:

100 Sheffield Silver Plated Bread Trays at $3.95

—Pierced designs make these trays unusually attractive, while the finish is especially smooth and glossy. Each one has a convenient handle. The price of $3.95 we believe you will agree is astonishingly low.

—The Broadway—Aisle One.

A Fad That is Fascinating and at the Same Time Practical, is That of Making Rag Rugs

—an accomplishment which, by the way, is now being taught in the complimentary art classes at The Broadway. All one needs to purchase are the rags (very inexpensive) and the wooden needle, and after that it should be "plain sailing" until such a time as one is able to lay the completed rug or rugs in one's bedroom, bathroom, nursery or summer home as the case may be. You should experience little or no trouble in the making of the rugs, for ever at your beck and call are trained experts solicitous of assisting and advising with you over any difficulties which may present themselves.

The "Purity Rags"

—used in their making are not rags at all, but skeins of new selvedge edges from beautifully dyed materials. Each skein is priced at 50c (four skeins being necessary to make a rug measuring 20x40 inches.) —The Broadway—Second Floor.

Monday we'll feature

in sizes ranging from 18x31 to 26x52 inches

At Price Lowerings Worthy of Emphasis

Included, There Will Be

600 Bath Towels in Size 26x52, At 90c Each

About Bon Ton Corsets

And the New Spring Styles

—We could tell you, if space allowed, an interesting story concerning the designers of Bon Tons and the diligent way in which, each season, they study the coming styles, in order that they may adapt the new Bon Ton models along conforming lines. But space does not permit, so we must necessarily limit our description to a few words concerning the undeniable success of those designers in achieving the lines (the uncorseted ones) demanded for this particular season, without in any way, sacrificing the comfort which forms so essential a part of a successful corset.

Our showing of Bon Tons also includes many conservative models of pink coutil and brocade as well as elastic top corsets of plain and fancy materials—priced at $5.00 and $10.00.

—The Broadway—Second Floor.

The Interest Girls Are Taking in New Headgear

—just now is not to be wondered at—for is it not shared by their older sisters, mothers, yea, and by their grandmothers as well?

Priced at $3.95 and $4.95

—are to be found at The Broadway some good looking tailored hats of sport Milan in colorings of navy, red, brown and tan, as well as black. These are suitable for girls of 6 to 12 years.

—Fine Milans in brown, burnt, navy, red and tangerine are priced at $7.45. Some have brim edgings in contrasting colors. The grouping also includes hats of all black.

—The Broadway—Second Floor.

This Trio of Favorites Chosen From Among

The New Spring Silks

—exemplifies the tendency of la Mode to show partiality for sports wear, to those silken weaves which combine serviceability with smartness.

—On Monday we will introduce among the many popular sports silks

Silk Pearl at $5.95 a Yard

—This resembles heavy Canton crepe, and is distinguished by its beautifully embroidered checked and striped designs. It may be had in white, tan, orchid and pearl gray.

Krepe Knit at $3.95

—is obtainable in practically all the demanded shades. The popularity of this handsome knitted fabric for sports suits, dresses, capes and skirts is accounted for by its lovely colorings, smart appearance and durability.

Fancy Crepes at Various Prices

—are now in the department in wide variety. Among them will be found the well-liked crepe Burbar as well as other heavy silk crepes. Color-ranges are now complete; therefore your early selection is advised.

3000 Yards of Plain and Glace Taffeta at $2.35 Yard

—Both light and dark shades will be included in this comprehensive offering. Gros de Londres will also be offered at this less than usual pricing.

Crepe de Chine at $1.79

—There will be 2000 yards of this wantable material offered at the low price mentioned. Naturally there will be a wide choice in colors.

Imported Pongee at $1.19

—Of a quality suitable for the making of lovely blouses and underwear. There will be 1000 yards included at this pricing.

1000 Yards of Tweeds and Homespuns at $2.95

—Two materials being shown favor for suits and coats this spring. The price mentioned here is very much lower than usual.

500 Yards of Fancy Striped Skirting at $3.95

—Including poplins, prunellas and fine serges, the skirtings may be had in white with stripes of black.

1000 Yards of Wool Challies at $1.00

—Many striking designs are included. The savings for Monday should be apparent.

Girl with Psychic Eyes Astounds Scientists

[illegible] possible for anyone to have [illegible] eyes?" This simple question [illegible] of course, at once com[illegible] a terse emphatic reply:

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] as it is an interesting question [illegible] becoming more and more so [illegible] every day.

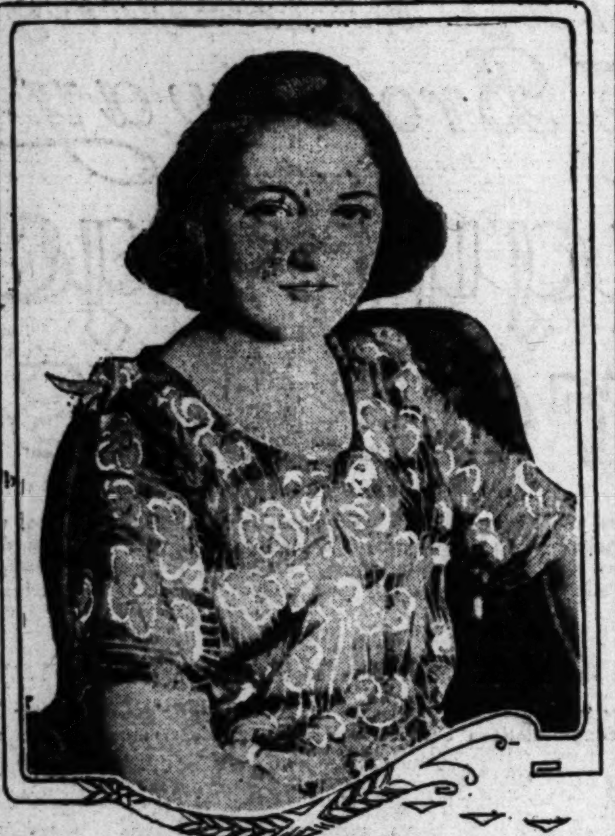
[illegible] those who answer "yes," and [illegible] who answer "no"—which [illegible] everyone—a recent [illegible] in Omaha, Neb., would have [illegible] entertaining.

Two persons—one a high school [illegible] the other a prominent club [illegible] active in civic affairs—were [illegible] at opposite sides of a draw[illegible] table. The latter had [illegible] ask of the other whether [illegible] tell what had become of [illegible] set ring which the club [illegible] had lost the day before. [illegible] not explain to the schoolgirl [illegible] she had lost the ring [illegible] she had been during the [illegible]—she merely asked for [illegible] information.

The schoolgirl was silent a moment. Suddenly her body grew [illegible] her lips quivered, her eyes [illegible] to be gazing into space. [illegible] were in the room listening; [illegible] became rigid—as if [illegible] of being in the presence of [illegible]. The schoolgirl spoke [illegible] still staring as if into ethe[illegible] nothingness:

JUST WHERE TO LOOK.

"[illegible] made two visits yesterday [illegible] homes of friends to whom [illegible] social calls. Then you [illegible] your home. In the last [illegible] you visited, you lost your [illegible] Go there at once. Lose no [illegible] the man servant in that [illegible] will begin going over the carpets in the southwest bedroom on the second floor in half an hour from now with a vacuum cleaning machine. If you enter the room before the man with the vacuum cleaning machine, you will find your ring entangled in the fringe of a rug in the southeast corner of the room. You were in that room just before you left the house yesterday afternoon."



Eugenie Dennis, 16-Year-Old Girl, . . .
Who puzzles scientists and masters of legerdemain.

The club woman's body trembled. A pallor came into her face. She could not speak for a moment, though all eyes in the room, except those of the schoolgirl, were turned questioningly upon her. When she did speak it was to exclaim:

"It is uncanny—I can't believe my ears! I made two visits yesterday—just as she says; I stopped a minute in the southwest bedroom of the second house at which I called—just long enough to use a bit of powder. How could she know?"

It was agreed by all present the girl could not have known. She had not seen the woman before, and no one in the room had known of the club woman's social activities the previous day.

TWO FEET FROM WALL.

The woman hurried to her car and drove at once to the "second home she had visited." She excitedly explained her mission of the day before to her hostess. Together the two went to the "southwest bedroom" and there, two feet from the wall in the "southeast corner," just where the fringe of the rug lay in little tangles, sparkled the stone of the lost ring.

While the two women looked awestricken at each other the houseman came to the door and asked if madame were ready for him to use the vacuum cleaning machine in that room!

This is not an idle bit of "fortune teller's" fiction. The club woman is Mrs. W. J. Hunter, whose home is at 4804 Webster street, in Omaha. Her hostess "at the second house she visited" the day her ring was missed was Mrs. Graham of 301 North Thirty-third street. It is Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Graham, not the high school girl, who told of the amazing circumstances.

That is only one of the many things this mere child has done to mystify and astonish the people of her own town, Atchison, Kan., and the people of Omaha, where she has been for the last few weeks. Everything she does is astonishing, whether uncanny or regular. She is known to be a mystery worker, a most profound and naive delver into the realm of the unknown, and so it is a cause for astonishment to see her as she is—a natural, unassuming, fairly studious schoolgirl, 17 years old and a member of the junior class of the Atchison High School.

IS "REGULAR GIRL."

She likes boys; she likes everything that most girls like. She is in the opinion of her schoolmates of the other sex, "just a regular girl." Her name is Eugenie Dennis—which is, in a manner of speaking, as unesthetic a name as ever a girl could bear.

One quality which has assisted in giving conviction to those of Atchison and Omaha who are convinced that she is something supernatural is her reticence to claim wide spiritual powers. She does not claim to have established a personal contact with the saints. Nor does she pretend to go into deep trances and to see things in glittering array passing before her eyes. In her seances Eugenie Dennis sits in a rocking chair in the full and usual light of day and talks of things which are unseen to the inhabitants of a tangible world much as if she might be talking of a movie.

To know her as a perfectly normal girl, pretty and interested in things conventional, and then to suddenly discover that she has some gift of seeing beyond the sight of others, is bound to be astonishing. What this gift is must be determined. It would be indeed unfair to either deny or affirm her supernatural gifts until the world has seen the proof.

INVESTIGATED BY SCOFFER.

David Abbott of 3316 Center street, Omaha, is one who has given a great deal of attention to Eugenie Dennis. Mr. Abbott is a master in legerdemain. His life work is the devising of apparently impossible phenomena for the use of stage magicians. He is a magician's magician, and there are few tricks which verge on the supernatural or the uncanny which he is not familiar with. It has been his boast that he could do any stunt any of the so-called spirit mediums could do. And he has demonstrated that he can explain in simple English words the most mysterious of the spiritual manifestations of trance mediums.

It has been said that half of the tricks in use by magicians the world over were invented by Abbott. He himself is not of the stage. But his home in Omaha is equipped with contrivances of all sorts by means of which he reproduces physical tricks to prove that they are not physical at all.

One of his great exhibitions is to decapitate himself. He will be standing openly in his drawing room, surrounded by spectators, then he will take a sword and draw it across his neck. Abbott from the shoulders down will step aside and Abbott's head, with an affable smile on its face, will be resting comfortably upon a table. That, of course, is legerdemain.

KEPT UNDER SCRUTINY.

Abbott was commissioned by the American Society for Pyschical Research of New York to investigate the "power" of the Atchison schoolgirl. So he took her into his home, where she stayed under constant scrutiny for several weeks. Her investigator is a man who is up to all the tricks of the gentry who deal in affairs mysterious. He had in the past exposed many who were promulgating claims to prophetic and psychic powers. He had no faith in the new cult, arisen out of the desires of relatives of soldiers slain in the recent war to see and talk again with their loved ones.

Hence he undertook to prove that seventeen-year-old Eugenie Dennis of Atchison was under some sort of misapprehension. But the first day he had her under observation and began to talk to her he vaguely sensed that Eugenie was not like the ordinary press agented, falsely modest members of the mysterious cult.

He asked her about herself and her "spirit power."

She resented his question. That surprised him.

"Spirits?" she quavered, indignantly. "I don't know anything about spirits. I never saw one. The words just come into my mouth and I have to say them. Sometimes I see things and the words are sent from somewhere to me and I couldn't possibly keep from describing what I am seeing."

GIRL TALKING NATURALLY.

In the "magic house" at Omaha, Abbott received another surprise. He arranged a "seance" for Eugenie, and he watched to see what sort of trance she would go into. He had seen all sorts of trances. But this girl didn't go into a trance at all. She simply sat apparently in intense concentration and talked as if she were telling an uncomplicated narrative; and Abbott marveled.

Eugenie is receiving much curious attention and her case is to be carried into a further investigation. She is to be observed by the psychic scientists in the elaborately equipped laboratories of the American Society for Psychical Research, in charge of Dr. Hereward Carrington.

Indeed, in many ways the schoolgirl of Kansas does present unique material for study—material which has at least aroused wide curiosity. Miss Dennis began to startle her immediate friends a year ago. It is told of her, with considerable amusement, that it was a young suitor who first spread the rumor that Eugenie "could talk to spirits." He told of himself that he was taking her for a motor ride when he proposed that they park the car in a shaded spot at the edge of town where he might steal a kiss.

LIKES BOYS, CANDY.

It has been pointed out that Eugenie confesses that she is not averse to boys—indeed, she is in-

Desirable Reed Furniture
From the Rattan Shops is now being offered at The Broadway

At Prices Attractively Low

—Not long ago The Broadway made arrangements with the Rattan Shops of Los Angeles, which have formerly been manufacturing and selling direct to the public, to handle certain lines of their merchandise. We introduced this furniture for the first time, as one of the features of the Anniversary's Finale, stating that prices were lower than they had been on reed furniture of this kind. Those low introductory prices still prevail.

—The fact that this is "Market Week," when The Broadway, as well as the other stores of Los Angeles, is giving prominence to locally made articles, gives added importance to the offering.

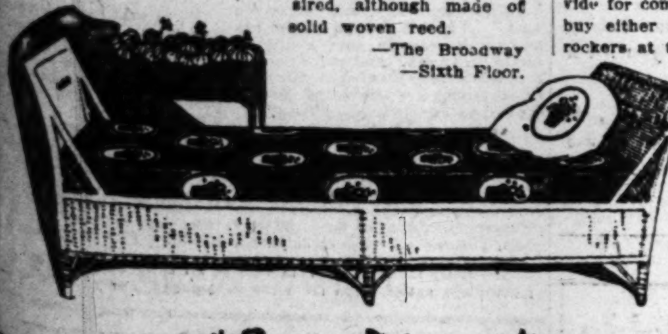
Chaises Longues at $26.95

—Distinctly decorative as well as eminently practical are the luxurious pieces of furniture known as "long chairs." Those which you may buy here at $26.95 are strongly constructed of splendid reed in attractive design.

Reed Day Beds at $34.00

—These good-looking day beds are complete with coil spring box mattresses, covered with pretty cretonne, being quite large enough to be pressed into service as extra sleeping quarters. They are light, and easily moved when desired, although made of solid woven reed.

—The Broadway
—Sixth Floor.



Reed Arm Chairs at $11.20

—The popularity of reed furniture depends quite as much upon its artistic and comfort-giving qualities, as upon its inexpensiveness. There's hardly a home these days without a reed chair or two, at least. Another point in their favor is the fact that they "fit in" with almost any other pieces of furniture that are used.

—The reed chairs at $11.20, are constructed with high, rolling backs and wide arms that provide for comfort. You may buy either arm chairs or rockers at the price quoted.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good and tastes very pleasant.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FRATERNAL AFFAIRS.

Clarence F. Smith Lodge No. 482, F. and A.M., will hold its next regular meeting Wednesday evening at 235½ South Union avenue. First-degree work and examination will occupy the evening. The meeting will convene at 7:30 o'clock.

The schedule for the remaining meetings of the month is as follows: 15th inst., first-degree and examination; 22nd inst., second-degree and examination; 29th inst., third-degree.

ODD FELLOWS.

The proposed Southwestern Lodge closed its charter list last week and members are now clearing the way for the institution ceremonies to be announced later.

America Lodge No. 385 was visited by the Grand Master last week at a meeting, which was largely attended. The first report of the booster committees was made at that time, and plans for admitting a large class on April 10 were considered.

OF ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

The Painters' Sphere.

"Behold," I said, "the painter's sphere!
The limits of his art appear!
The passing group, the summer morn,
The grass, the elms, the blossomed thorn;
Those cattle couched or, as they rise,
Their shining flanks, their liquid eyes;
These, or much greater things, but caught
Like these, and in one aspect brought.
In outward semblance he must give
A moment's life of things that live;
Then let him choose his moment well,
With power divine its story tell!"
MATTHEW ARNOLD.

From Calcutta to Paris.

Since the artist's chief concern is with the visual aspect of things, he finds travel a far more illuminating experience than the rest of us do. The passing show leaves unnumbered vivid impressions that are ultimately turned into pictures on canvas. The newer the scene the more "convincing" its painted representation.

It may be argued that, working in this way, the artist does not strike below the surface. This is sometimes true, but less often than we think. The artist is equipped with a soul as well as with a paint brush, and his soul apprehends even more swiftly than his brush records. This secret knowledge is somehow transferred, now and again, to the canvas on his easel.

So the artist cannot always be content to stay at home. Eye and spirit clamor for the new, the untried. He wants to interpret everything that is to be found in nature's bewildering kaleidoscope of forms and colors. He goes to Spain, to the South Seas, to Italy, to the Orient.

And as he is dissatisfied with the too familiar scene, so is he wearied with the old ways of handling paint. A divine discontent—though sometimes it seems demoniac—has possession of him, and he cannot rest till he has found the fresh field and the new formula. This inner turmoil and this outer activity make for progress, we must believe, though only time can give us the proper perspective on the distance between the modern malcontents and those whom they so disdainfully label with the horrid word "academic." The separation may prove to be very slight, after all, for untried adventures may turn out to be so dangerous that the "moderns" may be glad to creep back to safer ground. Modernism may prove to be a mere fetish, a god of clay, with no evidence of spiritual power.

But adventure is good in itself, and it rejoices me to tell you that Helena Dunlap spent seven months in the Orient, bringing back with her some exceedingly interesting spoils of the chase. They are now hung on the walls of the Stendahl galleries, Ambassador Hotel, for your inspection and appraisement. We are speaking of canvases, of course, not tiger skins. If Miss Dunlap hunted tigers—as she well may have done, for is she not a modernist?—she modestly refrains from mentioning the fact. We find two skins of elephants, very purplish in hue, but they covet representations of living animals.

When Miss Dunlap was painting in Calcutta, Ceylon and Tunis, she considered herself very advanced, indeed, but she confesses that when she reached Paris she almost wept to see how far behind the times she was. "Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay." But she need not worry about this. She is quite modern enough for us benighted Californians. We intend to study her paintings carefully and conscientiously—and some day, with luck, we may reach to Van Gogh, and—who knows?—even to Gauguin. We are determined not to be hidebound in our prejudices. We refuse to be back numbers.

India is a dusty desert, hot and most deducedly unsanitary and uncomfortable. Especially to Americans and Europeans, who refuse to dress according to climate and persist in wearing the woolens of the West. Where a veil and a breechclout are considered full dress, it is folly to don sealskins. But gray dust makes a wonderful background for brilliant color, and Miss Dunlap found in the gorgeous wrappings of the Orientals a hundred subjects for pictures. She is a colorist by temperament. She also loves beauty of form. And the almost naked men and women of Calcutta and Tunis are very graceful in their indolent movements. The crowds in the streets were like bouquets of flowers torn and scattered and driven by the breeze. Miss Dunlap was very happy.

She was happy in spite of the crowds, the dirty, smelly crowds of India, whose curiosity menaced her comfort, and almost her safety, so stupidly intense was it. The lower classes of Calcutta and Ceylon and Bombay disdain the pleasures of the bathtub. They go about with hideous ulcers, loathsome leprosy, revolting smallpox, appalling elephantus. But their garments—such few as they wear—are delightfully colorful, and what artist would not gladly court a lingering and painful death for such an opportunity to paint? Miss Dunlap caught a fever, of course, because she didn't know that she must keep out of the sun at midday, but she speedily recovered and went eagerly back to her brushes.

The pictures that she is showing at the Stendahl are from Paris, Tunis and India. Some of them have already been exhibited. "Arab Cafe, Tunis," and "Versailles Fountain," were shown in Paris at the Societe Nationale des Beaux Arts. "The Orphan" and "Bouquet" were both at a recent exhibit of Les Independants. "Mohammedan Mosque in the Oasis Near Tunis," and others were exhibited in the autumn salon. Miss Dunlap will show in San Francisco, at the Palace of Fine Arts, in March, and probably at the Art Institute, Chicago, later on.

Miss Dunlap was born and brought up in Whittier, but in art she is a Paris-product, and it is to Paris that she hopes to return very soon. Meanwhile, she is ours, and we are proud and glad to claim her. She need not fear for her modernity, however. She must not desire too strongly to paint like the Parisians. When an artist is sincere and himself, he gives us exactly what we are after, he expresses what he knows and feels about beauty. The wise artist does not strive to be what he is not by natural development. He looks askance at faddism in paint.

If you study, without prejudice, these pictures at Stendahl's their beauty will at last possess you. You will find that their vivid colors, often pure from the tube, are full of subtle harmonies, vibrating like a rich strain in music. You will discover the pattern and the decoration, and you will see that nature's truths may be expressed with the utmost simplicity, and that many familiar details are quite unnecessary to our comprehension of the significance of the whole. You recognize a friend a block away, and by what? Certainly not by his eyelashes. Nor by the shape of his fingernails. Not even by the color of his hair and skin. And this is our important lesson in art for today.

When you go to the Ambassador—as you will—look at "Arab Cafe," "The Orphan," "The Bouquet," "Paddy Field in Ceylon," (paddy is growing rice, you must know,) "Hindu Temple in Bombay," "Mohammedan Mosque in the Oasis," "Versailles Fountain," to mention only a few.

Then pause and think long about these pictures and the others in the gallery. Did they not, after the first surprise or shock, give you distinct esthetic pleasure? Are they not lingering with you yet? If so, they have fulfilled some of the most important functions of a picture.

Exhibit of Miniatures.

The fifth annual exhibition of the California Society of Miniature Painters opened March 3 at Cannell and Chaffin's, to continue to March 15. In every respect it is the best show ever held by this vigorous society, which has been in existence only a few years. It is also the first exhibit held since 1917, for something even more important than painting—war work—has kept the members of the society busy.

The history of miniature painting begins with the history of civilization. Pliny wrote of the work of Apelles and says that he was the best artist of any time. Apelles and Protogenes did minute work, and Pausius and Pamphilus delighted to paint on small panels of boxwood. The earliest miniatures that exist are probably the intertextual pictures which occur on cloth and on ancient Egyptian papyri, made about 2000 B.C. The smallest known miniature is a picture of Buddha painted on a grain of rice.

After the medieval illuminators come the true miniature painters as we know them today, painters of portraits for the most part, though they have not disdained tiny landscapes and "ideal" figures. The list of famous English miniature painters is a long one—Nicholas Hilliard, Isaac Olivier, John Hoskins, Samuel Cooper, Thomas Flatman, Bernard Lens, and, stepping into the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, Richard Cosway, Ozias Humphrey, Andrew Plimer, John Smart, Sir William Ross, Lionel Heath, and so on. Today both England and America have miniaturists of exquisite skill.

The best miniaturists are the men and women who also paint in oil on large surfaces. They transfer breadth and strength of handling to the small areas of paper, vellum or ivory, and these, added to the delicacy and refinement needed for such tiny spaces, such jewel-like bits of color give us that delightsome thing we know as miniatures.

You will observe, as you study, the exhibition at Cannell and Chaffin's, that the California Society is keeping pace with the modern trend, and that very little of the work—if any — is pinched or niggled. We find careful concern with the planes of modeling, well-balanced composition, rhythm of lines, color schemes that are full of harmony, seldom the weak touch of the amateur, the man who isn't "onto his job." This in spite of the fact that the miniature offers peculiar temptations to the charlatan because its faults are so easily glossed over.

The gold medal, designed by Douglas Donaldson, went to one of the newest members, Anni Baldaugh Van Westrum, for her portrait group, "Gladys Jameson and Child." This was recently shown in New York on which occasion the critic of the New York Times said of it:

"The breeziest essay in freedom in the present exhibition is by Anni Baldaugh Van Westrum, a portrait of a woman and child that shouts vitality and a brusque disregard of tradition. The artist has the right instinct for suppressing details. She has treated the bank of flowers at the left of the figures and the little house at the right with a high hand, and the effect is excellent. It is a genuine triumph to have kept everything so perfectly in its place with a minimum of fussing."

An honorable mention was bestowed on Mabel Beatrice Smith, also a new member, for her charming portrait of a girl, which she calls "Curls and Black Lace." The figure is beautifully placed and drawn, the color scheme is quietly effective without being weak and the thing is atmospheric and complete.

It may interest the reader to know that Miss Smith, who is a very young and talented artist, recently arrived in Los Angeles with her brother and sister, all three having walked across the continent from New York. If you once harbored the illusion that a miniature painter must of necessity be a willowy person without physical stamina—a conventional esthete—you may at once throw this erroneous theory to the winds. Mabel Beatrice Smith disproves it utterly.

There are over fifty-three entries in the exhibition, the work of eighteen painters. Dana Bartlett, Max Wieczorek and John Coolidge acted as jury for entry and awards.

It would be interesting and instructive to pick out the especially attractive miniatures—from among those submitted by Mary Coleman Allen, Ella Shepherd Bush, Alice C. Foresman, Alice Ludovici, Laura M. D. Mitchell, Alice B. Ring, Mabel Packard, Emma Seboni, C. Albert Brown, Helen Beatrice Slutz, among others equally good—but time is brief and space is limited, and the reader is asked to do this delightful labor for himself.

Western Painters.

Selected work by Western painters, canvases numbering no less than seventy-eight, each with a different authorship, is exhibited at Los Angeles Museum from February 22 to March 19.

This is the first annual traveling exhibition recently inaugurated by the Western Association of Art Museum Directors, and will go to nine different cities, the circuit extending from Los Angeles to Kansas City. There are members of the association: Denver Art Association, Friends of American Art of San Diego, Kansas City Art Institute, Los Angeles Museum of History, Science and Art, Oakland Art Gallery, Portland Art Association, San Francisco Museum of Art, School of American Research in the Museum of New Mexico, Seattle Fine Arts Society. Other cities will no doubt come in rapidly, making this one of the most important art exhibitions in America. Its value to the pubic can hardly be overestimated.

The president of this association of directors is J. Nilsen Laurvik, San Francisco Museum of Art; vice-president, Dr. William Alanson Bryan, Los Angeles Museum; secretary and treasurer, Samuel J. Hume, Greek Theater, University of California.

Los Angeles comes first on the exhibition program, and the second city will be either San Francisco or San Diego.

In his foreword to the catalog Mr. Laurvik, who is speaking of pictures from San Francisco only, not having seen the others, says:

"In these canvases there is a refreshing absence of the banal, conventional subject-matter at one time so popular with the public and the artists alike, and the Whistlerian tonalities and Barbizon romanticism so much in vogue before are no longer apparent. At last the noble lines of the Western hills and plains are being painted without pseudo-idealistic, romantic preconceptions, and gradually the painter and the public are coming to realize how much more beautiful are these realistic versions of our grandiose landscape than the vague, characterless echoes of the Barbizon School, which so long passed for true portraits of the West. A refreshing candor, typical of this Far Western county, and its people, characterizes these later interpretations that will give western art currency far beyond our borders, for, however paradoxical it may seem, it is nevertheless a truism that only art of a strongly nationalistic character has any hope whatever of becoming known and influential internationally, and in the same degree only that art has a chance of becoming a real part of the national being which truthfully reflects the character and conditions of the particular locality in which it is produced."

You are speaking for yourself and your own, John. We, in Los Angeles, still humbly feel that there is something to be said in favor of "Whistlerian tonalities and Barbizon romanticism."

A comprehensive review of the pictures will be given in next week's Art and Artists.

"The Peacock."

H. B. Crouch of Los Angeles recently came into possession of one of the important pictures by Samuel Marsden Brooks, an English painter, who settled in California in 1862. This is "The Peacock," which hung in the Mark Hopkins Institute of San Francisco for many years, and which was later sold to Edwin H. Fricke of Oakland. Though painted a long time ago, "The Peacock" is still in excellent condition, showing very little fading of colors.

Some of Brooks's best works are to be found in the rooms of the Historical Society of Wisconsin, at Madison.

New and Notes.

The work of preparing the 1922 edition of the Southern California Artists' Directory for the press is now well under way, and it is expected that the name and correct address of every artist in Southern California will be listed within the next thirty days. Artists will be classified as painters, sculptors and commercial artists. Artists, send your names to 901 San Fernando Building, or telephone Broadway 1630.

The exhibition of water colors and wood block prints that Birger Sandzen has been holding at the Babcock galleries, New York, created a great sensation. Some of these pictures and prints are now to be seen in the print room at Los Angeles Museum.

The musical program that the California Art Club gave last night at its regular monthly meeting was in charge of Miss Margaret Goetz. Mr. and Mrs. Albers, violinist and soprano, were heard; Margaret Goetz, contralto; George Walker, basso; Mrs. Hernando Lee, pianist.

Benjamin Chambers Brown is holding an exhibition of his recent landscapes at the gallery of Leroy D. Ely, 335 East Colorado street, Pasadena.

Landscapes by Paul Lauritz are exhibited at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, the subjects being from California and Alaska.

An exhibition of pastels and oils by Lillian Prest Ferguson is being held at the Shakespeare Club, Pasadena. The Shakespeare is on Los Robles avenue.

The March exhibit of the Friday Morning Club consists of landscapes and figures from the brush of Alanson Clark. Mr. Clark is director of the advanced classes in the Stickney School of Art, Pasadena.

Ida May Curtis, a painter from Carmel, is showing oil landscapes of California at the gallery of O'Hara & Livermore, South Euclid avenue, near East Colorado, Pasadena, from March 3 to 31.

The first California Art Club Bulletin has just been published in attractive brochure form. It contains much useful information about the history and development of the club.

F. Grayson Sayre, who has recently come to Los Angeles, is showing twenty-four of his water colors in the print room of the Los Angeles Museum. This exhibition will close the 19th of March. Mr. Sayre is interested largely in the desert country, and these landscapes are handled with the greatest ease.

On the day after the marriage ceremony the native bridegroom of West Africa shows his appreciation of his wife by powdering his head with fine clay.

MUSIC CHARMS.

"How to Make Street Cars Popular" Demonstrated by Passenger.

The car was crowded. Weary shoppers and wearier clerks sat, stood and leaned in a thick atmosphere of forced patience, trying to be indifferent to their uncomfortable positions, and to the stuffy, sickly air, as the car crept up the Main-street grade from Twenty-fifth street.

Suddenly everyone straightened. From the rear of the car came the first strains of "Marching Through Georgia." Eyes stared; then as the Yankee classic vibrated through the car in full abandon, every weary face crinkled into an understanding smile. On the lap of a man in a rear seat an unembarrassed phonograph, somewhat battered, was doing its bravest to make the air glad with melody.

Pallid faces now were animated, glowing countenances bespoke pleasure and an interest in life. Passengers addressed each other as if they always had been neighbors.

Before Thirtieth street was reached the phonograph had finished its march through Georgia. The owner promptly adjusted another record. "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" seemed young and fresh on the crowded car. Applause followed its rendition, and the kindly operator put on one record after another.

Most of the selections were old stuff. Just the same, the crowd seemed to enjoy the music as it never did a symphony concert. And when the convention breaker finally tucked his talking machine under his arm and left the car at Thirty-ninth street and Woodland avenue, some one said:

"Wonder why the 'Met' never thought of that? It'd be a stiffer blow at the jitneys than the ordinance to keep them off the streets where trolley cars run!"—[Kansas City Star.

MIGRATION OF STORKS.

The Danish Ornithological Magazine gives interesting details of the route followed by storks in migration. Between 1901 and 1920, 1500 storks were ring-marked in Jutland, and as to fifty-five of these information was obtained. They flew southward from Jutland in September, then to the east along the Oder to the western Carpathians, across Hungary to Transylvania, thence to the Sea of Marmora and probably along the coast lands of Asia Minor to Egypt and so onward to the Transvaal, Natal and Orange Free State. Their rate of flight during migration is estimated at 185 miles a day on an average. The distance from Jutland to the Orange Free State is 15,000 miles. These birds remain in the south until the end of January and then probably return by the same route.

ARTIFICIAL BOGS IN THE NORTHWEST.

Shortage in the cranberry crop in other parts of the United States last year has focused attention upon this new industry of the Pacific Northwest, which promises to furnish strong competition for the product of the eastern part of the American continent, as described and illustrated in the March Popular Mechanics Magazine. After years of experimentation and selection and the development of artificial growing areas, the States of Washington and Oregon have come to the front as producers of cranberries in large commercial quantities.

Lewis and Clark, in the log of their trip across the continent in the early part of the 19th century, mention the fine flavor of the wild cranberries purchased from the Indians along Columbia River. Cultivation of the wild cranberry bogs was not attempted until about thirty-five years ago, and continued in a desultory manner until recently, when a successful means of preparing growing ground was developed.

Preparation of cranberry ground in the Pacific Northwest is an expensive undertaking, the cost being around $1000 an acre. A wild marsh is selected, drained by ditches, cleared of trees and brush, then the turf is removed by what is called the "scalping" process, leaving bare the peat of the bog. Over the peat is spread a four-inch layer of clean, white sand. Planting is the next proceeding. Vine cuttings are used for this purpose, and are pressed through the sand into the peat with a dibble or planting tool. The vines are planted ten inches apart, which makes about 60,000 to the car.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

A committee headed by Mrs. James M. Pratt is working to make up the New York quota of $100,000 in a campaign to help the colleges of the Orient. Ninety communities in the United States are interested in this educational drive, which has received an impetus by the offer of $1,000,000 from the trustees of the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Fund if the Women's Union Christian Colleges of the Orient will raise $2,000,000.

Through the Woman's Union Missionary Society, organized sixty years ago, millions of women have become interested in helping the women of Asia. Establishing schools in India, China and Japan, equipping hospitals, wayside dispensaries and providing trained nurses to work among the people in the Far East have been some of the activities of interested societies.

"Madam, your gifts saved our bodies, they saved our souls, and this shall be your reward."

So wrote Robert Loth, from Budapest, Hungary, to Mrs. Samuel Carter of Phoenix, R. I., in gratitude for a sweater, knitted by her, which he had received in Siberia. The letter was apparently written a considerable period after the gift had reached him.

So far as Mrs. Carter can recall the sweater must have been one of thirty-three she knitted, together with six scarfs, during the war. They were sent overseas by the Pawtuxet Valley branch of the Providence Chapter Red Cross. When time permitted Mrs. Carter inclosed a note in a sweater. Loth received one of the sweaters that carried with it a message from the knitter of Phoenix.

More than $100,000 has already been expended by the American Red Cross, Colorado Disaster Relief Unit, on building and repairs in Pueblo and adjoining territory, according to a report presented to the Red Cross disaster relief advisory committee by A. W. Jones, director-general. This statement was made in connection with a general financial report issued and certified to by the disaster relief unit.

Dr. Clemens Pirquet of the University of Vienna has been notified that a food credit of $200,000 has been cabled to the American Relief Administration in Austria to support the masses of the numerous needy university professors and the intellectual classes generally, who more than anyone else, perhaps, have felt the collapse of the economic system of Austria.

APPRECIATION OF ANDERSON.

talks sparingly. Concerning himself he oftentimes jokes on his shortcomings, and I am certain that no clever writer today possesses anything like Mr. Robinson's modestry regarding his own attainments! Concerning the output of his fellow-craftsmen his criticisms are kind to a degree. My endeavors to extract his honest opinion regarding the work of certain men and women of today, who call their crude free-verse utterances by the sacred name of poetry, were not rewarded by any expression more severe than: "Startling, certainly startling," this softened by his rare smile! Apparently he considered my own forceful adjectives sufficient to cover the entire situation.

We two threaded the years, giving rein to our recollections. It was a varied and interesting talk, during which I discerned no faintest hint of that lack of faith, that destructive attitude of so many literary vandals in this land ours wherein too many men and women—God knows why!—glory in their lack of an abiding faith. Edwin Arlington Robinson believes in God, in His sacred promises of a future life. For this potent reason, and for the excellence of his work, he is sure of remembrance. He has builded not upon quicksands of unfaith and blasphemy, qualities which, along with other sentiments assumed to be unmentioned in the polite literary world, taint so much of the work, both in verse and prose, of present-day writers.

Back in the nineties this young Galahad of Poetland sent forth in sonnet form this appeal:

"Oh, for a poet—for a beacon bright
To rift this changeless glimmer of dead gray;
To spirit back the Muses, long astray,
And flush Parnassus with a newer light;
To put these little sonnet-men to flight,
Who fashion, in a shrewd, mechanic way,
Songs without souls, that flicker for a day,
To vanish in irrevocable night....
What does it mean, this barren age of ours?
Here are the men, the women, and the flowers,
The seasons, and the sunset, as before.
What does it mean? Shall there not one arise
To wrench one banner from the western skies,
And mark it with his name forevermore?"

Verily, one has arisen!

One of the finest tributes paid to Mr. Robinson on the occasion of his fiftieth birthday anniversary two years ago came from the pen of Prof. Bliss Perry, printed on the editorial page of the New York Times:

"We do not know of any poet who has written so little that he might possibly regret having published.

"It should be an inspiration to all writers to know that there is actually living among them a man who has never consented to put forth a slipshod piece of work for the sake of easy money or cheap applause.

"Edwin Arlington Robinson is a living exemplar of the best artistic traditions and, by his uncompromising attitude toward his work and the world, helps to raise the standard of the times in which he lives."

He has "wrenched one banner from the western skies" and "marked it with his name forevermore."

"REVIVE US AGAIN."

Eddie Thomas, evangelist, was conducting meetings at Wall street Methodist Episcopal Church at Jeffersonville and was leading the song service. The choir and the congregation had been singing many choruses and vying with each other. At last, he said: "Now let us have all the Democrats in the house sing this chorus," and they did so. Of course, the Republicans had to follow. There is no doubt that the Republicans had the advantage in numbers, but the Democrats nearly evened up by the "pep" they put into their singing. It happened that the chorus was "Revive Us Again."—[Indianapolis News.

ROCK OF ROME.

A report on the dome of the Rock of Jerusalem is to be published and will be of great interest the Mohammedan world. It may not be generally known that this place is the third in sanctity of all the sanctuaries of Islam, and indeed for a short period it actually formed the Kibla toward which all Moslems prostrated themselves in prayer. Among the more important religious associations of this rock it may be mentioned that it was there David and Solomon were called to repentance, and on account of a vision David chose this site for his temple. From this same spot Mohammed ascended to the seventh heaven after his night journey from Mecca, and lastly it is to be the scene of the great judgment. The histroical associations are not less striking, and such famous names as Omar, Abdelmalek, Saladin and Suleiman are all connected with the rock.—[Detroit News.

RUGS THAT FEAR NO WEAR

The best way to know what age a rug will attain before you have to buy another, is to be sure it has the word "Bigelow" or "Hartford" woven in the back. Then its successor will probably be purchased by your children or grandchildren.

Bigelow-Hartford rugs wear so long that when their successors are needed you have forgotten when you bought the first one.

There are no better wearing materials than those used in the manufacture of Bigelow-Hartford rugs.

Bigelow-Hartford Carpets and Rugs can be obtained from almost any reputable dealer.

The People and Their Daily Troubles

DOROTHY DIX TALKS

The Benevolent Despot.

BY DOROTHY DIX.

"I have had a curious, and a pathetic life," said an old woman the other day, "because on the outside it has been all happiness and prosperity and on the inside it has been nothing but grinding slavery.

"I have been most fortunate in this, that I have always been surrounded by a devoted family and most unfortunate in this, that my [illegible] family has exercised a grinding tyranny over me. I have also been lucky in always having had the things that money buys, but I have never had the actual handling of any money.

"In all my long life I have never had one hour's real freedom. I have never had a single dollar that I could call my own. I have never been free to follow my inclinations, or exercise my own judgment, or do one single solitary thing, just because I wanted to do it, and for no other reason. I have never had $50, no, nor $10, that I could spend without giving any account of what I did with it to anybody and so although I have been beloved, and rich, there has been many a time when I have envied the loneliest woman who had her own latchkey, and the poorest woman who earned her living, and got her own pay envelope on Saturday night.

"All my life I have spent in jail, and that I have been the prisoner of love has not gilded the bars. It has made them only the more unbearable, because you cannot fight against love, and tenderness, as you can against hate and malice. You are helpless before those who enslave you for what they think is your own good.

"I was born into slavery. My mother was one of those women to whom mother love is an obsessing passion. She literally lived for her children, and she permitted no individual lives of our own whatsoever. She would have died for us had that been necessary.

"But she couldn't do this, she ruled every act of our lives. We had to eat what she liked, no matter whether we relished it or not. We had to wear blue frocks, no matter how much we preferred pink. We had to go to dances because she liked to, even if we loathed dancing [illegible]. We had to adopt her [illegible], her opinions, read the books she was interested in, echo her in every possible way.

"It never occurred to her that we had any individuality of our own or that we had any personal preferences, or tastes or inclinations that we had a right to express and gratify. If you had told her that she was as ruthless a tyrant as any that history records, she would have been horrified. Yet she was, and because she took away our liberty in the name of love did not make our slavery any easier to bear.

"Because I writhed under my mother's tyranny I married very young, thinking that way to escape into freedom. Alas, I fell into the hands of another benevolent despot. My husband was devoted to me, as my mother had been, but he was a masterful man, and I soon found that the only way to live in peace with him was to give in to him.

"He was the kind of man who likes to play with a doll baby wife that he can dress up, and show off, and make say 'ma-ma' and 'pa-pa' and move its arms, and turn its head, when he pulls the strings, and it never entered his mind that no human woman really is a doll, or enjoys being treated like a doll.

"He gave me the things that other women envied. We traveled widely, but he made out the itinerary, and we went to the places he chose. We had beautiful homes, but he picked out the places we lived. I had fine clothes, and accounts at the best shops, but I never had any money in my pocketbook, and when he died he left my inheritance in trust for me.

"Even as an elderly widow I am not free. I am still the victim of benevolent despotism, because my children have taken up the job of bossing me where my husband left it off. Everybody tells me how fortunate I am to have such loving children to take such good care of me, and perhaps I am.

"Perhaps it is good of Mary to pick out my clothes for me, and kind of Jane to make me live with her instead of permitting me to live in my own home, and dutiful of James to take complete charge of my money, so that I won't be worried about investments, or even know what I have got, but I would like to break my shackles for once, and have just a little freedom before I die.

"I don't like Mary's taste in hats, and I would like to buy one that represented my own desires in millinery. I want my own home, in which I can do exactly as I please, instead of having to adapt myself to Jane's housekeeping. I want my own money, and to throw it away, or spend it foolishly if I choose. I would like to do a dozen things of which my children do not approve, but I shall never do any of them, because I cannot make up my mind to worry or hurt those that love me. I shall be the slave to the end.

"It is a dreadful thing to think of the wrong that these benevolent despots do, isn't it? It is a cruel thing to realize that the people who love you can do you a more deadly wrong than your most malignant enemy could. That is why we all should pray God to protect us from our friends. We can defend ourselves from those who hate us.

"The one thing that we all desire more than anything else in the world, is to have our own way. The one thing that is absolutely essential to our happiness is personal liberty, and yet that is the very thing that we find it hardest to give to those nearest to us, and that it why family life is so often unhappy, and why divorce is so common."

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

Criticises System.

REDLANDS, March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] We are reading some very good matter under "People and Their Troubles" in your paper, and it may be that some one retired from, but after having large experience among the schools of Wisconsin as common, high school and normal instructor, should pull a little at the coat tail of the California school system. Too many dollars are paid for our schools—not our education.

Our children are pushed on too rapidly.

It may be not too much effort given to physical performances—but too little to mental development.

Too many clerks and experts in high schools.

Swamped under useless data.

These things would require a strong search into State educational statistics; both of our State and with other States wholesome comparisons made. Served eighteen summers as one of the State Institute conductors of Wisconsin.

W. L. MORRISON.

Says It's a Sham.

LOS ANGELES, March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I was amused this morning when I read in "Daily Troubles" page of The Times, the letters signed by Campbell Hardy and Frederick McCormick, purporting to be answers to a letter written by Frederick Munson, wherein Mr. Munson pretends to be in favor of a law that would compel people to go to church and support churches, and force them to become moral and good, and much more nonsense of the same nature. I was not surprised when these replies appeared, as it was plain to see that the Munson letter was a sham, and only intended to create a prejudice in the minds of unthinking people against the dry movement. It was merely a dummy set up by one wet for the other wets to attack and throw rocks at, but the trick was too silly and transparent to accomplish the desired result. The present hue and cry about so-called "blue laws" comes from certain persons, who are trying to discount the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead law. All intelligent people know it would not be possible to have such laws passed in this country—Mr. Hardy admits this—and they would not be desirable even if obtainable, and no effort is being made by the dry forces to have such legislation enacted.

But while we fully realize and know that men cannot be made moral by law, we also know that such conditions and environment can be created by law, as will make it easier for them to do right and harder for them to do wrong, and thus a higher standard of morals can be maintained. By law the vicious, evil-minded and predatory classes can be restrained to some extent.

By law our girls and women can be at least partially protected. By law safeguards are placed around the young and others unable to care for themselves, to protect them from designing and unscrupulous persons. To the same extent that crime, immorality and indecency are restrained or eliminated, the opposite virtues are promoted.

When we pull injurious weeds out of the garden we do not force the vegetables to grow, but by so doing we give them a better chance to grow and produce a profitable crop. When we close the grogshops we, to some extent, remove temptation from the paths of our boys and girls, and make it easier for them to develop into sober, moral and useful citizens, and it does not matter one whit whether those grogshops are called saloons, cafes, wine rooms, beer gardens or thirst parlors. Under either of these names or any other that may be suggested, the same quality of booze will be sold, and they will draw the same class of patrons, and the temptations, influences and results will be exactly the same.

Mr. McCormick says that Mr. Munson should move to some place where he likes the laws and adds, "I believe a person ought to live where he likes the laws and not the climate." What the climate has to do with the case is not apparent, but why does Mr. McCormick stay in a country where prohibition is so popular that it is permanently incorporated in the national constitution? Why doesn't he migrate to some moist country—Germany, for instance?

GEORGE E. MOREY.

We're on Our Way.

LONG BEACH, March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] There was a divine here recently who is a representative of a leading denomination and he made a severe attack on the moving-picture shows, the modern dances, the divorce evil; including booze and cigarettes. It seems we are headed for Hades on a toboggan-slide. Let us hope we are not as black as we are painted. There are all sorts of people connected with movies and some of them ought to be weeded out, but on the whole they compare favorably with the same number in other walks of life. Many screen pictures are interesting and some of them are edifying while there are some that exert a pernicious influence over boys and girls. Being on old fogy, my tastes are for legitimate drama. There are many old boys and girls, whose hearts thrill with pleasure when they recall Booth, Barrett, McCullough, Jefferson and Mansfield, not to mention a galaxy of feminine stars, who faced the footlights a generation ago. It was in the late 60's that Lydia Thompson's blondes blew into New York and caused the Knickerbockers to sit up and followed by the Black Crook. Before that the leg shows were confined to the Varieties, where no respectable woman was expected to attend. About the same time the Can Can was transplanted, but it was soon outlawed and suppressed—nasty and indecent it was. But to return to the divine; he stated that by the trial marriages now in vogue we were in the same class with the Mormons and no better. The South Carolinans are deprived of participating in the matrimonial grab bag at least they can't change partners every season, though by stopping over at Reno they might secure a divorce between trains—but the divorcees ought to be required to chew the cud of reflection for six months before they embark on another matrimonial voyage. When they become addicts, they are not satisfied with the same partner longer than a year, and sometimes less. This way of changing one's wife as one would a partner in a cotillion is too strenuous a gait. There ought to be a uniform divorce law and instead of forty-four reasons for securing a divorce it ought to be reduced to six. There is a Spanish proverb, "It is a wise child who knoweth its own father,' which may be true. Rome and Carthage both went on the rocks owing to the effeminacy and profligacy of their people. Will history repeat itself? Quien Sabe?

W. B. McDONALD.

They Scatter Sunshine.

TUBERCULOSIS SANATORIUM, SOLDIERS' HOME, March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] At a time when so many people are condemning all moving-picture people for the acts of a [illegible] it seems to me it is only right that the public generally throughout the United States should know some of the good things done by our friends in Hollywood.

In the sanatorium are about 350 men, most of them World War veterans, and particularly all here broken in health as a result of service to their country. You can imagine many dreary, tiresome days are passed, but mixed in them are brighter ones, for some of the moving-picture stars are instrumental in bringing us shows and in a number of instances have appeared in person to entertain us and cheer us. We feel there are as many real people in the movie colony at Hollywood as there are in any lines of endeavor. I have mentioned writing this letter to many of my comrades and they approve of it.

Question: What is meant by Commercial Geography? L. D.

Answer: Commercial geography treats of the distribution of the world's products, of existing demands for these commodities and satisfactory means for transportation and exchange.

Q.: Where were electric lights first used? C. M.

A.: Electric lights were first used in Pearl Street Station, New York City, in 1882.

Q.: What are the five largest cities in the world? R. H. G.

A.: London is still the largest city in the world. Following according to population are New York, Paris, Chicago and Tokio.

Q.: Where is the First Division of the Army to be moved? K. R. I.

A.: The First Division is to be moved from Camp Dix, N. J., to Camp Meade, Md., the transfer to be completed by April 16.

Q.: What is the difference between a hedgehog and a porcupine? R. K. B.

A.: The hedgehog and porcupine are entirely different families. The true hedgehog does not occur in this country. The porcupine is found in both the old and the new world. The old porcupines are terrestrial and fossorial, while the species found in this hemisphere are arboreal and not fossorial.

Q.: How many juvenile delinquents are there in the United States? E. S. T.

A.: The latest census of delinquents lists 24,974 in institutions.

Q.: What is the drug just discovered in Germany and claimed to be a cure for sleeping sickness? R. B.

A.: The Public Health Service says that it is not known in this country what the drug is that is used by the Germans in treating sleeping sickness. The formula is being carefully guarded. It must be understood that the drug discovered by the Germans is used in the treatment of the African form of sleeping sickness. It is not the same disease that was reported in the newspapers about a year ago as having been prevalent in certain parts of the United States.

Q.: What is the bunch of bristles which is found hanging on the breast of the male turkey called? A. F. G.

A.: The bunch of bristles which is found hanging on the breast of the male turkey is known as the tassel or brush.

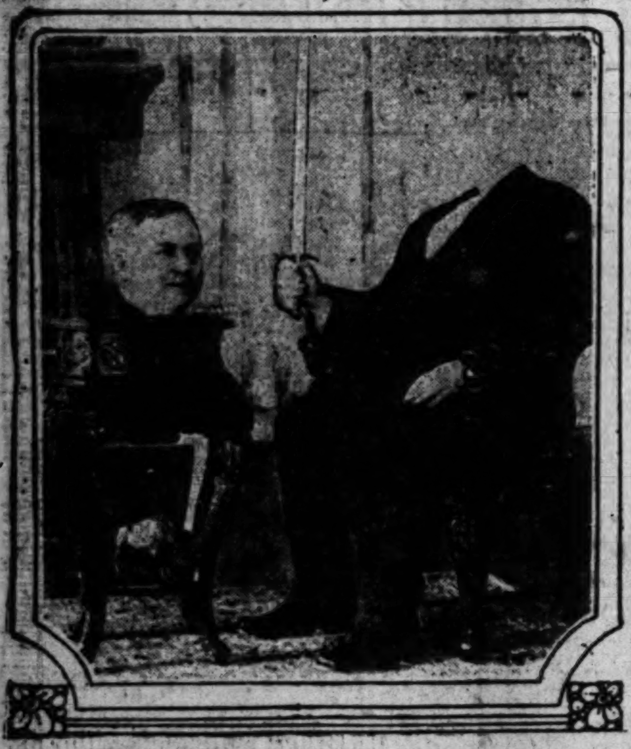
Knows This Trick, But is Puzzled.



Davis Abbott, at Whose Home Miss Dennis is a Visitor, Caught by the camera in the course of his famous decapitation trick.

GIRL LOCATES LOST JEWELS.

clined to proclaim her decided liking for them—just as she openly admits her fondness for bonbons, especially those that are chocolate-coated. She agreed, coquettishly, to the parking in the shaded spot.

But before the kiss had materialized she suddenly became tense—so the young man reported next day to a wondering audience of his chums—and appeared to "act strangely." She lifted her arms upward, as if she would embrace the stars, and her lips tremblingly repeated words she seemed to hear—words her boy comanion heard only as they drifted from her lips:

"A man—hurt—an automobile—quick—if they do not—hurry he will die—send a message—to the hospital—quick."

There were other words—the uncanniness of them and the situation in which he found himself unnerved the boy. He grasped Eugenie by her arm and shook her—suddenly she collapsed. When she revived her first words were, "Did they send to the hospital for the doctors?"

Then, her full consciousness returned, she begged her companion to drive quickly into town—to the beginning of one of the avenues where the street-car line came to an end. "Drive fast," she cried, "there has been an accident—a man may be dying." The boy, awed, drove fast, following the girl's directions. When they reached the avenue Eugenie had described they saw two shattered automobiles at the intersection of a street. One driver had been careless and had turned at too high a speed. The other had crashed into him. There still was a little group of neighborhood people standing near, talking of what they had seen—of the man who had been mangled and who had been taken to the hospital.

Eugenie explained later that her collapse in the automobile when the terrible sight was thrown before the eyes of her mind—her "psychic eyes"—was not a trance at all. It was as if she had been at the very scene of the accident, she said, and the horror of it overcame her. She had simply fainted as any woman of a nervous, delicate disposition would have been likely to do at the sight of the man lying dying and at the ominous sound of the crash of the collision.

She could not explain how the terrible vision had come to her. She cannot, and makes no effort to, explain any of the far off, weird sights that come before her "psychic eye"—if "psychic eye" there be.

TO UNDERGO MORE TESTS.

The "observations and testings," as Mr. Abbott calls his investigation into the gifts of the Kansas girl, have covered several weeks, and many of the tests have been so spectacular and the demonstrations so awe-inspiringly curious that it was deemed essential to arrange to take Miss Dennis to New York for the further tests which are soon to take place.

Abbott says he will tell "a most fascinating story" to the Society for Psychical Research. Some of the carefully compiled profs of important manifestations, of Eugenie's, have been assembled and are quite interesting.

Wednesday evening, February 8, Mr. Abbott assembled twenty-five guests at his home to meet the girl and to observe demonstrations of her unusual tendencies. It is doubtful if that evening will ever be forgotten by those who came to see out of curiosity and who found one of the most enthralling of evenings.

Soon after the spectators had assembled Eugenie went into that perfectly normal, entirely human and not at all extraordinary state of normal concentration which precedes the "revelations." She was soon reciting interesting and truthful things about the personal affairs of each of her guests—recitals which amazed the hearers.

With the suddenness of a craftsmanlike climax of a thrilling melodrama, Eugenie raised her hand and cried in shrill and excited tones:

"Wait! Wait!"

That repeated exclamation broke sharply into the personal demonstrations she was giving to Mrs. C. W. Kalteirer of 2211 Ohio street, and Mrs. H. C. T. Wulff of 3314 South Nineteenth street, both of Omaha.

"I'm getting something!" Eugenie cried. "Something awful is happening. A man is being killed, right now—right here in Omaha. I see a street car. I see three dark-faced men running through the streets. The man is dead."

HEAR OF THE MURDER.

That was all. Then she went on giving her message to Mrs. Kalteirer.

Fifteen minutes later the guests left the Abbott home. They went to a trolley station near by and boarded a home-bound car. Having taken their seats in the trolley, they observed that the conductor whose name is Edward Harrington—and the passengers were all excited and were talking of a murder which, it seemed, had taken place in close proximity to them.

"What happened?" Mrs. Kalterier asked Harrington.

"A policeman was just killed at the end of the car line—about fifteen minutes ago," the conductor replied.

The policeman who had been killed was Patrolman James E. Scott.

An investigation showed that the murder had taken place exactly at the minute Eugenie had seen it with her "psychic eye"—that three negroes had been overheard plotting to commit the crime, and that the dead policeman had been shot by each of the plotters. This story is on record, signed and sworn to, and will be presented by Abbott to the Society for Psychical Research.

Abbott admits what he has never admitted before—that he is practically convinced Eugenie Dennis has a power which this world knows nothing of; that she has a mind which reaches into some immortal plane of habitation, which reaches out, likewise, into the low-

Appendicitis Strikes Engineer in Cab

Engineer Shows Great Heroism—Drives Engine Safely In

While speeding his engine thundering down the rails a Western railway engineer was suddenly stricken with appendicitis. Bravely remaining at his seat, his weakened hand still clutching the throttle as his fireman held him to his seat, the man drove the train safely in, on time.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in exactly the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble and the development of influenza or grippe, by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Just exactly the same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

FOUR STARS ALL TOLD IN SUPERBA FEATURE.

The employment of three stars in support of the star ought to mean that the picture in question has been produced with unusual care, and that is just what Universal did when they started work on "Tracked to Earth," Frank Mayo's latest, which opens at the Superba Theater today.

Virginia Valli, former star of musical comedies, Buck Connors, cowboy star, and Harold Goodwin, former Fox star, are the three chief supporting players to Mayo in this Western picture.

Virginia Valli, with her old type of beauty, was once a Ziegfeld Follies girl, and her effort in "Tracked to Earth," one of her first screen appearances, so pleased Director William Worthington that she was immediately re-engaged to appear in "The Storm." Buck Connors was a champion horse-rider and has starred in Western pictures for some time. Goodwin made such a good player of himself for three years with Universal that Fox starred him in a series of pictures.

"Tracked to Earth" is a story by William J. Neidig, its action centered around a smooth-tongued horse-thief, the role played by Mayo.

Harry Sweet in his latest Century comedy, "A One-Horse Town," is on the same bill, as is the third round of H. C. Witwer's famous stories of society and the prize ring, "The Leather Pushers."

Screen Acting Tests Quality and Ability of Even Seasoned Thespians.

BY HARRY CARR.

"Poor actors from the legitimate find salvation in the films while first-class film actors graduate to the legitimate," writes a well-known woman journalist.

One of the joyous features of the present film flurry is that it gives newspaper writers a chance to tell what they think they know about the movies.

It seems so easy and simple when you are on the outside looking in—

Those who have tried it know, however, that acting for the films is incomparably more difficult than acting for the speaking stage.

While D. W. Griffith was casting "Way Down East," I saw him try out nearly a hundred actors of established reputation on the stage before he found one who could act sufficiently well to "get by" on the screen.

Josef Shildkraut, the Austrian John Barrymore, who was the sensation of New York last season in "Liliom," told me that his first screen part opened up subtleties and difficulties and shades of fine-

EXPRESS FOR DISTRIBUTION.

Fairbanks Suggests New Scheme; United Artists Likely to Try It; May Lease Eastern "Famous."

BY FREDERICK JAMES SMITH.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—Doug Fairbanks and the United Artists have a startling idea which may revolutionize the whole movie distribution system. It is nothing more or less than utilizing the American Express Company to handle and distribute all film products.

Wednesday evening Fairbanks discussed the idea with the chief officials of the express concern, and it seems very possible that the scheme may materialize. As The Times readers probably know, the United Artists, like all other releasing organizations, maintain exchanges throughout this country and abroad. This means a heavy overhead for district managers, workers, salesmen, rents and so on.

The Fairbanks idea would turn all films over to the American Express Company at a fixed rate, eliminating all but the traveling investigators and experts maintained to go about studying conditions.

This, by the way, is the first published intimation of the possible deal between the United Artists and the American Express Company.

We spent an interesting day in the Federal court with the Fairbanks this week, during the suit brought by Mrs. Cora Wilkenning for alleged commission. It was the day that Mrs. Charlotte Pickford and Mary, herself, testified. Mama Pickford certainly made an obdurate witness in the hands of Mrs. Wilkenning's lawyers. Mary visibly stirred the interest of the jury at her appearance.

Mary, by the way, does not look in the best of health. She says herself that she intends to rest for a while, before starting her new "Tess of the Storm Country," upon her return to California. Doug, however, plans to plunge into his version of the glamourous adventures of "Robin Hood" as soon as he gets back.

Plans are now a bit indefinite for Jack Pickford. "The Tailor-made Man" was sold by Mary to Charles Ray when a deal for "Six-Cylinder Love" had been practically closed. Mary did not believe "The Tailor-made Man" was just the right sort of story for Jack. Then negotiations for "Six-Cylinder Love" fell through, and now Jack is without a vehicle.

Rumors of the impending marriage of Marilynn Miller and Jack continue. We would not be at all surprised if it happens as soon as Jack finishes his first picture. We hear that Mary met Marilynn the other day for the first time, and, at least, does not disapprove.

John Barrymore gave a party

ENGLISH FOLLIES HERE.

Unique Tour Brings Music and Comedy Troupe to Los Angeles.

The search for the thirty most beautiful and talented girls in Great Britain, conducted by Albert De Courville for the six months previous to his leaving for America with the "London Follies," has had at least two important results.

First, conservative England, after being greatly upset over the producer's tactics, awoke to a new pride in its assets along this line, and though deploring the fact that so many of the assets are now away from home, is loud in praise of Mr. De Courville's patriotic endeavors. Second, the chorus which will confront the audience tomorrow night at the Mason Opera-house is absolutely the creme de la creme, le dernier cri and the ultimate achievement in collections of pulchritude.

Perhaps Mr. De Courville's modus operandi was hardly fair to the sensitive British public—but there was an American twist about it all that charms even while one condemns; and, what is more to the purpose, it got results.

"The King of Revues," as De Courville is called in London, started his search quietly. A month later he became much less quiet, and began running want ads in all the papers. There were thousands of applications, but still the De Courville eye remained unsatisfied.

Finally the entire Gaiety Theater press department was set to work to ferret out girls with the required pulchritude. During this eleventh-hour drive a storm was raised in the press by those who claimed that Mr. De Courville's statement that he could not secure thirty girls with beauty and talent enough to work in the chorus was an insult to English womanhood.

Mr. De Courville said nothing, but kept up his campaign, and it was not until his boat was on the eve of sailing for this country that he issued the following statement:

"Now that I'm on my way with the entire company filled, I'll frankly admit that during the past few weeks I've seen more beautiful girls with talent than I thought existed in the whole world, let alone England; but I think you'll agree that my reason for getting in touch with so many is a good one.

"In America, I am told, young men have a habit of getting what they go after. Some of these chaps are bound to fall in love with my girls, and, if they do, what chance have I, or anyone, to stop the wedding bells from chiming if the young lady is willing? Therefore, I have fortified myself with a list of far in excess of the number of my revue. I am bringing fifteen extra girls with me and have reservations on every boat coming over for the balance of the season, so I can fill my vacancies at a fortnight's notice."

Headed by Harry Tate, who is considered by many to be one of the world's greatest comedians, the company numbers some seventy people, among whom are included such well-known "West End" favorites as Lillian Coles, Connie Browning, Isobelle Dorothy, Marie Dayne, Billy Holland, Deane Tribune, W. Wania, Henri Rosen, Luxmore Hocking, H. A. Kennedy, Leo Mense, Ronald Tate, Harry Beasley and Tom Tweedly.

Vaudeville fans will remember Harry Tate's "Motoring," which has appeared at the Orpheum; but this comedian himself has never appeared in the United States before, except in New York and Boston, where he scored a sensational success. In the "London Follies" Mr. Tate is doing the sequel to "Motoring," called "Selling a Car," and his latest hit, "Golfing"—both of which are said to be even more laugh provoking than the original sketch.

In order to be assured of success in his invasion of America, Mr. De Courville has given no thought to production expense and the costumes and scenery are on a scale very seldom seen outside of the largest producing centers. The noted English producer has a genius for conceiving novel effects and he has brought only his greatest successes across the ocean.

The revue is in fifteen scenes, each of which would be an outstanding feature in an ordinary production, and is sprinkled with musical numbers written especially for this tour. Among the most talked-of hits are "Fair India," "The Rainbow of Flowers," "The Rag From Home," "An Old World Melody," "Chinese Porcelains," "The Spinning Tops" and "The Lampshade."

It is a source of wonderment to many that a company of this size should appear in the West before playing on Broadway, but not to friends of Mr. De Courville, among whom he is known as England's most daring producer. The company was originally brought across the Atlantic for a tour of Canada under a heavy guarantee, but when they reached Vancouver, Mr. De Courville decided to dodge the balance of the Canadian winter and come to California.

Since crossing the line, the success of "The Follies" has exceeded all expectations and it is only the lateness of the season and the fact that most of the cast must fulfill contracts in London this summer that prevent the organization remaining in the United States indefinitely, as many Broadway managers are clamoring for the attraction.

Clubs Plan to Hold Gala Music Week.

The Federated Music Clubs of Los Angeles county will hold a gala Music Week in Los Angeles during the week of the 18th to 25th insts., and it is expected that every club belonging to the federation in this locality will give one or more programs, and will co-operate with the various committees to the extent that a knowledge of the work of the federation may be spread broadcast throughout the country.

Mrs. Mattison B. Jones of Glendale is the chairman. She will be assisted by Mrs. Grace Widney Mabee, chairman of church music of the National Federation of Music Clubs, who will plan the part that the churches will take in the celebration, and Mrs. Emma M. Bartlett, State chairman of public school music, who has charge of the plans for the participation of the schools of the county. The chairman, who will be held responsible for the activities of the clubs, has not been chosen as yet, but Mrs. Mattison B. Jones is taking the responsibility for them at the present time.

One of the fundamental reasons for Music Week is to impress upon all of the citizens of this county the importance of music in civic life; not only does it raise the standard of culture in the community, but well organized musical activities are an incentive to the growth of the community. It has been pointed out that people coming to California to live have chosen certain cities and towns because of the splendid opportunities afforded for musical education.

In "London Follies,"

Which is to sparkle into Los Angeles tomorrow night.

Continuity is All They Did Not Demolish.

Breakage bills mounted high while Harold Lloyd's "A Sailor-Made Man," now running at the Alhambra Theater, was under production. Especially adept in breaking everything with which he came in contact was Dick Sutherland, who plays the Sultan in the picture. No day passed but the actor, who was hard pressed by Lloyd in the oriental scenes, broke a glass door knob or a hinge, while he graduated quickly to other items such as swords and keys, an expensive throne and what not, in the demolishment.

"Sultan's breakage" became a matter of bets on the set. Jean Havez and Sam Taylor, on the comedian's scenario staff, made computations hourly as to the amount of wreckage, for the Sultan seemed pursued by ill luck. Havez was saying one day: "I don't believe he'll break anything within the next hour but the jewels in his bonnet," when bang went something and loud laughter followed.

This time it was Lloyd himself who had his first breakage—a door knob. Later came another when, out in the lot, the comedian started to do a pole vault and beat his record of the day before. All in position, the pole snapped.

"It's the jinx," said everybody ruefully and again they voiced the same words a few hours later when the string of pearls on the Sultan's bonnet snapped and made a trail from one end of the palace to the other.

Making of comedy is seldom without fun, but the Lloyd company had more of it in "A Sailor-Made Man" than in any other production.

BEBE STARS AS A "GAME CHICKEN."

Have you a little Spanish grandmother in your home?

"It's your loss if you haven't," says Bebe Daniels, star of "A Game Chicken," which will open at Clune's Broadway today.

Miss Daniels has a quaint little grandmother who is, in her way, as interesting as the pretty star of Realart Pictures herself. Eva de la Plaza Griffin is the daughter of a one-time governor of Colombia. On a trip to Buenos Aires she met the American consul in that city, and married him as the culmination of a real international romance. Mrs. Griffin traces her descent from the Empress Josephine of France.

When Mrs. Griffin learned that her grand-daughter was to do a picture with a lot of Spanish atmosphere, she took from her trunks the relics of her youth; fine shawls and mantillas, rare and beautiful fans and jewelry. Many of these appear as costumes and "props" in the picture, and Mrs. Griffin, as interested as any young girl, was nearly always on the stage when Spanish scenes were being made.

"A Game Chicken" was written for Miss Daniels by Nina Wilcox Putnam, the well-known fictionist, and the scenario was prepared by Fred Myton, under the supervision of Elmer Harris. The supporting cast includes Pat O'Malley, Hugh Thompson, Martha Mattox, James Gordon, Gertrude Norman, Charles Force and Mattie Peters.

SOUTH SIDE EBELL WILL HEAR LECTURE.

"If I Were a Woman" was the amusing and thought provocative subject of Dr. Bruce Brown before the South Side Ebell Club, Thursday. Mrs. George Salm, president of the club, was back in the chair after a month's illness and was warmly welcomed. Mrs. Berenice A. Johnson will speak Thursday on "Civics." Club politics have begun to command some attention, a nominating committee having been elected by the club to report at the third meeting this month.

Charles Ray as Artist at the Kinema.

"R.S.V.P."

Ray again—and better than ever. You've seen him as a football star, a prize fighter and a country hick. Now you can see him as an artist in "R.S.V.P.," his latest attraction, which came to the Kinema Theater yesterday.

It's chock-full of Rayisms and Ray fun! A pretty society girl who assumes the role of an artist's model, a struggling young devotee of the palette who refuses financial aid in order to remain independent, an equally struggling-and-starved fellow artist, and an invitation to the town's swell social function, furnish the background for this comedy drama.

The star is supported by an excellent cast that brings abundant humor into the story supplied by Rob Wagner, and everybody knows him. He's the man who wrote the illuminating articles in the Saturday Evening Post that first gave the public an insight into the magnitude and intricate details of the motion-picture industry. And you will agree that he knows what constitutes a good screen story after viewing "R.S.V.P."

Lovers of the great outdoors will be especially pleased with the screen offering, in connection with the feature of Jack Callicott's great hunt picture, taken on the Roosevelt Trail in Arizona. It is full of action and is said to be unequaled in scenic locale photographed.

The Kinema Symphonic Orchestra with Rene Williams conducting will lend its colorful music to the whole bill of varied entertainment.

SPEEDY LOVE IN VIOLA DANA FILM.

They called her a love speeder because the beautiful heiress carelessly toyed with one suitor after another until she had a string of thirteen tagging after her. But her speeding ceased when she met the fourteenth lover.

"The Fourteenth Lover" is a comedy starring Viola Dana. It will show, beginning today, at Loew's State Theater. Miss Dana is seen in the role of a society girl whose flirtatious exploits almost wrecked her household.

In the character of Vi Marchmont, Miss Dana is looking for a fourteenth admirer to add to her list when her parents take alarm. They whisk her away to a secluded spot, where they arrange for her to meet the rich young man they wish her to marry.

But Vi has already lost her heart to the gardener.

There are complications, misunderstandings, and a number of laughable situations before the young lovers succeed in eluding parental traps and getting married.

As the whirlwind debutante Miss Dana is said to have her best role. Beside Jack Mulhall, popular Los Angeles actor, the supporting cast includes Theodore Von Eltz, Kate Lester, Alberta Lee, Frederick Vroom and Fornzie Gumm.

NEW PLAN FOR DISTRIBUTION.

the other night, the Fairbanks being among the guests of honor. Barrymore astonished everyone by talking about his baby after the approved style of every proud papa of legend. "She's a wonderful child," said John. "Every day she's different. You should see her old-world face."

John's plans are indefinite. He will not return to the stage at once; indeed, he says that the strain of regular nightly and matinee appearances saps his vitality so much that his footlight engagements will be few and far between. Meanwhile, however, he will make a picture now and then. His "Sherlock Holmes," by the way, is reported to be the sure-fire hit.

It now seems certain that Famous Players-Lasky will not reopen their Long Island studios this spring or, indeed, at all. We hear that the establishment is to be rented and that all plans of the Famous Players here are definitely off. All of which should help lull California's fear that the movie industry will ever trek eastward.

George Fitzmaurice and the other Famous Players folk will start for California immediately. John Robertson is due to arrive in a day or so from England. He was scheduled to come over with Fitzmaurice but remained behind a week to finish cutting his last production.

Cecil De Mille's illness has been wildly rumored to be decidedly serious. We are glad to report James Kirkwood's comments upon the tale.

Mr. Kirkwood returned from Europe on the same steamer with Mr. De Mille and spent nearly every afternoon during the volage with him. He says he marvels at Mr. De Mille's courage and poise in the midst of his affliction.

In Paris the physicians warned Mr. De Mille against making the trip at this time, but the director insisted that he must return to Hollywood. So, in the face of their forebodings and well-nigh helpless from rheumatism, he started homeward.

"It was marvelous to sit and talk with the man," said Kirkwood. "Sick and utterly worn out, he maintained the same charm of the host that he did in his days of health in California. It was superb bravery."

LUBITSCH AND PHARAOH.

On the whole, we were disappointed in Ernest Lubitsch's "The Loves of Pharaoh." This story of ancient Egypt has been done with fine technical dexterity, but it lacks the human fire of either "Passion" or "Deception." Lubitsch has craftily acquired the American methods of lighting and camera work, but, along with these, he has also taken over our inability to humanize history.

Even Emil Jannings, who was such a kingly Louis and Henry VIII, seems lost as the Pharaoh in "The Loves of Pharaoh."

Everyone in the film, in fact, seems to be history-conscious.

Lubitsch did without Pola Negri in "Deception" without disastrous results, but we would not recommend that he try it again after witnessing the new spectacle.

This week's new pictures were pretty generally uninteresting. Universal withdrew "Foolish Wives" and presented Priscilla Dean in "Wild Honey," which proved to be just melodramatic piffle.

Wallace Reid's "The World's Champion," is of interior quality, a hurriedly thrown-together comedy of an English prodigal who returns and proves to be a pugilist, to the horror of his family.

Everyone has been printing great things of Constance Talmadge's "Polly of the Follies," but it did not tickle our risibilities.

Armed with tickets resembling pasteboards to the world's series, we viewed the first installment of Shaw's "Back to Methuselah" as represented by the Theater Guild at the Garrick Theater. All of the critics reported boredom at the first two episodes of the Shaw plea for correcting humanity by giving it a geat span of life; that is, ending the human failing of dying before anyone learns much of anything. Personally, we enjoyed the Shavian verbal fireworks.

The first episode, in the Garden of Eden, seems rather tedious, although Ernita Lascelles is as pulchritudinous an Eve as one could desire. But the second interlude, of the brothers Barnabas, wherein Shaw trots out Lloyd George and Asquith with little or no disguise, is decidedly entertaining. It is rather uncanny to see A. P. Kaye's performance of Lloyd George, or Joyce-Burge, as Shaw calls him.

Indeed, the whole of the first section of "Back to Methuselah" is well done. Next week we will see the second portion, with the final third to come the week following.

Viola Dana is in town.

Herbert Howe sails for Europe on the Arabic, March 8. Howe is going to write of Europe movie and stage conditions for the American Magazine.

Music and Mystery at Pantages.

Music, mystery and thrills are the dominant features of the Pantages program for the coming week, with interspersed comedy events to "blend the bill," as Alexander Pantages describes the process of moulding vaudeville acts into a pleasing ensemble.

The novelty headliner is "Al Sweet's Singing Band," who give a twenty-minute concert that travels from jazz to opera and back again. They are vocalists as well as bandsmen, and equally gifted both ways.

The Australian Mendozas, daring motorcycle riders who risk their lives to provide thrills for those who love to shiver, perform their daring stunts in a globe of steel latticework. This is their first appearance in Los Angeles.

"The Veiled Isis" is vaudeville's newest mystery. Her cleverness in receiving the thought impressions of her audiences and answering questions propounded to her in this way is one of the season's sensations.

The comedy of the week is in the hands of Billy Green and Charles Dunbar; The Wyoming Trio, who also offer roping and whip tricks, and the Pan-American Four, a colored comedy quartette.

Harold Lloyd is featured in his comedy "Hand to Mouth." "Two Kinds of Women," starring Pauline Frederick, is the first appearance of this clever player in the Pantages screen. It is a story of contrasted feminine types in deadly combat for a man's love.

Mostly Fun on New Bill at Orpheum.

Any motorist will admit it is trying upon the patience to have to slip into second on a hill and any amusement seeker will not only admit but acclaim with noises long and loud that is both trying and useless to try and put a first-speed laugh on a second-speed laugh hill. However, this will not be the case at the Orpheum for with the bill, beginning tomorrow afternoon, every laugh will be in high gear, it is prophetically set forth.

Headlining are the Four Marx Brothers. They are presenting a musical piece entitled, "On the Balcony." These clever entertainers have carved an enviable place in the world of amusement and the act they are presenting this year is even funnier than the previous one. It deals with four Hebrew boys trying to get the most out of their admission from the balcony of a theater. The Marx brothers have worked out the comedy until there isn't a line left in the act that isn't bubbling with humor.

Ben Bernie used to come on the stage and do some eccentric violin playing and that was all, but one day the violin broke and he found out he could think up some very amusing comedy; now he plays the violin and does some very clever patter also.

The English maintain that the American stage portrayal of them is entirely wrong; however, that doesn't keep the Ward brothers from getting plenty of comedy out of their little travesty, "Penny Ante." They assume the "silly-ass" type of Englishmen and call themselves Bertie and Archie.

Bobby Adams and Jewell Barnett do a singing and dancing act, which they call "Personality Plus," which is an appropriate title, as each girl certainly has a plentiful supply of that article so indispensable to the vaudeville artist.

Most people cannot even eat a sandwich in a full dress suit, but John and Emile Nathane are not in that class as they do an act called, "Feats of Daring Artistically Executed," in which they wear dress suits and never so much as wrinkle a cuff.

Pallenberg's bears are three well-trained animals and Emile Pallenberg has succeeded in training them so they display the comical part of a bear's nature.

"Who is Your Boss?"—that question if delivered in the proper place and to the proper person, possibly a wife, might cause quite an uproar and it does cause some merry spasms in the way it is asked by Lang and Vernon. Lydell and Macy with their two lovable old characters, hold over.

APPETITES VARIOUS AMONG THE STARS.

BUT, WHEN ANALYZED, THEIR TASTES SEEM MERELY HUMAN.

What sort of refreshments tickle the palates of our favorite stars? Do the popular players of the screen live on ambrosia and ancient wines, or does just plain, ordinary food appeal to them as it does even to those who are not popular?

"Give me a hot dog and I'm happy," said Marie Prevost. Perhaps this is because Miss Marie has spent so much time near the dashing sea waves of the California beaches, and sea waves and hot dogs always go together.

Art Acord mildly asks for strong cheese and a cup of coffee, and says he always feels, immediately after partaking of this favorite combination, that he could go forth and conquer the world unaided.

Pickled pig's feet and rye bread and butter spell contentment to Hoot Gibson. "The only thing I ask is plenty of it," says he.

Quite in keeping with true "flapperism," Gladys Walton's heart pounds happily at the mere mention of malted milks and chocolate bars. No doubt, five years from now Miss Gladys will have decidedly different tastes—youth is funny, to the more mature.

Beans and brown bread three times a day would satisfy Frank Mayo. "But the cook won't provide it for me so often," said Mayo; "he seems to think some way that it isn't a breakfast dish!"

"I'm not Italian but I sure can dispose of spaghetti," said Herbert Rawlinson. "I can eat it with chop-sticks, straws or forks with equal skill and that ain't all——I can make it, too!"

Priscilla Dean's favorite refreshment is Cheese Dreams, or in plainer language, toasted cheese sandwiches.

"When I was on the road as a kiddie, we used to make these on our little electric stoves," said Miss Dean; "but I never tire of them, and they always afford most humorous recollections when I eat them."

All of which goes to prove that the tastes of the beloved and universally head-lined stars are much like those of other folks, and, after all, why shouldn't they be?

Villain Still on Rampage in Monte Carlo.

The villain in the fevered setting of Monte Carlo, a perfect villain, a perfect setting, is being exploited with considerable eclat by Eric Van Ctroheim in his production of "Foolish Wives," which continues to show at the Mission Theater. The picture, which represents a peak in artistic reality and has many episodes of strenuous dramatic interest, promises a run of some proportions.

The principal role is portrayed by Von Stroheim. He is ably supported by a strong dramatic ensemble, who give much character to the various roles. The picture is rated as one of the most expensive ever made. The Monte Carlo settings are a remarkable replica of the original.

WIDOWERS' JOYS IN BURBANK'S LATEST.

The joys that are unconfined for the grass-widower form the background of the new musical entertainment, to be presented by the Hi Jinks Revues Musical Comedy company at the Burbank Theater this week.

"Mike and Abie's Night Out" is the promising title of the new show, and with Henry Sherr, Dolly Sterling, and Jack Christie in the principal character parts there seems every reason to believe that the coming week will be a laughable one.

George Clark, producing the new show with a sure eye for spectacular effects, during the special musical numbers has interpolated a series of songs and dances that should please the most exacting patron of the Burbank Theater.

"Mike and Abie's Night Out" has to do with the troubles of the two comedians when they start on a trip through the jungle-land of joy, with their wives supposedly away from harmful reach.

YOUNG PLAYERS STAR IN "WATCH YOUR STEP"

Two of the most attractive young players on the screen portray the leading roles in the new Goldwyn comedy-drama, "Watch Your Step," which is opening at the California Theater today.

They are Cullen Landis, who will be remembered for his excellent work in many earlier Goldwyn productions, and Patsy Ruth Miller, a charming ingenue appearing for the first time with Mr. Landis. The acting of these two is fresh, spontaneous, and altogether delightful in a charmingly wholesome comedy.

For the most part, the locale of the story is in a village where the young hero arrives under rather trying circumstances. Because of an automobile accident, which he believes has resulted in a man's death, he wishes to conceal his identity, and finding himself in the secluded village, concludes that he may as well remain there.

Julien Josephson is the author of "Watch Your Step," and he displays a thorough knowledge of small-town life in his development of the incidents following the appearance of the young stranger. All the familiar village characters are perfectly drawn and woven into a story that will hold the attention every moment. Mr. Josephson is the writer who put Charles Ray on the road to stardom in such stories as "String Beans" and "Paris Green." "Watch Your Step" undoubtedly will aid in sending Mr. Landis and little Patsy Ruth up that same ladder of fame.

The picture was directed by William Beaudine, and performances of particular merit are given by Bert Woodruff, William Orlamond, Henry Rattenbury, L. H. King, John Cossar, Lillian Sylvester and Cordelia Callahan.

Al St. John's new special comedy success, "Straight From the Farm," is one added attraction; the third of the stories from the Old Testament, "Noah's Ark," is another; while still a fourth is Elinor's fifty-piece orchestra in daily concerts.

Borneo Films to Interest at Symphony

As it has been just a year since the Symphony Theater was remodelled and reopened to the public, a special anniversary program has been arranged that will be one of the strongest offered there in months.

Heading the bill are the Borneo jungle adventures of Martin Johnson, who has just returned from the wilds and exploration of Borneo.

Johnson made the trip especially to photograph wild animals in their native jungle, and he succeeded in filming some of the rarest of animals.

Johnson made photographs of monkeys, of orang-outangs swinging in the tree tops, of man-eating crocodiles, of a wild elephant herd, and all the other animals and birds to be found in Borneo, and in addition of a strang tribe of people living at the headwaters of the Kinabatangan River.

Another feature on the program is the battle of Jutland. History has now definitely decided that the battle of Jutland, the only great naval engagement of the war, was a deciding factor in the conflict, and though both Germany and England claimed the victory, the truth of the matter is shown clearly and concisely on the screen.

Ben Turpin in his first Mack Sennett special comedy, "Bright Eyes," furnishes the fun element of the bill. This is the first of the Turpin features to be made with the comedian of the restless eyes as a featured comedian, and it excels any past offerings of the studio.

Another installment of the Fox special, "Face to Face with Japan,' showing the actual strength of the island nation, will form an important part of this program. Musical numbers by Ted Henkel will round out the bill.

ACTORS SPOIL SHAKESPEARE.

MacLean Says Declamation is Tiresome.

Avoids "Lear" Because of Complexity.

Will Take Company on Road Next Season.

"The fondness of most classic actors for spouting lengthy speeches, without considering whether they have dramatic value or are of interest to their audiences, is chiefly responsible for Shakespeare being considered a bit of a bore by the average man or woman, according to R. D. MacLean, the eminent tragedian, whose production of "Othello" begins tomorrow night at the Harlequin Theater.

"If Shakespeare's plays are ruthlessly cut, simply staged, and acted by casts who have been trained in the essentials of the classic drama, they are still superior to anything we have in dramatic entertainment. But they must be so treated.

"It is one thing to read the plays, quite another to see them on the stage. In the comfort of an armchair, with plenty of time at one's disposal, every word of the great dramas is interesting.

Gloria Swanson in "Her Husband's Trademark," Grauman's.

But when spoken over the footlights much significance is lost; and the long speeches, whose interest is purely poetical or psychological, retard the action and tire the mind.

"An actor should consider his audience. It cannot be assumed that every one who goes to see Shakespeare played is a close student of the plays from a literary standpoint. Drama is what the average audience wants, and it is the actor's duty to give it. To send people away wishing there had been more, rather than less, is true success."

The acting of Mr. MacLean is, down to the smallest detail, an application of such principals as these. Rich in experience and study, he is able to grasp the essentials of a part and dispense with the rest. His conceptions are all on a scale of large simplicity, and give the impression of having grown organically from deep sympathy with the character enacted, rather than being merely assumed for the time with his costume and make-up.

Having always been able to act or not, as he saw fit, Mr. MacLean has chosen to play only in such roles and in such companies as suited his art. His appearances on the stage have, consequently, been intermittent, with the result that the general public do not know him as he deserves to be known.

A really great tragedian, associated in the past with Modjeska, Faversham, Mantell and others of equal rank, during which associations he played leading roles such as Brutus, King John, Richard III, Coriolanus and Macbeth, he has nevertheless been living quietly in Hollywood for over a year, and only those who were fortunate enough to see his recent production of "The Merchant of Venice" at the Harlequin Theater realize that he is one of the few who still carry forward the torch of the old tradition.

Aside from his artistic ability, the most interesting thing about Mr. MacLean is his personal modesty. It has probably greatly retarded his career in the ordinary sense, but it has endeared him to many friends and by a strange paradox has greatly strengthened his art, narrowing his repertoire, only to deepen his acting.

"I have never attempted to play either Hamlet or Lear," said Mr. MacLean. "I am not afraid of them for myself, but for my possible audience I would be. I have never seen but one actor who really was Hamlet, physically and artistically, and that was Edwin Booth. With Booth's interpretation in my mind, and knowing all the time that the part does not suit my physical personality, I do not care to give the public something which I know would be much inferior to my other roles.

"I have avoided Lear for a slightly different reason. The speeches of this character are, so long and involved; the play itself is so difficult, that I can't imagine people sitting through it without tiring dreadfully. And it is hard to cut 'King Lear' very heavily

GARDEN TO SING IN FOUR OPERAS.

Chicago Season Will Open With "L'Amore."

"Tannhauser" is Wagner Bill of Engagement.

Muratore and Edith Mason in "Romeo and Juliet."

The jeweled crown to complete the elegance of the present musical season will flash before the public here with the arrival of the Chicago Grand Opera Company April 10. This celebrated aggregation will shine for a week at Philharmonic Auditorium. Much radiance will be added to their appearance through the presentation of comparative novelties in repertoire.

The most interesting announcement in connection with the visit is, perhaps, that Mary Garden is to be in four different performances, including the opening night, "L'Amore dei Tre Re," in which she achieved such a vibrant success last season. In addition to this, she will be heard—and seen—in "Thais" at a Wednesday matinee, in "La Jongleur de Notre Dame" and in the closing work, "Salome."

The company, it is said, will be complete in detail, the same as heard in New York. In addition to Miss Garden the principal stars will be Lucien Muratore, the tenor, who will sing in "L'Amore dei Tre Re," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Salome." Other tenors in the company are, Edward Johnson, Riccardo Martin, known here from his work with Max Rabinoff's Boston Opera Company, and Forrest Lamont.

Josef Schwarz will head the list of the baritones, with Giacomo Rimini and George Baklanoff.

The sopranos and mezzos will be Edith Mason, wife of Conductor Giorgio Polacco, who made a great success in the Monte Carlo and Paris opera a season or so ago and who returned to this country only to enhance her laurels; Rosa Raisa, who established herself favorably here last year; Irene Pavloska, who was associated for some time with local music enterprises, and Cyrena Van Gordon.

The bassos will include Lazzari, Defranne and others.

The second conductor—Mr. Polacco being the first—will be Pietro Cimini.

The company will travel by special train, bringing scenery, costumes and lighting effects, as well as a complete technical crew.

In addition to the Garden operas, the principal feature of the engagement will be Wagner's "Tannhauser," which has not been heard here since the visit of Savage's English Opera Company more than fifteen years ago. This will be given Friday evening of the engagement, the cast comprising Rosa Raisa, Cyrena van Gordon, Edward Johnson, Josef Schwarz and Giacomo Rimini. The production is considered one of the finest of the Chicago association.

"The Jewels of the Madonna" will also be performed with the cast, Rosa Raisa, Forrest Lamont, G. Rimini and Marjorie Maxwell. In "Romeo and Juliet" Muratore and Edith Mason will have the title roles.

In anticipation of the season a series of interpretive recitals will be given by Margaret Goetz, in conjunction with Gertrude Ross, pianist. These recitals will cover the music and stories of the operas. They are being managed by L. E. Behymer, who has charge of arrangements for the Chicago opera engagement.

HUGHES HELPS OUT.

Prize Fighter-Author Thanks Him For Boost.

Jim Tully, the ex-prize fighter and tramp, whose novel, "Emmett Lawler," is about to be issued, gives a great deal of thanks for his success to Rupert Hughes, who gave him encouragement and assistance in his darkest hour.

All the time he was fighting and tramping, Tully was burning with the desire to write. His environment shut him off from intellectual circles, and at last he was about ready to throw up the literary sponge.

At 4 o'clock one morning, he sat down at his typewriter and poured out his soul to Rupert Hughes, who was then directing one of his own photoplays at the Goldwyn studio. Back came a long letter from the eminent author—so human, kindly and encouraging that Tully took new heart. Hughes invited the pessimistic penman to send him a sample of his writings. Tully forwarded the first 5000 words of "Emmett Lawler."

"You have the makings of a great writer," said Hughes, and these words so encouraged Tully that he worked night and day, sending his output to Maj. Hughes for criticism as fast as he could turn it out.

Tully's hard experiences have rather embittered him toward life but he has this to say:

"Rupert Hughes almost restores my faith in human nature."

FIFTY-TWO AT OLD FASHIONED DINNER.

An old-fashioned dinner was enjoyed by the Los Angeles branch of Mayflower Descendants, Wednesday, at the new home of Mrs. Caroline B. Eager, 2511 Third avenue. Fifty-two were seated.

The Spencer-Kellys, Claire Forbes Crane and Helen Louise Kimball gave a musical program after dinner.

Monday Mrs. Eager spoke at the monthly dinner of the Pasadena branch of the Dickens Fellowship on "Living Links With Dickens." Tomorrow she will speak at the luncheon of the League of American Pen Women.

IT'S A SWARTHY AGE IN HEROS.

factor of all in the secret. Say what you like about women loving to be bossed around—the foreigner, because of his graceful manners and courtesy in little things, appeals to the American women to be much easier to manage than the Anglo-Saxon. He isn't, of course, as many of our American girls have discovered on marrying foreigners.

"That outward graciousness and gallantry cover as often as not a complete selfishness and hardness of heart. But the foreigner seems more yielding, more flexible, than his upstanding, straight-from-the-shoulder American brother.

"Then there is mystery about the foreign men, too—and women are proverbially curious. But the American woman's common sense usually saves her.

"A woman said to me the other day, 'I think Valentino is fascinating. He looks as though you couldn't believe a single thing he told you!'

"'So that's your ideal!' I countered.

"'Oh, no, not really,' she said thoughtfully. 'But I think he's fascinating to study and on the screen.'

"Novelty is, of course, the keynote of the success of the foreigners. I think American women are charmed with them because their own men don't pretend to any airs and graces. They are he-men and glad of it, and probably nine times out of ten are much more gallant and unselfish at heart than the foreigners. Certainly no women have the privileges of the American woman.

"Another secret; the grace, harmony and ease of manner of the foreigner set the female of the species at her ease. There is a certain feminine quality about these characteristics which she understands, whereas she sometimes gives up as a bewildering puzzle the endless reserves, alternating with the ofttimes violent moods of the Anglo-Saxon."

Probably Mr. Davidson is right. He has both viewpoints as regards the Anglo-Saxon and Latin actor. Born in New York and educated in this country, he still has the background of European blood and tradition, and his playing of certain roles has proven him an admirable example of the combination.

"The American school of acting is a very fine one," said Mr. Davidson. "It has taught the European much. Drama calls for repression up to a certain point, and then for abandon.

AN ALLIGATOR STEW.

"When Cecil de Mille gave me the part in 'Fool's Paradise,'" declared the actor, "he said to me, 'the actor that plays this role must also be a man.'

"'Why, yes, of course,' I said, 'but just what do you mean?'

"'I mean,' said De Mille, 'that he must be courageous. He has to go into a pit of crocodiles.'

"I had to promise I would do that fearlessly. But Mr. De Mille never demands of his actors what he will not do himself, and before I went in with the reptiles, he did so himself.

"Of course, alligators are used.

"But, as they had been starved for some time they were fairly snappy, and the longest moments of my life were those I spent in the pit with the slimy creatures surrounding me, while I pretended to be unconscious and had my eyes closed.

"We had to do the scene three or four times, too, before Mr. De Mille got what he wanted. Conrad Nagle went in with the alligators too."

Besides this very active gallantry—Davidson as the oriental prince had to prove he loved the lad; by going into the crocodile's pit—he does some other very fine acting. In fact, so excellent was his work that Cecil de Mille, on the strength of it, offered to train him as a director.

Davidson started his acting career as the result of wanting to be a teacher!

"I had heard that all great teachers were born in December, from Buddha and Christ to the lesser ones, and I thought that it would be a fine thing to bring some sort of message to the world. I hadn't an idea what the message would be, but I was sure that I had something to say to the world.

"Just like the top-lofty egotism and idealism of youth, wasn't it?

"Then one day, when I was a lad of 18, I met Mrs. Richard Mansfield at the home of Emma Sheridan, leading woman for Mansfield. I heard Mrs. Mansfield say that to her idea the best actor should be the most complete man, the best all-around man. He must be in fine condition mentally and physically. He must be able to meet danger fearlessly, and then the work, the necessity for throwing himself into various characters, of being sympathetic with all grades of life and various sorts of emotions of understanding all sorts of situations, would necessarily make of him a complete man. He must be cultured, too.

"I took the idea home with me, pondered it seriously, and decided that an actor would be the finest sort of teacher. Charles Frohman was a great friend of my family, and he advised me to attend Sargent's School in New York. I went there two years, and then Frohman gave me a part to play with Ethel Barrymore in 'Lady Frederick.' I had a bit at first, but was soon promoted to playing the juvenile. I had a wonderful time.

"Miss Barrymore was at her loveliest. It was while Mr. Colt was paying court to her and following her around the country.

"I remember a funny little incident in regard to mother's letters to me. She always sent them to Miss Barrymore, with my name in small letters down in a corner.

"Consequently Miss Barrymore read all my mother's letters!. She said they were very good letters, and that she learned a lot from them."

Davidson afterward played in New York and on tour in various Frohman productions, notably in Madame X," in Rostand's "The Romancers," and in "Arsene Lupin!" He came West a few years ago, and appeared in Ibsen's "Ghosts," and Shaw's "Man and Superman," at the Majestic.

"But don't worry about the American womans worship of the foreign actor," said Mr. Davidson. "Her good sense, as well as her sense of humor, will keep her straight. But I think he's in for a long vogue. At any rate I shan't have my hair bleached this season!"

R. D. MacLean,

Who claims that Shakespeare is neither as somber nor as long-winded as the make-up and speeches, respectively, of some of his characters would indicate. He is to stage "Othello" this week at the Harlequin. This, it should be mentioned, will mark the close of the season at that cloistered playhouse.

ACTORS SPOIL SHAKESPEARE.

without making it still more difficult of comprehension."

He laughed whimsically, and went on with perfect frankness: "There is a subplot in 'Lear' which I for one have never been able to understand, nor have I ever found the person who could explain it to me. And it seems to me that it is primarily literary in its interests—too big in scale for the stage, marvelous psychology, but terribly contorted drama."

Mr. MacLean considers Shylock in many respects the most difficult role in Shakespeare. Othello, too, he considers very difficult, and adds that no other character is drawn on so heroic a scale. But, being so led by Iago, and being after all so futile, despite his nobility, it requires great finesse to make him of absorbing interest to the audience. Iago, thinks Mr. MacLean, is really a more interesting part, though not so great.

In the spring Mr. MacLean expects again to head his own company on the road in Shakespearean repertoire. It is possible that some members of the present Harlequin cast will accompany him, and though it is not difinitely stated, it is probable that this production of "Othello" is partly in the nature of a try-out by which to select members of the projected company's personnel.

The repertoire for this tour has not been announced as yet, but it will undoubtedly include "Macbeth," "The Merchant of Venice," "Julius Caesar," "Othello," "Richard III," and possibly "King John"—these being the plays in which Mr. MacLean's past successes have been most conspicuous.

GARRICK THEATER GETS CROOK DRAMA.

Eloquently revealing the heart of one whom circumstances made a crook, but whose finer instincts, intelligence and sympathy kept still a man, "Boomerang Bill," with Lionel Barrymore, comes to the Garrick Theater for its second local showing this week.

Bill's story is one of pathos and obscure heroism. After having resolved to go straight in future, he robs a bank to provide for his sweetheart's invalid mother, is sent to prison, and so loses the girl to his rival. All he manages to retain through his misfortune is his innate manliness.

"Boomerang Bill" contains many dramatic situations of great power and is played by a cast of real distinction. The principals are Marguerite Marsh, Margaret Seddon, Frank Shannon, Mathew Betts and Miriam Battista. Harry Lee, a 3-year-old Chinese boy, also has a prominent part and adds much to the charm of the story.

Bill Fairbanks,

Who will exploit heroics and throwing in "The Western Demon," a film feature at the podrome.

VAUDEVILLE ROAD SHOW AT THE

Coming intact from the circuits, a big vaudeville road show will hold the boards at the drome for the week beginning day. There will be a melange of singing, dancing and gymnastic offerings, plenty of laughs and thrills for good measure.

The Machedow Brothers, gymnasts; the Belldays in a novel comedy creation; Dave Goodman and his dancing girls; Ernest singer of his own songs and er of his own lines; Leola Martin in a wide range of and Mabel Wilson in of vaudeville make up the attractions.

The feature photoplay is "Western Demon," with William Fairbanks, a thrilling story starts in an Eastern college and finishes in a ranch-house of the old West. World news and comedy complete the bill.

INTRODUCE COMPOSER.

The community sing at Hollywood Auditorium this past week provided an introduction for Dr. Frank Nagel, pianist-composer, who has recently located in Hollywood. With the assistance of Frederick Vance Evans and his son, Conrad Nagel, famous moving-picture star, Dr. Nagel presented a program of his compositions. The songs showed a variety of thought and ideas, the musical setting to Bryant's "Thanatopsis" being exquisite and soulful. Two piano compositions, played by Dr. Nagel completed the program offered.

AN ORIENTAL INCANTATION.

also believes in reincarnation, but not in the transmigration of souls from persons to cats and dogs. She said, too, that when she is at home she wears a Mandarin costume.

"Some day I may try the harem costume," she replied in answer to my question. "I would be a novelty. But for the present I think the Mandarin costume is a compromise sufficient between Hollywood and the Far East."

Her devotion to things oriental seems absolutely bona fide. At least it is romantically real. It is also elusively fascinating.

An actual oriental strain in her being might be traced through her Spanish ancestry. You feel, however, that there is nothing of the unresisting quiet about it that there is about most East Indian traditions.

In fact, there is in her instance, decidedly nothing of the sort. She has been a very busy lady during her life. She has tripped the gay fantastic in the cafes and musical shows of Gotham town. She has tried her ingenuity at scenario writing. She has dabbed in this and that and the other thing for pleasure and profit, and in the brief time that she has been appearing on the screen, she has apparently at last found her real forte.

"The first picture in which I appeared was 'Harriet the Piper' with Anita Stewart," said Miss Le Marr. "Before that I had been giving my time to scenario writing. I did not really expect to act.

"'Black Orchids' is my seventh picture on the screen," she continued. "For that reason I believe it should be lucky.

"Seven is one of the numbers which brings fortune."

Which fact every good African golf player will readily admit is often true.

NEW INCE FEATURE.

Only a few exteriors remain to be made before Thomas H. Ince's "The Brotherhood of Hate" goes to the cutting rooms. "The Brotherhood of Hate" will be released by First National.

"Irene" Will Soon Arrive at the Mason

"Irene," the greatest musical comedy success ever known in New York, will be presented at the Mason Operahouse for the week beginning Monday evening, the 13th inst., with the New York company headed by Patti Harrold.

Its record-breaking run at the Vanderbilt Theater, New York, of over two years has been an astonishing accomplishment in theatrical history. The Vanderbilt Producing Company, formed shortly after the opening of the piece in 1919, points with pride to the unique record of "Irene" for simultaneous runs in London and Australia, since at present "Irene" is being played on four continents.

James Montgomery, who wrote the comedy, has not only made a fortune with it, but he is helping others to do the same. It is a production which seems to have upset all theatrical traditions and in a happy way—for it has served to make famous not only authors and theaters; but the composer, Harry Tierney; the lyric writer, Joseph McCarthy, and at least a dozen stars who have played the title role in various parts of the world.

In addition, the costumes of the piece have established a new fashion in America and a world-wide vogue for a beautiful shade of blue. This color was used by Lady Duff Gordon as the motif for a fascinating evening gown she created to be worn by Patti Harrold as Irene O'Dare, the heroine of the piece when she is transformed from a shop girl to a veritable princess and sings the song, "My Alice Blue Gown."

FEDERATION MEETING DETAILS ANNOUNCED.

At the last meeting of the local committee on arrangements for the State convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs in this city, May 2 to 6 next, Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley outlined additional plans for sessions, which will be held in Bovard Hall on the campus of the University of Southern California.

Mrs. F. W. Fuller, president of the Wednesday Morning Club, gave the report of her committee concerning housing, which was adopted. The recommendation was to make the Rosslyn Hotel headquarters for officers and delegates, because the hotel is on the direct car line to Bovard Hall, the University car, is easily accessible to all railway stations and is of central location.

Mrs. Sue Reynolds, president of the Women's University Club of Southern California, reported that arrangements had been made to have cafeteria service for luncheon on the campus throughout the convention.

Mrs. James A. Tomlinson, acting for Mrs. George Salm of South Side Ebell, obligated that body of women to extend special courtesies as the delegates arrive at the hotel and Bovard Hall.

Patti Harrold,

Who, in addition to being somewhat famous in her own right, also is the daughter of Orville Harrold—or is it the niece?—and she is the godchild of Adelina Patti. Quite enough, it seems to us, to crown a young lady with talent. She's appearing in "Irene," which is to play soon locally.

SISTERS RAISE RIOT APIECE IN COMEDY.

"Seven Sisters" can ordinarily be depended on to stir up a lot of trouble for one daddy, and that's why they are doing at Pantages Broadway this week. And as usual daddy doesn't count in the game other than to pay the bills—at the hotel when the young millionaire camouflages as the night clerk and keeps everybody in water of a little more than torrid temperature.

The real night clerk and the telephone clerk are working at cross purposes to the rest; and a temperamental French artist with aspirations to paint a wonderful picture of a beautiful girl seated upon a leafy bough, gazing pensively at a butterfly that has perched upon her perfect elbow with a dimple in it, is responsible for many mix-ups.

The dirty old engineer, as grouchy as he is dirty, tries to inocculate everybody with the glooms, but is foiled by a Jewish elevator boy wearing an Irish uniform.

This comedy-musical-revue whiles away a little more than an hour most entertainingly, and Norma Talmadge in "De Luxe Annie" adds not a little to the general joy, while Harold Lloyd in two reels of mirth sends everybody away in a happy frame of mind. If you enjoy lots of music, lots of clever dancing, you'll like "Seven Sisters."

SCREEN ACTING TESTS ABILITY.

ness that he had never dreamed of during his superb career as a stage actor.

"I thought movie-acting was going to be a little careless romp for me," he said. "But I found that acting for the screen has shades and distinctions and depths that the stage knows nothing about."

He went on to say that when the human face is lifted from the comparative obscurity of stage lighting to the enormous proportions of the screen every movement of the eyebrows, every shadow of a smile acquires immeasurable possibilities for both success and failure.

A further proof of the difficulty of screen acting is that women like Nazimova who were veritable riots on the stage do not do very well on the screen; they nearly all become stagey and unconvincing. In fact, there are very few stage actors who have succeeded to any great degree on the screen.

"That is why the legitimate stage has in the main tried to raise its standards," our young lady journalist goes on to say. She explains that the stage has been driven to its present high standard on account of the low standards of the movies.

Yea, brethren. Yea!

Yes, indeed!

Yes, sir!

But I just happen to remember a scene in a play that I think is still running at one of the leading theaters of New York City.

The beauteous young heroine of the piece has escaped from somewhere into a hay barn. She is without clothing except for a horse blanket thrown around her naked body. She crawls into the hay. The handsome young lover crawls into the hay in her wake. Silence then she shrieks, "Oh, my blanket is coming off!"

Another instance of the moral superiority of the stage over the films that I happen to remember was a procession of chorus girls in one of the foremost musical shows of one of the well-known roof gardens of New York. Twenty girls walked across the stage in front of the footlights absolutely naked from the waist north. They used their hands for breast shields—and they had small hands.

Yes, it is a comfort to know that the stage stands there a protecting mother to save us from the naughty films.

It was once my job to see all the plays of New York with an idea to the possibility of making them into film plays. I do not recall seeing a single one that could have been turned into a movie without moral fumigation and renovation.

The trouble with movies and movie stories is that censorship has been carried to such ridiculous lengths that it is almost impossible to tell any story of ordinary meaning. When it is forbidden to show crime of any sort, forbidden to show any deed of violence, when it is even forbidden to show a married woman sewing on baby clothes, presumably for the reason that such a scene will tend to destroy the well-known scientific truth that babies are brought to others by storks—well, it is pretty tough on authors.

I do not know of a single popular novel or a single one of the classics that could be put on the screen as it is written.

It is true, as our lady journalist says, that most of the famous authors who have come to Hollywood to be screen authors have gone back home in disgust.

This is partly due to the limitations of censorship I have mentioned; partly due to the fact that they are not adapted to the work. Some of the finest novels ever written have plots that are stale and old and trite. Your famous author, deprived of words, usually finds plot building out of his line.

Now that we are on the subject. . . .

Even the staid Associated Press has fallen for the temptation to tell what it thinks it knows about the screen.

In writing of the Wilkenning-Pickford law suit, the A.P. says that Mary Pickford thought she should have as much salary as Charlie Chaplin because . . . . . . "she thought her curls and her pout were worth just as much as the comedian's derby and shuffle."

Again, yea, brethren! Just so: Several producers have had the same idea that Mary Pickford's success was just a curl and a pout.

Until they tried to find some one else with the same curl and the same pout.

And then they discovered there is only one Mary Pickford.

The measure of her art is its simplicity. The reason there has never been but one Mary Pickford, and perhaps will never be another, is that her acting seems to be so simple and easy that any other girl with a pout and a curl could do it. But let some other girl try it!

Mary Pickford is not only a great artist, but a girl with a keen, penetrating, incisive mind and a great sympathetic heart.

Charlie Chaplin of course is one of the great artists of all time. Subtle, delicate, sympathetic, adroit, daring, vivid, original and with the sure touch of the great genius. Of all comedians who ever lived he has best realized that comedy is only a thin veneer spread over something infinitely piteous.

JUVENILE SINGERS.

A unique offering of school songs popular in 1868 as well as modern compositions and a "Dutch Lullaby" by the local composer, Mrs. Ella Duffield, were recently enjoyed by Southern California Woman's Press club meeting at the Ebell. The soloists were all youngsters, the pupils of Mrs. Grace Winters, and three of them, Verna Dalgren, Charlotte Beele and Elvere Alden, ranged in the five-year-old class. The "Dutch Lullaby" was given in costume, with Mrs. Duffield at the piano, by the tots, Doris Phillips, Lorraine Platt, Mary Louise Feaseur and Yvonne and Austin Menzies. Jane Margaret Imelli sang Chaminade's "Summer" and Warren Tippie, boy soprano, "Il Bacio," in Italian.

ENSEMBLE MODERNE.

The Ensemble Moderne Trio, composed of Emil Ferir, viola; Henri De Buscher, oboe and Blanche Rogers Scott, pianist, who have achieved pronounced success at each of their concerts this season, will give a private musical program Sunday evening in Santa Barbara.

MUSICAL.

BRIGHT STARS NEAR.

MANY ATTRACTIVE RECITALS TO CLOSE SEASON.

The schedule of concert and recital events for March and April contains a number of very attractive and brilliant events. The season is now approaching its close, but without any lessening of the brightness and importance of many of the affairs which mark its completion.

Among the near-by concerts of effulgence are those of Galli-Curci to be given the middle of this month. Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, will be heard here in April as will Percy Grainger, the pianist. Soloists at some of the coming Philharmonic Orchestra concerts include Yolande Mero and Florence Macbeth.

Various resident musicians are planning appearances in the near future. This week a concert is to be given by Robert Raymont Lippitt, pianist. Another recital by Richard Buhlig has been announced for the near future.

The Los Angeles Trio have postponed their final program until later in the season, while such organizations as the Ellis, Lyric and Orpheus choral clubs, and the Los Angeles Oratorio Society still are to give concerts.

Singer to Return.

Grace James Robinson, the singer, who was recently married in the East, is to return shortly to Los Angeles. Her husband and she plan to make their home here.

Annual Heart-Dreyfus Concert.

Many interesting points are to be noticed about the annual concert of Estelle Heart-Dreyfus, which takes place on Thursday evening, the 9th inst., at Gamut Club Theater. As is always the case with this singer, she has on her program songs not sung by others. Mrs. Dreyfus has made a point of this and has gathered some truly lovely material in her wanderings around the world. It cannot help but be a strong influence on the work of any artist, to have heard songs sung in the place where they were made in many instances by the people who made them.

Mr. Emile Ferir is to appear on the program with Mrs. Dreyfus. Mr. Ferir is without doubt the best viola player we have had in Los Angeles for a long time, and it is always pleasant to know that he is to be heard on a program. He is to play his own arrangement of the Purcell air, and two of his own compositions. He has also made several obligati for Mrs. Dreyfus and is to play them at this time.

Miss Grace Andrews, who will play for both singer and instrumentalist, is a most artistic and capable accompanist. She has worked with Mrs. Dreyfus for a long time and they are perfectly at home with each other.

Trio Date Set Ahead.

It has been necessary to advance the date of the fifth concert of the Los Angeles Trio to April 4, and a most interesting program is to be given at that time. Among the outside dates of the Trio are: Santa Monica, the 6th inst., Woman's Lyric Club the 21st inst., Santa Barbara early this month, and in May, after the close of the Symphony season, a few concerts around San Francisco.

Makinson Pupils Win Praise.

Ada Porter Makinson, soprano, has given several successful programs lately, both for clubs and musical. Two pupils of Mrs. Makinson are appearing in public with notable success. Miss Mary Hawes, soprano, sang for the Wa Wan Club o nthe 1st inst. She was soloist for the Matinee Musical Club and Tuesday for the Young Men's Christian Association. Word has been received of the successful engagements of Caroline Keller Carpenter in Fort Worth and Dallas, Tex., another pupil of Mrs. Makinson.

Will Assist Girl Dancer.

Lillian Guenther, the talented little girl, who will give a program of dances at Ebell Auditorium, Thursday evening the 9th inst. has a host of friends in Los Angeles; the fraternal feeling of other dancers for her being demonstrated by the fact that a number of the Denishawn Dancers have volunteered the well-known number called "Soaring" for Lillian's program.

Interpreter Goes East.

Miss Gladys Lott, interpreter of plays, songs and sketches of child life, has just returned to New York after making her annual tour throughout California. In San Francisco and the northern vicinity, Miss Lott appeared in joint recitals with May Muckle, cellist, under the direction of Jessica Colbert and was received with pronounced success.

While in this city, Miss Lott was the guest of her sister, Fanny Lott, well known soprano, and appeared on several of the prominent club programs.

Three Soloists at California.

Three well known Los Angeles soloists will be featured, together with a remarkable list of popular selections, in Carli Elinor's new musical program starting this afternoon at the California theater.

French overtures are taxing pieces for a conductor, the strings, woodwinds and horns, as in the instance of Offenbach's favorite composition, "Orpheus in Hades," which will be the opening number. This overture, always popular, displays a brilliant variety wherein the contrasting melodies are handled alternately with the strings and the brasses, and will employ Elinor's large ensemble to decided advantage.

Miss Elsa Grosser, concert master of the California Theater orchestra, Florindo Maselli on the English horn, and J. M. Bush on the viola, will combine as the soloists in Charles Wakefield Cadman's beautiful love song, "At Dawning." Seldom, if ever, will one have the opportunity of hearing this number rendered by so talented a trio.

To meet the ever-increasing popular demand for different styles of syncopation, Mr. Elinor has compiled what he calls his "Impressions of Havana," an arrangement featuring the delightful Spanish fox trot and tango melodies in syncopated rhythm.

Dramatic Recitalist.

An addition to the ranks of readers and impersonators in Los Angeles is Ethel Elliott Swan, recently arrived from Minnesota and a former member of the faculty of Smith College in the department of elocution. Lecture recitals on poets and dramatists of the classic and modern schools and the reading of short stories and plays are Mrs. Swan's forte. Her recent reading of Booth Tarkington's "Mister Antonio" at the Hollywood-Vermont Community Sing won high favor.

Wallis School.

The student stock company of the Wallis School of Dramatic Art presented a three-act comedy, "My Rich Uncle," at the Denishawn Theater recently with a high degree of success. James W. Clark, George Oliver, E. R. Hudson, M. A. Cellar, Marie Anderson, Dorothy Woods and Marie Prescott made up the cast.

The play was preceded by numbers from the Children's Department, including dances by pupils of Mrs. E. Anderson, dramatic readings and a scene from Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar."

Barr-Cohen Program.

Melba French Barr, soprano, and Sol Cohen, violinist, will present a joint program for the Ebell Club meeting Monday afternoon.

Miss Barr has been heard to advantage before many of the clubs of California this season. Her solos in the Ode to Music given at the Philharmonic Auditorium by the Los Angeles Oratorio Society recently attracted favor.

Sol Cohen, too, has made many concert appearances this year, and his popularity is increasing.

Maurice Stoloff.

Maurice Stoloff, the violinist, will appear in a recital at the Woman's Club of Riverside, Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Stoloff has appeared before many clubs of the Southwest this season and will have a tour of the Northern part of the State at the end of the Philharmonic Orchestra season. Miss Mina Hellekson will be the accompanist at the forthcoming recital.

Popular Contralto Returns.

An absence of one month, which was devoted to her characteristic costume recitals, has brought Nell Lockwood, contralto, back to Los Angeles and Temple Baptist Church, where she is one of the soloists. Miss Lockwood has numerous bookings for concerts preceding Easter.

Ambassador Concert.

The regular concert will be given by the Ambassador Orchestra, under the direction of Josef Rosenfeld, this evening at the hotel. Miss Louise Dorr, the singer, will present Verdi's "Involami" from "Ernani" and Waltz Song from "La Boheme," by Puccini. Josef Rosenfeld will play Sarasate's Spanish Dance on the violin.

Following is the program: Coronation March from "The Prophet" (Meyerbeer;) Overture, "Si Je Tais Roi" (Adam;) Solo, "Involami," from "Ernani" (Verdi) Louise Dorr; Selection from "Manon" (Puccini;) Waltz, "Where the Citrons Bloom" (Strauss;) Moment Musical (Schubert;) "A la Turca" (Mozart;) "Siciliietta" (Von Blen;) "Heart's Wounds" (Grieg;) Solo, "Quando M'en Va" from "La Boheme" (Puccini) Louise Dorr; Menuet Antique (for strings) (Boccherini;) Violin Solo, Spanish Dance (Sarasate) Josef Rosenfeld; Rhapsody (Liszt.)

Lippitt Piano Recital.

A Chopin, Debussy and Liszt program, and the Beethoven Sonata, Op. 53, will be given by Robert Raymond Lippitt, pianist, at Ebell clubhouse Monday evening. Mr. Lippitt will make his bow to Los Angeles on that date and the program will mark his first public appearance since the spring of 1917 when he joined the Army, going to France. His training has been chiefly European, with Tischmuller of the Leipzig Conservatory and the Leschetizky School in Vienna, but his inclinations are strongly toward the modern French and Spanish schools. For that reason, his Debussy group of six numbers and one Albeniz composition will be especially anticipated.

Arthur Fuller Concert.

Arthur F. Fuller, pianist, singer, whistler and composer, will give his spring concert at Ebell Club Tuesday evening. Besides varied solos by this unusual man and musician, the program will comprise selections by Sol Cohen, violinist; Ruth Hutchinson, soprano; Mrs. Guy Bush, pianist-accompanist; Edward B. Warman, reader; Miss Jean Smalley, whistler; Mrs. Suzanne Joyce-Spear, pianist, and Miss Ella R. MacGlashan, accompanist for Miss Smalley and Mr. Warman.

Dominant Club.

A program that merited and won warm commendation, because of the soloists and the character of their numbers, was given recently at the Dominant Club by Estelle Heartt-Dreyfus, contralto, Emile Ferir, violinist, with Blanche Rogers-Lott, and Harrison Williams, pianist. Mrs. Dreyfus interpreted with verve four Spanish songs, entitled "The Watchman's Call" (Granada;) "Bolero—Pyrenees (Sturgis;) "Sevillianas"—Seville (Laparra,) and "Granadinas" Granada (Calleja.)

Mr. Ferir delighted in his usual way with two of his own compositions entitled "Song" and "Mazurka," and Mr. Williams impressed with his incisive playing of three Russian and two French numbers: Rachmaninoff's "Prelude" and "Etude Tableau" and Scriabine's "Etude," and Debussy's "Prelude" and "Inflections on the Water." Mention should be made of Miss Grace Andrews's accompaniments for Mrs. Dreyfus.

Organ Program.

Dean W. F. Skeele of the College of Music of the University of Southern California will play the following organ program at the four o'clock vesper service today in Bovard Auditorium:

Grand Choeur in D.........Guilmant
Orientale .... Cui
Romance ....Rimsky-Korsakov
Will o' the Wisp .... Nevin
The Storm Fantasie .. Lemmens

Grauman Concert.

An entire Beethoven program is the ambitious and musically attractive offering of the Grauman orchestra for this morning's concert under the leadership of Mischa Guterson.

The complete "Eroica" symphony, including four movements, dedicated to the abstraction of heroism and breathing sublimities reached in music only by that master of form, Beethoven, is the unusual feature, unusual since the "Eroica" in its entirety is seldom heard outside the domain of the large symphonic organizations.

The famous second movement, written in the solemn, impressive form of a funeral march, and the third, the Scherzo, full of the spirit of noble joy ending in tenderness and tranquillity, promise rare attractiveness. Conductor Guterson has given especial consideration to the rehearsals.

Beside the "Eroica," the Grauman orchestra will play the composer's "Egmont" overture.

Demonstration Recitals.

A series of complimentary demonstration recitals that promise interest and enlightment particularly to singers will be given by F. X. Arens, voice teacher, at Barker Brothers' Auditorium the 11th and 18th insts., at three p.m. Mr. Arens will be assisted by some of his pupils to demonstrate his subjects: Breathing, Open Throat, Vowel Shaping (Enunciation) and Placement (Acoustics, Overtones).

Two Conductors for Pop.

For the tenth popular concert of the Philharmonic Orchestra, to be played at the Auditorium on Sunday afternoon, the 12th inst., conductor Rothwell will be assisted by Dr. Humphry J. Stewart, the well-known composer, who will conduct his own compositions, "The Bohemian Dancers." A group of three dances will be given, a Mazurka, a Valse: Pas de Fascination and a Bacchanale.

The soloist for this concert will be Calmon Luboviski, violinist. Mr. Luboviski, although a new member of the Philharmonic, fills an important position in the first violin section, has already made himself very popular in our local music colony, and is credited by critics as being one of the best violinists on the Pacific Coast.

Prior to the arrival of Mr. Luboviski in Los Angeles, he made several tours of Europe as a violin virtuoso in concert and before going to Europe was assistant concertmaster of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, a position he held for four years.

The program selected by Conductor Rothwell includes the Overture, "A Midsummer-Night's Dream" (Mendelssohn;) Symphony Espagnole for Violin (Lalo;) Tschaikowsky's Overture, "1812;" "Three Bohemian Dances" (Stewart,) and the Strauss Valse, "Gypsy Baron."

This will be the first performance in Los Angeles of Dr. Stewart's compositions and the first time the Strauss number has been played at these concerts.

San Pedro Concert.

One of the most notable musical events of San Pedro, was the concert recently given by the San Pedro Lyric Club under the direction of Fanny Lott. The program, which was enthusiastically received, included compositions by John Prindle Scott, Mana Zucca, Hildock, Bassett, Chaminade-Kreisler, Brahms-Joachim, Rubinstein, McDowell, Hammond, Malloy, and two interpretations of Kipling and Ellis Parker Butler given by Miss Gladys Lott.

Music Notes.

Leopold Godowsky is returning to Los Angeles for one recital Thursday evening, April 6, at the Philharmonic Auditorium.

Richard Buhlig will continue his piano series next Friday evening, March 10, the last concert will be given March 24. His recent illness interrupted the schedule, which the concert of March 10 will resume.

Definite announcement is made of the one recital to be given in Southern California by Fritz Kreisler, as being Tuesday evening, April 11, at the Philharmonic Auditorium.

Already seat reservations are being made for next year's concert series of the Philharmonic artist course. Such artists as Marguerite D'Alvarez, the Peruvian contralto; Mme. Emma Calve, John McCormack, Alfred Corto, pianist; Toscha Seidl, violinist, and the Flonzaley quartet are scheduled.

HOW TO COMPUTE A CHILD'S "PELIDISI."

Weigh your child in kilograms and multiply the result by ten. Divide the result by the child's sitting height in centimeters, take the cube root of the result and you will have a figure that will tell you whether your child is properly nourished.

This is how the "Pelidisi" is obtained. Thousands of Austrian children have had their Pelidisi computed. If it was below 94 they were rated as undernourished and the American relief administration admitted them to their kitchens, where they obtained sufficient food to bring them back to normal. Quite normal and healthy children should have a Pelidisi of 100.

Dr. Clemens Pirquet, professor of pediatrics at the University of Vienna, and Austrian general commissioner for children's relief, worked out this system that can be used by persons with no medical training to rate children according to condition nourishment. He is now in America to explain the methods used in feeding American food to Austrian children.

That this method will be useful in testing school children of America is the hope of Dr. Pirquet. Experts have recently declared that many rich and well-to-do children are undernourished.

The great American relief kitchens dish out to each Austrian child not so many calories or pounds of food, but exactly 1000 nems each day. "Nem" is the unit for calculating the nutritive value of food by another system, also devised by Dr. Pirquet, devised so that the great relief administration kitchens could provide proper food for the children and keep track of it.

The unit "nem" is an abbreviation of "nutrition element milk" and it stands for the quantity of a foodstuff that has the same nutritive value as one gram of ordinary milk. The Austrian children are given the equivalent nutritive value of one liter, or a little more than a quart, of milk only once a day. This winter 200,000 are being fed this daily meal by the American relief administration. Earlier the number was as high as 400,000.

A child to retain its weight must have roughly 2000 nem of food; to grow and increase in weight, it requires approximately 3000 nem. The relief administration meal of 1000 nem, costing an average of 7 cents, is intended to be supplementary to what the children are able to get at home.—[Kansas City Star.

TAKES 20TH ANNUAL BATH.

Dennis Red, a negro, took his annual bath in the Cottonwood River near Emporia, Kan., the other day.

Garbed in white with a white turban on his head, the negro walked down the main street of the town to the river where he preached a sermon and then walked into the icy water. Red has performed this strange religious rite for nearly twenty years.

He always makes his pilgrimage to the river on New Year's Day. He precedes his bath by walking to the campus of the Kansas State Normal and down the main street to the river.—[New York World.

CHILDREN OF STARS IN PAGEANT CAST.

SMALL SON AND DAUGHTER OF THE POWERS ARE NOW IN "MISSION PLAY."

Two new players were introduced to the theatrical world by John McGroarty at the "Mission Play" yesterday—dainty little Miss Ann Power and her brother, Tyrone Power, Jr.

It was just six years ago during the baptismal scene of the "Mission Play," when Tyrone Power, Sr., the well-known actor, in the character of the good Father Junipero, was administering the waters of life to the little Indian babe, that his own 3 weeks' old daughter, Ann, made her debut in the theater, borne down the aisle in the arms of her mother.

Mr. McGroarty, who witnessed the incident, believed that the beautiful little girl would bring good luck to the play, and predicted a great professional future for the little miss. Since that time little Ann and her brother, a year older, have virtually lived with the "Mission Play." Tyrone Power played the stellar role of Serra for a number of seasons, and little Ann's mother, the beautiful Patia Power, has been portraying the leading feminine role, that of Josefa Yorba.

The appearance of the children of the two well-known stars behind the footlights drew the chief interest of the big audience at the play yesterday, and both were called back for curtain after curtain, which they took with truly professional poise.

WILL HONOR PARAMOUNT.

To commemorate the tenth anniversary of the founding of the feature photoplay by Adolph Zukor and the birth of Paramount pictures, Sid Grauman will usher in a week of festivity with the showing at his Rialto Theater of "Fool's Paradise," latest and most gorgeous production of Cecil B. De Mille.

"Fool's Paradise" will be the center of a series of attractions staged especially by Mr. Grauman to celebrate the supremacy of Paramount pictures in the cinema field. The photoplay itself particularly befits the occasion, as those who are responsible for its production — Jesse L. Lasky, Adolph Zukor and Cecil De Mille —were early associated with each other in the founding of the film organization which they since have made so prominent in the amusement world.

This feature picture is graced with an all-star cast—Dorothy Dalton, Mildred Harris, Conrad Nagel, Theodore Kosloff, John Davidson, Julia Faye, Clarence Burton, George Fields, Guy Oliver, Kamuela Searles, and Jacqueline Logan.

The theme may be said to be a story of the world. Its characters live in and travel through the United States, France, Mexico, Siam and other European and Asiatic countries. One of its many phases of action is that wherein Conrad Nagel battles with a pit of crocodiles to save the life of a Siamese prince, his rival in love.

Bulah Marie Dix and Sada Cowan wrote the photoplay as suggested by Leonard Merrick's story, "The Laurels and the Lady." The difficult photography was handled by Alvin Wyckoff and Karl Struss.

Herbert Burland will play special numbers at the Wurlitzer; an interpretive musical score will be rendered by the Grauman's Rialto orchestra, and an exclusive Pathe news weekly and film novelties will be included in the program.

Gilbert Frankau's new and very modern novel, "The Love Story of Aliette Brunton," which is dedicated to "my wife and loyal associate in all love and a great reverence," was published the other day just before the very real-life decree in the divorce suit of "Quatermain versus Quatermain and Frankau" was made absolute. And the story, which is issued just at a moment when Mr. Frankau's own life is so full of romance, is a study of a woman who risked all for love's sake and did not regret it.

Of course, it is reasonable to believe that the story will be made into a play forthwith, for divorce seems to be almost as popular on the stage as off, and no family, in these days, is supposed to be completely equipped unless it has among its possessions at least one set of abolute divorce papers.

Everything that I have to write about this week seems to chop up into short paragraphs, each carrying a single fact. For instance, two performances of Massinger's play, "The Great Duke of Florence," were given the other day (or presently are to be given; I really forget which) in the Middle Temple Hall, in the exact place where three and a fifth centuries ago Shakespeare produced (himself) his great play, "Twelfth Night," for the first time on any stage. The modern performance is designed to raise funds for an athletic field.

But this takes me into something of greater moment—and if you merely want current gossip about films and pretty stage women don't read it. It is written for those who love the Bard of Avon and now and then like history, and not for those whose whole souls are rust-eaten with jazz.

After 187 years of impenetrability the ancient door of the "Haunted Gallery" at Hampton Court Palace was reopened just the other day.

Hampton Court, as most Americans who have been in London will tell you (for it is a great place for American sightseers,) is the palace built by Henry the Eighth, the connoisseur in wives, and, of late years, cut up into many small apartments given rent free to gentlefolk down on their luck, but still entitled to royal favor.

The door joins two rooms no less fascinating than the "Watching Chamber" of King Henry the Eighth and the gallery leading to the chapel and generally supposed to be ceaselessly tenanted by ghosts. This, of course, is known as "The Haunted Gallery."

But this is guide-book stuff and of no interest to lovers of the theater, for whom I particularly write this column. Their interest in the event lies in the fact that it was through the door which has just been reopened that Shakespeare and his players (imagine Will Shakespeare in the flesh!) used to pass when they went to play before James the First and others of the truly great in the England of the Bard of Avon's time.

An architectural discovery made at the time of the recent opening was that the beautiful arched stone door which originally existed at this point was unaccountably destroyed by Sir Christopher Wren when he rebuilt Hampton Court, although that great man rarely committed any sacrilege of the sort. Why he did this is not now recorded.

The rehearsals of Shakespeare and his company occurred, as is of record, in the "Watching Chamber" and their performances in the great hall below, which would have made the use of this door inevitable.

Furthermore, the opening of the door enables the tourist of today to follow in Will's footsteps the path which he must have trodden many times when he went below to gather with other "grooms of the chamber," the king's "revels men" and the court musicians for an hour or two of merriment. It is fortunate that Mr. Volstead was not at that time in England, for on these occasions each of all these groups was allowed one and a half gallons of beer.

What will amount to a really tremendous fight between the film people and the London County Council has begun. This concerns the regulations recently adopted and to go into force by July 1 forbidding the admission of any child under 16, under any conceivable circumstances, whether or not accompanied by parents or legal guardians, to witness films which have been passed by the County Council censorship for "adult viewing only."

This regulation will hit very hard at American films—and it may be that that fact will reconcile the British producers to it, although it will not make British exhibitors any happier concerning it.

The latter frankly state that every blow struck at American films in favor of the all-British article is a blow struck at the prosperity of the British film theater, first, because the British producers do not produce enough films to keep business running steadily for eighteen showings weekly, and, second, because the British films, except in a few instances, have much slighter drawing power than is found to be possessed by those made in America.

The "Fatty" Arbuckle mess and the Hollywood (Cal.) murder case have been powerful details of the anti-American film arguments among the members of the London County Council.

SCREENLAND REVUE PLAN OF PUBLICISTS.

Screenland's first annual revue, a frolic that promises to draw aside any mystery involving Hollywood studio life for at least one night, is scheduled for the 15th inst., at the Ambassador.

The Wampas Frolic, otherwise a great film funfest to be given under the auspices of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers—more informally known as the Wampas—was outlined for the first time at a special meeting of that body last week.

More than a dozen committees of press agents told the newly elected president of the organization, Arch Reeve, why he could forget his normal vocabulary of adjectives and tell the unvarnished truth about this affair without spoiling the interest in the least. For forty-seven stars of the first magnitude will flash before the screen of living pictures to be shown by the press agents for the first—yes, and the only time.

John McCormick, who heads the general committee that is planning the unique amusement project, and Ray H. Leek, who is directing it, made known the details of the event with the announcement of the scores of events that involve the use of more talent than usually finds its way into a score of films.

A gallery of stars of tomorrow, involving the use of a high order of forecasting on the part of the publicists, will be offered as one of the sensations of the evening. The P.A.'s assert that they have given the producers something to think about in this list of future film stars.

An animated news reel, in which the world's news will be enacted with living stars, rather than the cameraed reproductions of them, will be offered as another innovation in amusement.

But Harry Hammond Beall, who has been named as editor-in-chief of The Midnight Wampas, claims to have the sensation of the evening in his capacious pockets. For with the aid of the editorial brains of the entire publicity fraternity, he will issue a newspaper from the ballroom of the Ambassador that will contain nothing but a breezy series of truths and near truths about the celebrities to be seen at the affair.

LOOKS .. QUIETER .. THAN .. TITLE.

Scene From "Carnival" at Tally's.

Matheson Lang and Twinkles Hunter.

ART CENTER RESULTS.

The efforts of the Los Angeles Art Center in providing free scholarships for talented young artists have resulted in a beautiful and artistic dance pantomime, "The Garden of Love," featured at Pantages last week.

The young artists whose exceptional ability has brought to them this opportunity are Andor de Soos as Prince Suleiman; Betty Roper as Princess Uarda; Victoria Elliot as Habeeb, or the Priestess of Crystal Ball; Rhea Le Fort as Gulbie or the Priestess of the Incense; Elizabeth Gallagher as Shahar or the Wine Girl; Natalia Wood as Nessim the Incense Bearer; Kathleen Woods as Lola the Incense Bearer, and Gezart as Khaphir, the Man of Strength.

NEW ENGLISH FILM TALLY ATTRACTION.

Have you ever wished to see something entirely different, new scenes, new faces, new action, in a motion picture?

According to all reports, this wish will be fulfilled by the coming of "Carnival," an English-made picture filmed in Venice, Italy, to Tally's Broadway Theater tomorrow.

It is a modern drama of Venetian gayety, rarely beautiful in setting, superbly photographed, featuring two stars who are new to this country's audiences, but are among the most popular of English screen players.

Matheson Lang plays the principal role, that of Silvio Steno, around whose picturesque character the story of "Carnival" is woven. He is supported by Hilda Bailey, and others in the cast who are certain to become well known in this country are Ivor Novelle, Clifford Grey, Duchess D'Ansola and little Twinkle Hunter.

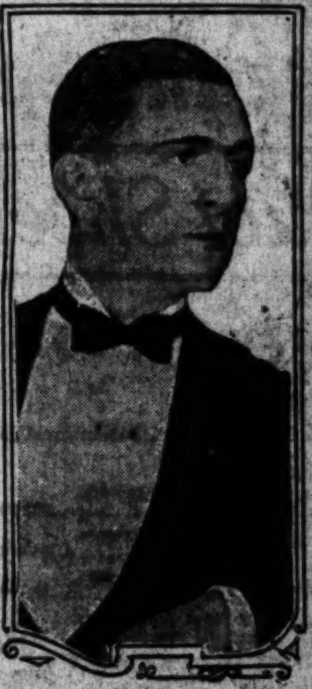
Gloria Stars in Feature at Grauman's

Headed by "Her Husband's Trademark," starring Gloria Swanson, a special program celebrating the tenth anniversary of the founding of the feature motion picture by Adolph Zukor will be staged by Sid Grauman at the Grauman's Theater, beginning tomorrow.

The same combination between Miss Swanson and Director Sam Wood which made "The Great Moment" such a success rises to better effects even in "Her Husband's Trademark," Clara Beranger's original story scenarioized by Lorna Moon. Miss Swanson appears as the wife of an American financier, who, possessing vast holdings in Mexico, uses his wife's beauty as a means of enhancing his wealth and power.

Adding color to a rapid flowing plot, the locale of the picture is laid along the Mexican border and in quaint old towns of the southern republic. Several weeks were spent by Miss Swanson's company along the border from the Pacific to Texas on location for this production, so that its background is authentically represented.

The turbulent life of the republic is faithfully reproduced, with Miss Swanson as the center of action such as has seldom been brought to the screen. Besides the star, the cast includes Richard Wayne, Stuart Holmes, Lucien Littlefield, Charles Ogle, Edythe Chapman, Clarence Burton and James Neill.



Eddie Everett Horton,

Who is always seen with a white shirt front at least once during every play at the Majestic. He appears in "Nobody's Money," now in second week.

Second Week for Majestic Comedy Hit.

Beginning with this afternoon's performance, William Le Baron's great comedy hit, "Nobody's Money," will go into the second week of its run at the Majestic Theater, where it is playing for the first time in any Los Angeles playhouse.

Never before has cleaner, snappier comedy been offered the local theater-goers than in this play dealing with two authors who, deciding to make a little extra money create a fictitious author who wins more popularity than either of his origators and finally lands them in a heap of trouble all through neglect to turn in an income tax return and a vitriolic attack upon the Governor of the State.

Then enters a book agent when the two literary geniuses believe themselves in a tangle from which there seems to be no escape. They get a brilliant idea and then, as usual, enters the girl and even more serious complications arise.

Supporting Edward Everett Horton and Sara Sothern in "Nobody's Money," is an excellent cast including Marie Curtis, Franklin Pangborn, E. Forest Taylor, Christine Mayo, Fred Cummings, Forrest Seabury, Addison Pitt, George Pierce, Leigh Wyant, Eric Snowden and Sam Moran.

PLAYCRAFTERS WILL TRY LOCAL DRAMAS.

The Playcrafters, a unique organization, open to the public, and meeting regularly each Monday evening at the Shelley Club hall in the Tajo Building, is preparing to produce plays written by its members. The first program will be presented the 29th inst. at the Gamut Club Theater, and every month thereafter, other performances will follow. Professional and amateur actors will compose the casts, and Maxwell Ryder, whose experience as a producer of plays is well known in this country and in England, will undertake the direction.

The motives prompting the Playcrafters to enter the production field are several. A desire to stimulate play-writing in the West; to provide for new authors the technical training in stagecraft that production of their plays will supply; to call the attention of production managers to the new plays; to give actors and actresses an added field of endeavor, by the opportunity thus afforded them of creating parts; and lastly, the Playcrafters organization, desiring to aid the Children's Theater, will contribute to that movement from the net proceeds of each production. The plays to be presented, and their casts, will be announced later.

Recognizing the value and [illegible] of this undertaking, professional and amateur actors have offered their srvice gratuitously. The Gamut Club will provide the theater and the well-known House of Props will contribute the stage properties.

Officers of the Playcrafters are: Sidney Sprague, president; Maurice Lowenstein, first vice-president; Dr. H. Irwood, second vice-president; Anne Murray, secretary; Millicent Earl, treasurer.

The committee in charge of productions is composed of the following: Maurice Salsman, production manager; Harold [illegible], assistant director; Irene [illegible], stage manager; Mrs. M. C. Hill, costumes.

The Theater of Ideas.

Fleurette: "I have been to see that new play of [illegible]."

Marie: "Full of ideas, wasn't it?"

Fleurette: "Yes; I especially noticed a skirt of lace, cross-gored, a coat in a new shade of gray, and an orange tunic decorated with green spangles."—Baionnette.

-a Sale of
OBJECTS OF ART

This great money-saving event has caused a real sensation among the art-lovers of Southern California—they realize that it is a wonderful opportunity to obtain art objects of every description at a much less than their real worth. We are inaugurating our change of name and policy by offering many pieces in our stock at HALF PRICE—scores of articles have been reduced even more than ONE-HALF.

This handsome French escritoire has been substantially reduced in price and represents a remarkable saving. It is made of rich rosewood and would make a most attractive addition to the beautiful home. Many other cabinets are now available at equally attractive reductions.

China Wares Reduced
Our entire stock of fine china wares is now selling at very materially reduced prices. Included are many famous brands of English and French china in the most attractive patterns. They are sold both by the set and open stock.

Material Savings on Bronzes, Ivories, Etc.
There are scores of beautiful pieces in our stocks which are now available at considerably less than former markings. The one shown at the right is an exceptionally pleasing subject in gold, bronze and ivory. It is a remarkable value at its reduced price.

You will enjoy looking at the countless objets d'art in our display rooms—come in any time and see them—no obligation to buy.

Goods purchased during this sale will be delivered to any address in the United States at no additional charge.

Vases at Big Reductions including many of the famous Italian Majolica in a variety of odd and unusual shapes. This famous ware is noted for the richness of its finish. Vases of every conceivable shape and material are now being offered at drastic re-pricings.

This Italian Cararra fernery is beautifully handcarved and is unusually graceful in shape. Its price has been generously reduced.

"The Water Carrier" shown above is a fine example of the work of Romanelli of Florence. This is one of his most charming works. It is now available at a decided reduction.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY MYRA NYE.

Throughout this week the presence in this city of a group of distinguished women, national and State officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the fact that the fourteenth annual California conference will be held at the Alexandria on the 9th and 10th inst., focuses the thought of women upon American ideals, American tradition, patriotism and Americanization.

Most significant of all work of this society in this State during the past year has been the linking of the traditions of Pilgrim mothers of the East, which are well known, with those of the pioneer mothers of the West which are less well known. With surprising frequency it has been found that "Daughters of the Dons" in California are eligible through another line to become Daughters of the American Revolution. No State has a more picturesque story to tell in this connection. Many chapters of the society have devoted themselves to compiling histories of early California women and the communities in which they lived.

SAN DIEGO YESTERDAYS.

San Diego Chapter, Mrs. Jessie H. Shreve, Regent, also State chairman of preservation of historic spots and old trails, has already published a small book entitled "San Diego Yesterdays," which includes the papers written by authority and read at the regular meetings. San Fernando Chapter is now writing a remarkably accurate and readable history of that lovely valley and the town, each member collaborating in writing the chapters from material which they have gleaned from pioneers who are still living. Seven chapters are written and have been read before the chapter, Mrs. F. D. Lewis, the historian, directing.

Mrs. George Maynard Minor, President-General of the national society, who arrives in Los Angeles today, has said that the Pilgrim fathers have monopolized the attention of historians and essayists, but the Pilgrim mothers, who came in the same ships, suffered the same hardships and privations, made the same sacrifices and displayed the same courage, fortitude and religious faith. She urges the society to devote itself to the pioneer mothers who sustained the fathers in their toil and dangers, who made the homes, bore the children and endured the rigors of life in a savage land.

The State Historian has in her possession the accounts of several pioneer women of California who displayed just such fortitude. These accounts have been gathered from the fifty-three chapters from San Diego to Sonoma. Daughters in other places have compiled facts concerning the descendants of the men who founded the nation.

PRESIDENT'S WIFE MEMBER.

Florence Kling Harding, wife of the President, is a member of the Capt. William Hendricks Chapter of Marion, O., through the services of her Revolutionary ancestor, Capt. Edmund Richards of Connecticut. Not since Mrs. Caroline Scott Harrison, first President-General of the national society, has a wife of the President of the United States been a member of this organization, although Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. McKinley, Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Taft were eligible.

Of the twenty-eight men who have occupied the Presidential chair, six participated in the fight for freedom themselves; and with one exception, Woodrow Wilson, whose mother came from Scotland and his father from Ireland, all were lineal descendants in one or more lines from those who took part in the American Revolution.

Assured that in these days of holding traditions lightly and in the postwar years of reaction from patriotism there is nothing really wrong with America, but that a fuller knowledge of its ideals and its history is needed by the people, the society appeals to its members to promote the history of the American people. Without sound education there is no sound thought. In America the "Huns" and vandals will come from within our own borders now if American ideals are not preserved.

In order to preserve the government of these pioneer fathers and ideals of these pioneer mothers, to leave to the children a proper knowledge of them, the Daughters of the Revolution this week, in conference, will outline their work and place the emphasis upon American history and the history of California in particular.

CONFERENCE DETAILS.

The conference will be held in the ballroom of the Alexandria Thursday and Friday and will be conducted, as much as possible, along the lines of that of the Continental Congress held each April in Washington. In view of this pages have been appointed from the different chapters in Southern California and will form the escort for the national and State officers to the platform at the opening of each conference session. The chairman of pages is Mrs. Charles B. Boothe and the head page Mrs. William Rose Gibbon. Platform pages are Mrs. Robert J. Dorland, Miss Margaret Church, Mrs. William Cottle and Mrs. George Clemson. The floor pages, headed by Mrs. Will M. Ritchey, will include Misses Marian Rogers, Verda Stella Hurt, Lorene Dales, Florence Merriam, Edith Holton, Daisy M. Davis, Helen Nelson, Lydia Herman, Phoebe Crooks, Mildred Judah, Helen Lockwood, Helen Laidlaw, Margaret Williams, Caroline Haughton, Jessie Carter, Isabel Taber, Harriet Loraine Wright, De Lucia Lindman, Frances Cooper, Clarissa Hoskins, Mmes. Maude D. Parr, Flora Nelson, Arthur Hamilton and Charles A. Nason.

A very interesting program has been prepared for all of the conference sessions which will be called to order at 10 a.m. by the State president, Mrs. Oswald Harshbarger. This session will be very largely taken up with the reports and greetings, but its chief address will be by the president-general, Mrs. George Maynard Minor. Mrs. Cassius C. Cottle will extend the welcome to the northern chapters and Mrs. Allen H. Vance of the Sequoia chapter of San Francisco will reply. The Misses Kellar of Mohrovia will be the musicians. The Thursday afternoon session, with the subject of "International Relations, Conservation and Thrift," will open at 2 p.m., and Dr. John R. Crosser of Pasadena, who will talk on "Our International Heritage." Mrs. Mantu Love North of Riverside will give a piano solo. Mrs. North is also the conference pianist. The report of the State chaplain will come at the close of this session, at which time a tribute will be paid to two former State regents who have passed away during the year—Mrs. Isaac Newton Chapman and Mrs. Frederick Jewell Laird. Mrs. W. W. Stilson will read her tribute to the former and Miss Lily Cole for the latter.

After adjournment a pilgrimage will be made to Victory Memorial Grove, where a short memorial ceremony will be held at the boulder which the southern chapters erected last June to the memory of the services of members of all California Daughters of the American Revolution who served in the World War.

The subject of Friday morninf's session will be "Patriotic Education" and "Americanization." Mrs. H. A. Atwood of Riverside and Charles C. Kelso of Los Angeles will give addresses on "The American Indian" and "The Diploma Plan of Naturalization." Both Mrs. Atwood and Mr. Kelso are very conversant with their subjects and an interesting morning is assured. The music will be in keeping and Indian songs will be sung by Miss Edith M. Hitchcock of Claremont. The women's chorus of the Albion School will sing some of their native airs.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Jesse H. Shreve, State chairman of old trails and historic spots, will make her report. Following this will be Spanish music by Mrs. Walter Wessels and Mrs. Gail Mills Dimmitt, creating the California atmosphere of years ago during the time of the American Revolution, on which subject John Steven McGroarty will speak. The election of an entirely new board of State officers will be held at this session, and, as is the custom, the majority of the positions will be filled from the south this year.

It was a hope of the southern chapters that the battleship California would be in Los Angeles Harbor at the time of the conference, but it is visiting San Francisco and the presentation of flags to the battleship from the California Daughters of the American Revolution was held Wednesday morning, last, on board ship. These flags are the regulation size of silk and are hand-embroidered. They include the State flag on which also are embroidered the D.A.R. insignia of the spinning wheel and distaff, the battalion ensign and the battalion infantry.

A large theater party will be enjoyed at the "Mission Play" on Saturday evening, next, a block of seats being reserved for the Daughters and the chairman, Mrs. E. E. Van Court, will answer questions and take reservations of D.A.R. who care to witness this play. Saturday, many of the members of the society will motor to Riverside for luncheon at the Mission Inn and later drive to Claremont for dinner and thence on to the "Mission Play" in the evening. The luncheon and dinner are given in honor of the national and State officers, but all D.A.R. are invited to participate and reservation for Riverside may be made with Mrs. W. P. Kelley, 1415 West Fifteenth street, Riverside. Miss Helen Wing will care for the Claremont reservations.

OFFICERS TO ARRIVE.

National officers who arrive in Los Angeles today in addition to Mrs. Minor are: Mrs. Livingston L. Hunter, Treasurer-General; Miss Jean Winslow Coltrane, Historian-General; Mrs. William N. Reynolds, chairman of international relations, and a candidate for President-General; Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, one of the Vive-President-Generals, and Mrs. C. Cottle, also a Vice-President-General.

Virtually all of the State officers have signified their intention of being present at the conference. They are: Regent, Mrs. Oswald H. Harshbarger, Oakland; Vice-Regent, Mrs. Lyman B. Stookey, Los Angeles; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Allen H. Vance, Sausalito; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Ivy Perkins Cerkel, San Francisco; Treasurer, Mrs. E. K. Roberts, Berkeley; Auditor, northern district, Mrs. K. L. Evans, Modesto; Auditor, southern district, Mrs. O. P. Burdg, Riverside; Historian, Mrs. William Putnam Nye, Covina; Chaplain, Mrs. Charles W. Carter, Pasadena; Director, Mrs. Lisbeth Hobart Curtis, San Francisco; Librarian, Mrs. Charles Booth, South Pasadena; Consulting Registrar, Miss Sarah Louise Kimball, San Francisco.

Formal announcements of the following candidates have already been made by the chapters to which the nominees belong and others will be made known during the week. For the office of State Regent, Mrs. Lyman B. Stookey, announced by the Eschscholtzia Chapter of Los Angeles; Vice-Regent, Mrs. Allen H. Vance; Recording Secretary, Miss Helen C. Wing; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. J. F. Kent; Treasurer, Mrs. Henry Edgar Bean; Auditor, Mrs. Jessie H. Shreve; Director, Mrs. Charles B. Boothe, Consulting Registrar Miss Louisa P. Merritt, and Librarian, Mrs. Mary Latham Norton, the latter announced by Mme. Adrienne De Lafayette Chapter of Vallejo.

While only one name has been mentioned for each office to date there is a well-developed augury of friendly contest in privately expressed wishes to run for office which insures several nominations during the week.

Woman's Press Club.

When Judge Frank S. Forbes spoke before the Woman's Press Club at a recent meeting, he paid a direct compliment to the Daughters of the American Revolution, who are this week visitors in Los Angeles for the State conference. He told how the good old American traditions of the early days of the country brought better results in the rearing of children than the more modern methods of today.

From his twelve years' experience in the justice court, where more than 2000 men with an average age of not over 21 years were charged with felonies, Judge Forbes said he was convinced that the chief cause of crime in youth lies in the lack of proper influence in the home. He praised the old-time home, where the father, with his boys, spent seven evenings in the week around the old family table with a few good books and magazines and the old-time country newspaper, which printed nothing but politics and religion.

As an example of the influence of such a home he cited the Washburn home of three generations ago, located on a rocky farm in Maine, where the five boys read with their father, "The Life of Washington," the works of Hamilton and Jefferson, History of the Revolutionary War, Shakespeare and the Bible, those being the only books they had. But what characters went forth from that home! Two of the boys became Governors of two different States, four of the boys were in Congress from four different States, two in the House of Representatives and two in the Senate. One of them was Secretary of State in President Grant's Cabinet and the youngest came to the Pacific Coast and established the first daily paper in San Francisco and later represented this country at the court of a foreign country.

To illustrate what an ideal community can do, the speaker told of the little town of Northampton, Mass., which has always placed special emphasis on the home, the school, the town library and the church, and this is a record of its young people as compiled by Dr. Josiah Strong: Three hundred fifty-four college graduates in a comparatively short period of time, fifty-six graduates of other institutions, 114 ministers, eighty-four ministers' wives, ten foreign missionaries, twenty-five judges, 102 lawyers, ninety-five physicians, 101 educators, including seven college presidents; thirty-four college professors, six historians, twenty-four authors, including such as Bancroft, Motley, Holland and Whitney; thirty-eight officers of States, among them Governors; seven State Senators, eight Representatives of the Legislature, twenty-one Army officers, including six colonels and two generals; twenty-eight officers of the United States, two foreign ministers, a U.S. Treasurer, five U.S. Senators, eight members of Congress and one President.

This is argument supreme, according to the judge, for the influence of home, school, good reading and the church for children.

The public affairs section of the University Club, Miss Elizabeth Pepper, chairman, will meet Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. in the clubroom, 805 Brack-Shops. D. F. McLaughlin will speak on "What Los Angeles is Doing for Those Dependent on the Community."

Pasadena Drama League.

Judges are now culling out the scripts received in the 1922 play contest conducted by Pasadena Center of the Drama League of America. More than 125 plays were received in the contest, which closed Wednesday. The winner will be announced as soon as determined, and the winning play is to be produced by the Pasadena Community Players in May.

At the session of the Drama League Study Class Monday evening, "A Bill of Divorcement," by Clemence Dane, was read. After the fashion of a reading rehearsal, the several parts were handled by different members, which was a departure from the usual practice of having one person read the entire play.

Those who took part were Mrs. S. T. Clover, as Margaret; H. O. Stechhan, Hilary; Louise Crawford, Miss Fairfield; Dorothy Frost, Sydney; Samuel T. Clover, Gray, and Oliver Prickett, Kit. The discussion of the play, which is one of the successes of the present New York season, was led by Dr. Margaret Carhart of the University of California.

At the Drama League's next session, on the 13th inst., Dr. Carhart will read "Pharaoh's Daughter," by Dr. and Mrs. Allison Gaw. This play won honorable mention in last year's contest and has been accepted for early production by Margaret Anglin. Dr. Gaw is head of the English department at the University of Southern California.

Next Tuesday and Wednesday evening, the Pasadena Community Players will give Southern California its first view of Eugene O'Neill's "Beyond the Horizon." This will be the March membership meeting of the Community Playhouse Association. Representatives of the community groups active in Santa Ana, Long Beach, Whittier, Santa Barbara, Monrovia, Hollywood and other near-by points will be present. The Pasadena cast will include Mrs. A. [illegible] Palmer, Eloise Sterling, William Reis, Jr., Maurice Wells, Mary Bartlett, Marjorie Sinclair, George Sabin, Douglas Mackenzie and Gilmor Brown. Mr. Brown is directing the production. Both performances will be given in the high school auditorium. Nonmembers can arrange to see "Beyond the Horizon" by joining the Community Playhouse Association. No tickets will be sold.

La Camarada Club.

La Camarada Club held an all-day meeting at the Southwest Museum on the 1st inst. Luncheon was served in the butterfly exhibit room. Mrs. Frances K. Headlee, educational secretary of the museum, served as hostess. After luncheon she gave a short talk, telling of her work and its possibilities. Also she outlined the plans and hopes for the future of the museum as an educational institution.

Dr. John R. Comstock, curator of the museum, spoke on "California Indians."

At the home of Mrs. E. D. Stoddard, 350 South Hobart avenue, will be held the next meeting of the club on the 15th inst. Mrs. Harriet Davis will be hostess.

Santa Monica Bay Club.

An illuminating talk on "The Heritage of Our Children" will be delivered by Judge J. Perry Wood at the monthly luncheon of the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club which will be held tomorrow at 12:30 p.m.

Mrs. C. M. Waters, program chairman, has obtained the Los Angeles Trio for an afternoon of music, beginning at 2:30. This trio is composed of May McDonald Hope, pianist, Calmon Luboviski, violinist, and Ilya Bronson, 'cellist, the concert director being Grace Carroll Elliott.

An afternoon of unusual interest is promised book and drama section members Tuesday, beginning at 2:30 p.m., when Miss Bess Munn is expected to pay tribute to Galsworthy and his writings. Mrs. A. X. Wilmot is chairman of this section.

As Daughters of American Revolution Prepare for Meeting Here.

Under the flag in the Adobe Flores picture is shown the tablet placed by the Oneonta Park Chapter, D.A.R. In the lower row of the group on the porch are, right to left, Mrs. Oswald Harshberger of Oakland, State Regent; Mrs. C. C. Cottle, Vice-President-at-Large, and Mrs. Lyman B. Stookey. The discovery tablet was placed in the San Diego Chapter in Balboa Park to commemorate the landing of Juan Rodriquez Cabrillo on the shores of San Diego Bay, Sept. 28, 1542. John Rutledge was Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, and the John Rutledge Chapter of San Francisco, of which Mrs. Leigh Richmond is Regent, was named in his honor. The two silver spoons are in the possession of the Covina Chapter, D.A.R. They were made by hand by Paul Revere, whose name is on the back, and were given by him as a wedding present to Rufus and Persee Putnam, whose initials are on the front of the handles. The spoons were used by George Washington when he visited Rufus and Persee Putnam in the colonies. Rufus Putnam, who was on the staff of Washington, is an ancestor of two members of the Covina Chapter. Mrs. Minor, President-General of D.A.R., is to arrive this morning to attend the State conference at the Alexandria this week. Mrs. Cerkel of San Francisco, the State Secretary, served as chief yeoman, United States Naval Reserve Force, during the World War. Mrs. Reynolds of Winston-Salem, N. C., National Chairman of International Relations and candidate for President-General in 1923, is now visiting in this city. Mrs. Stowell is Regent of Eschscholtzia Chapter, Los Angeles, the largest chapter in the State and one of the hostess chapters for the conference. Mrs. Cottle of this city is a Vice-President-General, D.A.R.

BRITISH MAIDS INDEPENDENT.

Domestic Help is Hard to Keep.

Servants Problem Despite Female Surplus.

BY LADY MARY.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, March 4.—The servant problem here in England is now beyond belief. Maids are not to be had at any price—let alone at any reasonable price. And having said that they cannot be found I shall commit an Irishism and continue by remarking that when they are found they are what might be called without exaggeration "difficult."

One of the principal things that girls object to in connection with domestic service would seem to be restrictions as to dress—and inability upon small wages to dress "smartly." That in domestic service they are better fed and housed than in almost any other line of work is not denied.

CONCESSIONS MADE.

The length to which employers are willing to go in order to overcome these objections, the concessions they are willing to make to the eagerness of surplus womanhood to make itself attractive so that it may get attention from the minority males, is indicated by various interesting advertisements. One hotel's call for maids says:

"Silk stockings and short skirts will not be objected to, but nonsmokers will be preferred."

One of the London dailies, in commenting on this, refers to a household in which three young women of a class superior hitherto to domestic service are employed.

The cook, an attractive young woman who drove an army car during the war, continually smokes cigarettes about her work. All three habitually wear silk stockings and two take turns in accompanying the master and mistress to a smart restaurant's supper-dance occurring once a week.

Competition for such of the "surplus" women as are willing to do anything whatever in a home is keen. But the era of the predominantly feminine office seems to be drawing to an end.

In hundreds of such establishments male clerks who found it difficult to get places after the war, when they returned from the trenches, because it was said that the girls who had been employed in their stead did better than they ever did, are being sought by the employers and offered their old jobs.

This, it is explained, is due to the fact that the girls are far less satisfactory since the war ended than while it progressed, this being partly due to the fact that while the war was on patriotic enthusiasm helped to keep the young women up to the mark and partly to the fact that now most of them, at least, hope to find mates, and, if they are enonomically able, wish to devote their whole attention to the process.

"Gets-It" Relieves Corns in 30 Seconds

Ask Your Friends—They Konw

Thousands of people have only themselves to blame for corn agony, blood poison, etc. Trimming and "treating," cutting and paring merely makes a bad matter worse. Millions of others are wiser. They know how easily and quickly "Gets-It" shrivels and peels corns and calluses off—in one piece. Get your money back if it fails. Wear new shoes with comfort. Get a bottle today. E. Careless Shampooing Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified coconut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—[Advertisement.

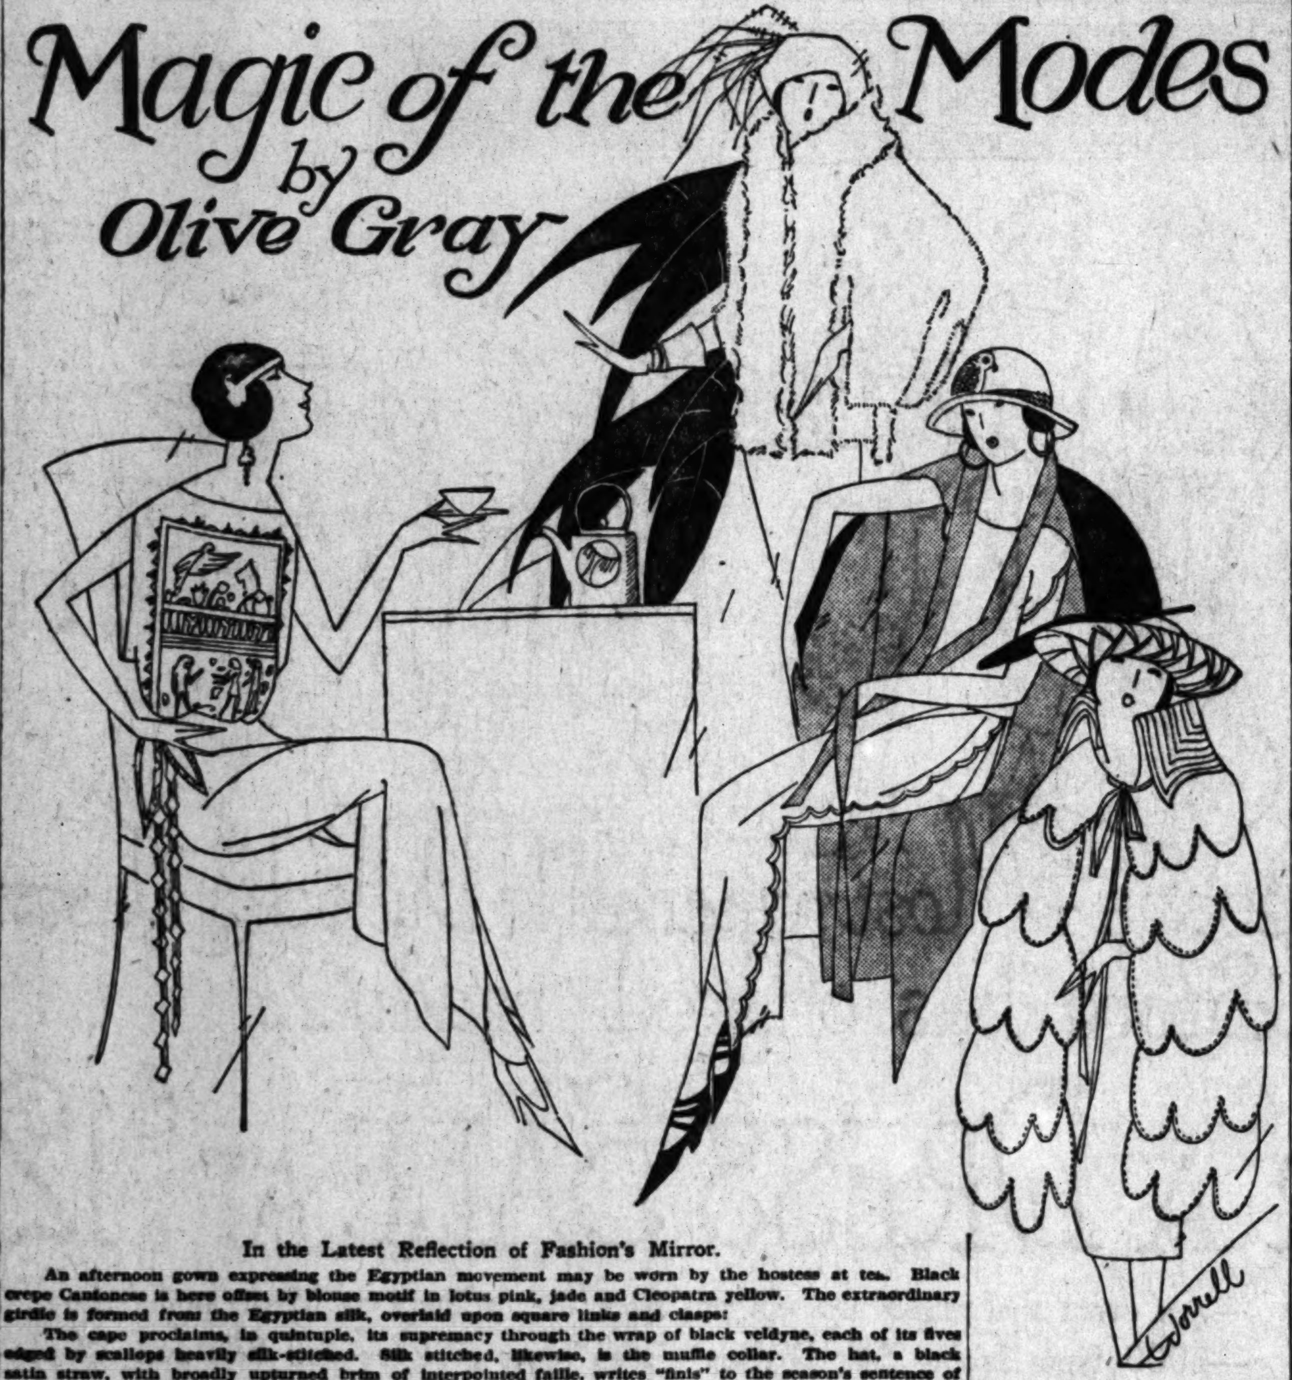
SIMPLE APPLICATION THAT DISSOLVES BLACKHEADS

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out and that is to dissolve them. To do this just get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition. Any druggist will sell you the calonite powder and about two ounces will be all you will ever need.

Magic of the Modes

by Olive Gray



In the Latest Reflection of Fashion's Mirror.

An afternoon gown expressing the Egyptian movement may be worn by the hostess at tea. Black crepe Cantonese is here offset by blouse motif in lotus pink, jade and Cleopatra yellow. The extraordinary girdle is formed from the Egyptian silk, overlaid upon square links and clasps:

The cape proclaims, in quintuple, its supremacy through the wrap of black veldyne, each of its fives edged by scallops heavily silk-stitched. Silk stitched, likewise, is the muffle collar. The hat, a black satin straw, with broadly upturned brim of interpointed faille, writes "finis" to the season's sentence of sparse trimming, with a quill of leather, black and white:

That dress and cape form a happy alliance, when the same color and material wed, is proven by a costume for the country club, which finds favor, also, in the city. Of Arabic brown knit crepe-ponge, the cape edge, ties and girdle are formed from the wrong side of the fabric. No sleeves and ingrown pockets are features of the dress. The hat, of pliable sports straw, is perched upon by an untalkative knitted parrot whose gay plumage winds its worsted length around the crown:

Friendliness 'twixt furs and summer is set forth by the coatee of moleskin and beige caracul—a novel conjoining of peltry and one extremely pleasing. The youthful box lines and capeish sleeves, speak the season's language:

Thus may be emphasized the every-incrasing informality in dress, brought about through the occasions where commingle those dropping in from promenade, theater, country club or indoor social function.

AROUND of the local shops must convince the discriminating of two facts.

One, that never in the history of fashion, have clothes been so fascinating, both in material and in line.

The other, that prices are lower than in many, many years. Even in those seasons which we have come to term prewar-time, I doubt if we were able to obtain so much of style, so wide a range in mode, such careful workmanship, for anywhere near the narrowness in price, as we find today. The reasons for this are several. Business readjustment has made necessary great exertion in manufacture, to bring forth the best, for reasons of competition. Talent, genius have been expended lavishly in the creation of novelties for our alluring; the looms have been taxed to give us a wealth of enticing weaves; our taste has been cosmopolized by introduction of strange hand-loomery and embroidering from far foreign and heretofore unknown lands. Thus, while clothes are prepared to exert a sorcery more potent than we have known for years, the cost of them has diminished out of all proportion to their charms. Is not this news to be hugged to the feminine heart?

That the statement is fact-proof, you will learn if you visit the Los Angeles shops.

That Los Angeles shops excel those of any city, one cannot dispute.

Here, one may find not alone those shops devoted to the larger sartorial needs of women, but specialty shops for every fad and fancy. A veritable Paris, when it comes to shops.

That we receive the modes as early, or, I would say, a trifle previous to their receipt in Eastern cities, is indisputable. The reason is that we are known to have an earlier spring season than do cities of the Atlantic Coast, hence manufacturers accord to us first choice of their products.

The wealth of Paris and America comes to us as soon or a bit earlier than to cities of the East. We know the proper length, or lack of length, in skirts; the fling of the newest cape; the latest heel and toe and vamp; the most coquettish angle permissible to the hat; how to carry out handbags and ourselves—as soon as anyone can know these.

We know that:

Crepes, silken, wool and cotton in rough surfaces are to be popular, the coming season.

That hats are to be larger for dressy wear; smaller for driving and for sportswear. That they are to be restrainedly trimmed, unless they take on the flowers of spring and summer, when they seek to adorn the head above the diaphanous cotton gown. That there are two extremes in millinery. One demanding scarcely any trimming, but the is discriminating to the last degree. Another lavish, as a Crœsus. In the latter class, entire hats are formed from flowers, from feathers, from aigrettes, from any chosen millinery thing. Hand-work, in millinery as in habiliments, must be unstinted when it is chosen as a feature.

That hand-work is so frequently the choice in dress and chapeaux, has an underlying cause in the desire to furnish work for those who need it as well, as to add that exclusive atmosphere, unattainable elsewise.

One may select the slim and willowy silhouette, of the square effect of the Egyptian angle; the all-around bouffency of the Colonial period, or the coquetry of the hip-hooped skirt. For both day and evening wear, skirts may choose to be swirls of clinging drapery, or perky at side or back. They may be severely long or may be boldly short, with irrelevant pretenses of length by way of floating uneven panels.

Bodices may take unto themselves sleeves of any length, or may go innocent of sleeves. They may have necks cut boat-shape, round, V shaped or fichu'd; or may collar to the chin.

At the silk counters one would aver that everything will be made from silk in its varied manifestations, from satin surface of rougher crepe; but outspeak the woolens boastingly the homespuns, ranged on the side with capes, skirts and entire suits. These have gained new popularity by the use of color, tweeds and homspuns blossoming forth in mauves, purples, blues and rose tints, heretofore seldom seen. What excuse can a woman make for looking otherwise than lovely, with so broad a choice at her disposal?

Add to the sartorial facts, the all-important one that prices have fallen well within the reach of the most humble purse—reductions in many instances reaching to one-third and vn to one half those of recent years—and we may look forward to a season of beauty, quality and modishness in dress, such as has not been experienced since pre-World War days.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS.

liam Jennings Bryan, Jr., Edward S. Curtis, Marah Ellis Ryan, Harry James, Cleveland Moffett, William S. Hart and Stewart Edward White.

Among the speakers who have already promised to appear on the daily program during the exhibit are: Mr. Curtis, who lived for thirty years among the Indians; Mrs. Ryan, who has written Indian stories, which have attracted wide attention; Dr. Comstock, Mr. Bryan and Mrs. Atwood, who is chairman of Indian welfare for the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Indians will come up from the reservations and dance their tribal dances. They will be seen in their games and in their work. The exhibition will continue during the State convention of women's clubs and will be the chief attraction for the delegates.

Woman's Club of Hollywood.

The Woman's Club of Hollywood is anticipating a good program next Wednesday afternoon when Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Farwell will give a combination of music and drama.

The luncheon on this date will be in charge of Mrs. Roscoe Shrader. Miss Lita Harlacker will talk on "Special Types of Decoration," illustrated by small groupings and sets. The English and the Browning sections hold department meetings in the morning before the luncheon.

On tomorrow from 8 to 10 p.m. the Woman's Club and the Hollywood Chapters of the D.A.R., are to hold a reception in the clubhouse in honor of Mrs. George Maynard Minor and the visiting delegates to the D.A.R. State Conference.

Mrs. Orville L. Routt's luncheons have aroused a great deal of enthusiasm. Last Wednesday biographies were studied. Mrs. Routt gave very scholarly comparisons of Strachey's "Queen Victoria" and Greville's Journal and of "Son of the Middle Border," with Crevecour's "Letters from an American Farmer."

Miss Jessica Lawrence reviewed "Steeplejack" by James Huneker and compared it with Celini's "Memoirs," in her humorous and interesting manner.

Mr. Ford, the editor of the literary page of the Sunday Los Angeles Times, talked upon a recent book—"What Next in Europe" by Frank A. Vanderlip. As Mr. Ford knows from personal study the present economic conditions in Europe he emphasized the book's message and its note of warning that the United States must take part in a workable plan if Europe is to escape bankruptcy and general world disorder is avoided.

Wednesday Morning Club.

Miss Hattie Mueller, piano teacher, spoke to an appreciative audience at the Wednesday Morning Club, Wednesday last, on "Musical Education." Miss Mueller is also a composer and accompanied her own compositions which were sung by Miss Amburr Jecker, a soprano from New York. The first two were sacred, "He Cares," and "Shut in With Thee!" The next two were secular, "If I Knew," and "Sunshine and Kisses." Miss Jecker's interpretation of them was delightful and Miss Mueller is to be congratulated on her new compositions.

Rev. Charles D. Lewis, pastor of the Vermont Square Methodist Episcopal Church, spoke to the public welfare and current event section. His address was interesting and instructive.

Next Wednesday through the courtesy of Bullock's Louise Di Geffens will present a program called, "An Appreciation of Art in Dress." There will be a musical setting by Mrs. Charles George and Mrs. George L. Charette will sing. Mrs. E. Q. Bowden will have charge of the luncheon.

Queen Alexandria Chapter, D.B.E.

Mrs. Christopher Gorden is chairman of the program for the Queen Alexandria Chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, which meets tomorrow at 2:15 p.m. at the Walker Theater Auditorium.

Miss Gertrude Darlow of the public library will talk on "Four Months Abroad" and Mrs. M. C. Bellamy will sing a group of songs.

Ebell of Los Angeles.

Soll Cohen, violinist, and Melba French Barr, soprano, will give the program at the Ebell Club on tomorrow. It will be replete with American melodies. Melba French Barr was recently heard as soloist in an oratorio and took the leading role in Pinafore when it was given here a few months ago.

John C. Spaulding, known for his connection with the William Astor Memorial at Rhinebeck, N. and the mosaics in the Chicago public library, will speak before the art and travel department of the Ebell Club on Wednesday. His subject, "Los Angeles and the Applied Arts," will be illustrated by a miniature Tiffany studio erected on the stage. To Mr. Spalding's efforts may be attributed three fine mosaic panels which will be in the new Methodist Episcopal Church. These panels are unexcelled by anything in Europe, it is said.

The Junior Auxiliary will hear a talk on "Keeping the Balance" by Miss Elsie Lee of the Nordlee studio of designing and art decoration, at the meeting on Wednesday afternoon. This will be preceded by a discussion on "Parliamentary Law" by Mrs. Charles S McKelvey. Mrs. McKelvey has just issued a ritual of parliamentary law, which is of especial interest to club women.

The March exhibit of paintings at Ebell Club is by members of the Laguna Beach Art Association of which Louis Cuprien is the president.

Children's Exposition.

There are hundreds of children who go to school each morning in Los Angeles without a bite of breakfast. The only food which they have until they return home in the afternoon is the small portion of milk which the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations is able to provide for them.

Such disclosure was made by Mrs. T. B. Bowling, financial secretary of the P.T.A., in her invitation to the public to assist in this humanitarian work. Checks may be mailed directly to her.

In a dozen or more schools which are attended by children of the poorer classes, the milk distributed by the federation gives these tots the happiest moments of the day. There is an urgent demand, according to Mrs. Bowling, for a furtherance of this work. Three hundred dollars a month is being spent by the federation for milk.

It is pointed out by Mrs. Bowling that the forthcoming Children's Exposition at Exposition Park, April 8 to 16 next, will afford the public an opportunity to assist in this worthy cause, as proceeds from the big affair will be spent along such child-welfare lines.

Parents are urged by the federation to interest their children in entering events in the exposition, and the Board of Education is cooperating in this respect.

SAINT CECILIA CLUB TO BE ENTERTAINED.

Mrs. Roy Kellogg will entertain the St. Cecilia Club tomorrow at luncheon at noon at her home, 365 El Molino, Pasadena. Mrs. R. Ross and Mrs. W. Nickerson will assist the hostess. A program of Russian music has been arranged with the following members contributing: Mrs. Philip Zobelein, Mrs. Harry Baxter, Mrs. Adrian Perkey, Mrs. Hazel White, Mrs. Robert Richert and Mrs. Glover Stith. Mrs. Bernard Brown is chairman.

AMERICAN PEN WOMEN WILL HAVE JUBILEE.

The silver jubilee convention and book fair of the National League of American Pen Women will be held in Washington, D. C., from April 25 to 28th next. Authors who expect to attend are asked to arrange immediately with their publishers to send on representative collections of their books to be autographed and sold at their regular price. There will be no charge for exhibition privileges and no percentage on sales required from members of the league.

The Los Angeles branch of this organization has several authors who are planning either to send their books or to go on themselves to Washington to be present during the exhibition. Mrs. Bertha Lincoln Heustis is president of the local branch.

GIRL FINDS LOST JEWELS.

"Psychic Eyes" of High School Student Puzzle Master of Legerdemain; Gift Being Investigated.

er "wave strata" and catches things that have to do with ordinary, humdrum contemporary life.

A first theme in physics—not psychics—holds that if a tree fall in a primeval forest, where there is not the smallest atom of animal life and where no ears are to hear it, then there can be no crash: there is no sound where there is no ear to hear it.

MAY BE NEW SENSE.

But will Miss Eugenie Dennis, a mere high-school girl, and not a tremendously adept one at that—will she be the means of refuting this old and intriguing theory? Perhaps. Perhaps not. It is within the range of the believable that she may be the medium to prove that there is in mortal life a new sense, a new perception, which is a far-flung development from that primitive, crude instinct which the first man had and which exists in the name of "acumen" until the nascent generation.

What if we all have, submerged, that power which makes Eugenie Dennis unique? What if she has only discovered and uncovered her subtle perceptivity by accident! Many things are being learned today. It would take a great deal to startle the world. But it would be startling if some psychic or physical scientist should break forth with the theory that Eugenie Dennis lives to demonstrate the use of a common faculty—a glorified instinct—that she is a living proof that the human mind, which all ages until now have arrogantly held to be personal and private property, is in reality—or unreality—the property of the universe, the cosmic mind, somehow related to every other machine of thought under the stars of heaven. Even in some vague but growing relation to the planets and the spheres.

"That is a flight of imagination, but, after all, imagination is conservative. The maddest envisioning of the past is occasionally outrivaled by the truth of the present.

But to come to earth again:

HELPED LEGION MEN.

At the recent national convention of the American Legion in Kansas City Eugenia appeared and her "readings" on that occasion were mysterious in the extreme to some of the veterans, who "got into communication" with comrades who had been killed in France. She proved definitely to the minds of some of these veterans that she was conveying messages from dead soldiers, for the "voices" reminisced over incidents which were dear memories and of which she personally could have in no wise known.

In Omaha she has located long-lost papers, she has recovered lost jewelry; she has told mothers where wandering children might be found. She has repeated a "test conversation" agreed upon years ago between Abbott and a dying friend, who promised to fulfill the agreement whenever he found a medium of communication.

Some will believe that it is "spirits" that call to the schoolgirl and reveal to her those things hidden to others; the majority will not. Many of those who have witnessed extraordinary demonstrations do not believe that it is aught of the occult or supernatural. They merely admit they have witnessed what they cannot explain, but insist, of course, that there is an explanation. But all are agreed that the little schoolgirl is innocent of all pretense. None has discovered grounds for an "expose." She seems to be above suspicion.

"I do not known how I do it," Eugenie Dennis says. "It seems to just come to me. I do not try to know things—to see things far away. I just can't help myself when the things begin to come.

It is because of the startling aspects of some of this schoolgirl's revelations that it has been decided to take her to New York City for a "physical laboratory test."

REFORMED.

"And at her request you gave up drinking?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you quit cigarettes for the same reason?"

"I did."

"And you no longer swear because of her disapproval?"

"Most assuredly."

"And it was for her that you gave up dancing, poker parties and poor playing?"

Absolutely."

"Then why did you not marry her?"

"Well, sir, after all this reforming I saw I could do better."—[Judge.

THE VALUE OF CHARC

Few People Know How U It Is In Preserving Healt and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows charcoal is the safest and efficient disinfectant and in nature, but few realize when taken into the human tem for the same cleansing pose.

Charcoal is a remedy the more you take of it the is not a drug at all, but absorbs the gases and always present in the and intestines and out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the after smoking, and after onions and other tables.

Charcoal effectually improves the complexion, ens the teeth and further a natural and catharthic.

It absorbs the injurious which collect in the bowels; it disinfects the and throat from the catharrh.

All druggists sell charcoal one form or another, ably the best charcoal most for the money is in Charcoal Lozenges; they are posed of the finest powdered low charcoal, in tablet rather in the form of large sant tasting lozenges, coal being sweetened smooth and palatable.

The daily use of these will soon tell in a much condition of the general better complexion, sweeter and purer blood, and of it is, that no possible can result from their use, but on the contrary benefit.

Many physicians advise Charcoal Lozenges to suffering from gas in bowels, and to clear the ion and purify the breath and throat. The Times Literary Page Books and Their Makers

by Thomas F. and Lillian C. Ford

A TRACT ON PROHIBITION.

F. Scott Fitzgerald's Second Novel Reveals With Biting Satire the Hectic Career of a Jaded Flapper and Her Mate in Their Attack Upon the Volstead Law.

THE BEAUTIFUL AND DAMNED. By F. Scott Fitzgerald. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

When the youthful F. Scott Fitzgerald's first novel, "This Side of Paradise," was published some two years ago, it created something of a stir, for at that time the reading public had not been surfeited with flapper fiction. The book was widely read and ready recognition was accorded the author's ability in picturing youth boldly intent in seeking its own. This presentation to maturity of the plaint of youth, sizzling hot from the mind of one of them, proved to be merely one in the vanguard of books after the new realistic manner.

Though amusing and in a measure enlightening, the book with its lack of organization and its empty philosophy of life, proved generally unsatisfying to all but the flappers of the class depicted.

"The Beautiful and Damned" shows a distinct advantage both in technique and in comprehension. Flappers are no longer quite so intriguing to the author. Though he still looks upon 30 as the dividing line between life and death, he recognizes that something must be done with those declining years beyond the great divide of 30.

The story is that of Anthony Patch and Gloria Gilbert. The former was a vague young man, grandson of Adam Patch, a multimillionaire. Anthony lived in a "reproachless" apartment in New York and talked at times of making writing his profession, but his real occupation was that of passing the time as pleasantly as possible while waiting for grandpapa to pass on. Gloria, a "connoisseur of kisses," had been, probably, the most celebrated and sought-after young beauty in the country. Gloria Gilbert of Kansas City! She had fed on it ruthlessly—enjoying the crowds around her, the manner in which the most desirable men singled her out; enjoying the fierce jealousy of other girls; enjoying the fabulous, not to say scandalous, and, her mother was glad to say, unfounded rumors about her—for instance, that she had gone into the Yale swimming-pool one night in a chiffon evening dress.

Then she had at the age of twenty-three grown tired of her petty triumphs. Kisses lost their flavor, "dates" were ruthlessly cut, her little body became a-weary of this great world. At this time appeared Anthony. After a course of wooing in the new manner, Gloria found herself interested in Anthony, and so she married him. They went on a turbulent honeymoon to California, during which Anthony discovered his beauteous bride was selfish, though none the less alluring on this account. Then they returned to New York to resume the rounds of restaurants and public dances and drinking bouts

"LITERATURE" AND THE PRESS.

Gifted Writer Scouts Theory That Writing for Newspapers Is Injurious.

BY ALEXANDER BLACK.

[The following article from the pen of the author of "The Great Desire" and "The Seventh Angel," two exceedingly thoughtful and well written novels that have appeared within the last few years, effectively disposes of the idea that writing for the newspapers necessarily impairs a writer's style by rendering it ineffective, in the production of what we know as literature.—Editor.]

Once in a while an anxious person asks whether being a newspaper writer isn't fatal to being literary. It is as if the spectacle of a man talking to an audience in a great arena were to excite a fear that the poor chap would never again be able to speak properly in a parlor. The implication seems to be that it would be a dreadful thing if anyone with the wish or the faculty for being literary should be blighted by journalism, or if not blighted, at least tainted to a degree that hampered his flight. Many a literary aspirant has asked me, with solemn concern, whether writing for newspapers was not likely to spoil style beyond recovery. There has been the effect of wondering whether literary virginity should not be saved for ritualistic consecration to a higher career, for the moment of marriage to the bookish life.

These anxieties are often the greater because the feared effects are obscure. Perhaps there has been an adventure or two with no immediately apparent signs of infection. To write for a newspaper and feel as literary as before must, I gather, excite an awed suspicion that the infection may be subtle and that you may discover when it is too late that your constitution is hopelessly undermined, or that newspaper influence threatens to have a wood-alcohol effect on your spiritual sight.

I have found it rather reassuring to the dubious to remind them that Dickens, Barrie, Kipling, Franklin, Poe, Walt Whitman, Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Ambrose Bierce, Howells and many another, dead and living, have been newspaper men without discernible handicap by reason of that circumstance.

The truth is, of course, that the worst writing and the best writing appear in newspapers; the worst, because of the natural hazards of hurry; the best, because the great audience reached by newspapers naturally tends to enlist the imagination and powers of expression in the most gifted men and women and because the institutional privilege and enterprise of newspapers may offer opportunities beyond the range of other avenues of print.

What we call art (it is one of the funniest words we have) represents seeing, feeling and expressing. There is nothing in any of these functions that is interfered with by a newspaper, in itself; it is the audience consideration that affects the expression when the expression is affected at all. One must speak clearly to a big audience, and speaking clearly never hurt anyone. Newspaper writing has taught writers to remember that audiences are interested in more than "literary" things. Whether a man is selling, or preaching, or entertaining it is well that he should learn to remember other people, and their situation at the time he approaches them. It is the writer who is self-centered, who is wondering about his own soul rather than other people's souls, who thinks being literary is writing down in pretty words an expression of himself, rather than writing down in the simplest possible words a communication of himself to others who has most to fear from facing the newspaper audiences. It makes a mighty difference in the definition of art whether the artist says "expression" or says "communication."

As a matter of fact, there is no class of good writing that does not find its way into the modern newspaper; and there is no class of writing which active newspaper writers are not producing for other print. Many an immortal thing between stiff covers not only first appeared in a newspaper, but was written for a newspaper. Most of the greatest modern essays, for example, appear as editorials and reviews.

Newspaper men who live the literary double life by writing for both newspapers and books seem to be able to do so without hurting either the newspapers or the books. It is more important that they are able to do so without hurting themselves. Nothing hurts art that doesn't hurt the artist. It is more important to understand humanity than to understand words. There is no better way to learn the real value of words than by the use of them before a big audience. Literature is never produced by being consciously bookish. Personality and good thinking are what endure. "Precious" bunches of words count for no more than the flourishes of a self-conscious workman. The thing the workman thinks and then makes is the thing that counts.

YOUTH'S AWAKENING.

ADAM AND CAROLINE. By Conal O'Riordan. Harcourt, Brace & Co. New York.

This is a story of youth, through the drowsy awakening of thirteen to the alertness of early manhood. It possesses a quality as rare to find as it is impossible to describe. The author has the quality of heart-warmth, which gilds the Irish race. He has also the caustic wit which tempers them. In Adam he has lost none of those nuances which are the very substance of adolescence. Out of the blurr of half-conscious doubts and fears, of sudden enthusiasms and over-confidence, Adam emerges and takes definite form and character. He is at once youth symbolic and Adam individual. The character of Adam is no less vivid and appealing than that of his worldly-wise guardian, Mr. McCarthy, whose replies to Adam's questions seeking absolute truth make brilliant reading. The reader who values subjective insight above external action will read and re-read this excellent bit of literature.

SELECTED NIETZSCHE LETTERS.

THE SELECTED LETTERS OF FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE. Edited by Dr. Oscar Levy. Authorized translation by Anthony M. Ludovici. Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y.

This compact volume of letters of Friedrich Nietzsche consists of a selection from the five-volume edition published in Germany in the years 1900-1909. The selections have been made from the mass of Nietzsche's voluminous correspondence largely for the purpose of proving two assertions made and maintained by the ardent disciples of this eminent philologist, philosopher and inconoclast. The first point sought to be established is that up to the date of his complete mental breakdown on Jan. 1. 1889, Nietzsche remained perfectly sane. The second contention to be established is that Nietzsche was not, as has often been charged, in any degree responsible for the World War.

In regard to the first-mentioned matter, it is difficult to understand how any careful and unbiased reader of these epistles can agree with Mr. Levy and with Nietzsche's sister and impassioned advocate, Frau Forster, that the man's lapse from sanity was a sudden one. The mental disorder which reached its culmination in 1889 doubtless began in 1876, at which date Nietzsche records that he commenced to suffer from the most terrible headaches, which drove him to the habitual use of chloral and other drugs in order to deaden the constant torture he experienced. From this time, too, dates his ultrasensitiveness, the effect of egomania, which led him to consider himself as "misunderstood" by every one, even by his once-beloved Wagner. For Wagner's mildly expressed disagreement with the substance of Nietzsche's later writings as well as the fact that his growing fame brought him so many disciples that he could no longer devote himself so whole-heartedly to his first friend, wounded the morbid sensibilities of the philosopher.

It was at or about this period that Nietzsche began to imagine himself the exalted founder and destined apostle of a new social order, apparently oblivious to the fact that at least one modern writer, Thomas Carlyle, had set forth in his later period a cult precisely similar to his own.

It is certain that any really sane man with a mere fraction of Nietzsche's learning and intellignece could not have failed to recognize the fact that Carlyle's genius and Nietzsche's superman were identical, the underlying idea in both cases being that the production and nourishment of the occasional superior type means everything to the human race, while the ordinary individual counts for next to nothing. Therefore an evolutionary Fee-Faw-Fum style of giant with a highly developed "will to power" is quite justified in grinding up his weaker brethren's bones and blood to make his bread. Nietzsche also knew that the theory thus outlined has always existed. But to his disordered mind the wish, born of intense egoism, that men should forget the fact that the hypothesis be championed was as old as history and should hail him as the first and only "antiChrist" had an overpowering and in the end a fatal fascination. Again and again he refers in his letters to his "terrific mission"—that of attempting to overthrow the philosophy of life taught by "The Crucified One"—also to his "wonderful vision" and the "sublime vistas" opening before him; of his being "strong enough to cleave the history of mankind in two," and so on. Again, he boasts of the supposed fact that "Being a destiny and having now related myself . . . through me the world within two years will be thrown into convulsions." Speaking of his "The Transvaluation of Values" he confides this: "I asked myself what among men has been most hated, feared and scorned; and out of this . . . like an alchemist, I have manufactured my gold." Thus he paraphrases the celebrated invocation of Milton's Satan: "Evil be Thou my Good." This is not the language of a philosophic and balanced thinker, but the piteous ravings of an egomaniac thirstily craving notoriety. His closing correspondence with Strindberg, in which the one signs himself "Caesar" and the other, "The best and highest God," illumines both men.

Concerning the second moot point, whether the study in Europe of Nietzsche's writings inspired the great war, it is difficult to decide whether this author so largely influenced his people by means of his extravagant laudation of war as the creator and preserver of all desirable qualities, or whether he was merely one manifestation of a spirit already existent throughout middle Europe. Certain it is that his views were and are the views of the Germans of rank and wealth and of a majority of the teaching force in their schools and universities.

The one thing, however, which the evidence of these letters apparently establishes is that "a noble mind was here o'erthrown" and it is a great pity that this should have been so. M. F. C.

THE NIETZSCHE—WAGNER CORRESPONDENCE. Edited by Elizabeth Forster-Nietzsche. Translated by Caroline V. Kerr. Boni & Liveright, New York.

These letters are connected and made readily understandable by the running comment of the editor, Nietzsche's sister. They make clear the relationship between Nietzsche and Wagner throughout the years of their close friendship and reveal the cause of the breaking of that friendship when each had grown too conscious of his own power to be able to continue in the old relation with the other.

In the introduction, written by H. L. Mencken, the cause of the quarrel between the two is thus explained: "The underlying cause of it was simple and unescapable. Nietzsche grew so vastly during the years that the two men were together that it was quite impossible for him to go on as a mere satellite, even of a Wagner. It is to the credit of Wagner's discernment that he saw almost instantly the great ability of the younger man; it is to the shame thereof that his valuation of it stopped far short of the reality. What he beheld before him was a young professor of extraordinary parts, eagerly responsive to his revolutionary (and often anything but transparent) ideas, full of a chivalric but ferocious bellicosity, and extremely effective as a propagandist. What he actually had in front of him was a European figure of the first caliber—perhaps the most salient and original personality seen in the groves of learning since Goethe.

"It is always hard for an old man to fathom the true importance of a young one. He is blinded by the conventional superiority that goes with his mere age; he is losing his old resilience to ideas; perhaps he is a bit jealous, as a fading charmer is of a flapper. In Wagner all these impediments to understanding Nietzsche were helped by his personal weaknesses, his theatrical egomania, almost suggesting that of an actor; his lack of the hard training necessary to a comprehension of Nietzsche's veriest fundamentals; above all, his jumpy dread of rivals, challengers, enemies."

In a book edited by Nietzsche's admiring sister, Mr. Mencken's introduction is particularly apt, though it leaves the Wagnerian side of the controversy without a word of defense.

EDITION OF GEORGE MOORE.

The Carra edition of the works of George Moore will be published by Boni and Liveright in the spring. To all Moore lovers this is an announcement of the utmost importance. This is the first definitive edition of the works of George Moore, and it will contain several titles which have been available only in limited editions previously—such as "Heloise and Abeland," "The Story Teller's Holiday," and "Memoirs of My Dead Life." Some of the books including "Modern Painting," and "Celibates" have been entirely rewritten, and all of the books have had textual changes made in them. The first five volumes of the set will be published about June 1. and the first volume of each set will be autographed by the author.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

An honor was paid an American poet by the Society of Women of France of New York, when Annette Wynne's poem, "What Grew in Joan's Garden," was placed in the corner-stone of the statue of Jeanne d'Arc presented to the women of America. This statue was presented by Mme. Polifeme, president of Le Lyceum, and unveiled by Mrs. Harding at Washington. Annette Wynne's volume of poems, "For Days and Days," is published by Stokes.

George Barr McCutcheon says that the only thrill he has experienced for several years was being photographed with Edna Ferber. And Mr. McCutcheon lives in New York City, too.

Most interesting, suggestive and readable is a book about Einstein which the Duttons have just published, "Einstein the Searcher," by Alexander Moszkowski, a friend, admirer and frequent companion of the famous scientist. The book has been translated from the original German by Henry L. Brose of Oxford.

Mr. Chamberlain is generous, not to say prodigal, of his very real talent for story telling. In "Cobweb" alone there are plots and subplots enough to furnish the bases of a dozen ordinary books; each of the minor characters is as carefully considered and convincingly presented as are the two impetuous lovers, and the dialogue is wise, and observant and witty.

Frank Harris, who had some of his rare, but never grudging words of praise for Marie Conway Oemler's novel, "Slippy McGee" (comparing parts of it to "Lorna Doone" for sweetness and charm,) went south to Mrs. Oemler's home with her this winter, and has been visiting her at her new house in Florida. The novel that he praised is to have presentation in the form of play, arranged by Eugene Walter, whose "Paid in Full" and "The Easiest Way" were so successful. Charles B. Dillingham will be the producer.

Although Katharine Fullerton Gerould's first full-length novel, "Lost Valley," was published only a short time ago, the book is already in its second printing, according to Harper & Bros. Which indicates that the public does welcome a novel of real literary merit.

Apropos of his new volume of essays, "The Latest Thing and Other Things," which the Harpers are publishing, Alexander Black says: "As an editor I try to think of everybody, but as a writer I think of the other fellow who reads what I read, thinks what I think, feels what I feel. I write out of my heart to the imaginary folks who like what I like."

The Explorers' Club of New York City unanimously re-elected Vilhjalmur Stefansson president. This is a position which Admiral Peary held for several years before his death. It is interesting to recall the strong friendship between these two great Arctic explorers, who differed so much in method yet each of whom received his greatest tribute from the other.

Peary made his dash to the Pole as the greatest feat possible, using the method of transporting food by sled relay. Stefansson revolutionized methods of Arctic work by proving that so such dependence on civilized food is necessary, and

"The Story of Mankind" by Henrik Van Loo[illegible] Accepted Historic Fact With a Bit of Jazz [illegible] Arrives at Some Peculiar Conclusions.

THE STORY OF MANKIND. By Henrik Van Loon. Boni & Liveright. Illustrated by the Author.

Mr. Van Loon has taken accepted historical facts, crossed them with a bit of jam, added some symbolic art, and the result is a new "Outline of History." He has dared comparison with H. G. Wells's now famous two-volume version of things from the beginning. To be precise, so Boni & Liveright inform us, Mr. Van Loon had conceived the idea and prepared the copy for his "story" before there were any intimations of Mr. Wells's "Outline," and yet his book carries on.

Mr. Van Loon is a former lecturer on modern European history in Cornell University. This far for his credentials. As for the man, a picture loosely inserted in the book shows a clear-eyed man of the business type, a man of smiles and humor and irony. In fact, his book ends up with a eulogy of irony and pity as the twin goddesses to which we should pay our devotions—we who have come far from the primitive, but who still occasionally draw the [illegible] of savagery around us.

Vandermark's Folly
By Herbert Quick

IF YOU were among those who lived in the olden, golden days when America began taking her first, tottering, uncertain steps towards the west, to Iowa, Kansas, Illinois, Missouri, Texas and California—then you will take unbounded delight in reading this tale of the West at that time. Especially if you hail from the grand old State of Iowa will you enjoy it, for it is said that the scenes have been taken from actual happenings in that State. It is not a story of toil and labor, of disappointments and heart breaks. Those vicissitudes which are related are more in the nature of thrilling episodes than of grinding hardships. It is a tale of adventure and love, full of humor and pathos, but withal a remarkably fine history of those olden days and the brave-hearted people that lived therein.

Young people who revel in thrills, and yet who are not averse to improving their minds, will also enjoy this book. It is priced at $2.00.

Harlequin and Columbine
By Booth Tarkingt

IF YOU were to behold your favorite matinee idol engaged in such an incongruous occupation as eating spaghetti, would you still be able to keep him enthroned upon his accustomed pedestal and let the worshiping continue, or would the romance with which you had surrounded him fade away somewhat and leave him merely a human being after all?

Or, if in the monotony of every day rehearsals you were forced to observe the mechanism of his many mesmerizing mannerisms, such as the trying out of that engaging smile of his upon the rows of empty seats, (the smile you had always looked upon as being so charmingly spontaneous) would he still possess the power to fascinate you?

What, then do you suppose an actor's servants and co-workers think of him? Booth Tarkington will tell you, and in such a manner as to make you "howl with glee." Read this tale of the everyday life of one Mr. Talbot Potter, as related in "Harlequin and Columbine." Priced at $1.50.

that one can live "off the country," whether on the seemingly barren land of Banks Island, or traveling on the ice over unsounded depths of polar ocean. The story of this latter remarkable journey is told in his new book, "The Friendly Arctic." (The Macmillan Company.)

Alfred Noyes has recently completed the first part of a poetical work of unique interest and importance, in which he has been absorbed for some time. It is an epic dealing with the human side of scientific progress. The first portion, entitled "The Watchers of the Sky," and concerned with the romance of early astronomical discovery, is promised by Stokes for publication this spring.

In a paper entitled "The Literature of 1921," in The Fortnightly Review for January, 1922, S. M. Ellis includes a few American books which have been published in England in his survey, among others, "Jurgen," John Russell's "Where the Pavement Ends," and "The Tiger in the House," by Carl Van Vechten. Of the latter he says, "The cat received honored recognition in 1921, by the publication of Mr. Carl Van Vechten's monumental volume, 'The Tiger in the House.' There have, of course, been many previous books about cats, including the charming work of Harrison Weir in 1889, but none so elaborate as this, which explores every road and by-path of the cat's entry into literature, art, music, and the occult; it provides also an extraordinary full and sympathetic exposition of feline psychology, and contains some fine illustrations, including pictures by Renoir and Manet."

Literary labors have been temporarily abandoned by Harry Leon Wilson and George Ade, who have been spending the early winter on the golf links at Pasadena.

Mr. Wilson has recently completed a new novel, "Merton of the Movies," a study of life in the California picture studios, which Doubleday, Page & Co. will bring out this spring.

"Infernally clever," Bliss Perry called May Sinclair's last book, "Mr. Waddington of Wyck," and her forthcoming novel, "Life and Death of Harriett Frean," does not belie that characterization of Miss Sinclair's genius. From the "beautiful behavior" of Harriett's childhood to the creeping fret of her old age, the author's insight spares no touch of realistic portraiture, portraiture of a remarkable vividness whose effect is obtained with a freedom from meticulous detail that is refreshing. (The Macmillan Company.)

Stephen Graham's new book, "Europe—Whither Bound?" (Appleton) has been declared by Dr. Maurice Francis Egan to be "more entertaining than most novels," and the reading public appears to be quite agreeing with the distinguished diplomat. Among the most amusing of the book's chapters is that on passports, which throws a flood of light, by the way, on the circulatory system of the Old World. Among the gruesome tales of the difficulties of the traveler, Mr. Graham tells the story of the Polish Consulate at Munich. There was a Consul and Vice-Consul, but nothing for them to do, Poland having remarkably little business in Bavaria. The post languished; the Vice-Consul was recalled; the clerk dismissed. Then the Consul had a happy thought. Every Polish subject in Bavaria should have a Polish passport from the Consul. Police orders were issued. But having registered the whole Polish population and charged them for it, what then? "Oh, I only give them visas for three months," says the Consul. "Every quarter they must come again."

lems of a mechanical and industrial world. It did its best, according to the rules of the game which had been laid down centuries before. The different states created enormous armies and navies, which were used for the purpose of acquiring new possessions in distant lands. If the natives objected, they were killed. In most cases they did not object, and were allowed to live peacefully, provided they did not interfere with the diamond mines or the coal mines or the oil mines or the gold mines or the rubber plantations, and they derived many benefits from the foreign occupation."

Then there came a time when there were no more worlds to conquer and the usual thieves' quarrel followed. There it is as Mr. Van Loon limns it. It is an intoxicating taste of history concocted of many things, first of which is a fine understanding.

HISTORIC SOUTHERN MANORS.

"Potomac Landings" is the title of Paul Wilstach's new book which Doubleday, Page & Co. have just published.

This is the story of the Potomac from its settlement by Lord Baltimore to the present day. It begins with Lord Baltimore's regal court at St. Mary's and follows the pioneering period when great manors came into being on the Maryland side, balanced by equally great plantations in Virginia; then the first primitive homestead gave way to the splendid establishments which today stand among the finest examples of American architecture. Much of the book is devoted to the personal life of the colonists; how they built their homes and lived in them; what they ate and wore, and what they did when they were sick; their social life; their balls and their hunts, and their other diversions. The chapters on the establishment of the great plantations are particularly interesting; each was a community in itself, with its many shops and craftsmen, its judicial system, its own shipping across the ocean to England and, in the earlier days, its own manorial rights and customs.

To collect illustrations for the book, Mr. Wilstach and an artist photographer spent three weeks on the shores of the Potomac obtaining pictures of the famous old manor houses and landings. Among the most interesting of these are the photographs of double chimneys and some beautiful old doors and windows. Mr. Wilstach is also the author of "Mount Vernon," a beautifully illustrated history of Washington's home.

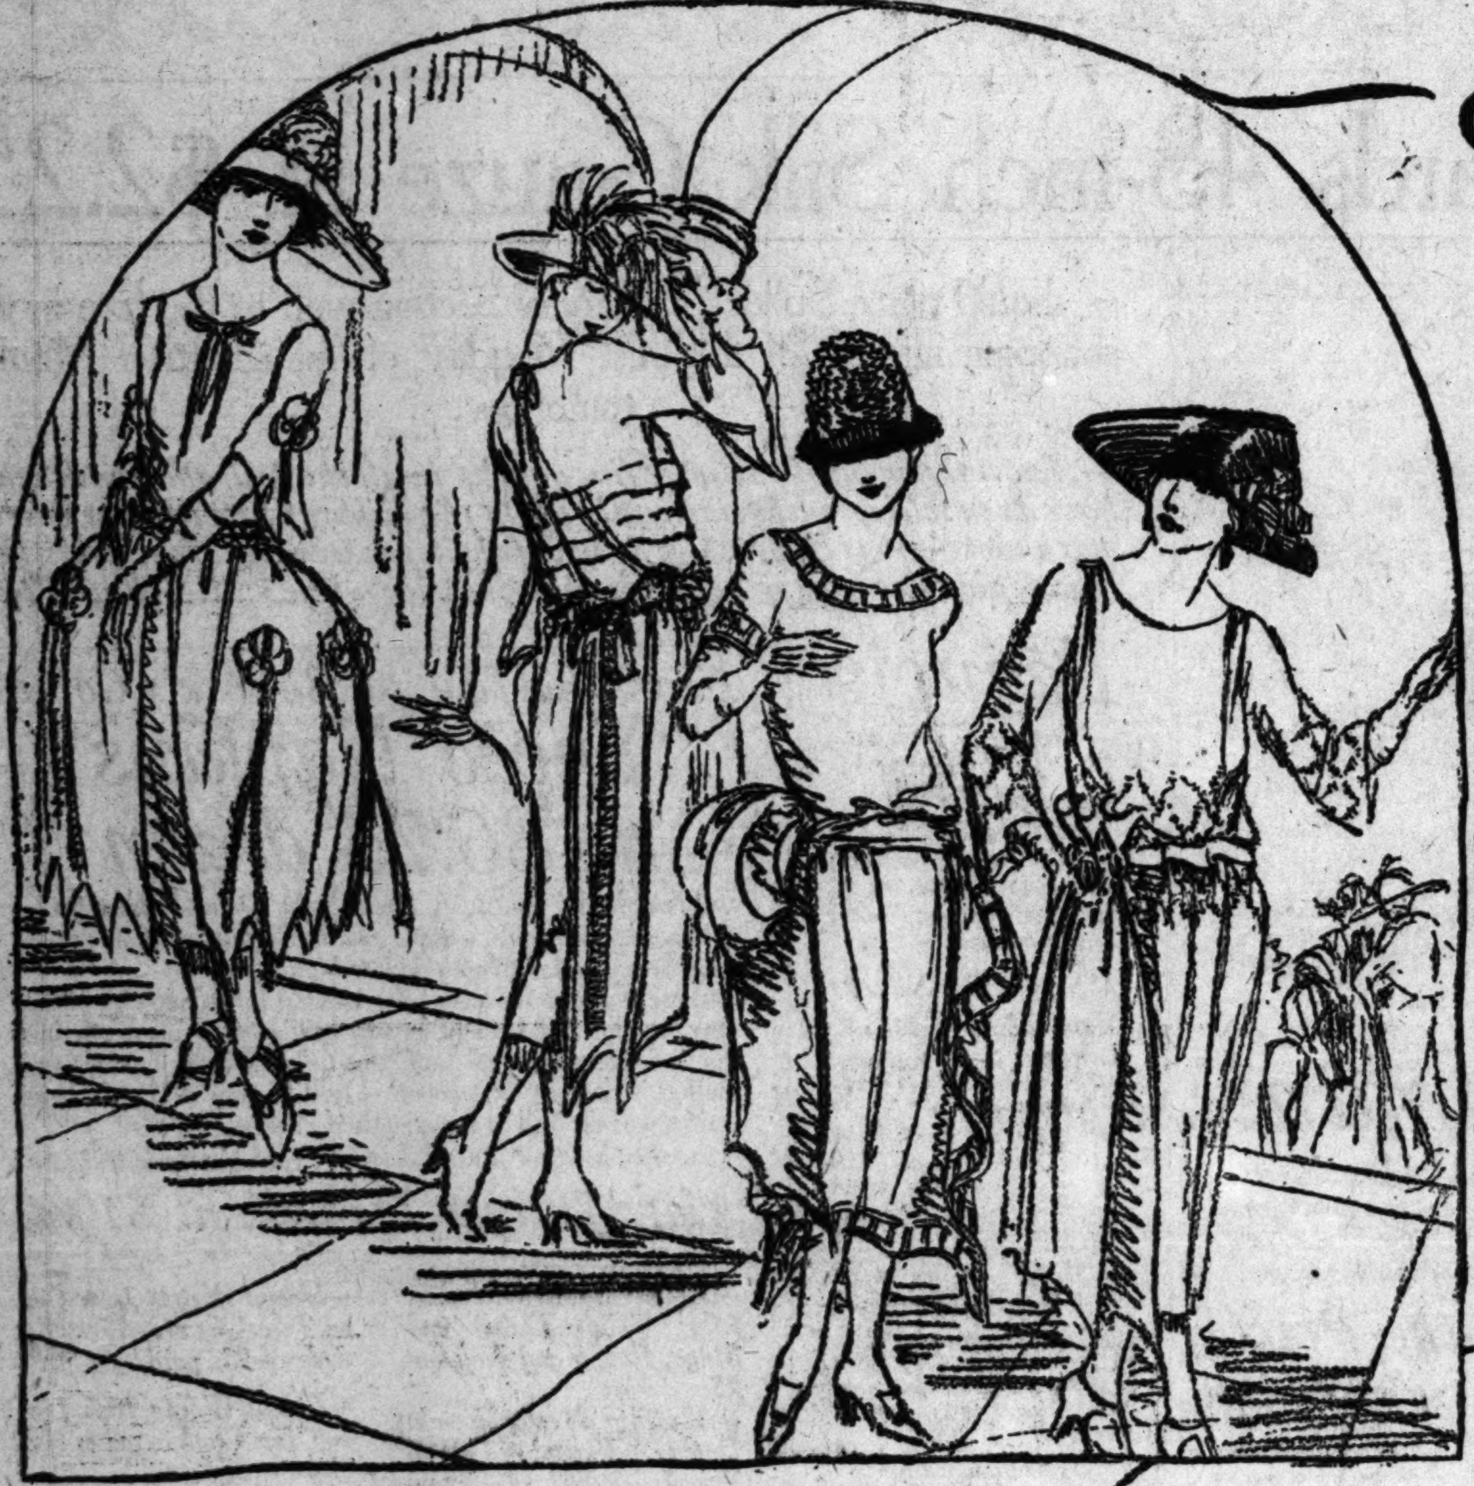
Frocks—"To Make a Springtime"—a Sale $35.00

Bullock's
Monday—



—in sizes and types for women and misses!

A SALE of dresses at $35 may have news value or it may not.

There are lots of dresses priced $35. And sales are not uncommon.

But a frock that's really fine: a frock that may be taken from its hanger again and again and worn with the little thrill of satisfaction the really good thing calls forth.

This frock—at $35—is an achievement—a "story"!

What is it that makes the great price difference in frocks? Materials are a very small item. It is the difference in design. The fact that good designers are scarce and demand fabulous salaries.

Now, occasionally, a desig may be found who does no command the fabulous sal

We have found one of thes difficult-to-find designe We've taken a great many her models. They're here; but just come. And Monda they'll be on sale at $35.

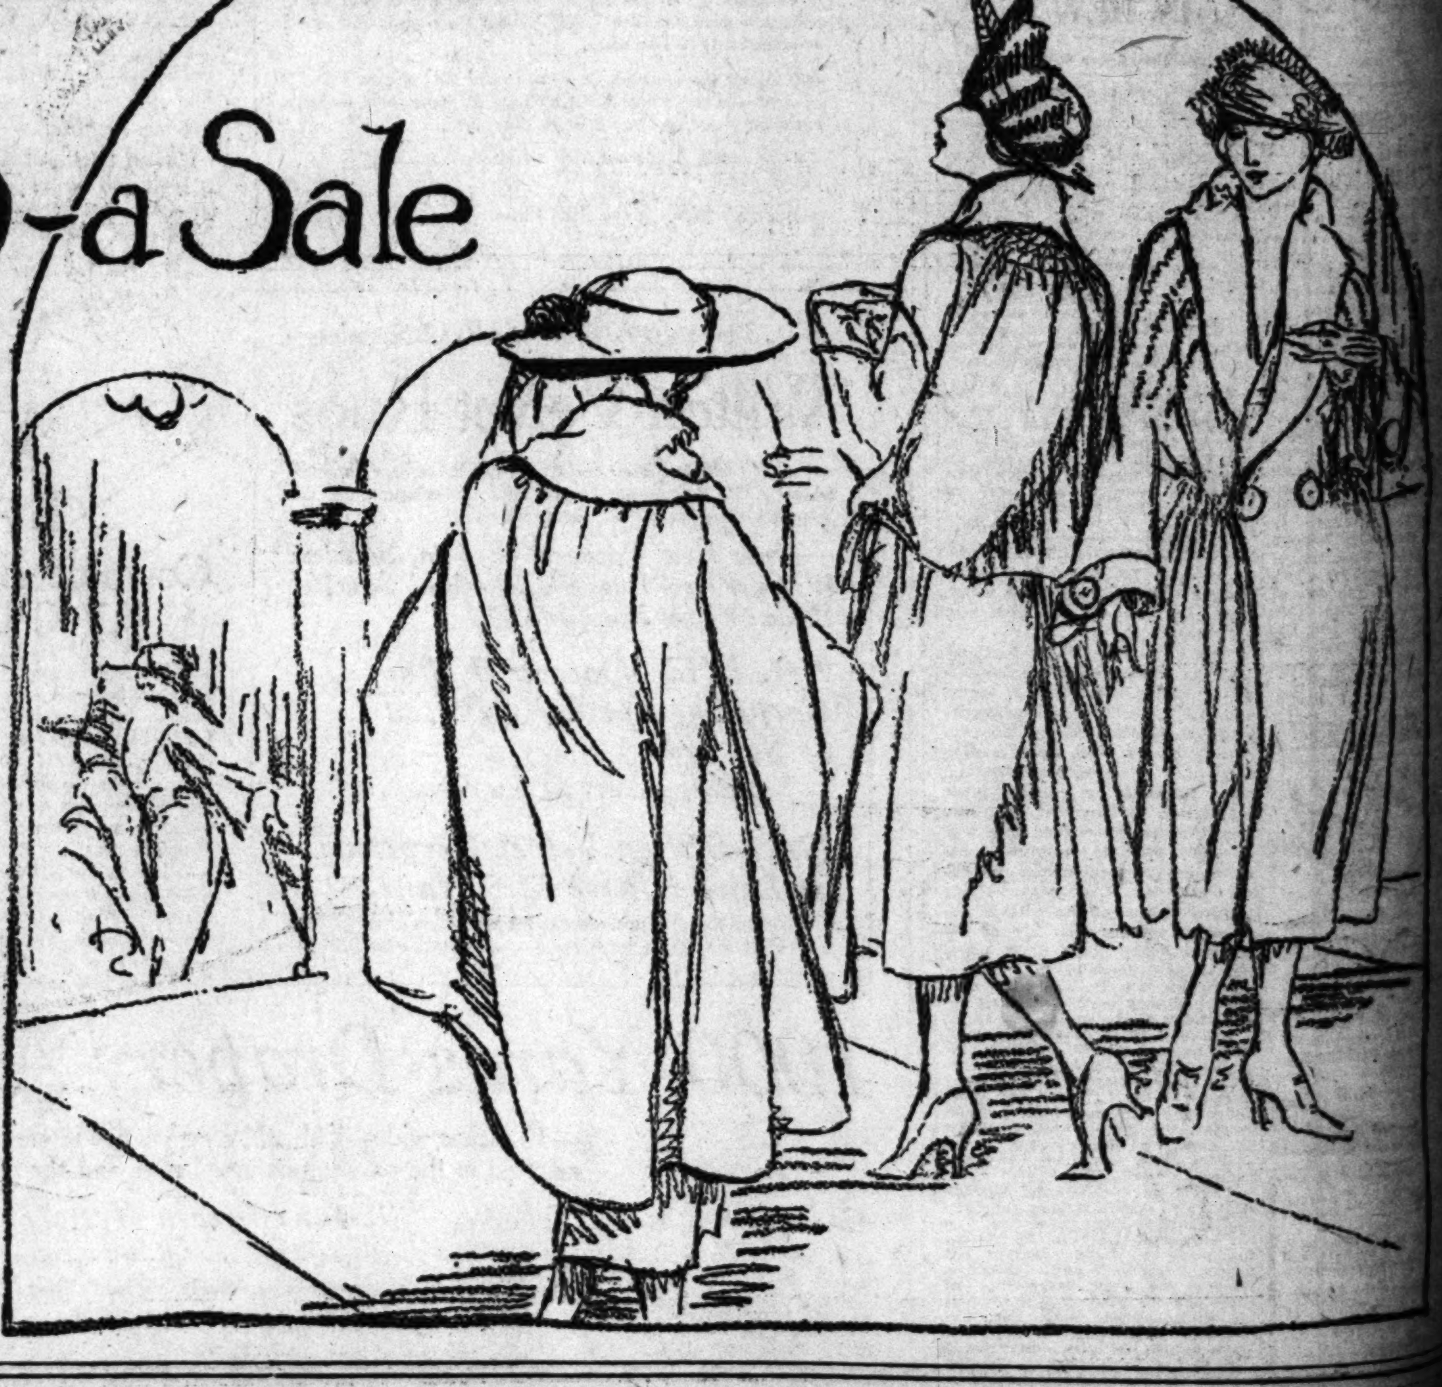
Types for women and mi are developed in Canton Cr Silk Faille, Romaine Crepe Taffeta—with the fine da of the true artist.

You'll approve the rare c bination of a happy freedo decorative treatment and wisdom in the "Art of Le Off" that makes for smart plicity.

These Frocks—at $35 — Monday's Sale!

The Fashion Sections—Third Floor!

Coats $85—a Sale



ONCE upon a time coats were for warmth. Decorative charm, grace, an interesting silhouette — you looked for these in your frocks. But a coat was—just a coat.

Even today most coats are just coats.

All too infrequently coats are wraps of rare charm and grace. All too infrequently coats have depths of color, lovely texture, an arresting silhouette, really fine design.

That is why these coats—(for a Monday Sale, $85)—are so quickly set apart from the ordinary.

Clever in their recognition of "type." Clever in their adaptation of the springtime's smartest silhouettes.

Lovely materials, soft insidious colorings, and a charming grace of line.

Coats lovely at any price.

At $85—a really remarkable achievement!

PERSONAL—
I want 100 people to join me in buying a tract of 100 acres in beautiful Topanga Canyon, each of us to have an acre site for a little mountain outing place, whenever we want to build one. The location is ideal and there is the most wonderful drinking water, live oak shade trees, etc., etc., and only a 20 minutes' ride from the ocean.

By getting together 100, who will each take an acre, the cost of an acre will be but $150 and this can be paid for monthly if desired, from $25 to $50 down, or even less, and $10 monthly. I believe these acres will be worth from $500 to $1000 each within a year. If interested write (give phone if you have one) at once to D, box 482, TIMES BRANCH.

HARTIGAN HOUSES.
18 YEARS IN LOS ANGELES.
HOUSEKEEPING IS A BUSINESS.

Hartigan Houses are not the product of any period or school of architecture. They have been a growth and the product of an extended experience. We built the type of houses which we liked and they proved satisfactory to the owners. Quality was the first consideration. Conservation in design and arrangement, consideration for convenience, and a detail in finish which created an elegant simplicity were the impelling motive. To avoid lost motion, to be able to place articles of furniture to advantage, is as essential in a home as in a factory or office. The efficiency engineer has no more promising field than in the average kitchen.

The pamphlet review gives the names of owners of Hartigan Houses. It is a "blue book" of the city's best known. The folio of photographs is an elaborate collection of exterior views and floor plans of these homes, also letters from the owners.

If none of these suit you, we have hundreds of plans to pick from or if you have ideas of your own bring in your sketches. We build anything by straight contract, and help finance.

17 YEARS IN LOS ANGELES.

LET US BUILD YOUR HOUSE

Our buying in large quantities and keeping a steady gang of men at work enables us to build for cheaper than the ordinary contractor. We build 5-room houses in blocks of four or more at 1500, four rooms at $1675 and five rooms at $1775. This includes practically every modern convenience and many built-in features. Hardwood floors in living and dining-room, woodstone drainboards and built-in bath tub. We also build from one to three houses at small additional cost.

We have several designs of more expensive houses, or we will figure on your own plans.

WANTED—SALESMEN.

WE ARE HOLDING THE WIRE FOR YOU.

Opportunity is on the line—yes, talking now. Listen, get the drift; answer.

Do you own an auto?

Do you want to get into a pleasant, independent, money-making business?

Can you talk enthusiastically about a thing which you personally like?

Could you take a man driving among apricot and peach orchards now in full bloom and make him think he could succeed on a fully-irrigated tract right across the street?

Could you show him grapes just coming into bearing, and convince him that within two years he could have his own vineyard on a tract adjoining?

Could you show him poultry farms producing 400 eggs a day, and big flocks of turkeys ripening for Thanksgiving, and persuade him that hens would lay and turkeys fatten as well for him on the next tract?

Come in and learn about a developed, settled, irrigated proposition, only 44 miles by your speedometer east of Los Angeles.

Hear of a commission proposition which gets better every sale you make, and soon earns so high a rate you can't quit.

Call at room 1115 HIBERNIAN BLDG., Fourth and Spring sts., or telephone MR. DWIGGINS, 13101.

Our stock comprises most of the useful and ornamental home-furnishings found in any well stocked furniture store.

A piece of dependable used furniture is a better investment than a piece of "cheap" new furniture.

We accept almost everything in home furnishings to apply on the purchase price of new pieces or even other used pieces. Telephone us and our appraiser will call at your home and tell you just how much we can allow you.

We have fourteen capable, courteous salesmen in this department alone. Visitors always welcome.

Our stock includes high-grade pieces, as well as moderate priced pieces and is replenished twice a day.

42 head—2 carloads, of high-class heavy draft horses, Tuesday, March 7, at 10 a.m. at Santa Fe R. R. stock yard, San Bernardino. I have consigned to me to be sold at PUBLIC AUCTION 42 head of the very highest type of draft horses ever offered at public or private sale in California. The stock consists in part as follows:
8 span of handsome dapple grays.
10 span of jet blacks.
1 span of sorrels.
2 span of bays.
All well broken and closely matched. Weigh from 1200 to 1600 lbs. Ages 4 to 8 years. The very cream of the Montana horses, shipped direct from Mr. Henry Fitter's ranch, Lima, Mont., and all branded with the same iron. The stock can be seen at the yards up to the day of the sale and will bear close inspection for quality and soundness. A grand opportunity for dealers to buy at your own prices. Mr. Fitter will be at the sale in person and will be pleased to give intending purchasers any information they may desire in regard to the above stock. SAM WATKINS, Auctioneer, 800 E. 7th st. L. A. EATING ADVICE.

All Depends on a Healthy Digestion, Dr. P. G. Stiles Says.

This advice is from Dr. Percy G. Stiles of the Harvard College Medical School:

If you are too fat, you eat too much. That is, your appetite doesn't go with a person of your type, or it is too large an appetite for a person with your kind of job.

If you are too thin, you don't eat enough. That is, your appetite is too small for a person of your type, or too small for a person doing your kind of work—or both.

That is the only real way of explaining why you are overweight or under weight.

You say that you eat less and still don't get thin. But probably you let up on some activities at the same time. Maybe you rest more than you did. Perhaps you really don't eat less, because you are nibbling away at food between meals.

If you stop eating so much and go on living in other ways as before, you are bound to lose weight. In the same way, if you eat more food you'll gain weight —if you have a healthy digestion.

Also, the popular tale that we'd all be better off if we ate less is all wrong.

Whatever you do—begin carefully in changing your amount of food. If you change suddenly, it will affect your entire system.

NO LIGHT THROWN ON TAFT BEATINGS.

OIL FIELDS EXCITED OVER ACTIVITIES OF BANDS OF MASKED MEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 4.—Excitement increased in the West Side oil fields today following publication this morning of activities of bands of masked and hooded men in Taft representing themselves as members of the Ku Klux Klan.

Dist.-Atty. Jesse R. Dorsey said today he could not throw any light on the alleged beatings and tarrings that were administered several persons in the oil fields recently, and that he could not make any statement other than that his office was seeking clews that might lead to establishing the identity of some of the masked men.

Reports were received today of several additional "warnings" received by Taft residents and signed "K.K.K." The atmosphere in the fields is tense, according to dispatches from Taft.

SECRET AGREEMENT ENDS LONG STRIKE.

BUILDING TRADES CRAFTSMEN RETURN TO THEIR JOBS TOMORROW.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

VALLEJO, March 4.—Building trade craftsmen, on strike here since the first of the year, will return to work Monday. Settlement of the controversy between the Builders' Exchange of this place and the building trades council of Vallejo was effected at a conference today at which a secret agreement was adopted. The agreement includes an average wage of $8.25 a day, but withholds publication of a scale.

The first of the year the employers attempted to put in effect the average San Francisco wage of $8 a day. The workers demand the original average wage of between $9 and $10 and struck when it was denied them. The compromise of $8.25 is the Sacramento average wage.

HOOVER LEAVES FOR PHOENIX SATURDAY.

WILL CONDUCT HEARINGS OF COLORADO RIVER BODY THERE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Secretary Hoover probably will leave Washington March 11 for Phoenix, Ariz., to conduct the hearings there of the Colorado River Commission, it was said today at the Commerce Department.

The Colorado River Commission, of which Mr. Hoover is chairman, was created jointly by Congress and the several States interested in the resources of the river to work out plans for the development of the irrigation and power possibilities of the Colorado River.

Whether hearings will be held in California, Utah, Colorado and other States has not been decided, officials said. The continuation of the commission's inquiry probably will be determined when it meets at Phoenix.

PESHAWAR (British India) March 4.—After a delightful journey through the beautiful hill country, the Prince of Wales arrived at Peshawar this morning, reaching the extreme northern point of his Indian tour. His route was crowded with a picturesque variety of native types, as well as caravan travelers, who had come through the Khyber Pass from Central Asia.

The Prince received a warm welcome here. Tomorrow he will motor up the Khyber Pass to the Landi Kotal fort, where he will inspect troops.

GIVES RULING ON REGISTRATION LAW.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WILLOWS, March 4.—Registration for a regular election in California legally closes thirty days before the election is held, according to an opinion rendered by Atty.-Gen. Webb in response to a request from W. P. Sale, county clerk of Glenn county. The opinion was asked because of the uncertainty of county clerks throughout the State as to whether the time might not be thirty-one days.

The decision does not apply to primary elections. The Legislature must determine the conditions under which electors may participate in these, the Attorney-General said.

SEE IMPROVED LUMBER SERVICE

Dealers and Shippers Say Slump is Passing.

Congestion at Harbor is Blamed for Delays.

Lack of Cars Keeps Wharves Crowded, is Report.

The slump in the coatwise lumber trade of the Pacific caused some time ago by congestion on the lumber docks at Los Angeles Harbor, which has resulted in laying up temporarily a score or more of lumber steamers at various ports, has reached its lowest level and conditions will rapidly improve, in the opinion voiced yesterday by lumber men at the harbor.

The lumber market is now and has been for some time past in a most healthy condition, so far as demand and supply is concerned, it is said by local lumber shipping men. The chief difficulty here has been moving the incoming shipments from the wharves as rapidly as they arrive. Delay has been occasioned for several weeks by the inability of the railroads to furnish enough cars.

The railroads' inability to move the millions of feet of lumber as rapidly as it is brought to the port, is said by one lumberman to be due to the rainy season inland. Country roads have been in such condition, it is said, that it has been impossible to unload lumber cars at inland points, and the rolling stock has been more or less tied up.

This condition is rapidly improving, however, both railroad and lumber men declared yesterday. After an extensive survey of conditions here, H. F. McCormick, brother of Charles R. McCormick, mill and steam schooner owner, expressed confidence that the slump is about over.

The market is not glutted with "uncalled" material, he says. All the lumber that can be moved is in demand but the condition is such that it cannot be transported from the docks fast enough to give room for the incoming vessel cargoes, he declared.

There are eight big yards at the harbor engaged in handling the incoming cargoes, and each has a capacity of about 1,000,000 feet per day. Recently there were 30,000,000 feet of lumber piled on the harbor docks and fourteen steam schooners were awaiting an opportunity to unload their cargoes, totaling several million additional feet.

One of the effects of the congestion has been the diverting of a small portion of the regular run of lumber to San Francisco.

NAVY NOTES.

Keen disappointment is being expressed by officers and men of the Pacific Fleet over the action of the Navy Department in assigning the new dreadnight Maryland to the Atlantic fleet as flagship of Admiral Hilary P. Jones. The big sixteen-inch gun ship, the first of its type in the American Navy, was originally slated to become a fighting unit of the Pacific Fleet, but when the Navy Department returned the Columbia to private interests Admiral Jones asked for the Maryland as flagship. The Columbia has again become the Great Northern and will be used as a passenger vessel in Pacific waters.

Ensign E. D. Poole, one of the officers in charge of athletics on the dreadnaught Mississippi, is recovering from the effects of a severe scalp wound, sustained when a baseball bat struck him during ball practice on the ship's forecastle several days ago.

Navy Department orders that provide for the placing out of commission between now and June 15 of forty-two destroyers of the Pacific Fleet force, will not be followed by a similar order affecting the submarine forces of the fleet, according to ranking officers in charge of submarine activities at Los Angeles Harbor. It is probable that two of the submarines of the base force at the harbor will be placed out of commission in order that their crews may man two of the S-type submarines, destined for a trip to the Atlantic Coast this month, it was said.

Hundreds of Angelenos who journeyed to Los Angeles Harbor yesterday to patronize the big C.P.O. carnival and circus, launched to raise funds for a recreation center for sailors of the fleet, took advantage of the invitation of Rear-Admiral Charles H. Hughes, commanding battle division seven and visited the warships now in the harbor. Open house was the rule all yesterday afternoon aboard the Arizona, Admiral Hughes's flagship and aboard the Mississippi and Nevada. Visitors to the carnival and circus today will also be welcome aboard the warships, it was said.

The new navy supply ship Vega, recently acquired from the United States Shipping Board, sailed the first inst from Philadelphia for Los Angeles Harbor, to report for duty to Rear Admiral J. V. Chase, commander of the Pacific Fleet train. The vessel will be placed in trans-Pacific supply service.

RAILWAY SEEKS TO RECOVER DAMAGES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, March 4.—Testimony and argument in the suit brought by the Milwaukee Railroad against the city of Seattle asking approximately $65,000 damages for alleged damage to railroad property as a result of seepage from the Cedar River Dam in 1918, closed in Judge E. E. Cushman's division of Federal Court here yesterday. Judge Cushman will charge the jury Monday.

News of Ships and Sailings in Pacific Ports.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TACOMA, March 4.—There is a large tonnage expected at the port dock during the coming week, the schedule worked out by Traffic Agent Ernest Gribble shows, with Japanese vessels engaged in transporting lumber predominating. The Milan Maru, operated by the American Trading Company will take the larger amount of lumber, it is thought. The Milan Maru takes around 4,000,000 feet of lumber and logs.

In the other ships listed for the port dock, the Ohio Maru, represented by Walker Ross Company, is expected. The vessel also has grain to load at the Balfour dock. The Erie Maru, a new Japanese vessel for Tacoma with the Inter-Ocean Trading Company agents, is due with the Texas and Heijeo Marus. All the vessels will take varied amounts of lumber.

After loading general freight at the terminal dock and lumber at the Puget Sound Lumber Company, the Steel Navigator sailed Saturday evening for New York, via ports.

The Usuri Maru will load about 1,000,000 feet of lumber at the Defiance lumber mill beside lumber from the port dock. The Usuri will sail for Japan Monday night or Tuesday.

From California points the Admiral Schley arrived at the Commercial dock late Friday night and sailed early this morning for San Francisco, via Seattle.

With ore from West Coast ports the Romulus of the Latin-American Line was due at the smelter Saturday night or Sunday.

The Henry T. Scott, loading bulk wheat at the Sperry mill and due to sail for San Francisco tonight, will not get out until Sunday, according to the Baker Dock Company, agents of the vessel.

A large lot of general cargo, including copper, will be taken from Tacoma on the Virginian of the American-Hawaiian Line, due Monday at the smelter. The vessel completes loading at the Baker dock Tuesday.

The Nooderdijk is due at the terminal dock Monday to load miscellaneous freight for Europe.

The Rainier of the Nelson Line is due at the Baker dock from San Francisco Sunday or Monday.

After loading at Vancouver, B. C., the Arizona Maru of the Osaka Shosen Kaisha Line is due back Monday to complete her Oriental freight at the Milwaukee and other docks.

The motorship Culburra is due Sunday morning at the terminal dock from San Francisco. The vessel will shift during the day to Port Blakeley and later return here to load lumber.

The Siberian Prince sailed from the St. Paul mill Saturday night for Yokohama.

COOS BAY (Or.) March 4.—Capt. H. G. Lund, who brought the schooner Ecola to this port, resigned and left for San Francisco today.

The tug Samson and barge Washougal put into Coos Bay today from San Pedro and San Francisco. They were bound for the Umpqua River, but found rough water on the bar and returned here until it quiets. The Washougal shipped a big sea on the bar. Her rudder is damaged.

Port Orford was passed up by two steam schooners the past week. The Bandon was to load lumber, but left the port dock without taking cargo in order to reach Bandon for the tide, while the Acme, supposed to have brought freight, passed without stopping. Trouble is experienced at Port Orford in loading when southwest storms are raging.

The steamer C. A. Smith left town today but anchored in the vicinity of Charleston Bay and did not leave tonight, owing to heavy water breaking on the bar.

ASTORIA (Or.) March 4.—The steam schooner Trinidad, with 1,100,000 feet of lumber from the Hammond mill for San Pedro and the steam schooner Daisy with 750,000 feet of lumber from Knappton for Redondo, started out today, but was forced to turn back on account of the high seas running.

The British steamer Largo Law, Capt. W. Wright, arrived today from Buenos Aires via Valparaiso and Iquique. After being fumigated here she will proceed to Portland to load grain.

SEATTLE, March 4.—The Admiral Line today received confirmation of the sale of the steamship Columbia, formerly the Great Northern, to H. F. Alexander, president of the Pacific Steamship Company, and her delivery to agents of the line at the Sun shipbuilding plant in Wilmington, Del.

She will be put into condition as quickly as possible and will sail from either New York or Philadelphia May 27 carrying a party of 550 Shriners to the convention in San Francisco. She will arrive in Seattle July 1 and will thereafter make a round trip each week between this port and San Pedro, stopping at San Francisco. The boat has been renamed the H. F. Alexander.

The Matson liner Lurline today resumed active service to Hawaii after having been withdrawn last fall for overhauling.

The Luckenbach Steamship Company today announced the sailing of the steamship Jacob Luckenbach between March 15 and March 20 for Gulf ports Houston, Tex., having been added to the port of call.

The Pacific Steamship Company's liner Keystone State will reach Williamshead, B. C., Thursday night. She has on board a party of 125 Shriners returning from Shanghai and Manila, where they staged ceremonials. The party is headed by Mayor Caldwell of Seattle. Another passenger is D. J. Hanscom, Admiral Line agent at Shanghai, who is coming to the coast for a three months' vacation.

The Admiral Line today received information of the coming of Marshal Joffre of France as a passenger on the Silver State, due here March 28.

VANCOUVER (B. C.) March 4.—Grain bookings through Vancouver during the season now exceed 5,000,000 bushels, almost equally divided between the Orient and the United Kingdom, with a slight balance in favor of the Far East.

The arrival of the steamer Melville Dollar, Capt. Wright, at Vancouver, has been set for March 14.

The Osaka Shoshen Kaisha liner Arizona Maru Capt. Fuchigami, has sailed for Japan via the Sound, after loading 2500 tons of freight here.

The N. Y. K. freighter Tokiwa Maru, Shibumata, sailed today for Puget Sound and will return to load for sea on March 18.

The steamship West Jester, Capt. Putta, is expected to clear late tonight for Seattle.

The steamship Protesilaus shifted to the Balfour, Guthrie dock to load 2000 tons of sacked wheat for Japan.

The steamer Romulus is due to sail tonight for Tacoma to discharge copper ore from Peru. She is fully booked to South American ports from Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and San Francisco.

The Japanese steamer Denmark Maru, Capt. Takemura, sailed Friday evening from Japan with a full cargo of logs, lumber and general cargo. She loaded 1,500,000 feet of logs and lumber here.

Negotiations may reopen next week between the International Longshoremen's Association and the water front employers for a new agreement. At present none exists. No attempt will be made by the employers to reduce the present wages of 80 cents straight time and $1.20 overtime, but changes are sought in working conditions.

The Canadian Pacific coastwise service will institute the ten-day schedule of the steamer Princess Mary next Wednesday to Skagway. She will continue until the summer double service is put on. The summer boats will be the Princess Alice and Princess Louise.

PORTLAND, March 4.—To load a full cargo of lumber for the West Coast of South America, the steamer Derblay will arrive here early next week. She brings no inward cargo, according to advices here.

From New Orleans with general cargo the steamer Eldorado arrived today. After discharging, she will proceed to Seattle and San Francisco for her return cargo.

The five-masted topsail schooner Thistle, now in harbor here, has been purchased from Balfour, Guthrie & Co. by the Charles Nelson Company of San Francisco, and will be loaded with lumber here and towed south. The Thistle arrived here last month with coal from Newcastle, Australia.

Capt. H. Dolores left today for Coos Bay to take command of the schooner Ecola, which is loading lumber there for Japan. The Ecola is the last of the sailing fleet of Balfour, Guthrie & Co.

Shipments of wheat from the Columbia River for the eight months of the fiscal year ended March 1 totaled 25,742,773 bushels, as against 15,149,966 bushels in the corresponding period last year, according to a compilation issued today by the Merchants' Exchange.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—The Pacific Mail Steamship Company expects to receive $2,000,000 worth of Shipping Board tonnage, it was learned today, under the proposed program for compensating pioneer purchasers of tonnage for the decrease in value of tonnage since it was purchased. It was said that the indications are that the board will pay off the refund with freighters of the 8800 type, though it is believed the board will, so far as possible, award the type of vessel desired.

Capt. Harry Wallis, recently master of the Granite State, has been appointed to command the Santa Oliva, which will take a cargo of grain from New York to the Balkans for W. R. Grace & Co.

The Hawkeye State will be three days late from Baltimore on account of engine trouble, according to a message today to the Matson offices. She is expected March 15. She was forced to make repairs at the Panama Canal.

M. J. Buckley, assistant to A. J. Frey, vice-president of the Shipping Board, has resigned and expects to return here. He was formerly conected with the Pacific Mail.

BOMB IN APARTMENT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

RICHMOND, March 3.—An elaborate incendiary bomb, with electrical ignition apparatus, was found yesterday in an apartment-house owned by Charles J. Wyboney. It was timed to ignite at 6 o'clock last night. Police and fire department officials began an investigation.

PORT NOTES.

Revealing a plan for the expansion of the Admiral Line's activities, word was received from the North yesterday to the effect that the Pacific Steamship Company is negotiating for the purchase of the San Francisco and Portland Steamship Company's trade connections between San Francisco and Oregon ports. Officials of the Admiral Line have admitted, it is said, that such a step is being taken, but they denied that the negotiations include a plan for the purchase of the steamer Rose City. She is the only vessel operated by the San Francisco and Portland Steamship Company between the Bay City and the north, since the loss of the Alaskan off Cape Blanco some time ago.

Marking the entry of the sixth vessel of the French Line's European-Pacific service, between Bordeaux and Los Angeles Harbor, the steamer St. Louis sailed from Bordeaux for this port last Wednesday. She is due to arrive here April 7. The steamer Sonora of the same fleet is due the 19th inst., with a cargo of general merchandise from the north, bound for Europe. She will take on additional cargo here.

Increasing preference of travelers for the ocean route from this coast to the East is revealed by the announcement of M. F. Hutchinson, local passenger agent for the Pacific Mail, that the steamers Venezuela, Colombia and Santa Ana are booked solid for their eastern voyages out of Los Angeles Harbor to New York on their next sailings. Inspection of the company's new dock at the harbor, now under construction, was completed Thursday by Thomas A. Graham, general manager, and W. A. Young, Jr., general passenger agent of the Pacific Mail. Both officials returned to San Francisco Thursday night.

The United States Army transport Logan will sail Tuesday from San Francisco for Honolulu and Hongkong on her seventy-fourth voyage in the service of the government. She will carry 143 cabin passengers, sixty second class and about 350 troop class, twenty-five of whom are going to Guam and twenty-five to Honolulu. Among the cabin passengers will be Maj.-Gen. Omar Bundy, en route to Manila to take command of the Philippine division of the Army.

Ocean-going vessels, river steamers and ferryboats of more than fifty tons burden operating in California, are absolutely tax free, unless they form a part of a railroad transportation service, according to an opinion just given by Atty.-Gen. U. S. Webb to the State Board of Equalization. The opinion was rendered as a result of a question over the status of the Southern Pacific Creek route ferries, which ply between San Francisco and Oakland.

Advices have been received that Thomas Sowerbutts, for some time chief clerk at the office of the Outer Harbor Dock and Wharf Company, has been appointed agent for S. L. Kreider on Municipal Pier A. Mr. Kreider has the agency for the Williams Steamship line, operating the steamers Willpolo, Willhilo, Willsolo and Willfaro and the motorship Kennecott, between the Atlantic Coast and North Pacific ports, making this a port of call in both directions. He has also secured recently the agency for the Trans-Oceanic Line, operating the French steamers Montana, Texas and St. Louis, between Bordeaux and San Francisco, with this as the principal port of call. The Montana, due here within the next few days, is said to have 35,000 cases of glass on her manifest for Los Angeles importers.

The steamer Robin Adair of the Isthmian Line finished discharging cargo for this port last night and sailed for San Francisco. The vessel has been here eight days and carried more cargo for local wholesalers than for those of San Francisco. When it is remembered that it is but a few years that all water shipments for Los Angeles were taken by this port and shipped back by rail, these facts become doubly significant.

VOWS THAT HE KILLED TAYLOR.

Letter Writer Pens Murder Story at Length.

Police Busy Checking New Crime "Confession."

Importance Seen in Truth of Details Mentioned.

Orders for an immediate and thorough investigation of new information as the possible solution of the Taylor murder mystery were issued by Captain of Detectives Adams late yesterday following the receipt of a long letter purporting to reveal the motive and circumstances of the slaying of William Desmond Taylor.

The letter was received by Capt. Adams from a man who signed a name unmentioned in the official investigation to date. It gave certain circumstances described by the police as authentic and furnished other indications of possible value, Capt. Adams said.

The writer of the letter said he killed Mr. Taylor. He gave a description of the room, the furniture in it and other details considered highly significant.

As soon as Capt. Adams and Detective Sergeant Herman Cline, head of the new homicide squad, familiarized themselves with the contents of the letter, they called a conference in Capt. Adams's office.

CONFERENCE CALLED.

Charles L. Eyton, general manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and a close friend of the slain director, and Capt. Moffatt of the detective bureau were called into the conference.

"I have ordered an immediate checking up of this new statement, but at the present time cannot discuss any details in it," Capt. Adams said.

The letter, it was learned, came from a city in Connecticut. It shows every indication of having been written by a man of education.

Jealously and revenge were the motive for the crime, according to the letter, Capt. Adams said. The writer declared he is leaving the country.

CHECK STATEMENTS.

The first step resulting from the conference was the dispatch of telegrams to the authorities in several eastern cities, in an effort to check some of the details set out by the writer in his letter.

As soon as these were out of the way, Charles A. Jones, private detective now working for Dist.-Atty. Woolwine on the Taylor case, was called to Capt. Adams's office and took part in the conference. He left after a short time, taking with him a police automobile and one officer.

"I believe that the name signed to the letter is not genuine, but that some, if not all, of the facts in it are probably true and that it may lead us to the solution of the puzzling mystery," Capt. Adams announced before the conference.

The letter is not from Edward F. Sands, Mr. Taylor's former valet, so far as the police are able to state. The handwriting does not check with the known samples of Sands's writing. The statement in the letter is long and is said to go into many little details easily checked. Sands, who has been charged with theft and forgery, has been hunted ever since the Taylor murder, on February 1.

RAILWAYS ANNOUNCE HOMESEEKERS' RATES

VIRTUALLY ALL POINTS WEST OF CHICAGO WILL BE BENEFITTED.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, March 4. — Notice was given yesterday by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, Chicago and Northwestern, Burlington and Rock Island Railways of another move towards normalcy in the lowering of passenger fares twice a month to virtually all points west to one-half of regular fares beginning March 7.

The reductions, in the form of homeseekers' rates, will go into effect next Tuesday from Chicago. The cuts will be to one fare plus $2 for the round trip. While made to aid in colonizing sparsely settled western sections, the cut-rate tickets will be open to public purchase. The transportation will be good for twenty-one days, with liberal stopovers.

FURNITURE DEALERS' CONVENTION ENDS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) March 3.—Selection of Tacoma as the convention city next year, election of officers, and a banquet featured the closing sessions of the annual convention of the Washington Retail Furniture Dealers' Association here yesterday. Herbert A. Schoenfeldt, Seattle, was re-elected president, and Otto S. Grunbaum and S. Levitt were re-elected vice-president and treasurer respectively. Charles Hebberd of Spokane was elected second vice-president.

FATHERS' AUXILIARY TO LEGION PLANNED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN JOSE, March 4.—Plans for the formation of what is believed to be first organization of its kind in the United States—a fathers' auxiliary of the American Legion—were made at a meeting here last night of fathers of ex-service men and members of San Jose Post No. 89, American Legion. March 7 was fixed as the date for completing the new organization by the election of officers.

WOMAN IS MISSING.

Winifred Ledyard, 25 years of age, disappeared yesterday from the sanitarium at San Dimas, where she was a patient, according to a report made by Constable Funkhouser. He believes she may have been picked up by an automobile party on the highway. She is five feet, four inches tall, weighs 100 pounds, has blue eyes and auburn hair and when last seen was wearing a light brown jersey coat, black stockings, black oxfords and no hat.

WEED OUT UNDESIRABLES.

Whole Film Industry Combines to Force Out Any Who Don't "Measure Up."

In order to place the motion-picture industry upon the highest possible plane, the Federation of Art was organized yesterday in Hollywood. Its membership is made up of four other organizations—the Cinematographers' Association, the Writers' Guild, the Actors' Equity and the Motion-Picture Directors' Association.

Although its purpose, in general, is to gurther the good of motion pictures, the federation plans to take vigorous action against the few undesirables of the motion-picture industry.

Actors or other members of the industry who refuse to conduct their private lives according to the highest standards are to be drummed out of camp, so to speak.

The writers, by their representatives, will refuse to sell them stories; the Cinematographers will refuse to photograph them; the Actors' Equity members will refuse to appear in pictures with them; the members of the Motion-Picture Directors' Association will refuse to direct them.

Each of the four associations which go to make up the federation will elect three members to a central board of directors, who will enforce these rules.

Frank Woods, production manager of Lasky's Famous Players, is the leader of the new movement.

"We think that the motion-picture industry, as a whole, has maintained a standard of conduct that compares well with any other industry in the world," said Mr. Woods. "But we intend to clean out the few stains that have defaced it.

"As a general thing, it is the custom of the business world to regard a man's private life as his own affair, something that his business associates have nothing to say about.

"In the case of motion pictures, however, we feel that we have the right to inquire even into private lives—this because of the great influence that stars have come to have upon the lives of the public.

"At any rate, we are firm in the determination that the picture business shall be absolutely clean from top to bottom. All but a very few picture people are living the right kind of lives; those who do not in future choose to bring their standards up to the standards of our industry as a whole will find themselves quietly dropped into oblivion."

Mr. Woods stated that the motion-picture exhibitors have promised to support this movement in every possible way.

PUSH FOUR-POWER PACT.

Treaties Will Be Kept Before Senate Until Action Taken; Harding in Accord With Plan.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The four-power Pacific treaties will be taken up Monday by the Senate and discussed virtually every day thereafter until a vote on ratification is obtained under a program said to have been agreed to at a conference today between President Harding and Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, Republican leader.

Administration spokesmen, it was announced, will open the fight for ratification of the treaties, with Senator New, Indiana, a close friend of the President and Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee, speaking Monday, and Senator Kellogg, Minnesota, another Republican committeeman, and confidant of the President, Tuesday. Senator Lodge, it was said, also will soon present some of the arguments of the administration in support of ratification.

HARDING IN ACCORD.

President Harding was said to be in complete accord with Senator Lodge's plans for proceeding with the arms conference treaties. Their conference at the White House today was said to have been to discuss procedure and inform the President as to the situation and effect of legislative matters before the Senate. Administration leaders plan to give immediate technical right of way to the Department of Justice bill to create a number of additional Federal judges, but subject to debate on the four-power treaty. It is not Senator Lodge's intention to force the treaties for the next few days, but soon, it was announced, the administration will push them to the front and hold them before the Senate to the exclusion of all other business.

It was stated that President Harding concurs with Senator Lodge's program of giving the four-power treaty precedence over the naval, Chinese and other treaties of the arms conference.

ARGUMENTS ADVANCED.

One of the strong arguments to be advanced by the administration forces, it was learned, involves the question of priority of the treaties. Friends of the four-power treaty, it was said, were prepared to insist that opposition to it would imperil the naval limitation agreement—that it would be dangerous to ratify the naval treaty, but not the four-ower treaty, since if the four-power Pacific measure were rejected, the United States could not safely consent to limitation of the American Navy, with the Anglo-Japanese alliance in effect and with the possibility of war in the Pacific which, it is contended, the four-power treaty would minimize.

Those supporting the four-power treaty said today that its opponents would hesitate to vote against it if they realized such a vote would imperil the naval agreement. It is conceded, however, that a hard and probably long fight faces the four-power measure.

BRITISH CRISIS DORMANT.

New National Party in England Hinted at in Speech of Churchill at Loughborough.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, March 4.—Outwardly the political crisis is unchanged. Winston Churchill's speech at Oxford yesterday, like the speeches of Austen Chamberlain and Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, was chiefly remarkable for its omission of any direct reference to Sir George Younger, leader of the Conservative secessionists, and apparently there is no intention among the Premier's Conservative colleagues to emulate Lord Birkenhead in reading a public lesson to the offending Conservative organizer.

Mr. Churchill's speech at Loughborough today, so far as it may be supposed to reflect the Premier's mind, clearly looked to the formation of a new national party out of the present coalition, whenever a political battle is joined, but when this may be he gave not the slightest indication.

HINTS AT RESIGNATION.

His words conveyed what is regarded in political circles here as seemingly a clear intimation of the early resignation of the Prime Minister.

There are tonight, however, some slight signs that the immediate crisis may be smoothed over temporarily. All the morning papers announced that the Prime Minister would, on Sunday, hold a conference with the members of the inner Cabinet at Chequers Court. The story was denied, and evidently there has been a sudden change in plans.

A provincial paper published a statement that Sir George Younger had expressed regret that his recent speeches had been interpreted as a chellenge to the Premier's authority and declaring for a continuance of the coalition until the general election.

The speculation is hazarded in political quarters tonight that these incidents are not unconnected, and that the Premier, on the urgent advice of his colleagues in the Ministry, may be induced to accept some such semiretractions from the recalcitrant Conservative organizer and consent to an indefinite postponement of his threatened resignation.

THINK OF GENOA.

One strong reason has been urged on the Premier for this cause—that he alone among British statesmen possess sufficient authority to carry through the British policy at the Genoa economic conference, and that his disappearance from the government might mean disaster for that conference.

It is also urged that he should stay to see the Irish settlement through.

Other factors weighing with the coalition ministers in persuading Mr. Lloyd George to remain at the head of affairs include the inextricable confusion into which his resignation would throw the whole political world. Should he resign, it is believed that all the Liberal members of the government, among them nine Cabinet members and more than a dozen minor members, would resign with him, precipitating a small general election in the country. The business interests of the country are against elections of that type at the present time.

MEXICO CITY STRIKE TIES UP SERVICE.

Street Cars Stopped. Water Famine Impends; Demand for Settlement.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—The seriousness of the electricians' strike, which has tied up street car service, shut off power in sections of the city and today put Mexico City on meager water rations, has now become apparent, and the newspapers are demanding that the government take energetic steps to settle the controversy before the strike spreads.

Although the striking members of the electrical union have not been able to bring total darkness to Mexico City because soldier guards have been stationed at several auxiliary plants, business has suffered severely during the last few days on account of the uncertain situation.

Fear of disorders has caused the government to provide several auxiliary plants with machine-gun detachments. No casualties through the strike have been reported.

The main power plant at Necaxa is still functioning, but the strikers have succeeded in cutting several intermediary stations. Early this morning the water main was cut in three places between Mexico City and Xochimilco, the source of supply.

A diminished water supply is most feared by the capital and unless an agreement is reached it is expected the city will be virtually without water, light and power soon.

There was much talk today of a general sympathetic strike. The chauffeurs, who, early in the week, settled the grievances which led to a walkout, have signified their willingness to stop work again, the telephone workers are said to be formulating demands with a view to striking, while the bakers have already issued a declaration of sympathy with the electricians.

WINE EXPORT SETS RECORD.

Tarragona, Spain, Sent Over Hundred Thousand Gallons Here Last Year.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4. Declared exports of wine from Tarragona, Spain, to this country were larger in 1921 than for any of the previous years, according to a report to the Commerce Department today from Vice-Consul V. M. O'Hara.

During 1921, he reported, exports of wine to this country totaled 115,000 gallons, valued at $118,000, as compared with approximately 70,000 gallons, worth $88,000, in 1920.

SCORES OF WARCRAFT TIED UP.

Denby Orders Several Out of Commission; Fuel Lack Given as Cause.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Secretary Denby announced today that he had ordered fifty additional destroyers and nearly three score auxiliary naval craft placed out of commission to conserve fuel. The destroyers are in addition to the 100 ordered out of commission some days ago, and will leave in the Navy seventy-six destroyers in full commission and forty with heavily reduced complements aboard.

Among other vessels besides destroyers ordered out of commission today are five oil ships and one collier, two store ships, four mine layers, six mine sweepers and Eagle boats and fourteen tugs and towing vessels. Two gunboats, the Albany and New Orleans, now on Asiatic station duty, also will be placed out of commission and sold as soon as they can be brought home. They will be replaced in Asiatic waters by the gunboats Sacramento and Asheville.

Secretary Denby said the ships ordered out of commission today and the 100 destroyers previously retired as an economy measure were in addition to ninety-two other ships of the Navy placed out of commission since he took office a year ago. The department in that time, he added, has sold 257 obsolete or auxiliary naval craft and now has on sale sixty-six additional ships.

Demand Meet on Drug Evil Suppression.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) March 4.—Demand that Congress call an international conference for suppression of the drug evil was voiced by Mayor Baker of Portland, who presided at the Western States Conference here today on the narcotics traffic.

Gov. Hart of Washington told the delegates that by their presence it was evident they realized the seriousness of the traffic.

Harry D. Smith, chief of the Pacific Coast Narcotic Division, told the delegates that approximately one-fifth of the illicit drugs seized in the country last year were taken at Portland, San Francisco, Aberdeen, Seattle and other Pacific Coast ports.

Given No Trial, but is Taken to Prison Anyhow

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DETROIT, March 4.—Frederico Gonzales was awaiting examination in Recorder's Court today following discovery that he had been erroneously sentenced to serve one year in Jackson prison without having been granted a trial.

Gonzales, charged with kidnaping the 16-year-old daughter of his boarding-house keeper, whom he desired to marry, entered a plea of not guilty when arrested a week ago. Following his denial of guilt, Gonzales was taken by mistake before another judge, who sentenced him.

Today Gonzales's attorney appeared in court to ascertain when his client would be tried, and learned he had been taken to prison.

LIQUOR GANG NETTED?

Federal Officials Say Third Man Arrested Breaks Up Clique.

The round-up of a gang of asserted auto thieves and bootleggers was announced yesterday by Department of Justice operatives here when word was received of the arrest at Fort Worth, Tex., of Dave Hagler of Los Angeles. The first arrest was that on February 16 of Charles Maddox at San Francisco, following seizure of three automobiles laden with liquor in Bellingham, Wash. Otto Creigier was arrested here about the same time and hunt started through the Southwest for Hagler. According to Federal operatives the three men stole a high-priced automobile in Los Angeles, sought to dispose of it in Tijuana, and then utilized it between the Canadian and Mexican borders in illicit traffic in liquors.

ROBS ONE-MAN CAR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PASADENA, March 4. — The lone bandit turned his attention from automobiles to street cars tonight. A one-man street car was held up at the end of the East Orange Grove line at 9:45 p.m. and C. E. Nysemeier, the conductor-motorman, was robbed of $8. There were no passengers on the car.

FATHER OF IMPERIAL DEAD.

Charles R. Rockwood Passes; Was Pioneer in Great Irrigation Projects; Valley Pays Tribute.

Charles R. Rockwood, "Father of Imperial Valley," died early yesterday morning at his home, 220 South El Centro avenue. Heart trouble was given as the cause.

Charles R. Rockwood.

Mr. Rockwood was one of the best-known engineers in the Southwest. Having been associated with irrigation projects in Southern California for the last thirty years, he visualized the arid Colorado desert as one of the richest of garden spots, the transformation to be effected by harnessing the Colorado River. His part in making the dream come true furnished one of the most dramatic and interesting stories of modern pioneering. It inspired Harold Bell Wright, the author, to write "The Winning of Barbara Worth," the story of Imperial Valley irrigation. Mr. Rockwood was the original of the Seer, one of the important characters in the novel.

PIONEERS PAY TRIBUTE.

Pioneers of Imperial Valley declared yesterday that the valley owes its being to Mr. Rockwood. They stated that almost every plan from the beginning of the history of the Imperial irrigation project was originated by him.

He was born in Michigan in 1860 and attended the University of Michigan, which he was compelled to leave because of eye trouble. He left for Colorado, but after three years of active work in the engineering field he entered the engineering department of th Denver and Rio Grande Railway, remaining with the company for two years.

In March, 1882, he came to California and entered the engineering service of the Southern Pacific Railway. In 1889 he accepted a position with the Geological Survey of the government. In 1890 he entered the employ of the Northern Pacific, Yakima and Kittitas Irrigation Company, which was organized by Paul Schultze, the land and political agent for the Northern Pacific, for the purpose of reclaiming the fertile lands of the Yakima Valley in the State of Washington. The following year the railroad withdrew its support from the project, owing to the stringency of the times, and two years later Mr. Schultze committed suicide.

DISCOVERER'S PROJECT.

It was at this time that Mr. Rockwood was offered a position by John C. Beatty and accepted a commission to report on the feasibility of a plan to irrigate Northern Mexican lands. Mr. Rockwood reported unfavorably on this project, but while investigating it he caught the inspiration for the great agricultural development project now known as Imperial Valley. His idea of utilizing the waters of the Colorado River met with approval and the country is now known as one of the garden spots of the world.

In December, 1914, he was appointed general manager and chief engineer of the Imperial Irrigation District, organized at that time to secure public ownership of the valley irrigation systems. For several years thereafter he passed through many turbulent periods, centering around his administration. He was asked to resign in 1916, but declined to do so. On Dec. 24, 1916, he was notified that he no longer was chief engineer of the irrigation system.

VALLEY RESPECTS MEMORY.

During April, 1921, Mr. Rockwood was stricken with pneumonia and this illness, it was stated by members of his family, superinduced the heart affliction which caused death. Though he had been gradually failing in health for several months, his death early yesterday morning had not been anticipated. Two brothers, E. E. Rockwood and Will Rockwood, and a nephew, Roy Rockwood, were in Imperial Valley when they received news of his death. Following the receipt of the tragic news by his business partner, Bayless Walker, business throughout Imperial Valley was suspended out of respect to the valley's foremost pioneer and father of its great development.

Mr. Rockwood also leaves a widow. Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow at the undertaking parlors of Bresee Brothers.

Swedish-Soviet Trade Pact Now in Parliament.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

STOCKHOLM, March 4.—The trade agreement between Sweden and soviet Russia, signed last Saturday, was submitted to the Swedish Parliament today for approval.

It follows the general lines of agreements between Russia and England, and between Russia and Italy, leaving unsolved the questions of recognition of the soviet government and compensation for damages.

It provides for the admission of official delegations from each country to the other and recognizes the soviet delegation as the sole representative of Russia in Sweden.

LARGE BROKERAGE FIRM HAS FAILED.

INVOLUNTARY PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY FILED IN COURT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—Failure of E. H. Clarke & Co., one of the largest brokerage firms with membership in the New York curb market, was announced today. The house has offices in Chicago and several other midwestern cities and dealt largely in oil and copper shares.

The announcement was followed by the filing in Federal Court of an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the firm.

Liabilities were estimated at $400,000, and assets at $250,000. Judge Learned Hand named David Miller receiver, with bond of $30,000. Claims of three petitioning creditors totalled only $582.

Counsel for E. H. Clarke & Co., issued a statement saying the firm expected to be able to make a "satisfactory settlement" with its customers and hoped to resume business at an early date.

Decision to place its affairs in the hands of the courts was made "to prevent preferences among customers," the statement said.

MORE DESTROYERS OUT OF COMMISSION.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, March 4.—Additional destroyers based here will be affected by the order of Secretary Denby of the Navy today, placing fifty more of these vessels out of commission, it was reported in naval circles, but the number to be decommissioned at this port will not be known until official advices are received.

About ninety destroyers are at anchor here or are en route to San Diego. The recent Navy Department order put forty-two of these ships on the reserve list.

Jilted Girl Gets Damages.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

LANCASTER (Wis.) March 4.—When Helmer Helgesen, a Montfort farmer, owning a 200-acre farm, told a jury here that he had terminated his engagement to Lena Munson because he could not afford marriage, they awarded her $3000 damages today for breach of promise.

Hughes Leaves Bermuda After Short Vacation.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

HAMILTON, March 4.—Charles Evans Hughes, American Secretary and State, and Mrs. Hughes, sailed today for New York on the steamship Fort Hamilton. They are due to arrive in New York Monday and will go immediately to Washington.

A large and representative gathering went to the steamer to bid good-by to the visitors. Among them were Gov.-Gen. Willcocks and his staff, Admiral William C. Packenham and his staff, American consular representatives and local government officials. Secretary Hughes said his visit to Bermuda had been most pleasant in every respect.

GREAT ICE FIELD STARTS TO MOVE.

RESIDENTS OF TWO TOWNS ARE ANXIOUS ABOUT SAFETY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

STERLING (Ill.) March 4.—The great field of ice between the government dam here and the head of the twelve-mile gorge, which caused this week's costly flood in Dixon, started to move out late today.

The movement of the ice renewed the anxiety of the citizens of Sterling and Rock Falls, who remembered that similar conditions in 1906 drove several hundred families from their homes and destroyed the Avenue G bridge.

It was feared that the breaking up of the field of ice may permit the great Dixon gorge to surge down stream and add itself to a gorge eight miles long which has formed between Erie and Hillsdale, twenty miles from Sterling.

At Dixon tonight the water was slowly receding and the gorges below and above the city were holding, but there was no perceptible decrease in the mass of ice jammed between the banks of the stream.

BEARS REFUSE TO SLEEP IN WINTER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Mar. 4.—Seven bears on Mt. Rainier, a snow-capped peak near here, refused to follow their instincts and hibernate this winter. Instead they made an inn, high on the mountain, their headquarters, depending upon the forest rangers, guides and caretakers for their food.

Avalanche Lily, one of the bears, started the colony, following her experience of a year ago, when she awoke prematurely from her winter sleep and was fed by a caretaker at the inn. In the spring six other bears were advised of her find and this winter they refused to go to sleep.

The bears have become quite tame, in fact, so tame that they do not hesitate to break into buildings in search of food. This wnter the snow is up on the fourth floor of the inn where the bears broke so many windows that barricades had to be built against them.

The bears are tolerated because in the summer they prove a great attraction to the thousands of tourists who visit the Rainier National Park, of which the mountain is the feature.

TIMES' READERS TO GET TREAT.

Bertram Lebhar's Story, "A Pawn of Chance," Begins Next Sunday.

Beginning next Sunday, and complete in seven daily installments, Bertram Lebhar's great story, "A Pawn of Chance," will be published in The Times. It is one of the fiction hits of recent months—an unusually gripping tale of city life, told in swift-moving, masterful language.

The heroine is a young wife, who, while her husband is hard at work at his office, is persuaded by a woman she casually meets to go to a popular dancing resort to while away an hour or two. There she becomes involved in an adventure, so startling, so sudden and so strange, that, once returned home, it seems like a dream. But it is not a dream. A man has been shot, a criminal has escaped and, innocent though she is, she is apparently inextricably involved in the crime. The story sweeps along compellingly; its conclusion is a master stroke. Don't miss the first installment!

Attorney Hahn Will Return to Legal Practice.

Attorney S. S. Hahn, who has devoted himself to journalism for the past year and a half and "covered" a number of famous cases in the capacity of legal expert, announced yesterday that he will resume the practice of law in his office in the International Bank building. His reinstatement was ordered yesterday by the District Court of Appeals.

Mr. Hahn, who defended the accused in the Sheets, Blundell, Potter and more than two score of other murder cases, recently finished his services as a legal expert in the Burch trial growing out of the slaying of J. Belton Kennedy.

During the World War he served with the Ninety-first Division in France and Belgium. Gen. John J. B. McDonald recommended him to the War Department for a commission in the reserve.

WILL URGE YALE TO PLAY FOOTBALL HERE

CLUB VOTES AT ITS ANNUAL DINNER TO SUPPORT PASADENA CLASSIC.

About a hundred Yale University men at the annual dinner of the Yale Club of Southern California at the Athletic Club last night decided by vote to ask that the Yale football team come here next year to participate in the Pasadena winter classic. Several men of national prominence attended. Among the speakers were David Starr Jordan, president emeritus of Stanford; Charles Upson Clarke, formerly professor of English at Yale, and Roy Barnes, the comedian. John Hays Hammond telegraphed he could not attend.

R. E. Seiley, retiring president of the club, made a report of the club's scholarship activities, revealing that there are four Los Angeles men at Yale that are benefiting by the local fund. He also announced that a silver cup two feet high will be given high school students in Southern California annually for excellence in scholarship and athletics.

Telegrams were sent Chief Justice Taft asking him to attend the American Bar Association meeting at San Francisco this summer, and to President Angel of Yale, felicitating him on his new post. The report of the retiring secretary-treasurer, Kimpton Ellis, showed the club finances in the best condition in its history. The club election resulted as follows: President, Kimpton Ellis; first vice-president, Milo Eames; scond vice-president, George Whittlesey; third vice-president, Ralph Thompson; secretary-treasurer, Philip Richards.

COMPANY SEEKS TO BUILD RAILROAD.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MATAMOROS (Mex.) March 4. The A. P. Turner Construction Company has applied to the Department of Communications and Public Works for a concession to construct a railroad between Matamoros and Tampico, about 315 miles.

The company proposes that the government issue 6 per cent bonds to cover the cost of construction, the sale of the bonds to be undertaken by the company.

The construction of this proposed line of railway has been under consideration from time to time for the last thirty years. When B. F. Yoakum of New York, and associates built the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico Railroad down the lower gulf coast of Texas to Brownsville, situated just across the Rio Grande from Matamoros, they had in view the extending of the road down the Mexican coast to Tampico. Inability to finance the project caused its abandonment.

The Mexican government took up the matter of constructing the line and work on it was about to be started when the revolutionary period began and put an end to these plans. The territory through which the road would pass is rich in natural resources but is wholly undeveloped. It would shorten the rail distance between the Rio Grande and Tampico by nearly two hundred miles.

FACT AND COMMENT.

The New York Times prints an interview with a Los Angeles man who is a guest at the Astor Hotel, in which the following is set forth for the edification of Gothamites who are led by Hearst to believe us a city of wild orgies and film scandals:

"I have watched the city grow from a town of 48,000 to 800,000," says our friend, according to the Times. "Of course, the moving-picture industry is responsible for a great deal of the growth—Culver City, a suburb, is comprised entirely of persons engaged in the industry—but it is the wonderful home life there that really has caused the town to grow. Happy homes make contented and good work men, and the big business men of the city realize that, so they make a business of encouraging their employees to have their own homes. They try through their welfare departments, as well as in their schools and lectures, to promote that home spirit and the spirit of service. For service is the thing the mercantile world must render if they hope for success. The man who opens any kind of store or place of business with the idea of underselling the other fellow will go broke in time, but the firm that gives good merchandise and good service will always succeed.

"We felt very little of the general business depression in Los Angeles, and we look forward to a very big winter season. Railway officials informed me before leaving that so far this winter the travel West had been much greater than last year, and that a much better class of people were traveling this winter.

"We look eagerly forward to the rainy season there, which continues for about three months. This year a very long dry spell was broken by a four-inch rainfall in four days.

"In addition to our fine crops and vegetables, we really have quite a manufacturing center in Los Angeles, of which very little is known outside of the State, so we really have a number of things to depend upon besides tourists. The holiday business this year was the greatest in the history of the city, and as a dollar buys as much this year as $1.25 did last year, that means, of course, that 25 per cent more people were served this year."

CALIFORNIA LEADS WORLD PERFECTING WIRELESS.

Resume Commercial Tranmission from New Los Angeles Plant; Greatest Advances Here.

California leads the United States in the development of the wireless telegraph and in the manufacture of wireless telegraph or radio equipment, and Los Angeles is just putting into commission a powerful wireless station for commercial communications. The California company built the equipment and a California man superintended the opening up of the world's most powerful radio station at Bordeaux, France, and that giant radio station keeps up constant French chatter halfway around the world.

And it is the Federal Telegraph Company of California, that owns all the American rights and basic patents on the Federal system of wireless transmission, which is as far an advance on the original or Marconi system, as is the modern eight-cylinder car on the original horseless carriage with its whip socket on the dashboard.

NEW STATION.

In the center of a thirty-acre tract at Clearwater, three miles east of Compton and less than ten miles from Los Angeles' business center, the Federal Telegraph Company (the California corporation) has just completed and puts into commission this week its new wireless station for the resumption of commercial wireless with San Francisco.

This station consists of three steel masts each 302 feet high, with two flat-top aerials and one triangular aerial, and served with a thirty-kilowatt transmitter, capable of sending six messages at the same time.

Compare this then, with the LaFayette station at Bordeaux, built by this same California company. The LaFayette station has eight steel towers, each 820 feet high and each weighing 500 tons; an aerial system connecting these towers 4000 by 1300 feet, which is about 120 acres; a 1000-kilowatt transmitter, the most powerful in the world; all equipment in duplicate, so there can be no interruption of service; and in constant touch with all the French colonies in Africa and Asia.

MANY AMATEURS.

It is estimated that there are now fully 600,000 amateur wireless listeners-in in the United States, who can pick up this French news if they can translate the language; for, while they use the same continental code as the American stations, they spell their words in French, just the same. But these amateurs can pick up and understand whatever comes in a familiar language, and as most of them are on the farms, it is the farmer boys, more than the city lads who have the inside on the really important news that travels the ether route.

The Federal Telegraph Company is incorporated in California, with a nominal capital of only $2,500,000. It was started in 1911 with the dual functions of a commercial telegraph company sending wireless messages in competition with the Western Union between its stations in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, San Diego, Phoenix and Honolulu; and on the other hand, owning all the American rights for the Poulsen system of transmission, the Fedreal company established and operated at Palo Alto a great plant for the manufacture of all kinds of radio equipment.

TAKEN FOR WAR.

But then came the war. And the government took over all the radio stations, putting the Federal out of business as a transmitter of wireless commercial messages, but speeding them up as manufacturers of equipment. With leased wires they maintained their commercial service.

With the new station at Clearwater, which is operated from the keyboards on South Spring street, Los Angeles, and with similar stations at San Francisco and at Portland, commercial wireless is now resumed between these points, and wireless messages are sent for less cost than by the wire service.

The original Marconi system of transmission, with damped waves and spark and a fierce clatter which in the case of powerful apparatus could be heard for miles, has been superseded in the Federal system by the Poulsen patents of a Danish inventor, which are undamped and as silent as the ordinary telegraph key, without spark or flash.

MEETINGS WILL BE RESUMED.

Bimonthly Luncheons of Realty Board Will Start Again Tomorrow.

Woodworth Clum, director of the Better America Federation and Charles H. Christie, first vice-president of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce and general manager of the Christie Company, producers of motion-picture comedies will be the speakers at the regular noon luncheon of the Los Angeles Realty Board tomorrow at the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

Mr Clum will have for his subject "What the Better America Federation Means to the Realtor" and Mr. Christie will give totals on property owned by motion-picture population and other data concerning the industry which will be of interest to the realtors.

Entertainment will be furnished by a male quartet from the University of Southern California composed by Harry Hardin, Raymond Cawley, Howard Bridegroom and Howard Coy. A special selection concerning the new real estate course offered by the University's College of Commerce will be a feature of the selections rendered.

Speakers will also talk on the Ali Yeas campaign, the caravan to the National Convention of Real Estate Boards at San Francisco and other subjects.

Announcement was made to the membership of the Los Angeles Realty Board that the luncheons are to be held regularly every two weeks hereafter.

Fine Home at Beverly Hills Changes Hands

The beautiful Spanish residence of the late Raymond C. Thorne, erected at Beverly Hills by the Frank Meline Company, has been sold through this firm to Frank Gillespie of Tulsa, Okla., for a consideration reported at $200,000, according to an announcement made yesterday by the agents in the transaction.

The house, one of the finest residences in Southern California, is located on a five-acre tract in the foothills at Beverly Hills, commanding a wide view of the city and valley. Mr. Thorne, former owner of the property, was the head of Montgomery-Ward & Co. of Chicago.

STOREROOM LEASED.

Robert Baker of Metcalf & Ryan, realtors, has leased for Mary C. Young a storeroom at 825 West Seventh street for a period of three years, to Wilcox & Gibbs Sewing Machine Company; also for the same owner, the southwest corner of Seventh and Flower street, to A. M. Enfiajian & Co., dealers in oriental rugs.

Eighth and Olive Street Corner Sold.

The sale of the northwest corner of Eighth and Olive streets by the Torrance Estate Company to L. W. Denison was announced yesterday by the Charles G. Andrews Company, realtors, through whom the transaction was handled. The price was reported at $195,000, cash.

The property has a frontage of 55 feet on Olive street, with a depth of 100 feet on Eighth. The present buildings, one-story in height, are to be razed immediately, according to the agents, and a new building, of probably two stories, class A construction, will be erected by the present owner. Foundations for carrying the building to the height limit, however, will be built. The seller, in the transaction just closed, was represented by W. I. Hollingsworth & Co.

Seattle Man Buys at Hope and Eleventh.

The sale of the southeast corner of Eleventh and Hope streets by H. H. Cotton to Herman Goetz, contractor and business man of Seattle, for a consideration reported at $275,000, was announced yesterday by Ole Hanson, realtor and subdivider, who has entered the business property field. This property was purchased about two weeks ago by Mr. Cotton from Mrs. Agnes Ward, who owned it for many years.

The property has a frontage of approximately 300 feet on Hope street, with a depth of 156 on Eleventh street. No definite plans for the improvement of the site have been made by Mr. Goetz, but a substantial building will be erected, he says, if proper tenants can be secured. Mr. Goetz is a large realty holder of Seattle, his properties there including the Seaboard Building at the corner of Fourth and Pike street.

ENAMELING COMPANY TAKES LEASE ON PICO.

A long-term lease to the entire upper floor of the building at 412-414 West Pico street has just been signed by the Henderson Electro Enameling Company. This transaction has been negotiated through the W. Ross Campbell Company by L. M. Roberts of its sales and leasing department.

In its new quarters, comprising over 11,000 square feet, the Henderson Company is now installing its enameling plant where they will specialize in automobile work.

With the establishment of the Los Angeles quarters, the Henderson Company is also opening a branch plant in San Francisco. H. A. Cronin is manager of the Los Angeles headquarters. The property is owned by the Burkhart Investment Company. The Stephens Tire Stores Company is the lessor.

WILL SOON ERECT NEW BUILDINGS.

Plans Made for Structure at Sixth and Western; Site on Figueroa is Leased.

Plans for a six-story class A office, store and apartment building at the northwest corner of Sixth street and Western avenue have been prepared by Meyer & Holler for F. L. Dickinson, who recently acquired the property under a ninety-nine-year lease from E. R. Sroufe through Laack & Williams, realtors.

The new building, designed to cover the entire site, 180 by 150 feet, will accommodate nine stores on the first floor, with a mezzanine balcony. The corner room will be designed for a bank, and plans include space for a large public market, with entrances from both streets.

The second and third floors will contain office rooms, and the remaining three upper stories have been designed for modern apartments. The design of the structure is Italian renaissance, and the exterior finish is to be of terra cotta, according to the plans which have been prepared. The property leased by Mr. Dickinson is the only unimproved corner remaining at the intersection of Sixth and Western.

Plans were also announced yesterday for an attractive two-story building to be erected at 748 South Figueroa street. This site has been taken under a ninety-nine-year lease by Henry D. Cane, president of the Angelus Lighting Company, at a total rental of $750,000. The realty negotiations were handled by E. H. Cordary. Pearl A. Bliss and J. E. Auman are the owners of the property.

T. Beverley Keim, Jr., architect, has been commissioned by Mr. Cane to prepare plans for the new structure, which will be the home of the Angelus Lighting Company, organized about a year ago. The business of the firm has grown so rapidly, according to Mr. Cane, that larger quarters were necessitated. At the present time the firm is located at 213 West Fourth street.

The building will contain two stores, one of which will be occupied by Mr. Cane's organization. The entire upper story will be designed as a large loft. The building will have a frontage of fifty feet on Figueroa street, with a depth of 165 feet. Work will be started immediately, and it is expected to have the structure completed and ready for occupation early in May.

HOTEL DINING-ROOM USED FOR CAFETERIA.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, March 4.—The Porterville Cafeteria has opened in the dining-room of the Porterville Hotel, with Mmes. Dora Sharp and Cora Walker, sisters, two well-known local women, in charge. The dining-room was closed by the hotel management recently, and the cafeteria has no connection with the establishment.

A modern steam table has been installed and the room has been completely remodeled.

George Bradford of Pasadena has taken over management of the Hotel Porterville barber shop, having recently purchased it from John Hamilton. Mr. Hamilton has not made definite plans, but may re-enter business in Porterville later.

FOR JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL.

Architect Alec E. Curlett has completed plans for a new building at the Sentous Junior High School on Girard street, between Sentous and Valencia streets. The building will be two stories in height, and will contain twelve classrooms.

EAST HAS EARS TO THE GROUND.

Eager Listener to Industrial Representatives.

Local Specialist Finds Great Change in Attitude.

Scoffers Have Changed Into Lively Prospects.

What the business heads in the East and Middle West are thinking of Los Angeles, and how the business eyes of those sections are visualising the white spot on the business map of the United States, could not be more clearly portrayed than by a Los Angeles man who made a six weeks' tour of the factories in those regions for the express and only purpose of finding out just these things, as part of his regular business.

Offhand expression of sentiments or throwing of bouquets by visiting business men are not unusual, but they seldom carry conviction because it is usually obvious that they are founded on no studious comparison of conditions or are intended to be complimentary rather than the result of serious thinking.

W. H. Daum, Los Angeles realtor and specialist in industrial properties and the location here of new industries, has just returned from his annual tour of the eastern manufacturing centers, undertaken for the sole purpose of forming accurate judgment of conditions in all the industries and the likelihood of closing negotiations with a number of his correspondents.

IS ANNUAL TRIP.

Mr. Daum has been making these trips for seven consecutive years at this season, visiting the same cities and the same industries or groups. This gives him a chance to observe and weigh the sentiments and their changes and gives to his conclusions an unusual weight of authority, which will be of interest to Times readers.

It is interesting to note his statement that for the first time since he has been making these trips to the East, he has brought back with him executive officials of eastern plants for the purpose of making immediate and first-hand examination of conditions and the availability of needed raw materials.

No less than five separate concerns in different lines of manufacture were thus represented, and it is stated that there is no doubt some, if not all of them will bring plants to Los Angeles within the year or within a short time. Some of them are still here and others have returned East after arranging for the shipment of sufficient materials for thorough tests of the supplies available to Los Angeles.

This was but one evidence of the increased interest among manufacturers. Many who had heretofore evinced no interest whatever in Pacific Coast manufacture, were this year eager questioners on the meaning of the white spot, and themselves suggested that the time had come for recasting the opinions of the East regarding the western market.

EYE EXPORT TRADE.

It was freely admitted that trans-Pacific trade is to be a burning American question in the immediate future, and there was much interested comparison of Los Angeles and San Francisco, with a tendency to admit that the logic of the situation pointed to Los Angeles, provided the harbor and the port were so managed as to assimilate this trade as fast as conditions called for the facilities.

In this connection Mr. Daum took pains to show that the facilities of the Panama Canal are limited, will soon be absorbed, and that it will be a physical impossibility for eastern shippers to supply both the domestic west coast trade and the foreign trade; hence manufacture for the Orient must of necessity be done on the Pacific Coast; and also that the West would refuse to pay transcontinental freights just as fast as the population in the Coast and mountain States grew to the point of consumption warranting local manufacture.

Armed with maps and statistics covering all points of raw materials, manufacture, transportation and shipping, he found eager questioning and a disposition to acquiesce, where on previous trips he had found skepticism and utter indifference.

EAST HARD HIT.

In the New England shoe-manufacturing centers he found the trade still suffering from the hardest hits it had ever experienced. He found the shoemakers willing to admit that all that is necessary for the development of profitable shoe-making factories in Los Angeles, is the expert experience in markets and plant management, assuming adequate financing; and from the temper of the trade, Mr. Daum deduces the early establishment of shoe factories under eastern auspices.

He found the silk industries very much alive to the idea of west coast manufacture, but puzzled on how to bring the different branches of this trade into being. In this case, besides the mills for weaving silks, there must be such auxiliaries as throwing plants, dyeing and printing plants, which are separate lines, but which must be grouped into a silk-making settlement for the proper evolution of a silk industry.

Even this handicap he found under survey and investigation, indicating the intention of bringing this industry closer to the source of supply, with an eye even on the possibility of silk culture in the Southwest as an eventuality to be reckoned with.

BIG WOOL PROSPECTS.

As to woolen goods, it was generally conceded among the weavers, that outside of New England, Los Angeles and the Southwest offers the best field in the United States. Our supplies of wool from the western and Coast sheep ranges, with an Australian market at our doors for such qualities and quantities as may be lacking, concededly make this an attractive center for the weaving of woolens.

Granted equal, if not better labor facilities, and noting the population increases and the increase in garment manufacture, with a broadening Asiatic market for fabrics and manufactured clothing, it was conceded that extensive woolen weaving is a logical development of Los Angeles industry.

Of cotton goods and knitting industries the same general disposition was manifest, and the first cotton mill soon to be put in operation was regarded as the beginning of larger developments in these lines.

In the ceramic centers Mr. Daum says he found interest very lively, and had to answer many inquiries as to the extent and nature of the clay deposits which have been made the subject of considerable comment in the trade press representing the clay workers. Sanitary porcelains and electrical porcelains were especially mentioned as offering new fields with big possibilities, provided the clays were available. And on this point various interests are now making private investigations with a view to bringing the manufacture of these commodities closer to the big markets to be developed by population, more generally diffused wealth and the imminent gigantic waterpower developments.

In the machinery and heavy metal trades the disposition is veering toward western production for South American and Asiatic consumption, with reservations based on the precedent establishment of blast furnaces and smelters. Given these, with ore from contiguous sources and a profitable basis of smelting, there is bound to grow up a western steel and machinery trade to parallel that of the East.

MORE OPEN-MINDED.

The point of emphasis, Mr. Daum says, is the much more open-minded and receptive attitude of manufacturers generally toward the idea of Pacific Coast manufacturing. This can result only one way—in speeding up the plans of those who feel that the protection of their interests requires the establishment of plants on the Coast. And the disposition is palpably toward the Southwest, with its climatic advantages reacting favorably on the cost and uniformity of production.

From the industrial viewpoint, Mr. Daum says all the impressions of this visit among hundreds of manufacturers and their trade associations, point to an increase, rather than a letting down of interest; and this, in turn, means a long continuance of industrial expansion, which again assures continued influx of population and maintenance of those conditions responsible for the white spot reports of the trade and governmental bodies.

MAY BREAK RECORD OF LAST YEAR.

Eagle Rock Center of Big Development; Many Improvements Planned.

Eagle Rock, which claims the world's record for a city of its size in building operations during 1921, may exceed last year's record, according to present indications. During January of 1921 building permits to the value of $50,000 were issued, while during the corresponding month of the present year, a total of $150,000 was established.

The Chamber of Commerce of Eagle Rock recently, through an active publicity committee, arranged for the erection of large electric signs at the three main portals of the city. The organization also plans an extensive advertising campaign, through which the advantages of Eagle Rock as a home city, as well as a community of fine schools, will be spread broadcast. Eagle Rock recently co-operated with Glendale and Montrose in a bond issue for the purchase of a twenty-one-acre site on the line between Glendale and Eagle Rock, between Broadway and Colorado Boulevard, for a fine high school building.

At the present time a number of residential tracts in Eagle Rock and vicinity are being developed. Most of this development centers around Occidental College on Colorado Boulevard and Central avenue. In the past thirty days, two extensive developments of residential properties have been started. One of these, lying in the extreme western portion of the city north of Colorado Boulevard, is known as the McCarthy tract, and the other, a subdivision of the Schumacher estate, is located in the easterly portion of the town extending from Colorado Boulevard to the top of the mountain. The latter is known as Dahli Heights, and is being subdivided by Ruddick & Driver.

FIVE-STORY BUILDING PLANNED FOR DINUBA.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

DINUBA, March 4.—Dinuba is to have a modern, five-story First National Bank building, costing about $200,000, which will be one of the finest structures of the kind in the valley, according to a decision of the directors. It is not yet known whether the bank will occupy the site of the present bank building, or some other location, and plans have not been announced.

NEW PROCESS OF DEHYDRATION.

Japanese Student Interests Hawaiian Planters.

Pineapples and Bananas Can be Treated.

Hopes to Establish Plants on Large Scale.

BY RILEY H. ALLEN.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HONOLULU (Hawaii) March 4. S. Miura, Japanese, former resident of Los Angeles, has appeared in the Hawaiian Islands with a process for the dehydration of fresh fruit, which is attracting wide attention and which in particular is figuring in the promotion of a new banana industry in which Los Angeles capital is understood to be interested.

Miura, once a student at Stanford, later a worker in the orchards of Southern California, and still later an expert fruit evaporator for California concerns, is working with W. A. Anderson of the Hawaiian Plantations, Ltd., a leading banana distributing agency.

While E. B. Rivers, of the Rivers Brothers Fruit and Produce Company of Los Angeles, was in Hawaii recently to canvass the possibilities of establishing a large banana trade in connection with the Los Angeles Steamship Company, Miura approached him with his plan of establishing dehydration plants at various parts of Hawaii as an industry secondary to that of shipping the fresh fruit to Southern California.

Miura now claims that he has signed up 200 banana growers in one section of the islands alone who will enter the dehydrating field, in addition to shipping their fresh fruit as a market for it is developed.

The process which the Japanese has brought here is so simple and inexpensive, he says, that any ten banana growers can handle it. He and the Americans here who have become interested in his enterprise plan to establish small units to dehydrate bananas, the product to be marketed through a central agency in Honolulu.

Miura has established a small experimental plant here and has evaporated in addition to bananas several other locally raised fruits, including pineapples and papayas. The latter is often called by tourists the "tree melon." It is shaped much like a melon or squash, grows on trees or shrubs from ten to twenty-five feet high, and is a favorite table fruit. The flesh is yellow. The papaya has strong pepsin qualities.

Samples of his evaporated products have been sent by Miura to large wholesale grocery houses in the United States and to Japan. He has not had returns from his American shipments, but from Japan he has received such encouragement that he expects to evaporate on a larger scale and ship to his native country.

Miura hopes to interest sufficient American capital to start the dehydration plants on a large scale this year. The small banana growers of the islands are too poor to help promote the industry. Most of them are living in out-of-the-way country districts. Many of the large banana plantations were given up during the World War, when shipping on the Pacific was so reduced that transportation for the fruit was exceedingly limited.

CLERGY TO AID DRIVE.

The California Forward Own Your Home movement of the California Real Estate Association endorsed at the state convention is making good progress, Chairman Harry H. Culver of the State Association committee announced yesterday that on Sunday, March 19, he would call upon the clergy of California to say a word in behalf of the great State-wide drive for home building.

"This movement will affect and improve every interest, every industry, every line of business in California," Culver declared, in a statement issued by the association. "Besides it raises the character of the entire community. And the churches, and the schools, are volunteering to assist in making the drive a success.

"Home owning instills the principles of thrift in every family so ardently urged by our financial and governmental leaders, and the desire to own your own hearthstone brings a definite saving to every family enabling it to provide something against the rainy day."

In a general statement issued to the sixty-one realty boards in California, Chairman Culver urged each board to go into the Own Your Home drive on a 100 per cent basis.

"The success of your campaign," he said, "depends upon the thoroughness of your plans, the enthusiasm and willingness of the workers and above all upon the quality and variety of the educational publicity.

"The first thing for each local board to do is to select as its chairman a real live go-get-em worker and send his name to our association offices in Los Angeles—then communicate with the clergy of your city and request their co-operation by introducing this important work from their respective pulpits on March 19."

Stewart Home is Purchased by Hospital.

The sale of the Lyman Stewart residence, at Sixth and Lucas streets, one of the finest homes in the city, to the Good Samaritan Hospital, was announced yesterday by P. H. Kinard, realty broker, through whom the transaction was handled. Escrow papers were filed yesterday.

The residence, which contains eighteen rooms, is surrounded by nearly five acres of ground. The property has a frontage of 344 feet on Sixth street, and 390 on Lucas street. The purchase price was reported at approximately $140,000. The building will be used by the hospital as norses' quarters and general administration, and an additional wing, to be used as a dormitory for nurses, will be added later, according to Mr. Kinard.

BIG NURSERY IS PLAN.

Roeding Company Takes Over 240-Acre Tract Near Porterville.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, March 4.—In an important realty deal the George C. Roeding Company, one of the largest nursery firms on the Pacific Coast, has purchased the 240-acre place known as the Browning ranch, in the Tipton district, from W. H. Nelson of Porterville. It is sa dithis property will be converted into a nursery, devoted largely to deciduous fruits and vines. It is expected that the advent of the Roeding Company in this section of Tulare county will facilitate the development of vineyards and orchards.

The half-section southwest of Tipton known as the Harry Evans ranch was also sold by Mr. Nelson to C. H. Darrah of Lodi, an experienced vineyardist, who will plant the property to vines. A small portion of the ranch is already planted to grapes.

Work of remodeling the front office of the Porterville Daily Messenger is in progress. The partition separating the present front office of the Messenger from the storeroom occupied by J. A. G. Smith, jeweler, will be torn out and the entire space converted into commodious quarters. Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Tout, formerly of El Centro, who recently purchased the Messenger, have added materially to their force and equipment and expect to build up a metropolitan morning paper. Mr. Smith has moved his stock of jewelry to 100 Main street.

BUILDING ACTIVE AT HERMOSA BEACH.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HERMOSA BEACH, March 4.—On February 1 the Chamber of Commerce had a list of seventeen firms that desired to start business in Hermosa Beach. At the present date, there are six buildings, either started or in preparation, that will accommodate fifteen stores, in addition to the new National Bank of Hermosa Beach. All of these structures are either on Pier avenue, Hermosa avenue or at the junction of these two thoroughfares. The Merchants' Association has started a biweekly trades day, every other Wednesday, and the surrounding territory is rapidly making this town their trade center.

STEEL CONTRACT AWARDED.

Contracts for the steel to be used in the new building for the Sun Realty Company at the southeast corner of Seventh and Hill streets have been awarded to the Llewellyn Iron Works. The building will be thirteen stories in height, and of class A construction. Alec E. Curlett is the architect.

TO SPEND BIG SUM FOR POWER

Edison Company Sets Aside Nearly $750,000 for Extensions.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VISALIA, March 3.—An appropriation of $745,521 has been made by the Southern California Edison Company for local and general expenditures during 1922 to meet the demands for electric service in Visalia district, including Visalia, Woodlake and Exeter, according to District Manager Carruthers. This totals an approximate investment of $53.20 for every man, woman and child living in the towns named and the intervening rural territories. This expenditure will be for water-power development in the mountains, transmission lines and equipment and labor.

Mr. Carruthers stated the plan provides $100,000 for primary and secondary-line extensions for new consumers, ample means for installing new high-tension lines at 10,000 and 15,000 volts, reconstruction and reinforcement of the 2200-volt lines which distribute current to consumers, and additions to the municipal street-lighting system.

A $95,000 substation is to be built adjoining the present Visalia steam plant and will be fully equipped with the most modern apparatus and voltage regulators.

FACT AND COMMENT.

any metropolis are transportation facilities and propinquity to the great retail trading centers.

There has come about as a natural result of the recent growth of Los Angeles an inadequacy of these requirements for the efficient and economical handling of the wholesale trade, which has multiplied with the filling up of Southern California.

The triangle formed by Main and Alameda streets and by Aliso and Ninth streets, is the close-in district in which the wholesale business of the city is naturally concentrating and which, while meeting the requirement of propinquity, is beginning to complain bitterly of the lack of proper railroad connections for expeditious handling of bulk and quantity freights.

This condition was foreseen years ago, and the city built tracks on San Pedro street to meet it. But it appears there is a hitch somewhere, and the tracks are not used for freighting, but for passenger traffic only.

The Westinghouse Company, in need of central warehouse facilities, recently secured permission from the city for restricted switching on these tracks during certain midnight hours; but this served only to draw attention to the facilities lying wasted and unused, and an awakening has resulted in a call for extension of this privilege to day and night service for the entire distance of the city tracks on San Pedro from Aliso to Ninth.

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce has passed resolutions urging the City Council to open the trackage of this street to freight service in the interests of an expanding wholesale trade. What is needed is a definite, clearly defined and permanent regulation, enabling the erection of warehouses and light manufacturing lofts, with assured trackage and freight service, restricted only to the smallest degree compatible with public use of the streets, and liberally interpreting the needs of the big business of a big city.

APARTMENT-HOUSE.

W. H. Fry is having plans for a two-story apartment-house to be built on Heliotrope Drive, between Melrose avenue and Clinton street. The building will contain twenty apartments of six rooms each.

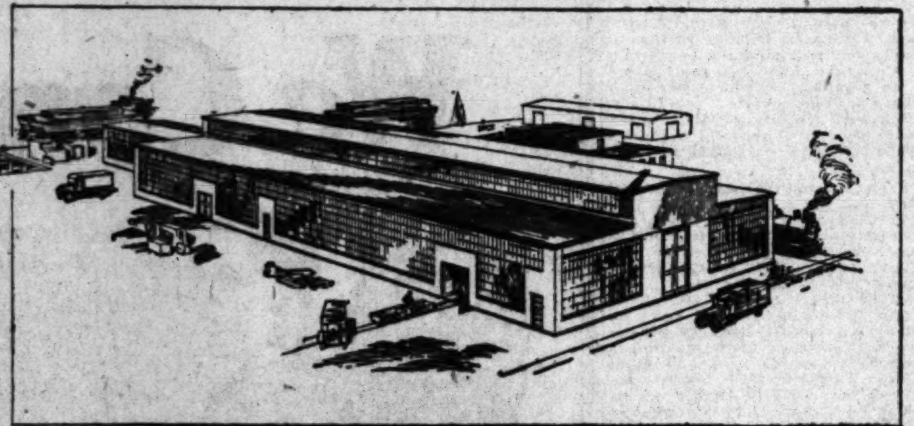
NEW MACHINERY PLANT AT PORT.

Regan Forge and Engineering Company Builds.

Makes the Tools for the Oil Well Drillers.

Harbor Frontage is Scene of Varied Activities.

New Industrial Plant for Harbor Sight.



Building for the Regan Forge and Engineering Company, to be started this week on the West Basin of the harbor. The Austin Company is the designer and builder.

From the point where the woolen mills in Long Beach at the east have their new and imposing buildings under roof and are busily installing carloads of new machinery preparatory to an early resumption of weaving, all the way around the great crescent to Point Firmin, within which crescent is the gradually evolving harbor and world port of the new commercial era, is a scene of diverse activities—building erection, road making, channel dredging, tideland filling, wharf construction, rail laying, oil refining and manufacturing—embodying probably the most intense activity in the United States for any similar area.

This has reference only to the landward sides of the succession of channels and basins, edged with steam and sailing craft of many types and watched over by a dozen of Uncle Sam's warcraft at anchor within the shelter of the breakwater, which tell the story of activities in other forms as vital to the continued growth of the Pacific metropolis.

The woolen mills, the vegetable oil refinery, the tractor works, the resuming fish canneries, the petroleum interests and other industrial plants are vital nerve centers for the greater Los Angeles and the source of livelihood for thousands of workers and employers on whom continued growth depends.

REGAN COMPANY.

The newest evidence of the spread of industry into diverse lines is the beginning of work by the Austin Company on a new plant for the Regan Forge and Engineering Company, which in the few years since the war has grown into an important factor in the machinery trades of this city.

The Regan Forge and Engineering Company's contract with the Austin Company calls for a steel and brick structure 80 by 200 feet, monitor roof, nearly all glass fenestre sides and dome. Also an addition to the present forge shop, and a new two-story office building. Work is to begin at once on the buildings and they are to be rushed to completion.

The new main building will be a machine shop, served with a five-ton electric crane which will go clear through the building and project out to the wharf.

The plant will then consist of a plat of two and one-half acres, located between the Standard Oil Company's plant and that of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, which now includes the Kroyer Tractor Company's plant.

It has a frontage on the west basin of 175 feet, on which the company is under contract with the city to build a wharf. The Pacific Electric tracks serve the entire 600-feet depth of the property, and it becomes one of the important industries of Los Angeles' San Pedro district with the addition of the new facilities.

The Regan Company started in Los Angeles as a two-man proposition in 1910, and in 1916, when it had grown to a ten-man plant was moved to the present harbor site. It then had a pay roll of about $30,000 a year, which has grown to a quarter of a million, and a production of a few thousands, since expanded to an excess of half a million annually. It now employs about 180 men, while the new plant will have a capacity of 300, and it is expected this number will be employed before the present year closes.

The product of the Regan Forge and Engineering Company consists of oil well drilling machinery, drilling and fishing tools, in which lines it has built up a well-fortified position among the producers.

Offices are maintained in connection with the plant, and city offices in the Merchants' National Bank Building. Plans for a business to exceed a million a year are being worked out along with the extensions, with an official staff, including: J. M. Regan, president; J. J. Regan, secretary-treasurer; W. J. Ford, vice-president, and A. J. Plante, general superintendent and second vice-president.

Olive Street Property to be Improved.

The leasing of the property at 624-634 South Olive street, owned by A. P. Johnson, was announced last week by Ned B. Johnson of the commercial properties department of W. A. Heitman Company. This property, now used as a parking station, was acquired by Copinger Brothers and Balmer, who plan to erect a modern one-story building on the Olive-street frontage, which is 120 feet. The building will house a market and a number of small stores.

Copinger Brothers and Balmer have conducted a parking station at this location, which adjoins the Athletic Club Building on the north, for a number of years. The portion of the property at the rear of the building to be erected, will be used for parking space by the lessees.

BURBANK HAS BIG RECORD IN FEBRUARY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BURBANK, March 4.—The very remarkable building activity of this city continues to not only maintain its record, but to set a new one with each passing month. February building permits as given out by H. C. Bond, Building Inspector, totals $215,510, as compared with $67,575 for January, and with $45,550 for February of last year. The first two months of last year were far below any of the others, and so if the proportion of increase of January over February and of the two over the same two of last year, continues, the close of December, 1922, will see last year's record fading into oblivion, and that was over $1,000,000, which, for a place of less than 6000 population, was probably not surpassed by any city in the country. The February permits are for residences, business blocks, factories and a splendid high school.

WOODWARE PLANT BUYS NEW SITE.

To Consolidate Factories With Wholesale Building and Broaden Field.

With the purpose of consolidating its manufacturing and wholesaling activities, as well as its garages, into a single plant, and with the intention of eventually adding new lines of manufacture, the Standard Woodenware Company last week purchased through R. A. Rowan & Co., the lot 25 by 140 feet, adjoining on the east the present building of the company at 828-30-32 Traction avenue.

The industrial department of the Standard Woodenware Company at present is comprised in a basket factory on the third floor of its wholesale and warehouse building and a broom factory, turning out 1000 dozen brooms a month, which is housed in a 50 by 150 one-story building at Eighth and Santa Fe avenue.

The Standard is one of the older jobbing institutions of Los Angeles, having been started in 1900 by Joseph L. Jonas and associates from San Bernardino, when it became clear that this city was to become the real metropolis of the Southwest.

The Standard Company was recently reorganized, and its capital increased from $50,000 to $300,000, following the growth of its business to beyond the million point in 1921.

With the addition of a fourth story to the present building on Traction avenue, the extension of its building eastward to cover the entire 25 by 140 feet just acquired, all to be class A construction, a total of 70,000 square feet of floor space under a single roof will give opportunity for the expansion of this company's distribution over wider western territory, for which plans are forming and sales organization extending.

Of the original incorporators, the only remaining one is the president, Joseph L. Jonas. The balance of the executive staff includes Thomas B. Hammond, secretary-treasurer; Felix J. Jonas, general manager; Matthew Ramsey, superintendent of manufacture and H. L. Knox, sales manager. The improvements and extensions are on the program for the present year.

IN NEW BUILDING.

Fine Structure On Sherman Way, Van Nuys, Now Occupied.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VAN NUYS, March 5.—The new brick business block owned by Fred A. Kellogg, on Sherman Way between Calvert and Delano streets, was opened for business last week, when Mr. Kellogg moved his real estate office from the Sutton Block into the south room, and the Pastime Billard Parlor owned and operated by I. O. McGee, took possession of the large room on the north side. The building, which was erected by the R. R. Edwards Building Company is of very attractive design, and is fine addition to the boulevard. On the opening day in his new location, Mr. Kellogg announced the sale of twenty acres of unimproved land at Balboa avenue and West Vanowen street, to Mr. Dennis, formerly with the Los Angeles Times. The property was owned by J. N. Johansen. It was a cash sale, the consideration being $12,000.

Extensive alterations are under way in the Sutton business block at Sherman Way and Sylvan street, where new fronts are being put in for two of the storerooms. One of the rooms is occupied by Sweet's Men's Shop, and the other is being fitted up for E. E. Rabe's Walk-Over Shoe Shop. The changes include large show windows with the doors set back from the street.

FOR BUNGALOW COURT.

L. F. Mulqueen is taking bids for a ten-unit bungalow court to be built on Trenton street, between Twelfth and Pico streets. Each unit will contain three rooms.

Last Link is Given to City for Boulevard

The City Planning Commission on Friday, was formally notified by Assistant Engineer J. R. Prince, of the dedication by deed, by Mr. E. P. Clark, of the necessary right of way to connect First street near Commonwealth avenue with Beverly Boulevard near Vermont avenue, across what has been known as Bimini Slough.

The Beverly Boulevard project, which for several months has been receiving the attention of the city authorities, had progressed to the point where that boulevard west of Vermont, has been paved to the city limits, and where First street, which constitutes the easterly end of the project, has proceedings for its improvement well advanced. There has existed, however, a physical separation between these two projects, most of which has been eliminated through the right of way dedication by Mr. Clark.

WIRELESS IS PERFECTED.

The Honolulu station of the Federal Company was the first transoceanic commercial radio using the undamped waves — the only other overwater "line" being the Marconi stations between Canada and Ireland.

FOR UNCLE SAM.

The government was so impressed with the success of the Honolulu service that it commissioned the California company to put in a sample station at Arlington, near Washington; and this, in turn, was so successful that it at once contracted for another powerful station of the Federal type at Panama, with three 600-foot towers and 100-kilowatt transmission, which at that time was the largest in existence.

Then the Navy Department got interested, and commissioned the Federal Company to construct three more plants. These were a 200-kilowatt station at San Diego, a 350-kilowatt station at Pearl Harbor in the Hawaiian Islands and a 350-kilowatt station at Cavite, near Manila, in the Philippines. This Philippine station has since been enlarged to 500 kilowatts, but even at that it is only half the size of the station in France.

The government has also ordered from the California corporation, additional stations at Annapolis, 500 kilowatt; in Porto Rico, 200 kilowatt; at Sayville, Long Island, 200 kilowatt, and at Tuckerton, N. J., 100 kilowat.

Besides these, also for the government, both Navy and Army branches, about 100 more stations of thirty kilowatts or less have been built or ordered; and Federal equipment is used on all the aerial mail landing fields, while for the Shipping Board and for private shipowners a great number of portable stations of about two kilowatts have been installed.

The Federal Telegraph Company too, has under contract or negotiation a number of Asiatic stations for the oriental governments which will keep its California plant busy for many months.

FEDERAL SYSTEM.

Besides the advantage of silence, the undamped transmission of the Federal system carries to a greater radius and to far greater distances by daylight and in general may be said to have materially advanced the efficiency of aerial communication by radio. And it is no small contribution to the industrial fame of the Golden State, that the entire aerial communication system by telegraphic continental code, is owned, controlled and the equipment manufactured in this State.

The Los Angeles branch, now resuming wireless and abandoning its makeshift of leased wires, is under the management of Theodore E. Nivison. The plant at Clearwater was built under the superintendence of Haraden Pratt, one of the Federal's chief engineers, who is still in the city.

What further popularization of wireless will come with the new discoveries constantly being made, Mr. Pratt could not be persuaded to forecast; but as the standard means of communicating between terminals it has already come into general acceptance.

JUNKING CABLES.

It is very likely to be the cause of junking all submarine cables within a few years, as the wireless can be connected with the wire lines and serve every cable requirement.

It will also be the generally accepted method of communicating with all distant or remote locations, quickly bringing any new point into the world of action without the time and expense required for the construction of wire lines, which can follow the more leisurely construction of roads, railroads, and the settlement of the intervening country.

R. P. Schwerin, the well-known California maritime developer, formerly president of the Pacific Mail, is the president of the Federal Telegraph Company, with Augustus Taylor, secretary, and J. E. Godcharles, treasurer-auditor. The headquarters are in San Francisco. R. R. Beals is the staff engineer of the Federal Company who superintended the opening to the world of the great station at Bordeaux.

These, like the company, are all Californian, and it is a combination that puts the Pacific Coast at the head and front of wireless development in the new fields opening up as the result of postwar realignments in the furthering of the world's work.

TO BUILD MODEL HOME IN WEST HOLLYWOOD.

To demonstrate the possibility of building a substantial and attractive home at moderate cost, the Birch O'Neil Company will erect a model, five-room bungalow of the Spanish type, on a lot at West Hollywood Tract, and open it to the public for inspection within sixty days.

This model bungalow will be one of thirty similar types to be erected throughout the tract. It will have tile bath, tile sink, hardwood floors, living-room, 18x22 feet, two bedrooms, 12x12 feet, and with the lot will sell for about $5000.

Martin T. Hildinger, subdividor of the West Hollywood Tract, said that this plan will solve the home problem for many investors, as by one operation the lot purchase and the designing and actual building of a home may be carried forward.

BIG CROWD ATTENDS EMERY PARK OPENING.

Nearly 1000 people visited Emery Park, the new tract which adjoins Alhambra on the east, last Sunday, according to an estimate made by Meyering & Lawrence, owners and subdividers. During the opening day, twenty-two lots were sold by the company and several more were reserved for builders.

The grading camp has been established on the tract, and work is under way on the streets and boulevards which are to be built by the subdividers. Arrangements have also been made, it is stated, for the widening and paving of Poplar street, connecting the new tract directly with the main business district of Alhambra.

TO DOUBLE RECORD OF LAST YEAR.

Construction Work in San Bernardino Shows Marked Gain; Big Projects Started

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, March 4. All former building records for the city are being broken thus far in 1922. During January the building permits amounted to $145,350, while February has $110,619, making a total of $255,969 for the first two months of the year. This is more than double the first two months of 1921.

With more than $500,000 in building in sight for the next ninety days, the year's record probably will double the 1921 record, which in itself was double the total of any previous year in the history of the city.

Contracts for the Buller Block will be let within the next few days, while bids for the $200,000 municipal auditorium will be called for before the end of the month. Ground is also being cleared for the $200,000 addition to the Santa Fe machine shops and that company will also soon start work on a power plant and other buildings to cost more than $200,000.

Bank clearings for this city for February show a total of $5,365,486, which is an increase of over $200,000 over the same month of a year ago, and $750,000 increase over January of this year.

FEBRUARY WAS BIG MONTH AT ONTARIO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, March 4.—With 27 permits, representing an expenditure of $53,680, issued by the city building department during the month of February, just closed, Ontario's building total for the first two months of the present year was boosted to $164,870.

Directly following the cold weather, a number of cities in the Citrus Belt reported slumps in building operations, but Ontario has continued to forge ahead, despite seemingly adverse conditions.

Of the 27 permits issued during February, 16 were for new dwellings, making a total of 42 new dwellings since January 1, and still the house shortage continues. The total number of permits issued this year to date is 79, more than half being for dwellings.

Of the permits issued during February, not one exceeded four figures, most of them being for houses ranging in cost from $2500 to $6000.

CANNERY WILL RUN THIS YEAR.

Burbank Plant Will Employ Five Hundred People.

Expect to Handle About 2000 Tons of Fruit.

Twenty-two-Acre Tract for Subdivision.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BURBANK, March 4.—It is a matter of great interest to the people of this city that the Libby, McNeil and Libby plant located here, expects to operate this season with a full force, which means the employment of about 500 men and women.

It was a great disappointment when the cannery failed to open last year, which fact was due to various causes, none of which will exist this season in sufficient force to prevent the plant running to full capacity. To overcome the obstacle of no city sewer, T. L. UpdeGraff, manager of the plant, says the company will be in a position to care for the sewage with 100 per cent efficiency through the use of several very large cesspools and by farming the waste water on ground owned by the company. He explained that during the apricot season the waste water could be cared for by the cesspools, but that because of the nature of the skins of peaches, the waste products required different handling but they would be managed by the use of screens which the company has installed and which will take out the solid matter, leaving the water to be "farmed" or run in ditches over the land, where is will readily be absorbed into the ground and evaporate into the air. The solid matter will be burned or buried.

The season will open about the latter part of June, depending on the weather. The first product handled will be apricots. These will be followed by peaches and tomatoes, these three products constituting the principal output of the cannery, although a few other fruits and vegetables may be run through in smaller quantities. In a very general estimate, Mr. UpdeGraff said the cannery would probably handle about 2000 tons each of the three main products. The operating season of the cannery is of about six months' duration.

A transaction in real estate of importance and unusual interest has just been closed this week. It involves the sale through the agency of the California Real Estate Company, of twenty-two acres lying in an irregular triangle bounded by Central avenue, Main street and the Southern Pacific railroad and is just off San Fernando Boulvard. It has been purchased by G. DiVittorio, a wealthy Italian of this city, from A. E. Pomeroy of Los Angeles. The tract is well located for both residence and factory sites, and the new owner expects to subdivide it, laying it out in blocks of one acre each, with perhaps the exception of that portion which has a railroad frontage, which may be reserved as sites for factories.

The unusual interest attaching to this transaction lies in the fact that these twenty-two acres are the last holding of his several thousand which Mr. Pomeroy has owned in this section and with the parting of these he severs the last of his real estate connections with Burbank.

Many years ago, Mr. Pomeroy owned about 4000 acres of land lying around this city of which later became the famous Stough ranch, which in its turn has been subdivided. Mr. Pomeroy also owned land that was bought by Brand and used as a site for his castle, pictures of which go all over the world. It is said that the deal between Pomeroy and Brand was closed for a consideration of $60 per front foot.

TERMINAL AT PLAZA IS NEEDED.

Excursion Subdividers to Urge Improvement of Northern Gateway to City.

No single civic improvement proposed by Los Angeles would have a more beneficial influence on its realty values than the completion of the Plaza Union Terminal improvements, according to the Excursion Subdividers of Southern California. Another idea advocated by the excursion subdividers is the advisability of an early "clean-up" of the whole industrial and wholesale district adjacent to the Plaza, this in the interest of a more attractive and wholesome approach to the city.

"The importance of an attractive gateway to this city cannot be overemphasized," explained a director of the subdividers' organization yesterday. "When we neglect to provide one we strike directly at the community's real estate values. The proper improvements at the Plaza would add millions of value to property, and would beneficially affect this city even to its remotest sections.

"The kind of a city that we should be engaged right now in building is one of a million population, not one of 600,000. The big movement now on in real estate is nothing more than a practical manifestation of the impelling force behind this city's development. We hear from time to time talk about this community being overbuilt, but nothing could be more absurd in the minds of those who have studied the tendency of great cities in America to grow on beyond any early expectations. The same contention of overgrowth was advanced about New York and Chicago, but these cities have reach enormous proportions because they are great natural centers of monster activities—hubs of commerce. The same thing is true of Los Angeles in its relation to Western America."

concern who had built and financed twelve homes for employees, and who advocated all his employees putting aside a small sum monthly toward such a future investment. In fact, he had adopted a plan of giving frequent bonuses for meritorious services largely as an incentive to such thrift among his workers."

FOR POWER EXTENSION

Half Million to be Spent in Tulare District by Edison Company.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TULARE, March 4.—Proportional expenditure of $497,846 for 1922 has been assigned Tulare district by the Southern California Edison Company. According to District Manager J. R. Haskin, the program for construction and improvements will provide $54,000 for primary and secondary extensions for new consumers; $16,800 for new distribution lines at 10,000 and 16,000 volts; $7000 for reconstruction and reinforcement of the 2200-volt lines and for additions and improvements of the street-lighting system. Additional equipment of the most modern type will be installed to handle 60,000 volts on the trunk lines now operating at 30,000 volts.

HOME OF PERRY EVANS to be built on LOS FELIZ HEIGHTS

LOS FELIZ HEIGHTS

Standing just where his sun porch will be when his home is completed, and looking from Los Feliz Heights down into Hollywood, across the Wilshire district and off to the ocean, a recent purchaser of a small hill-side estate, exclaimed:

> "You have sold me a lot and you have given me a million dollars worth of landscape gardening as a bonus! All my 'front yard' is benefitted by the trees, the shrubs, the flowers, the vines, of those people whose gardens I can see across that long stretch of miles. An irresistible view that can never be taken from me. A heritage for my children that could not be bought for money elsewhere in the whole country. A million dollar bonus!"

A new valuation on property, this. An appreciation that not only accessibility, exclusiveness, prices, terms, restrictions and improvements count, but that "bonus" of vista that becomes yours without cost—and forever. That is why Los Feliz Heights is not comparable with any other part of Los Angeles for those persons of discernment who fully appreciate what they most desire for a home site.

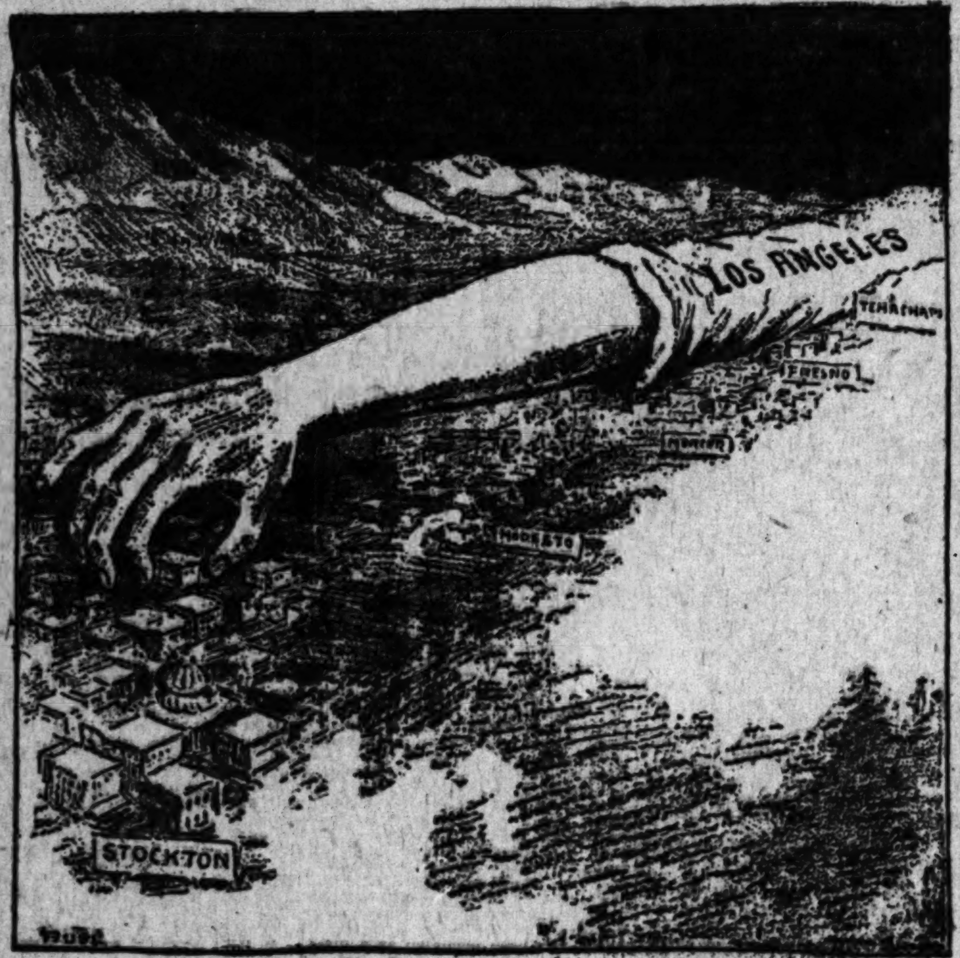
As San Francisco Sees Los Angeles.



The Go-Getter, by Buel, in the San Francisco "Bulletin."

SAN FRANCISCO ASKS WHY.

Great Progress of Los Angeles Is Subject of Introspection on Part of Northern Press.

The remarkable progress made by Los Angeles during recent years, and the enterprise shown by Los Angeles business men in extending their field of operations to include the great San Joaquin Valley, which San Francisco has heretofore regarded her own territory, is regarded by San Francisco editors with some degree of alarm. The San Francisco Bulletin recently concluded a series of articles on this subject with an editorial which may be taken as an indication of how the progress of Los Angeles is viewed by the northern city. The editorial is as follows:

"Readers of The Bulletin that followed the articles of Al C. Joy have learned that Los Angeles business enterprise is taking possession of rich territory in Northern and Central California formerly regarded as a San Francisco market.

"Mr. Joy's articles were not altogether pleasant reading for the 'serene, indifferent' among us. However, they were, most emphatically, articles that needed to be written.

"Diagnosis must always precede cure; Mr. Joy is a skilled diagnostician. His facts and figures are as cold as the impartial truth, but his attitude toward the ill he would see cured is not cold; it is an attitude of warm sympathy, for he loves San Francisco and is like the surgeon that cuts to heal.

"The difference between San Francisco and Los Angeles in this twenty-second year of the Twentieth century is something like the difference between the young man that inherits wealth and the young man that was born poor and has to make his own way in the world. The gilded youth is very likely to squander the accumulations of his father rather than add to them; the poor boy learns the value of riches from the difficulty he has in acquiring them, and even when he achieves an independent position in the world he is not likely to become a wasteful spender.

"We San Franciscans of this generation are the heirs of a golden yesterday; we were brought up in the belief that our capital was inexhaustible. So we have been spending like Fortunatus of the magic purse and neglecting to improve our resources. Los Angeles had to fight for her wealth; she invests her capital as she increases it, and lives within her income.

"But San Francisco cannot postpone much longer the turning over of a new leaf. While San Francisco marks time the procession moves steadily onward. Are we seriously contending with Los Angeles for the leadership, or are we content to adopt the cadence of the forward marcher and plod along in second place? Is the metropolitan supremacy of California to abide by the bay, where it naturally and logically belongs, or shall it pass to the southern city?

"Item after item in the statement presented by Mr. Joy points to an apathetic policy of 'laissez Faire' as the prime weakness of San Francisco. It would seem, almost, that we have taken seriously the poetical exaggeration of Bret Harte when he sang:

Thou drawest all things, small or great,
To thee beside the Western Gate.

"The poet was celebrating our charm, but charm is not the controlling consideration with business men. Charm makes cities beloved—and San Francisco is truly enough 'the city loved around the world'—but charm does not suffice to make cities prosperous. The charm of San Francisco could not be appended as an explanatory or apologetic footnote to the figures of the latest Federal census.

"Apologists for San Francisco tell us with a hopeless air that we have not enough factories. But why are we weak in manufactures? Here is a story brought within the last few days to the Bulletin office:

"'A business man of Mountain View was interested in a precooling plant in his town. He asked for bids from the manufacturers of such plants in San Francisco and Los Angeles. The best Los Angeles bid for the kind of plant he wanted was $1000 lower than the best bid from San Francisco. Los Angeles got the contract.

"When this story was told to a San Francisco banker, he had a ready explanation. We San Franciscans are great explainers of disconcerting facts.

"'The unions!' he exclaimed. 'Organized labor is throttling San Francisco manufactures. They know how to keep the unions in their proper place down in Los Angeles. When we regulate the unions our factories will be able to compete.'

"The Bulletin is doubtful about that theory. It is not a satisfactory answer. We have come to suspect that it is a convenient excuse rather than an explanation. But let the banker have his way for the present. Assume for the purpose of argument that the banker is correct and that the unions are to blame.

"With this assumption in mind, let us look at an editorial that the editor of the Merced Sun was impelled to write after reading Mr. Joy's articles in the Bulletin.

"'A good deal of attention,' says the Merced Sun, 'is being attracted to the fight for commercial supremacy in the San Joaquin Valley between San Francisco and Los Angeles. . . . A Merced merchant the other day remarked that certain liens of goods which he always used to buy in San Francisco he was now buying in Los Angeles.'

"After some discussion of this phase, the Sun goes on to say:

"'Not only in merchandising, but in banking are the southerners invading the San Joaquin field. Their banks and mortgage and trust companies are stepping up this way and loaning extensively on farm lands. One Los Angeles bank has over $500,000 loaned on farm land in this vicinity, and around the fruit section at Livingston another banking concern has a larger amount loaned.'

"Here is a statement about which we should like to have the expert opinion of the banker, who so readily blamed the unions because desirable Mountain View business goes to Los Angeles.

"Are the unions the decisive factor in preventing San Francisco banks from competing with the banks below the Tehachepi? Are bank clerks unionized? Does the Paying Tellers' Union or some other union make it impossible for our banks and trust companies to obtain the lucrative business of farmers and orchardists that have for generations meant San Francisco, when they speak of the city? In what way are the San Francisco banks handicapped, when it is a question of competing, in territory naturally tributary to San Francisco, with the banks of Los Angeles?

"No, it is something else that is weakening the initiative of San Francisco business. We are suffering from a community ailment, and it is a waste of time to try to fasten the blame on this, that or the other element in the community. Would it not shock our bankers if the unions sought to turn the tables by blaming our backwardness on the lack of initiative of our financiers?

"Los Angeles is a community of 'go-getters.' Los Angeles prospers by keeping everlastingly at the business of prosperity. Let us be humble pupils for a change and learn our lesson, not only from Los Angeles, but also from the business experience of the whole world."

ROOFING FIRM TAKES LEASE ON WEST TENTH.

The Rubbero Elastic Roofing Company, manufacturers and dealers in roofing compounds and materials, has leased the property at 1103 West Tenth street from the owner, A. C. Smither, of this city. The new location will be used both for manufacturing and for sales rooms. The deal was closed by O. M. Runyon of the sales and leasing department of the W. Ross Campbell Company.

L. M. Roberts of the sales and leasing department of the W. Ross Campbell Company, reports a long-term lease on the entire second floor of the building at 412-414 West Pico street. The premises are being equipped by H. A. Cronin for the manufacture and sale of automobile fenders and parts. The Stephens Tire Company is lessor. The property is owned by the Burkhart Investment Company. S. B. Nellums, of the same firm, also reports the leasing of the storeroom at 242 South Main street by the Harris Newmark Company to David Moss, for a clothing store.

REPORT ACTIVITY AT COUNTRY CLUB PARK.

Several hundred prospective home buyers have visited Altadena Country Club Park, the new tract recently opened in the Pasadena foothills, according to the Hogan Company, owners and subdividers. The property, which comprises 166 acres, adjoins the golf course of the Pasadena Country Club.

A number of houses of distinctive architecture have already been built, according to the Hogan Company, and others are under construction or are contemplated by recent purchasers.

HOMES GOING UP IN HIGHLAND TERRACE.

Several new homes have been started recently in Highland Terrace and the Grand View Addition to Highland Terrace, according to G. F. Higbie, who is handling these subdivisions. Plans have been prepared for a number of other new homes in the tract, and construction will be started during March, it is stated.

Eagle Rock avenue, near Pasadena, is now being paved, and this street, which borders the properties which are being handled by Mr. Higbie, will be one of the most important streets of the district when completed.

Clipping the Wings of the "Fly-by-Night" Contractor

The warning published by the Blue Diamond Company about a month ago against the "fly-by-night" contractor, was followed by a number of inquiries as to whether we had any constructive suggestions for eliminating him. We gladly proffer the experience of the Blue Diamond Company in a policy that has proved successful.

"fly-by-night" contractor is meant the man who secures a

There is another remedy for this kind of fraud which the public itself can make exceedingly effective. It becomes serviceable, however, only when each individual home builder realizes that he gets exactly what he pays for.

NEW PLANT TO PRODUCE TIRE TUBES.

Extending Local Rubber Industry; Start Building New Plant Tomorrow.

The rubber industry in Los Angeles is beginning to give evidence of spread and indications of the health predicted for it in view of the natural market for crude rubber created by the harbor, with its direct communication with Central and South America and the newer sources in the Pacific islands.

The latest aspirant for a share of the rubber business is J. R. Reilly, who has been general sales manager for the Goodyear Rubber Company of California since that company began operations here, and who has been with the Goodyear interests for ten years, in it's selling and foreign trade departments.

The Reilly Rubber Company is the title of the $50,000 corporation Mr. Reilly has formed and of which he is to all intents and purposes the sole proprietor.

For the Reilly Rubber Company he has purchased through W. H. Daum, industrial realtor, 100 by 130 feet at 2432-34 East Fifty-sixth street, with spur trackage, on which he will begin tomorrow the erection of a factory building 60 by 115 feet, of which the front will be brick and the extention will be galvanized steel.

"Mission Tubes" will be the first product of this factory. These will be a high quality of pure gum, laminated or built-up tubes, and for the entire product a market has already been assured through channels familiar to Mr. Reilly by reason of his long connection with the trade.

The land, building and mill equipment will represent an investment of about $40,000. The equipment consists of a triple roll calendar and two rubber mills, besides the necessary machinery for a tube factory. It is expected to have the factory in operation and mission tubes on the market by the first of May.

Mr. Reilly, speaking of his entry into rubber manufacture on his own account, states that his is the first exclusively tube plant on the Coast; that he expects to refrain from tire manufacture; but that it is within the scope of his vision to broaden out into the manufacture of other rubber commodities, as well as to increase his capacity in tubes.

There is every reason, he says, to expect rapid increase in rubber goods manufacture in Los Angeles, each new plant adding to the importance of the market and paving the way for greater economies which will result in concentration of manufacture where the rubber is most easily and economically obtainable.

Large Figure is Involved in Exchange.

The exchange of the Castle Apartments and the St. Louis Hotel for twenty acres in the city of Monrovia; a transaction involving more than $200,000, according to the agents, was reported yesterday by the rental department of R. A. Rowan & Co.

The Castle Apartments, a four-story stucco building, containing eighteen apartments, and located on Chadborn street, Venice, and the St. Louis Hotel, a thirty-room structure at the corner of Fourth and St. Louis streets, Los Angeles, were exchanged by W. F. Normandy for two business lots and twenty acres owned by Miss Edna M. Lawson, at Monrovia. The tract acquired by Mr. Normandy is planted to oranges, and is improved with a ten-room stucco Swiss chalet, recently completed, and a four-car fireproof garage.

This is the second time that the Castle Apartments and the St. Louis Hotel have been conveyed within the past three months, Mr. Normandy having recently acquired the property from J. M. Jensen through the Rowan Company.

Tourist Hotel is Planned for San Bernardino

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, March 4.—Announcement by C. B. Phillips of plans for erection within the coming year of a four-story, 150-room commercial-tourist hotel on E street, just south of the present Stewart Hotel, to cost not less than $150,000, was the principal development of the week in the building line.

Preliminary plans are now being prepared by Architect Howard E. Jones of this city, and it is hoped to have the work under way by early summer, and to have the hotel completed and open for business by the end of the year.

Several unique features are to be included in the hotel, including a large sun parlor, ladies' lounging room, billiard parlor, four sample rooms, and probably a grill. It is probable that with the completion of the new and modern hotel the present Stewart Hotel will be used as an annex.

Adobe Electric House Sold to Local Realtor.

The adobe electric house, built last year by the Western Construction Company at the corner of Second street and Larchmont Boulevard, New Windsor Square, has been purchased by Tracy E. Shoults, head of the Tracy E. Shoults Company, at a consideration reported at $35,000.

The house, which was on exhibit for several weeks, was visited by thousands of residents of Los Angeles. A special feature was the complete equipment of modern labor-saving electrical devices, which have been retained by Mr. Shoults. The house was designed by S. H. Woodruff, architect with the Western Construction Company.

GRAND-AVENUE BUILDING.

The Milwaukee Building Company (Meyer & Holler) holds the contract for the two-story brick medical office building to be built on Grand avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets for Dr. Gustav Biorkman. The building will represent an investment of about $46,000.

Lease Taken on Warehouse Now Being Finished.

The Associated Sales Company, Inc., has closed a lease through O. R. Elsner of the J. W. Lewis Company, on the one-story brick warehouse building just being completed by Frank H. Cole and Vernon P. Gilbert on their property at 2437 Enterprise street. The building has a total floor area of over 15,000 square feet and is served by a Santa Fe spur track at the rear.

This firm acts as selling agent for some of the largest eastern and local manufacturers of furniture, stoves and other household articles, and is composed of J. A. Brown, its president; Roy C. Roadman, E. E. Collins and S. H. Waller, all of whom have had many years of successful selling experience in this particular line, and J. Albert Hawkins, general manager, who has had a number of years experience as a banker. For the past year the entire fifth floor of the Pacific Desk Company Building at 420 South Spring street has been occupied as a display room and for sales headquarters, and this space will be retained.

Shipments have been handled through public warehouses, but with the constant increase in business it has been found advisable to secure a private warehouse in which personal attention could be given, and better service rendered. A few of the companies represented are the Crescent Stove Works of Evansville, Ind.; Crescent Bed Company of New Orleans, La.; Joerns Brothers Manufacturing Company, Stephens Point, Wis.; Springfield Furniture Manufacturing Company, Springfield, Mo.; Empire Carpet Company, New York; Fort Smith Furniture Manufacturing Company, Fort Smith, Ark.; M. H. Katz & Co., San Francisco, importers of Chinese furniture and Japanese rugs; Spiegleman Brothers and Soronow, Los Angeles.

Planing Mill for Belvedere Gardens Site.

A large planing mill and lumber yard for the new industrial district on the southern edge of Belvedere Gardens was announced yesterday by the Janss Investment Company.

According to Harold Janss, secretary of the company, Noble Whitacre, formerly a prominent business man of Montana, after investigating conditions in all parts of Los Angeles and its suburbs selected a location for a lumber business in the industrial district of Belvedere Gardens adjoining the Union Pacific tracks. The site for the new industry includes seven acres and the sale calls for a consideration of in excess of $17,500. It is announced work will be started at once on the new plant.

The proximity of the Union Pacific and its track connections with Los Angeles Harbor, enables the direct handling of lumber to Belvedere Gardens, without a single handling with the exception of the unloading at the new yard. This is a feature which will be of great value in the big building plans at Belvedere Gardens.

This is the second sale of a business site during the past week to lumber interests. J. R. McCleery, well known in this city, has purchased four lots on Pasadena avenue, south of Whittier Boulevard for $5500, which will be devoted to building supplies and lumber. Over thirty new homes were started in Belvedere Gardens during the past week, as well as a number of temporary homes, according to Mr. Jones.

Last Saturday and Sunday fifty-four lots were sold in Belvedere Gardens, according to the report of the Janss Investment Company. For the week ending last Sunday the company announces the sale of 113 lots for a total of over $106,000.

Work Started on New Building on Hill Street.

Razing of the old buildings adjoining the southeast corner of Seventh and Hill streets started last week, and the construction of a new class A building will be started as soon as the ground is cleared. The site, purchased from Arthur Letts by the Dunn-Williams Company of San Francisco recently at a consideration reported at approximately $1,000,000, has a frontage of thirty-eight feet on Hill street, and 105 feet on Seventh.

Plans have been prepared for a two-story building, but foundations will be designed to carry a building of at least six stories in height, so as to permit the addition of more stories at a later dae. The building, it is estimated, will cost between $250,000 and $300,000. A. C. Blumenthal Company, which handled the sale of the property, has the agency for the new building.

TWELVE-STORY BUILDING.

The Clinton Construction Company has been awarded the contract at $331,755 for the twelve-story and basement class A store and office building to be erected at the southwest corner of Eighth and Spring streets for W. W. Paden and C. H. Price. A portion of the building will be occupied by the Lane Mortgage Company. Roy L. Smith is the architect.

Store Building Under Way on East Seventh.

A modern improvement for the new retail business district which is developing on East Seventh street is now under way for James Slauson at the southwest corner of Seventh and Merchant streets. The building, designed by Edward Cray Taylor, architect, and Ellis Wing Taylor, engineer, will be 100 by 105 feet.

It will contain four stores on the Seventh-street frontage, with offices and salesroom at the corner and a tire service station facing on Merchant street. The street frontages will be faced with red ruffled brick, with artificial stone trimmings. The entire structure has been leased for a period of ten years to Retzer Brothers, wholesalers and retailers of tires, through H. E. Chapman of the Roy C. Seeley Company.

Thirty-seven Tracts Opened by Company.

Approximately 1000 acres of land in the southwest—thirty-seven tracts—have been subdivided and sold by the Los Angeles Investment Company, so far, and approximately 2500 acres still remain to be disposed of. This was the information given out last week by General Manager W. H. Harrison, who added that the subdividing and home-building work of the corporation would continue as the growth of Los Angeles requires it.

Of the 2500 acres still to be subdivided, 2000 acres are included in Fairview Heights, the remaining 500 being in Angeles Vista Heights. In Angeles Vista Heights, where it is expected another unit will be placed on the market in the near future, the average homes constructed range in price from $4000 to $10,000. The majority of the homes in the tract have been built by the construction department of the Los Angeles Investment Company.

The corporation, which has assets of approximately $8,000,000, operates only on its own land, handles its building program with its own staff of employees and carries its subdivisions through in that manner from surveying of vacant acreage to landscaping of premises of completed homes.

Business Develops Along the Natural Arteries of Traffic

The main highway from San Fernando Valley and the north into Los Angeles is HIGHLAND AVENUE.

The most direct route from the city to South Hollywood is MELROSE AVENUE.

Highland and Melrose Avenues intersect at the center of Melrose Park.

Realizing that these two great arteries of traffic offer unparalleled opportunities for the development of business property, we have set aside certain lots for this purpose.

The low prices—the improvements—the liberal building discounts—and the unsurpassed location all combine to make a strong appeal to those who buy for investment or for profit—

FOREIGN LANDS ASK OUR GOODS.

Export Scout Unable to Fill Foreign Orders.

Government Reports Cover Many Different Lines.

Cairo to Bagdad is New Air Mail Route.

The difficulties experienced by a scout on the lookout for American commodities actually wanted and on order for Asiatic countries may be illuminating to those who are pessimistic on the subject of the opening markets in the Orient for energetic Angelenos who want to make or sell the things the orientals are demanding.

From information given by Clarence H. Matson, head of the Trade Extension Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, it is not difficult to deduce that there are business opportunities of many kinds awaiting organization. The foreign trade department of the chamber is a possible "open sesame" for those who want to get into the swing of developments that are making the Pacific the modern trade route.

Among the callers on the Trade Extension Department of the Chamber of Commerce this week, says Mr. Matson, has been a young woman who was formerly stenographer and Spanish correspondent for an exporter in Seattle.

This exporter is now in the Orient, and although the young woman is residing in Los Angeles, she is aiding him in finding goods for export, and she states that this is no easy task, in spite of the reports of lack of orders and slack business elsewhere.

For instance, she recently tried to purchase a quantity of bathtubs and hot water tanks for export, but could not get either of these products in quantity in Los Angeles. This is easily understood, inasmuch as the great building industry here is absorbing practically all of the output of building material and equipment manufacturers. One would suppose that these commodities could be purchased elsewhere, however.

INDUSTRIAL OPENINGS.

Nails were another item that could not be purchased here for export. They are not manufactured in Los Angeles, however. One would suppose that some energetic nail manufacturer would locate a plant here, not only to supply the enormous demand in the Southwest, but also for export, as there is a big demand for nails in nearly all foreign lands.

A little order of 500 typewriters, either new or rebuilt, was another item that this young woman desired to purchase, but they could not be had in quantity. The demand for building materials did not apply in this case. Printing machinery is another scarce commodity.

"We also tried to get a rush order for a line of textiles," this caller stated, "but no mill would take the order because of the short time in which it had to be turned out."

All of which would indicate that business is not so bad in the United States in some lines as the pessimists try to make it appear, or else it is recovering very rapidly.

BAGDAD AIR MAIL.

An indication of the progress that is being made in the world: a recent mimeograph daily bulletin that is circulated among officers and employees of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce says that the "Postoffice Department states that mail for Teheran is now being forwarded by airplane from Cairo to Bagdad, in accordance with arrangements recently made with the British government. It is estimated that this saves at least ten days."

GOODS WANTED.

Actual orders for American products are constantly reaching the Department of Commerce in Washington from trade representatives abroad. With them come inquiries from foreign firms for agencies of many kinds. Among the inquiries received in the last week in February from buyers were the following:

From Canada—Coal; electric generating outfits, 6-10 K.W.; hickory handles for tools; dustless mops.

From China—Canning and refrigerating machinery.

From Czecho-Slovakia—Colophony; raw cotton; petroleum; ether; wrought leather; mother-of-pearl; ivory nuts; motor machine oil; oil seeds; tanning extracts; raw wool, woolen yarn.

From Egypt—Fine and methyl alcohol.

From India—Plumbing supplies, including bathtubs, lavatory basins, closets, cisterns.

From Italy—Coffee, lumber for making furniture; pepper.

From Jamaica—Women's apparel, novelties, toilet articles.

From Japan—Bicycles, together with parts and accessories.

From Mexico—Floor coverings, including carpets and linoleum, school furniture and supplies.

From Norway—Asphalt, dry goods, fresh and dried fruits, hosiery, magnesium chloride, rice, shoes, silks, sirups.

From Nova Scotia—Corn and corn meal.

From South Africa—Darning and knitting machines, cotton and silk thread, yarns.

From Spain—Automobile accessories, stearine candles, gasoline, hardware and tools, iron and steel bars and plates, lumber, including yellow pine, oak, ash and gum, cast metal, pressed or stamped, for building decoration office supplies, petroleum, refined, stationery.

From Sweden — Drugs, foodstuffs, fertilizers, salt fish, flour, canned and dried fruits, lard, meat products, rolled oats, paper, pork, salt, grain and timothy seed, sugar and sirups.

From Switzerland—Brass and aluminum die-casting machinery.

From Syria—Sheetings.

AGENCIES WANTED.

The following inquiries were from firms desiring agencies:

From Argentina—Steel filing cabinets.

From Australia — Boots and shoes, brushware, cotton-piece goods, hardware, hosiery and underwear, jewelry, leather goods, sporting goods, stationery, toilet articles, toys, matches, clocks.

From Austria—Raw cotton.

Form British West Indies—Cotton goods, general merchandise.

From Canada—Electrical machinery, general merchandise.

From Chile—Medium-priced automobiles.

From China—Bathroom fixtures, boots, canned goods, dress materials, heating installation, woolen underwear.

From Cuba—Beans, rice.

From Denmark — Automobile tires and accessories, machinery and tools for repair shops.

From France — Printing and lithographing inks, printing machinery, motion-picture films, paper, typewriters.

From Great Britain—General merchandise.

From Greece—Stationary crude oil engines, land and windmill pumps.

From Japan—Canned and dried fruits and vegetables.

From New Zealand—Silk gloves and hosiery, cotton and silk underwear.

From Norway—Technical specialties, automobile, electrical and motorcycle tools.

From Porto Rico — General foodstuffs.

From Spain—Automobiles and accessories, stearine candles, corn, raw cotton, electrical machinery, novelties and supplies, wheat flour, groceries, gasoline, lumber and construction materials, agricultural machinery, naval stores, lubricating oil, refined petroleum, refined and brown sugar, wheat.

These trade inquiries are published each week by number in Commerce Reports, a government publication, which is the literary digest of commerce, and the details may then be obtained from the trade extension department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

TRADE STATEMENTS.

Several months ago the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce began issuing mimeographed statements each month showing commodity exports to all foreign countries. For instance, statement No. 202 shows the amount and value of canned milk shipped to each foreign country from the United States each month. There are now 128 of these statements issued each month. A full list is on file with the Chamber of Commerce, and an application may be made by any firm through the Chamber of Commerce to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to be placed on the bureau's mailing list for any statement each month. Other commodities will be added to the list from time to time.

GLENDALE, March 4.—The building permits for the month of February, which totaled $431,890, bring the year's total to $938,765. This is over twice the amount of last February, three times as much of February, 1920, and fifty-six times as much as the same month of the year 1919. In the permits issued there is only one large one for a $20,000 store building to be erected on North Brand, by F. M. Kelly; a flat building, on North Jackson street for $15,000; and two $10,000 residences. The remaining permits are for medium-priced homes and garages for these homes. There were 179 permits issued for the month.

Visitors and Newcomers invest in the future of So. California

Here is your opportunity to be a real help to Southern California—to make this place bigger, better—to keep it prosperous. Here is your opportunity to put your shoulder to the wheel.

The members of the Los Angeles Forward Movement are asking you to help keep Southern California prosperous by aiding its continued growth. Thus will you deserve a share in its profits. Invest your money in first mortgages on its homes and improved property—that's how you can do your part.

Like casting your bread upon the waters, it will come back to you—manyfold.

Additional finances are necessary—if Southern California's ambitious building program is to continue. Remember this: as the community grows, your home or your business increases in value. Here is an investment that yields you a double profit.

Invest in the future of Southern California—buy first mortgages on its homes and improved property.

OUR FOREIGN LOAN PROBLEM.

Refunding Does Not Answer All Difficulties.

Good Financing May Not Mean Prompt Payment.

Danger of Becoming Shylock of Finance.

The problem of Europe's indebtedness to the United States will be a live issue for many years to come, the National Bank of Commerce in New York believes. Because of the present world-wide business depression, the confusion in international trade, and the financial difficulties of a number of the nations of Europe, refunding legislation does not settle the large question of international obligations, the bank says in the March number of its magazine, Commerce Monthly.

"Foreign governments owe the United States approximately $11,000,000,000, largely payable on demand," it adds. "On February 9 the President signed a bill creating a commission to arrange the refunding of these obligations. The commission is specifically empowered within three years to refund and extend the time of payment of the principal or the interest of any obligations of any foreign government arising out of the World War, now held or hereafter acquired by the United States. The converted obligations may not have a maturity beyond June 15, 1947, or an interest rate of less than 4¼ per cent. Authority to cancel any part of the indebtedness or to substitute the obligations of one country for another is specifically withheld from the commission by the terms of the act.

"It seems reasonable to predict that the commission will extend as lenient terms to our former Allies in the matter of refunding these debts as are possible under the terms of the present legislation. In the country at large there are two well-devned opinions as to the question of ultimate payment—one for and one against the full cancellation of the debts.

IN A COMMON CAUSE.

"The case for cancellation was well stated in a recent address by Mr. Justice Clarke of the United States Supreme Court. The arguments run that for three years the Allies fought the Central Powers without our assistance. Our advances went to further the common victory and were nothing less than our share in the war, so that in equity there really is nothing owing us.

"But assuming that the Allies can pay—so runs the argument—may it not be a question whether it is to our best interest that they do so? It is not necessary to demonstrate that our debtors must meet both the yearly interest payments and amortizations chiefly by sending goods—manufactured goods—into this country. The annual interest alone on our foreign credits at 4¼ per cent comes to a round half billion dollars. Our favorable trade balance of last year was about $2,000,000,000. If our Allies are able to meet their interest obligations, our trade balance will probably show shift to a so-called unfavorable one, with imports exceeding exports conceivably by as much as a half billion dollars. Such a sudden readjustment, such an influx of manufactured goods from abroad, would possibly entail serious consequences, prolonging for a long period unsatisfactory business conditions. If, however, our investors should purchase foreign securities on a large scale, readjustment may be partially arrested. Such are the main points of this phase of the case.

"One of the most forceful of the arguments of the procancellation forces is only incidentally moral or economic. They hold that if we press for the collection of these advances, we shall, in the years to come, gain the reputation of being the Shylock of international finance. They point to history to demonstrate that the repayment of huge international debts, whether tribute or borrowings, usually breeds a spirit of mutual distrust, suspicion and ultimate hatred between the parties involved. And they raise the question whether for a nation with a large foreign trade, the possibility of such an outcome is worth the candle.

AS BITTER-ENDERS SEE.

"Those who wish to see our loans collected in full present counter-arguments. They hold that the war was primarily the war of Europe, precipitated by European imperialism, to which her opponents contributed as well as Germany. Our sole interest was to insure the defeat of Germany so that in future years we should not have to oppose her alone. We asked no assistance in maintaining our armies in the line; the funds borrowed from us by our allies to maintain their armies are their just and due obligations; and they should expect to repay them. The cancellation of international obligations is a dangerous precedent to establish. Furthermore, the spoils of war in the shape of land acquisition and reparations in kind and money have gone entirely to others; we asked nothing in this connection.

"On the economic side of the question, the opponents of cancellation maintain that if our government can collect from its debtors yearly interest of $500,000,000 or more, our taxes can be commensurably cut down. Lightened taxation is in turn expected to give a decided impetus to business revival. However opinions may differ as to the positive influence of taxation upon business activity, all sides will agree that taxation is at the present time absorbing a larger share of the national income than is desirable.

"In any case it is certain that this refunding legislation does not settle the large question of international indebtedness. The present world-wide business depression, the confusion in international trade, and the financial difficulties of a number of the nations of Europe will make the problem of external national debts and consequently the general question of the adjustment of accounts between the nation's live issues for many years to come."

PROSPEROUS YEAR FOR BEST TRACTOR.

The annual statement of the C. L. Best Tractor Company was made public last night by Cyrus Peirce & Co. The Best company closed the year 1921 with the ratio for current assets to current liabilities of more than 8 to 1.

Following is the company's letter addressed to stockholders:

"It is with considerable gratification that attention is directed to the annexed balance sheet showing the financial condition of this company as of Dec. 31, 1921.

"In the year 1921, just passed, there has been further radical reduction of values. Business generally, and for manufacturers particularly, has been very much demoralized. To have closed the year with a ratio of current assets to current liabilities of over eight to one, such as is disclosed by the balance sheet submitted, and to have continued dividends on our preferred stock when so many companies were suspending dividends, constitutes, in our opinion, a real achievement. The policy followed to make this possible has been one of extreme conservatism. It was early recognized that a period of readjustment was to be met and advantage was taken of every opportunity to be fully prepared. Inventories were substantially reduced and it will be noted that they have been valued at cost or market, whichever is lower.

"It was inevitable that the general depression which affected practically all lines of industry, should have included to some extent our own, but in spite of adverse conditions sales for the year 1921 exceeded by 60 per cent the sales during 1920. While the profits for the year's operation were small, they are distinguished by the fact that heavy losses have been the almost general experience of manufacturers for the year 1921.

"It is becoming more generally known that Best tractors are the best that it is possible to build and all here are imbued with the high ideal that we shall build no other kind. Owners believe in Best tractors and the reputation of our product grows.

"Increased ability to produce, coupled with a successful effort to expand our market, has given us every right to expect during 1922 a very satisfactory volume of business."

TWO-DAY MEETING PLANNED.

State Directors of Realty Association Will Convene Here This Month.

The first quarterly convocation of the board of directors of the California Real Estate Association will open Friday evening, March 24, with a 6:30 dinner and smoker by the Long Beach Realty Board. At this time the president's cup, won by Long Beach for the best five-minute home-town talk at the State convention, will be presented to President Henry P. Barbour by Fred E. Reed of Oakland, past State president. Harry H. Culver will address the Long Beach meeting on "A Few Things I Learned in Building Culver City."

In addition to the directors of the State body, presidents and other officials of realty boards will be invited to witness the presentation of the trophy, which is awarded for the first time in California realty circles.

Chairman of the entertainment committee is William H. Akin of the Los Angeles Realty Board.

Saturday morning, the 25th of March, the board of directors will convene at 9:30 at a well known Los Angeles hotel. The session will last until 10:30, when President C. C. Tatum will recess the meeting until late in the afternoon. At 10:30 the regional conference of directors and board officers will be opened with O. A. Vickrey, regional director at Los Angeles, presiding.

The first session will be given over to the transportation question, with remarks by Guy W. Wolf, manager of the State Realty Association Research Bureau, and officials of the traction and other lines. Gilbert S. Wright will represent the Los Angeles Realty Board in this discussion. Albert E. Kern will attend from San Francisco and Fred E. Reed, the transportation committee chairman from Oakland, will lead the discussion.

At 12 o'clock, Herbert L. Cornish, chairman of the People's Economy League, will present the league's views on the proposed $500,000,000 bond issue of California for water and power sites.

The luncheon at 12:30 will be a brilliant affair, with the national convention at San Francisco May 31, June 1, 2 and 3, 1922, as the theme. W. Ross Campbell of Los Angeles, is general chairman of the State association committee on participation. Others who will participate in the program will include Frank Ryan, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board; Albert E. Kern, vice-president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards; William May Garland, former president of the national association; Hayden F. Jones, national convention chairman for Central California, and others.

Topics at the afternoon session will include "Your Own Home," by Chairman Harry H. Culver, Charles B. Hopper, Floyd A. Dornier; "Standard Forms for Offices of Realtors," by Frazier O. Reed, C. A. Ricks and Chief Deputy Real Estate Commissioner R. B. Dunlap; "The Realtor Tour de Luxe," by President C. C. C. Tatum; "The Colorado River," by W. I. Hollingsworth; "Anti-Single-Tax," by C. E. Wantland; "Proposed Legislation," by Chairman George J. Wren; "Southern California Real Estate Picnic at Long Beach," by Henry P. Barbour of Long Beach, Everett A. White, regional director of Santa Ana; "Good Roads and Highways," by Chairman C. H. Antrim; "The Next State Convention," by Frank Ryan; "Taxation," by Chairman Albert E. Kern; "The California Real Estate Journal," by the editor; a membership campaign will be outlined by the State chairman, Henry P. Barbour. These will be subjects to which ten or fifteen minutes each will be allotted.

New Commercial Buildings Being Built on Eighth

Several commercial buildings, upon which leases have already been negotiated, are now being constructed on East Eighth street by the Roy C. Seeley Company, according to Howard E. Chapman of that firm. At the present time a two-story brick building, to be occupied by the M. Stulsaft Company, is being erected at the southeast corner of Eighth street and Stanford avenue. The Stulsaft Company, of which J. C. Rommel is local manager, is a San Francisco plumbing supply house.

At the southwest corner and the southeast corner of Eighth and Merchant streets the Seeley Company is completing two-story class B twin buildings, one of which will be occupied by the F. & S. Garage, and the other by the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company and the Gutta Percha Company of America.

Construction has been started on a one-story brick building adjoining the southeast corner of Eighth and Linden streets, to be occupied, upon completion, by a restaurant. At the southeast corner of Eighth and Gladys streets a building, occupied by E. Richard Just, tire dealer, has just been completed. Several other buildings are contemplated on Eighth street, between Central avenue and San Pedro street, according to the Seeley Company, and the district promises to be the center of considerable activity.

HOLLYWOOD VISTA SALES.

DAILY TRADE TALK.

Survey of Week Shows Preparation for Tax Requirements to be Leading Influence.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

Business in Southern California may be compared to a race horse exercising under wraps. The thoroughbred is in good health and fine fettle, but is being held back awaiting somewhat better track conditions.

Income-tax matters still absorb the attention of executives upon whose shoulders rest the responsibility of providing the wherewithal to comply with Uncle Sam's demands, which culminate on the 15th. State and county tax assessing also will be under way this week, and the bonus is still a contingency with which to conjure.

Notwithstanding these elements, which have a natural tendency to brake the onward momentum somewhat, and in spite of continued unseasonable weather, the week has been one of marked advancement in local business circles, finding expression in bank clearances, which mount from day to day; in real esthte and building transactions, and in improving retail trade.

Trading on the stock exchange has been active, but is still largely confined to the Oatmans, with the public manifesting increasing interest in the more speculative offerings. Bond business is a trifle quiet, which is in keeping with the current demands for ready cash to meet tax requirements, but on the whole the period has been one of progress and promise.

What is really of more importance is the fact that basic conditions throughout the country show improvement and furnish a more hopeful prospect for the trade of the coming months; this on the authority of the Federal Reserve Board itself. This better outlook has, in some measure, been offset by labor and other difficulties in the textile industry, which have resulted in reduced activity in that branch of business. Fluctuations in the price of raw materials have subjected the textile trade to still further difficulty, while in that, as well as in others, the lack of forward orders has made it difficult to plan policies far in advance.

In iron and steel, varying opinions exist as to situation and outlook. It is to be noted, however, that there has been distinct increase in the activity in the plants of the United States Steel Corporation, as well as some increase in the activity of independent mills. The net outcome of these changes has been to diminish the irregularity and unevenness noted in the movement of industry during 1921; textiles and allied lines, which have been far in advance of others, are losing their relative momentum.

The evening tendency thus evident by current readjustments is reflected in the fact that the board's price index remains unchanged at 138. Wholesale and retail trade indexes are disposed to show recession of buying in most parts of the country save for seasonal activity in special lines such as dry goods.

The volume of employment (another important factor in influencing demand for goods, shows but little modification. As compared with last year the volume of building is very much larger. Financially there is continued reduction in the volume of credit required. Foreign exchange has shown a decidedly stronger tendency, the highest levels for a long time past having been reached in sterling, francs, and some other European currencies.

Business failures are on a materially higher level than in 1921 so shows an increase in commercial while the month of February al failures as contrasted with January.

For the week Dun's reports 629 failures in the United States as compared with 478 for the preceding week and 311 last year. The same authority says that the commercial situation is changing for the better. Gains do not come other than slowly and irregularly, but constructive forces are exerting greater influence and the general feeling is more cheerful.

Bradstreet's agrees in the main with this viewpoint with the statement that the developments of the week in trade and industry have been mainly favorable, with perhaps the most important feature being the breaking of the Southwestern drought, coupled with further slight gain in activity in wholesale and jobbing lines.

IMMIGRANT MORTALITY.

With the exception of the Russians, the expectation of life of the foeirgn-born in the United States is less than for the native-born of native parentage, it was stated in a recent analysis of the mortality of foreign race stocks, published by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Of the foreign-born, Russians have the best expectation, followed in order by the Italians, the English, Scotch and Welsh, the Germans and the Irish, who have a particularly low expectation. It is shown that with the exception of the Russians and Italians, the mortality is higher among these races living in New York State than in their native country.

This condition may be due, it is said, to the difficulties of adjustment to new conditions of life, or to the poorer quality of the immigrants as compared with their own people who stay home, or to a combination of both these factors.

BAX ASSOCIATION.

Officers of the "Three-in-One" Association, which is composed of Santa Monica, Venice and Ocean Park insurance agents, were reelected at the annual meeting held this week. W. L. H. Geldert is president; William Akin, vice-president, and T. H. Thurlow, secretary-treasurer. Membership in the organization was extended to Sawtelle agents at the meeting. Ninety per cent of all authorized agents in the four cities are now said to belong to the "Three-in-One."

BROKERAGE OFFICE OPENS.

A branch office of Cosgrove-Cleverdon, Inc., San Francisco insurance brokers and average adjusters, was opened last week in the Security Building. Walter E. Dawes, prominent in local marine insurance circles and formerly manager of the marine insurance department of Wheeler Brothers & Pierce, has taken the management of the branch. He will represent, as general agent for Southern California, the Great American Insurance Company of New York, the Home Insurance Company of New York, and the Phoenix Insurance Company of Hartford.

LOCAL UNDERWRITERS.

W. M. Curran, who recently resigned as assistant manager of the local branch office of the National Surety Company, has been appointed manager of the surety department of the Union Indemnity Company of New Orleans in the office of Matt T. Mancha & Co., general agents for Southern California.

Frederick J. Perry, newly elected vice-president of the Fire Underwriters' Association of the Pacific, is the first Los Angeles man who has ever been honored with that position, which is the preliminary office to the presidency of the association. Mr. Perry has been active in the work of the Special Agents' Association of the Pacific Southwest, and served for two years on its conference committee with the Los Angeles Fire Insurance Exchange. He is special agent for the Royal, Queen and Newark in this territory.

A. A. Allen has sold his insurance agency to the William Wilson Company. The Allen agency was one of the oldest in this city. Mr. Allen will devote the next two years to travel and will later be associated with his son, R. W. Allen, in the real estate business.

The Widenham Company has discontinued its representation of the Pacific States Fire Insurance Company and has taken on the Boston Underwriters, recently relinquished by Elmer Sly. In the future, Mr. Sly will represent the Old Colony.

BUSINESS NEWS.

Cotton Market Reviewd; Los Angeles Banker Sees Prosperity Ahead.

Reaction during the last three days of the week caused a decline of ½ a cent a pound in the New York cotton market. Last week was the first to show a decline after three weeks of rising prices. Los Angeles cotton brokers do not attach any more importance to this slump in the market than they did to the upward movement. It is still a trader's market, in their opinion, with actual buying, which would directly reflect the real condition of the industry, for the most part absent.

Very little high-grade cotton remains in California and Arizona although there is plenty of it still in the South. As a result the local demand is centering on the lower quality stock. Middling quality California cotton is bringing an average of 16 cents a pound in the interior at present.

Many observers of the cotton market are now of the opinion that any improvement in price will be gradual and that normal levels will not be reached until October at least. Twenty cents a pound should be the season's high price, they say. There are also a number of more pessimistic cotton men who expect to see prices hit 15 cents again. They cite decreased exports and lower domestic spinner's takings due to the mill strikes in New England as factors which confirm their bearish conclusions.

Local cotton dealers say that the determination of the country authorities to impose a tax of $2 a bale on cotton shipments passing through Los Angeles Harbor has struck a death blow to that port as far as future cotton shipments are concerned. The local port is the only one in the United States where cotton for shipment is taxed, it is said. The tax is based on the technicality that the cotton is not legally in transit as the carriers cannot issue through bills of lading on it while it is passing through the municipal compress. A movement is now afoot to have the State Legislature pass a bill refunding the tax and placing Los Angeles Harbor on a parity with the other cotton shipping ports of the country.

In the meantime, the greater percentage of the cotton now in the Imperial Valley and Arizona is being rerouted by rail to Galveston and other Gulf ports. The railroads and the Gulf ports have long been making a bid for this trade and find in the new taxation at Los Angeles a long-looked-for opportunity. Up to two years ago they always had the California cotton trade, but on account of the concerted efforts of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the Clearinghouse Association and the local cotton men, Los Angeles Harbor's cotton shipments jumped from 2000 to 100,000 bales in 1921. A municipal compress was erected last year to take care of these shipments.

Because of the narrow margin cotton brokers work on, they will be forced to use the Gulf ports in the future in order to avoid the local taxation, it was said yesterday. A final effort to have the tax ruling changed was made at a meeting of bankers and cotton men held last Friday under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. The meeting was advised at that time by County Counsel Hill that it would be impossible to legally refund the tax.

PROSPERITY AHEAD.

"California is entering upon what promises to be one of the tinest seasons experienced in many years, if anything may be judged from agricultural conditions."

This is the estimate formed by W. W. Douglas, vice-president of the Bank of Italy, who has just returned from an extended tour of the bank's many branches throughout the State.

"Everyone seems to expect that California will produce bumper crops year after year, and while performances would justify this impression, nevertheless it seems to me that 1922 will be even better than the popular expectation. The rains have been most timely and as a result crops in nearly every locality are in excellent condition. I found this to apply through the Sacramento, San Joaquin, Salinas and Santa Clara valleys, as well as in the districts surrounding San Luis Obispo and Los Angeles.

"Not the least important consideration in this promising situation is the effect upon the mental attitude of the people all over California. On every hand there seems to be a feeling of optimism and confidence. Although a great many were ready to admit that business was at present rather slack, all were united in the belief that prosperity is tugging at the latch string.

"Contrast this with the general feeling of unrest and fear expressed a year ago, and you will readily see why I am of the opinion that California is entering upon such an era of prosperity. If, with the adverse conditions which surrounded industry of every character a year ago, the State was able to do the things it did, then certainly in 1922 with both natural and mental conditions so favorable, we may surely look for many broken production records."

CREDIT MEN'S BANQUET.

Charles F. Stern, vice-president of the First National Bank, and J. H. Tregoe, secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Credit Men, will speak at the banquet of the Los Angeles Credit Men's Association at the Ambassador Hotel next Friday evening. The banquet will be the chief event on the program of the State conference of credit men which will be held here Friday and Saturday.

PREWAR DEBTS.

British subjects in California, Nevada, Utah and Arizona owning bonds of Austrian and Hungarian unsecured prewar debts, have until next Wednesday to communicate regarding their collection with the British Consul-General, San Francisco, according to advices received from the consulate by F. H. Chapman, manager of the foreign department, Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank.

The American Department of State is attempting to notify all Americans holding such bonds, and who have not previously notified the department to that effect, to write the Secretary of State, Washington, D. C., requesting copies of the circular and blank form giving information and the procedure to be followed in sending these bonds in for collection. The Federal Department of State suggests that nationals of the United States owning bonds should submit them not later than March 31.

WHERE TO FIND LATE MARKETS.

Market reports received too late to be included in this section of The Times will be found on Page 10, Part I, of this edition.

CRARY BUYS SEAT.

A. H. Crary & Co., have opened a new department for the handling of local listed and unlisted securities in addition to their eastern wire business. A seat on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange has recently been acquired and the services of TheodoreC. Garball, who will appear on the floor for the Crary house, secured. Mr. Garball was associated with the Crary firm many years ago and was later connected with H. A. Mussey & Co., in Chicago as a specialist in Standard Oil and unlisted stocks. He will continue to handle those Middle Western oil stocks, with which he is very familiar, together with listed and unlisted local stocks.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the American Photo Player Company, the officers of the previous year were re-elected and the usual 7 per cent preferred quarterly dividend was declared for 1922.

The president, H. J. Werner, in a general review of the organ situation, predicted that 1922 should be a prosperous year for the company as evidenced by the repeat orders from users of instruments and because of the increased number of foreign inquiries.

A Dow Jones report says that the Mexican Petroleum Company has completed Cerro Azul well No. 16, flowing 5000 barrels at 1330 feet. Toteco No. 7 has been completed by Mexican Seaboard, producing 4000 barrels at 1550 feet, extending the pool on north boundary one kilometer west.

Labor Board reduces overtime pay of rail telegraphers and telephone operators, allowing time and a half only after nine hours work, instead of eight, as heretofore.

Standard Oil of New Jersey officials say newspaper reports are the only intimation they have received that the contract for a monopoly of the Czecho-Slovakian oil fields has not been ratified.

Average price twenty industrials 86.46, up .43; twenty rails, 78.10, off .21.

Invest in a
Hydro-Electric Bond
THE Nevada-California Electric Corporation is a hydro-electric company in the true sense of the word. Over 80% of the total generating capacity of its system is hydro-electric.
All the advantages of this form of generation are evident in this company's business. Its supply of power depends only on its development of potential water rights.
Its cost of doing business is relatively free from the hazards of rising or falling prices. Its raw material (water) is costless and doubtless will always be costless. Its operating costs are very low compared with the value of the product. It has a dependable income because the essential nature of its business has caused the State Supervising Commission to permit companies engaged in this business to earn a fair return on their investments.
For these reasons we recommend Nevada-California Electric Corporation First Lien 6% Gold Bonds, Series "B," due 1950, priced at 96 and interest to yield 6.30%. You can obtain these bonds in denominations of $100, $500 and $1000.
For your information we have prepared an attractive circular which tells the interesting story of this hydro-electric company and the details of these bonds. Write or call at our office for this folder.

SECURITY: A first closed mortgage on 53,638 acres of agricultural lands and a general mortgage on an additional 10,000 acres, located in the heart of the San Joaquin Valley. Recent appraisals by disinterested experts place a valuation of $5,200,000 on the properties. Sales contracts aggregating $3,000,000 are pledged with the Trustees in favor of all mortgage holders.
FURTHER PROTECTIONS: By the terms of the Trust Deed serial retirement of these Bonds commences in 1923 and continues annually thereafter until final maturity in 1931. Thus an increase in equity and strong resale market are assured. The management and chief stockholders constitute a body of business men best known for their integrity and years of experience in bringing similar projects to a successful conclusion.

Greater than Mexia
Vigorous drilling operations on the great Powell oil structure, just north of Mexia and east of Corsicana, Texas, prove conclusively that the geologists were right when they predicted that the Powell structure should prove another and greater Mexia. The Vinson well toward the south end of this structure has just encountered a rich oil sand at 2575 feet, which is believed to be good for gusher production. It's a greater showing than any at the same depth at Mexia. For full information about Mexia, the great Powell structure and other rich Texas oil fields, read the Texas Oil Bulletin. Write today and we will send you the Texas Oil Bulletin free for three months, and we will also send you the Special Illustrated Corsicana-Mexia edition of this magazine without cost or obligation. SAN FRANCISCO GOLD MINES COMPANY

To Begin Diamond Drilling Immediately!

San Francisco's diamond drill has arrived and is being set up on its property at top speed. Quinn, the man who drilled the Oatman United property, where such sensational discoveries were made recently, has contracted to drill the San Francisco property.

Work Will Start at Once

Under supervision of General Manager W. B. Phelps, of the Tom Reed Gold Mines Company, Consulting Engineer Herman C. Zulch, U. S. Mineral Surveyor, and Harvey N. Hammond, superintendent and engineer of the Oatman United Mines Co., an aggressive and intelligent development campaign will be carried on.

THE MEN BEHIND THE SAN FRANCISCO GOLD MINES COMPANY

The development of no other Oatman property has been undertaken by such a combination of men so thoroughly conversant with the geological peculiarities of the Oatman district, or so well fitted by mining experience to solve its mining problems.

President, W. K. Ridenour,
Director of the United-Eastern Mining Company; president and director of the United American Mining Company; one of the pioneer business and mining men of Southwestern Arizona.

General Manager, W. B. Phelps,
General Manager of the Tom Reed Gold Mines Company for some years.

Consulting Engineer, Herman C. Zulch,
U. S. Mineral Surveyor and also consulting engineer for the Tom Reed Gold Mines Co.

Assistant to General Manager and Consulting Engineer, H. N. Hammond,
Superintendent and engineer for the Oatman United Mines Company.

J. E. Shank,
Chief assayer Tom Reed Company.

M. H. Force,
Old-time mining and business man of Southwestern Arizona.

F. E. Strong,
Oatman newspaper man, and others are numbered among the operating syndicate.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—The vulnerable technical position of various automobile shares and kindred specialties, also equipments and oils, gave the bulls an opportunity to depress those issues in the course of today's brief market operations. Studebaker, Chandler, United States Rubber, Mexican Petroleum and several of the less prominent domestic oils, as well as American and Baldwin Locomotives, Republic Iron, American Hide and Leather pfd., United Fruit, also were under attack.

Several of the secondary rails, especially Missouri Pacific common and pfd., and Kansas City Southern forfeited part of their recent advances. Extreme losses of one to two points were partly retrieved, but a heavy tone marked the close.

Sales amounted to 335,000 shares.

The noteworthy feature of the clearinghouse report was the actual cash loss of $56,256,000, which wiped out last week's large gain and effected another deficit of slightly more than $12,000,000 in excess reserves. Actual loans and discounts increased only moderately, but reserves of members of the Federal Reserve Bank showed a decrease of almost $55,000,000.

Foreign exchanges were most erratic, sterling and the leading continental remittances weakening at the outset, but rallying briskly later as a result of speculative covering operations. German marks again were the only exception, extending their recent decline.

Mercantile authorities reported an increase of business compared with that of the same period last year, but collections were less satisfactory, despite the relative ease of money at interior centers.

The Methods By Which

OATMAN

is to Be Developed

¶ Modern mining development, as it is being conducted at present in Oatman, means much to the permanency and future of this camp.

¶ Formerly months were consumed while hundreds of feet of shaft were sunk and crosscuts driven. Today the core drill accomplishes the same result in one seventh the time and at one-fifth the cost.

¶ Core drilling is being used almost exclusively by those companies which have resumed activities in Oatman. The introduction of this method of prospecting Oatman's underground wealth should result in rapid development of an interesting character.

Our facilities for supplying information relative to the Oatman district are unusually complete, our office staff being conversant with the geological conditions of the camp.

Of especial interest to those following activities in this district is the daily telegraphic dispatch received from our correspondent in Oatman. This information is at the disposal of those interested.

A colored map of the Oatman district, together with a description of any active Oatman issue, will be sent free upon request.

OATMAN CAMP DEVELOPMENT.

Passed Experimental Stage, Mining Expert Says.

Deposits Are Believed to be Equally Distributed.

Tom Reed Manager Certain Big Boom is Due.

BY H. E. DAVIS,
General Manager for A. W. Coote.

Having passed the experimental stage as a mining district, with ore being milled by several companies and others with large reserves stacked up waiting for the refining process, it is interesting to note how the pendulum of progress has swung over the mining activity in the little town of Oatman, Ariz. Since the days of the location of the Tom Reed mine and the subsequent discovery of the United Eastern by George W. Long and John L. McIver, then connected with Tom Reed, and now prominent in United Eastern and other properties, development work has gone on steadily, interrupted only by the transference of mining activity from gold to copper during the war.

Starting as merely a mining prospect, the Tom Reed mine quickly attracted attention, and with the opening of the vast deposits on the United Eastern property, State-wide and then national attention was attracted to the district. Miners and operators who had been through the Cripple Creek and Goldfield days flocked to the new center. Companies were organized, shafts sunk and encouraging returns had been made when the war summarily suspended development before the wonderful prophecies for the district by many famous authorities had materialized.

At this stage, when Oatman mines are giving substantial promises of bursting out into the greatest gold producing section in this country, it is both interesting and pertinent to review some of the opinions stated by authorities during the infancy of the camp. In October, 1915, Dr. Walter Harvey Weed, noted geologist, made this statement after visiting Oatman:

"The gold deposits occur in well-defined fissure veins which traverse all the rocks of the region and, so far as my obervations enable me to judge, the veins are of identical character and are equally mineralized in all the rocks and, though the fissures may show variations in the width of the rock, the vein filling is similar in each rock, and the ore is likely to be equally rich in any one of the rocks of the district."

Another authority, a well-known mining engineer, claimed at the same time:

"The Oatman mining zone is a wonderful district. After spending twenty years in Cripple Creek, I believe that the Oatman section is the most promising in North America at the present time. It is my opinion that the Oatman district is equal to the Rand of South Africa. Possibilities in this section are great."

A GREAT PRODUCER.

C. H. James of London, Eng., one of the best-known mining engineers in the world, stated in 1915, that "the Oatman mining field will develop in a very short while into one of the greatest gold-producing sections in the world." Continuing, he said: "The present prospective stage will lead to a great amount of deep development. The great feature of the district lies in this extension. It is not confined to one belt. It is not a camp for small operators, although, as in all other gold-fields of note, the initial work of the small operator is instrumental to finding material and data to influence the larger operators. Another great feature of the Oatman field is that the ores so far found are very easily treated by cyanide process and so far there is nothing to fear of expensive or complicated methods.

"With the complex system of dykes and cross-fractures, which constitute the main structural feature of the field, it will no doubt take a great deal of development at a depth to give a general working knowledge of the many vein systems in this field. But as each of the operating mines continues development, it will be an easy matter to locate the several forms of ore shoots."

Recent developments with the diamond drill, especially that on the Oatman United property, have given verification of the optimistic predictions for Oatman made in 1915. Right now, with diamond-drilling explorations being pushed at maximum speed, Oatman is on the verge of important happenings. Favorable reports are being received on the progress thus far, although it must be remembered, as a whole, the rich deposits lie at fairly deep levels, and on those properties where shafts are not down at considerable depths, development is necessarily slow. However, on the claims where operations reached the lower levels before the war, the diamond drill's searching analysis may be expected to produce profitable results at any time. On some properties, the advent of the drill has allowed exploration from the surface without the use of shafts.

A HIGH-GRADE DISTRICT.

One important element entering into the expansion of the Oatman district is the general type of men who are behind the more prominent companies. As a rule, they are men of high character and experience in the mining work, and have entered the Oatman field after careful investigation. The stock issues of the majority of the companies are listed on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange and subject to its regulations. Many of these securities will be listed on the San Francisco Exchange.

"OATMAN HAS ARRIVED."

Highly enthusiastic over the outlook for the busy camp of Oatman, General Manager W. B. Phelps of the Tom Reed Gold Mines Company paid a hurried visit to Los Angeles yesterday and spoke convincingly of recent sensational developments there.

"Oatman has arrived," said Mr. Phelps, "and from now on you can expect to see things hum. The big boom in the Oatman camp that was interrupted by the World War is under way for sure this time, and in my opinion a number of new gold mines are in the making right now. The public must not overlook the fact that two of America's greatest gold mines—United Eastern and Tom Reed—are located in Oatman and have distributed millions in dividends to fortunate stockholders. And yet the recent discoveries made by the Oatman United and others convince me that the vast ore deposits in this district have hardly been scratched and that the possibilities for the future are tremendous."

Questioned regarding the San Francisco Gold Mines Company, with which he is connected, Phelps said: "Our drill is on the ground and operations will be in charge of Mr. Quinn, the man who conducted the drilling on Oatman United that resulted in the recent sensational discoveries. Our property adjoins the Oatman United and the surface indications are very encouraging. Our drill will operate from the surface, and we have ample funds with which to carry on an exhaustive development campaign. We were very fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Harvey N. Hammond, superintendent of the Oatman United and discoverer of the Oatman United's big vein. Of equal importance is Herman C. Zulch, United States Mineral Surveyor and consulting engineer for the Tom Reed Gold Mines Company, who will have charge of the engineering work on the San Francisco property. I have great hopes for this new company, and my associates and myself are going to bend every effort to turn this prospect into a real mine."

SIGNS OF SPRING AT PRODUCE MART.

NEW PRODUCTS, INCREASED OFFERINGS HERALD THE SEASON'S ADVENT.

The first signs of spring were apparent at the Los Angeles produce market last week, according to the official summary issued yesterday by the United States Bureau of Markets. New products offered and increased supplies in many lines were the forerunners of the changing season. "The first asparagus of the season," says the report, "was sold in small lots at prices ranging from 80 cents to $1.50 per pound. New potatoes are arriving in larger quantities, but the quality is only fair at best and the stock moved slowly at 8 to 12 cents per pound. Rhubarb became more plentiful and prices dropped about 50 cents per loose box.

"Bunched vegetables, cabbage, cauliflower and lettuce continued to advance or decline with the day's offerings; but all of the products mentioned were a trifle higher at the end of the week than at the beginning. Compared with a year ago, bunched vegetables are much higher, cabbage a year ago sold at 65 cents to 75 cents per field crate compared with $1.50, $1.75 today; cauliflower is at practically the same levels as last year; and lettuce is much higher this season, selling at $2, $2.50 per field crate, compared with 35 cents to 75 cents a year ago.

"Celery prices show but little change from a week ago. For the most part, local stock is of poor quality and is in poor demand. A small amount of San Diego section celery has been selling from cold storage at prices ranging from $7.50 to $8.50. The quality of this stock is very good and is in fair demand by the better class of trade.

"Tomatoes and pepper prices show a slight decline, but there is no decided break in price. Supplies of tomatoes are liberal; and compared with last year, prices are about 50 cents to 75 cents lower per repacked lug.

"The orange market advanced slightly during the past week, the best special brands averaging 25 cents per box higher than last week, and packing-house culls in field crates range from 25 cents to 50 cents per box higher. Although supplies of low-grade stock are liberal, they are not so heavy as last week. Tangerine supplies were practically exhausted early in the week; and toward the end of the week they were still light, which resulted in a price advance of 2 to 3 cents per pound on fancy stock. Good lemons are in better demand than they have been for some time; but stock or ordinary quality shows no change in price. Grapefruit prices are unchanged except for Imperial Valley fruit, which is offered in larger quantities and at slightly lower prices.

"Practically no price changes in apples were recorded during the week, and in general the movement was good. Storage holdings still run heavier than a year ago, 406,733 boxes being reported in storage on February 25 this season compared with 346,554 boxes a year ago. However, the difference in storage holdings is being rapidly offset by the heavier movement out of storage this season and the continued lighter receipts. During the past week only seven cars arrived and one was diverted, compared with fourteen arrivals and two diversions the same week last year.

"There was a decline of approximately 50 cents per hundredweight in both white and brown onions during the week, partly because of heavier receipts and partly because of Australian importations. Reports of frost damage to the Texas Bermuda onion crop stopped the downward trend and steadied the market, and at the end of the week there was a tendency to go higher rather than lower. Receipts were heavy, seventeen cars arriving, of which four were diverted, compared with only two arrivals for the corresponding week a year ago. Storage holdings on February 25 were 5720 sacks, or only 560 sacks lighter than a week ago. A year ago on the same date there were 39,030 sacks in storage, or 3850 less than the previous week. The light receipts a year ago were offset by a heavy movement from storage, while this season's heavy receipts cut down the use of stored onions.

"Receipts of white potatoes were heavier than during the corresponding week a year ago, 112 cars arriving, of which nineteen were diverted. In general the receipts this year have run heavier than last year throughout the winter months. Prices have shown but little fluctuation, except russets, which are slightly higher than a week ago. At the present time strictly fancy Burbanks are very scarce, and considerable inferior stock is coming in and selling at a much lower price than the better offerings.

"There have been practically no changes in sweet-potato prices, but a dull market prevails. Considerable stock has been re-sorted, and there has been a heavy loss from decay. Buying has been light and supplies tended to accumulate rather than decrease."

INCOME TAX FACTS.

Lack of simplicity and definiteness in the 1921 tax forms will virtually necessitate guesswork returns on the part of many taxpayers who have bought or sold government obligations in the past year, the National Bank of Commerce in New York says. The bank in the March number of its magazine, Commerce Monthly, declares that the new tax forms do not explain to such taxpayers how to determine their tax liability, and it shows how the labor of preparing their returns may in certain cases be minimized.

"Taxpayers who have bought and sold government obligations during 1921 will find the new tax forms quite troublesome," it says. "These forms require persons who have bought or sold such securities during the year to attach a schedule showing their holdings by periods. In this respect the new forms fall far short of the desired simplicity, and even fail to make clear the prescribed method of determining taxable interest on government obligations."

The bank points out that the elaborate schedule of varying holdings of taxable issues of war obligations required on the 1918 tax forms proved so difficult to administer that the Revenue Bureau abandoned it during 1919 and 1920 and based the computation of taxes directly on the amount of interest received.

"The resulting simplification was hailed as a godsend by thousands of distressed taxpayers," it says. "The reversion in the forms for 1921 to the schedule of holdings by periods appears to be due to the bueran's belief that its interpretation of the law in the 1919 and 1920 forms was unwarranted, although that interpretation alone is administratively practicable.

"Moreover—and most unfortunately—"the instructions on forms 1040 and 1120 fail to enlighten the taxpayer as to the required method of determining taxable interest on government obligations. The bureau contents itself with the direction: 'If you have bought or sold during the year, attach statement showing holdings by periods.' Inevitably many taxpayers must seek expert advice or leave the determination of their tax liability in the first instance to the revenue authorities.

"The bureau's interpretation of the statute does not, however, necessitate the preparation of a schdule in all cases in which government war obligations have been bought or sold. If the taxpayer's holdings were at no time during the taxable year in excess of the principal amounts the interest on which is exempted, it is obvious that there is no taxable interest. And on the other hand, if the holdings were not at any time during the year less than the exempted amounts, then the interest received on such exempted amounts may be deducted from the total received, and only the remainder will be taxable. The bureau has let it be known that in such cases it will accept, in lieu of the detailed schedule of holdings by periods, a statement that holdings were continuously below, or in excess of, the exempted amounts as the case may be; but it has unfortunately not made its requirements clear on the form itself.

"Not a few investors found the determination of taxable Liberty Bond interest on the 1918 forms too troublesome to warrant their continued holding of war obligations. The forms for 1919 and 1920 in large measure obviated this difficulty. But the lack of simplicity and definiteness in the 1921 forms in this respect will annoy taxpayers, will virtually necessitate guesswork returns in many cases, and will tend to increase dissatisfaction with the administration of the income tax law."

THE STICK COMES BACK.

P. J. Darre, Copenhagen, Den., a manufacturer of canes, umbrella-handles and riding-crops, says that his business with this country has increased surprisingly and he believes that American men and women are adopting canes as a result of their war-time observations in Europe, where the custom is so general. He also says that the increasing use of canes by women is very noticeable to the manufacturer.

"The United States did not become an important outlet for my product until two years ago," said Mr. Darre. "The only explanation I have is the possibility that your returned soldiers are adopting here the custom which flourishes throughout Europe. And then we are beginning to realize how popular canes have become among women. Americans apparently prefer canes of beechwood, while in Denmark, maple is the favorite.—[New York Times.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—The action of the securities markets this week on the most comprehensive dealings of the year to date, evidently was influenced by many signs of betterment in various branches of trade and industry.

To a considerable extent this was true of the commodity markets, although surface conditions in some of the leading staples, cotton, for example, suggested an overbought or widely extended position.

Trading in stocks retained much of its professional character, but even the speculative demand ran towards rails and industrials of the types which have emerged more or less successfully from the many readjustments of the past year.

The turn into March witnessed a further increase in the production of iron and steel, and resumption of mining operations in the Montana district, coupled with better prices quoted for copper, suggested a distinct revival of interest in the metal trade.

Pursuant to the conservative policy adopted by the directors of industrial companies, more dividend disbursements were suspended. The most noteworthy of these affects two steel companies and one of the prominent miscellaneous group—United Retail Stores.

Opinions regarding the immediate course of the [illegible] were somewhat [illegible] veys of prospective [illegible] viewed by the Federal Board and the Dep[illegible] Commerce, encouraged [illegible] er productive interest.

Improvement in the [illegible] trade situation was [illegible] expressed by the [illegible] eign currencies, [illegible] this gain was forfeited [illegible] ter part of the week [illegible] South American [illegible] accompanied by the [illegible] another fairly large [illegible] Argentine Republic.

10 YEARS' DIVIDENDS IN 4 MONTHS!!

$414 on each $1000 invested paid to unit holders in Foster's Optimo Syndicate between November 15 and February 15

If Foster's Optimo investors had kept their money out at ordinary sav[illegible] bank interest, it would have taken them ten years to earn as much as they have earned from Optimo IN FOUR MONTHS! Since last November they have received dividends totaling $414 on each $1000 invested.

MEXIAN 9 TIMES AS BIG

Optimo has paid $414 on each $1000 invested from just one well. Foster's latest offering—MEXIAN—has nine leases and will drill nine wells.

And Mexian units cost exactly the same price as Optimo—just $100.

In Action Right Now

One of Mexian's wells is already down more than 1000 feet. Others are erecting derricks — others spudding in and still others just starting their mighty drills pounding down toward the pay sands.

Mexian's nine leases are carefully selected, not in just one, but in THREE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST OIL FIELDS—MEXIA, BRECKENRIDGE AND BUNGER.

3 BRECKENRIDGE LEASES

Optimo's well is just a modest Breckenridge producer, for she came in at 500 barrels. Mexian has three leases in Breckenridge—three times Optimo's chances in exactly the same field and with exactly the same kind of acreage.

3 MORE IN BUNGER

Add three leases, in Bunger — the field of the five oil sands, where the value of wells per barrel produced, is the greatest in all Texas.

And Then—MEXIA!

And then, to those six splendid leases add Mexian's three mighty Mexia possibilities. Had Optimo been a typical Mexia well, her 500 barrels per day would have been more nearly 500 barrels per hour. For Mexia is the field whose prodigious production has never before been equaled—the field so rich that it has literally made millions in one short year.

The Fosters drilled Optimo. The Fosters are drilling MEXIAN—nine times as big an opportunity—AND OFFERING YOU THE CHANCE TO INVEST IN IT AT EXACTLY THE SAME PRICE PER UNIT AS OPTIMO—JUST $100.

Mexian is selling fast—much faster than did Optimo—as you may well expect. It is too fine—too reasonable—too wonderful an opportunity to neglect a moment.

This coupon should be on its way to us with your name and address NOW!

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

WE OFFER FOR SALE BEAUTIFUL $150,000 CITY ESTATE FOR ONLY $90,000. $90,000.

IN THE WILSHIRE DISTRICT. $90,000. $90,000.

No expense has been spared to make this the wonder show place of Wilshire—and to lovers of fine homes, there is an irresistible appeal in the charm of this magnificent property, with its beautiful gardens, its trickling fountains and lily-covered pools, its trellises and lantern-lighted nooks, its vine-covered pergolas and shrubbery bordered walks. Truly a modern paradise of remarkable beauty, that would require years to duplicate and at a cost of many thousands of dollars. In all, there is over an acre of ground, with frontage on three paved streets, and at the highest point, with a commanding view of all Wilshire, even to the mountains. It is a magnificent mansion of the Old English type, a massive house, built and finished from carefully selected material and the finest of hardwoods and containing many novel and interesting features. The large, handsome reception hall, the specially appointed billiard-room, the fine paneled woodwork and the artistic canvas decorations, the rare lighting fixtures, the big marble bathrooms and showers, the numerous sleeping porches and the large aviary—these and hundreds of others that can only be fully appreciated by a personal inspection. Suffice it to say, you will not be disappointed. In the rear is an immense garage that will easily accommodate five cars, with ample servants' quarters above. Also laundry, outhouses, etc. This wonderful property was recently appraised at $150,000, but the owner wants quick action and has reduced the price to $90,000 unfurnished; $110,000 completely furnished. Terms if desired. Nothing like this has been offered in years. A superb city estate that heretofore has been priceless. Do not miss this rare opportunity. Arrange to see it Monday. Shown by appointment at your convenience, just phone us the hour. Ask for E. A. Weber, Main 1238.

FOR SALE—
PEERLESS HOME BUILDING & INV. CO. now has under construction several homes, some of which will be completed and for sale within a few days. These homes are of wonderful design, planned by our experts for comfort and convenience, yet stylish, attractive and mechanically correct. Construction is supervised by our general building superintendent who personally inspects all materials and workmanship, tolerating only the best; built by our own mechanics, who are the best obtainable. Painted and decorated by our own artists. All rooms are large and commodious, perfectly lighted and ventilated. Polished hardwood floors throughout. All bedrooms have 5-ft. French plate glass mirrors in doors and spacious wardrobes with outside windows, shelves and costume hangers, large separate linen closets. Our bathrooms are beautiful, with built-in dressing tables and disappearing benches, cabinet for soiled linens, built-in bath tubs, medicine cabinets with separate compartment for shaving outfit. Kitchens are so designed to save unnecessary steps, yet spacious enough for comfort and ease; built-in cabinets, ironing boards, coolers and large breakfast nooks, with especially designed furniture, electric plugs for toasters. Laundry rooms are equipped with instantaneous automatic water heaters, enameled Pony laundry trays, space for electric washing machines and refrigerators. Large living and dining-rooms, connecting. Beautiful fireplaces, book cases, mantels, plugs for floor lamps and electric sweepers. Excellent lighting fixtures in all rooms. Garages, driveways and walks in keeping with houses. Our location is ideal and our lots range in sizes from 50 to 60 ft. front and 140 ft. to 144 ft. in depth and have shade and fruit trees. Through our modern system, perfect organization and buying power, we really produce wonderful homes at very moderate prices, in fact for less than others that are not nearly as good. We therefore most cordially invite those who are contemplating buying or building a home to come to our office and give us an opportunity to point out to you the many special features, including quality of materials, workmanship, etc. If you wish to build on your own lot we will gladly assist you in designing a plan to suit your desires and build either in Glendale, Los Angeles or elsewhere. We can also assist you in financing.

—Complete improvements from the latest ideas in street trees to sewers on the high ground.

—In a district of beautiful homes.

—On some streets duplex houses and double bungalows are allowed.

THIS IS THE FASTEST SELLING SUBDIVISION IN THE WILSHIRE DISTRICT, WHICH IS NOT SURPRISING.

—The prices are unbelievably low.

—The land is being subdivided by the owners themselves.

—There are positively no middlemen's profits.

—People are realizing that the opportunity to buy these lots at the original prices is passing fast.

FOR SALE—NEW PAYROLL TOWN
ROSCOE.
GROUND FLOOR OPPORTUNITY.
Just beyond Burbank, Roscoe will grow for the same reasons that have made Glendale and Burbank grow.
Roscoe will grow faster, for it starts right; with a payroll.
Contract let this week for the new M. & M. Mfg. Co.'s plant; work begins tomorrow.
New Wasserman Mfg. Co.'s plant has progressed to the roof.
Contract let this week for extension of light and power to new townsite and the adjoining acreage; officials say this is the largest extension contract in this district for two years.
Now that small parcels are available to settlers, with all utilities, sales will be rapid. Late sales of acreage include: W. W. Burns, 3 acres; Mary Livingstone, one acre; W. M. Slade two acres; C. C. Duncan, two acres; A. B. Watkins, one acre; W. L. Shultz, 1½ acres. Such settlers will soon make a town.
Acres with gas, water, electricity, near 8 grade school, boulevard, town, bus service, $900; terms. Sure to make you money.
Factory employees must have homes; opportunity here for builders. It takes $5 worth of housing for each $1 in factories; figure this out.
Residence and business lots at prices and on terms that will profit you. Don't fail to investigate this bona-fide opportunity at once.
If you wait till the town is completed, it will be the other fellow that makes the money.

FOR SALE—
GENTLEMAN'S COUNTRY HOME and
COMBINATION STOCK RANCH.

This famous old ranch, comprising over 5000 acres, lying 30 miles east of San Diego, is being offered for sale for the first time in over 20 years. It is one of the most beautiful spots as well as productive ranches in the Southland. Connected with the paved highway by private road built by owner at cost of $8000, it is most accessible, still by topography is virtually isolated from surrounding properties—hence a most exclusive spot for one seeking rest and recreation. A beautiful mountain valley 1500 feet above sea level, and surrounded by mountains.

There are some 2000 acres rich tillable land, with approx. 700 a. now under plow. 60 a. alfalfa, underlaid with mile concrete irrigation pipe. Three pumping plants, with three large concrete reservoirs holding 350,000 gals. furnish present water supply. Two creeks flow through ranch, supply ample water for stock and other purposes, while numerous springs abound. The rim of the valley is dotted with beautiful live oak trees. The ranch is fenced and cross-fenced.

The improvements are ample and exceedingly good. Could scarcely be reproduced for $30,000. Owner's residence, known as the "Lodge," has 18-inch adobe walls; 7 spacious rooms and bath, is beautifully finished and sets on a knoll, giving fine view of valley and surrounding mountains. Superintendent's house of 7 r. and bath. Bunkhouse with club r. and shower bath. Big galvanized iron horse and hay barn, concrete base; two concrete silos, granary, milk house, garage, large hay barn with implement and cattle sheds. Scientific hog house, etc. Also several domestic wells with windmills.

Several hundred head cattle and hogs can safely be carried, and as a combination stock, hay and grain ranch I doubt if its equal can be found in Southern California; while to the man who wants sport, this property affords much, as deer are plentiful; also small game, such as quail, wild doves and rabbits.

There are now approximately 300 head of cattle, including 3 registered bulls, over 100 hogs, some 20 head horses; a full equipment of tools, implements and machinery, including tractor. The price for this splendid property complete is $150,000. Might consider some choice Los Angeles or Chicago income on cash basis.

C. B. STARR, Sole Agent, 11681.

FOR SALE—
CARLSBAD-BY-THE-SEA
HEALTH AND CONTENTMENT
may be had at Carlsbad, where the mild even climate will make you forget your worries and pains. Situated on railway and State highway, on a high mesa, overlooking the sea. Extreme heat or cold are unknown here. Carlsbad has a fertile soil and an efficient water system. Limes, avocados, lemons, figs, grapes, all sorts of small fruits and especially peas, squash, peppers, etc., grow to perfection during the winter months. Cannot be excelled for growing poultry. Once you see the beautiful surroundings and experience the wonderful climate, you will realize that here is indeed YOUR DREAM PLACE.

MINES AND MINING—Miscellaneous.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING.

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

Don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling, with large and expensive machinery. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "square of its diameter."

So drill small-diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machine ever built for territories from 800 to 2500 feet deep. Write for particulars and circulars.

FOR SALE—

S. H. CLINTON CO., 13441.

Apartment house of over 35 apartments. Direct from owner of building. You can buy this practically new furniture and secure a good lease at a very reasonable rent. The location is one of the best for high-class apartment houses in the city. A beautiful house, a safe business, a splendid income can be secured for a cash payment of only $25,000.

Apartment house located in sight of Westlake Park. 32 large airy light apartments, a beautiful lobby, direct phones, steam heat, and a net income of over $1,400. More than 5-years lease at a little over $500 a month rent. You will want to hold on to this lovely house, but the lease is easily transferable. Total price is right, and we can put you in possession for a cash payment of only $15,000. You cannot beat this investment and besides you have a wonderful home in the exclusive part of Los Angeles.

Apartment house of 90 rooms in a splendid down-town location, a long lease at only $600 a month rent. A net income of around $1400. An easy house to run, with all modern conveniences and a beautiful lobby. Total price $35,000 and $20,000 cash will put you in possession.

Hotel of 65 rooms, located in the heart of the business district, beautiful ground floor lobby, modern in every respect, and with 16 baths. This house is in an elegant brick building on a corner, every room light. A good lease at only $450 per month, a cash payment of $15,000 puts you in possession, and you will be glad you have found this house.

Hotel of 40 beautiful bedrooms, a lovely dining room, splendidly equipped kitchen, lobby and reception rooms and plenty of private baths. This is the swellest small family hotel in the city, and is located in exclusive residence district. The furniture in this house three years ago cost almost as much as you can buy the good lease and cheap rent, and net income of $700 per month for now. You can take over this wonderful little place for a cash payment of only $10,000. This is some buy for you and we don't believe it can be equalled in Los Angeles.

Hotel of 32 rooms, on West side that has a splendid income. You can purchase this house with a cash payment of only $3,000 and secure a five year lease at $150 per month.

Bungalow Court of 8 units, completely furnished, and showing an income of $330 a month. This is a bargain and we are handling it for an apartment house owner, client of ours, who cannot give the property her personal attention. A cash payment of $9000 puts you in possession, the small balance can be paid in monthly payments.

FOR SALE—
APARTMENT-HOUSE, By Owner.
I own the furnishings and lease of a 70-room house on the west side, in an exclusive neighborhood, on a very good street, surrounded by fashionable homes. I cater only to the very best and select class of people, I seldom have a vacancy; in fact, my house has been full for a long time. It is arranged in single and double apartments, mostly single; private bath in each apartment; steam heat. Rent $400, with a five-year lease, direct phones in each apartment; small, beautifully arranged dressing rooms in each apartment. My furnishings are in excellent condition, also the rugs and carpets, and I am clearing close to $1000 every month, besides my own apartment. I realize the inflated prices on the majority of houses in Los Angeles and know that my place is worth the money. My price is $25,000, one-half cash down, and I will make liberal terms to the right party on the balance. Address S, box 152, TIMES OFFICE.

WANTED — CAPITAL. WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY—
—IT is an established fact that the earning capacity of financing syndicates exceeds the imagination of those not versed in the science of investing money. Profits in no other business equal that of financing syndicates.
We are organizing a large financial syndicate to underwrite commercial and industrial enterprises of merit. We have A-1 financial connections and an excellent and approved plan. The profits are sure and large, with absolute safety. We have an opening in an official capacity for a business man of ability and integrity having from $10,000 to $25,000 cash to invest. INVESTIGATE. References exchanged. In reply please give phone number. For appointment address D, box 558, TIMES BRANCH.

AN ACTUAL SACRIFICE—BIG OPPORTUNITY. Owing to plausible personal reasons the two owners of a California closed corporation will dispose of immediately at big sacrifice a "going" business in manufacturing and marketing of the most spectacularly attractive automobile accessory; already proven; positively never been equaled for retail and big State rights possibilities. Our gross profits approximate $60,000 in eight months' work. Moderate fortune can be made, as United States practically yet untouched; will sell outright manufacturing contracts and patent, with all perfected paraphernalia for $12,000; some terms; or trade for unincumbered security of equal market value. This is a real proposition, so don't answer unless you mean business. Address for appointment, MR. McDONALD, P.O. Box 1274, Los Angeles.

A WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY. Party with $15,000, no agents or promoters need answer. Manufacturing end of enterprise already taken over by one of largest concerns in Southern California. Entire sales end in my hands. This proposition is absolutely clean. See Mr. Wilson, formerly manager, The Luther Burbank Co., Monday; Room 506 STOCK EXCHANGE BUILDING.

WANTED—
Men with experience in the GROCERY or PRINTING business, who can make an investment, either with or without their services, in a California corporation located in Los Angeles. Address T, box 201, TIMES OFFICE.

HAVE unlimited quantity of one of oldest building materials in world, but never introduced here. Can compete in price with brick and terra cotta. Fireproof. Especially adapted for schools and fine residences. Want to connect with high class promoter to organize building and owning syndicate. Address V, box 32, TIMES OFFICE.

WANTED—Man under 50 years to take active interest and official position. Unusual opportunity. Rigid investigation. Master Mason preferred. $1000 required. Particulars interview only. Address E, box 154, TIMES OFFICE.

THE GREATEST INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITY EVER OFFERED IN TEXAS FOR BIG MONEY ON SMALL INVESTMENT.
Crane and Ector counties, known as the Odessa oil and potash field is now on the verge of the greatest development campaign ever known in this State. Millions of dollars will flow into this immediate section within the next 12 months. Some of the best and widely known geologists have made a most searching and scientific survey of these counties and it is their opinion the greatest potash beds underlie this section, second to none in the world. There are now six locations made for thorough tests, to begin actual operations by March 15th. Inside of 12 months the whole world will have its eye on the Odessa oil and potash fields. The U. S. Geological Survey is interested to the extent they have agreed to keep a competent man on the ground to log each well as it goes down.
We own lease on 5000 acres in the northern part of Crane county, adjoining the block of acreage where the first well will be spudded in. We are subdividing 2500 acres into 20-acre tracts and offering to the public at $10 per acre. We are selling this for the purpose of development. We have in our possession a geological report from one of the best-known geologists in the mid-continent field, who makes the broad statement that we are directly on one of the most pronounced oil structures in the State and he believes we have the opportunity of developing one of the greatest oil fields yet developed in this State. This is a two-chance proposition. If we strike oil, 20 acres will make you a fortune. If we strike potash we are in the richest spot in the United States. We believe we are going to get both. Remember we only have 125 of these 20-acre tracts and if interested and want one or more of these tracts prompt action will be necessary. If you live at a great distance you had better wire in your reservation and forward bank draft by first mail. This is your first and last chance to get in on the biggest investment ever offered in this State. L. E. LASSETER, Trustee, P. O. Box 1113, Fort Worth, Texas.

Quick Work.

Five workmen recently brought a 148-foot smokestack to the ground in fifty-five minutes by a new method. This stack, on Staten Island, N. Y., measured forty-seven feet in diameter at the base and weighed 350 tons. Three openings were made at the base and wooden blocks, four feet high and four inches in diameter, were inserted as shorings. A gap, four feet high, was then made in more than half of the circumference by removing the bricks. Two of the shoring blocks were removed and the center block, soaked with kerosene, was burned out. The stack crashed with such force that some of the bricks were buried two feet in the ground.—[Popular Mechanics Magazine.

A Technical Description.

It takes a business man to describe a costume to his wife. A man of commerce, after seeing a very taking dress on a very taking young lady recently, informed the partner of his joys that:

"It was fine. The dress was made of some kind of cloth, with some sort of trimming. It was a sort of lilac or shrimp pink in color. She wore one of those hats you sometimes see on women, and altogether gave an effect that I wish you could have seen."—[Edinburgh Scotsman.

"Orders Is Orders."

It was on a long march north of Chateau-Thierry. At the end of a dusty day the captain ordered that every man in his command should change his undershirt. The first sergeant whispered to him that not a man possessed more undergarments than those which were at the moment adorning his person. But the captain snapped back:

"Military orders must be obeyed. Let the men change with each other."—[American Legion Weekly.

Glorious!

Up rode the elated Russian general to his commander-in-chief.

"Sir, I have the honor to announce that we have won a glorious victory."

"Hurrah! Go and take my congratulations to your troops."

"Sir, there are none left."—[American Legion Weekly.

Unlucky Coincidence.

And here's one about the Quaker whose patriotism got the better of his religious scruples and who went to war. Crawling through No Man's Land, he spied a husky German. Raising his rifle to his shoulder, he shouted:

"Friend, 'tis most unfortunate for thee, but thee standeth just where I am going to shoot."

And blazed away.—[American Legion Weekly.

Harduppe—"A dollar isn't nearly as big as it used to be."

Wigwag—"Oh, the size of a dollar depends entirely upon how many you have."—[Philadelphia Record.

STATE SOCIETY PICNICS HELD.

Oklahoma and Wyoming People Gather.

Speakers from Old Homes Are on Programs.

Southland Boosted by All Orators of Day.

Sycamore Grove was the scene of two big celebrations yesterday when 1000 former Oklahomans and as many members of the Wyoming State Society met to sing the praises of their old home States and to swear allegiance to the glorious Southland.

Old Glory floated above the speakers' stands of both Oklahomans and "Sage-brushers" and, as the people mingled together in the big park the only evidence of their former residence was in the colors and emblems of the badges they wore. More than 400 automobiles lined up along the curbing bespoke the prosperity of the picnickers.

Following the noon feast a brief singing and speaking program was given by the Wyoming Society and an election was held, which resulted in the choice of the following officers for 1922: President, Jack Rogers; vice-president, Hugh Hines; secretary, Mrs. Carl Jackson; treasurer, Mrs. R. A. Smiley. The retiring officials were: President, W. E. Van Housen; vice-president, Sayre Hanson; secretary, Mrs. May D. Hepburn; treasurer, Mrs. Emma Rogers. It was announced that the next picnic of the Wyoming Society will be held at Bixby Park, Long Beach, next August 6.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

After the singing of "America," led by Henry J. Brubaker, an address of welcome to the Oklahomans was made by Milton Bryan, president of the society, who spoke of Southern California as the white spot and the garden spot of the world.

"We can't throw too many bouquets at the Southland — and there's never a lack of blossoms here to make up the bouquets," said Mr. Bryan. "The people of the country, evidently, have been hearing some of the nice things about this section—in fact, they have almost captured this garden spot, and it's getting so that a native son is an alien in his own land."

C. H. DeFord, who was introduced as the first and best Sheriff of Oklahoma county, said:

"Fellow-Oklahomans, you know what Pershing said when he landed in France. He said, 'Lafayette, we are here.' Well, Oklahomans—we are here. Also, I think we're all about as glad to be here as Jack Pershing was to be in France. I thank you."

OTHER SPEAKERS.

Among the other speakers were Dudley Hendricks, formerly of Oklahoma City; H. W. Stubbeman of Norman, Okla.; William Grimes, former U.S. Marshal of Oklahoma; Justice J. W. Summerfield and J. Nolan Harvey, who was a passenger on the second train that went into Oklahoma City in 1889.

President Bryan introduced David R. Boyd, who for sixteen years was president of the Oklahoma University. Mr. Boyd spoke of education in general and of education in Oklahoma in particular.

Mr. Parsons announced that an Oklahoma social reunion will be held the fourth Monday evening in March, at the Angelus Hotel hall.

Other picnics held at Sycamore Grove yesterday were those of the McHenry county (Ill.) Weenona (Ill.) and Elgin (Ill.) societies.

Wheat for Russ Famine Victims Reaches Harbor

With twenty-five tons of wheat, destined for famine sufferers in the Russian Caucasus, the purse seine fishing boat Humanity, in command of Gusti Pesutich, arrived at Los Angeles Harbor yesterday from Ensenada. The cargo of wheat was donated to the Near East Relief Commission by members of the Russian settlement at Gaudalupe, seventy-five miles inland from Ensenada.

Triffon Belousoff of Petrograd, special representative of the Russion Famine Relief Commission, accompanied the wheat shipment on the Humanity and yesterday talked on conditions as he found them in Lower California.

Mr. Belousoff, a member of the Russian nobility before the war, declared that revolutions, coupled with adverse weather conditions, cut all the crops in the agricultural regions of Lower California almost 50 per cent. The Gaudalupe colony, he explained, is composed entirely of former political prisoners who volunteered to go into exile with their families following the completion of terms in the Siberian prison camps.

The wheat from Gaudalupe will go to Russia, together with 2000 tons of other foodstuffs, clothing and medicines donated by Southern Californians about April 1. A Shipping Board vessel will be assigned to the task of transporting the materials overseas.

TRIES TO HANG SELF.

Convict Leaps From Cot in Cell; Crude Knot Fails.

Worry because Elias Ninigean, a prisoner in the County Jail, had not received word from his wife after being convicted in Judge Hauser's court for grand larceny, led him to tie a crude hangman's knot and attempt suicide yesterday.

The prisoner, who has an upper cot in tank No. 8, bent a belt and rope together, made a noose, fastened it about his neck and plunged to the floor. His cellmates called for help. Ninigean lost consciousness, but recovered.

The man will be arraigned for sentence before Judge Hauser tomorrow.

CHARGED WITH LARCENY.

A beaded hand bag valued at $20 landed Charles L. Browne, a real estate salesman, in the City Jail charged with petty larceny yesterday. Browne was arrested in a department store and admitted the theft, according to the police.

JORDAN LAUDS ARMS PARLEY.

Brings America and Japan Together, He Says.

Hopes Civilization Council Will be Result.

Asserts Wilson Failed When He Tried Too Much.

The Washington peace conference, declared Dr. David Starr Jordan, president-emeritus of Stanford University, at yesterday's noon luncheon of the City Club, was a success in doing the two things that were expected of it—the first being to prick the bubble of rivalry and hatred between Japan and the United States, and second, to bring about a great reduction in the expenses of the governments of the leading nations.

"It is my hope," said Dr. Jordan, "that there will grow out of the Washington conference a Council of Civilization, which shall include the Washington conference and the League of Nations, this council to bring the nations of the world together to end war. The treaties agreed upon at Washington are not important except as they are an example of nations working together for their common good.

"World peace cannot come through force of arms. The only basis for peace is a decent respect for the opinions of mankind. The Treaty of Versailles is impossible of execution and cannot stand."

PRAISE FOR WILSON.

Dr. Jordan paid a tribute to former President Wilson, whose words and high ideals, the speaker said, would live and who failed only because he tried alone to bring all of his hopes into effect at once.

The California alien law, the speaker declared, is in his opinion unconstitutional, and he said that its effect was to bring about a maximum of irritation between Japan and the United States and a minimum of efficiency. The Japanese government, Dr. Jordan declared, would be willing if all of the Japanese in California returned to Japan.

"Japan," said Dr. Jordan, "is, I believe, willing to work with the United States, as was shown at the Washington conference, to put an end to this talk of war between the two nations. Japan naturally desires to be made a party to any arrangements between the two countries. She knows that a war would be fatal to Japan and would not injure the United States very much. The Japanese might burn Los Angeles or San Francisco, in event of war, but we could burn Tokio. And what would be the use of it all? War itself never settled anything."

ENDS SECRET DIPLOMACY.

Another beneficial effect of the Washington conference, the speaker said, was to put an end to secret diplomacy. "Secretary Hughes does not work that way," said Dr. Jordan. Old-fashioned diplomacy was a poker game.

"The World War showed that navies do not protect commerce and are not built or needed for that purpose. Navies cost more than the commercial fleets they are supposed to protect. I'd like to see Henry Ford take over all the navies of the world and junk them or turn them into flivvers."

Former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has notified Secretary Dykstra of the City Club that he (Mr. McAdoo) will arrive in Los Angeles next Tuesday. He will make his home here and will practice law. Secretary Dykstra is planning to have Mr. McAdoo appear as a speaker before the club at an early date. Former Mayor Peters of Boston, who is spending his vacation in Southern California, will speak at the City Club luncheon the 17th inst.

POCKETS PICKED.

Cashier Jostled In Elevator by Four Men; Money Gone.

Crowding against J. E. Farron, cashier for the Aggeler-Musser Seed Co., in an elevator at 620 South Spring street a gang of pickpockets yesterday morning robbed him of $1706.70 in cash and escaped. Farron was unable to give the police a good description of the thieves.

In his report to the police Farron declared that he drew $1706.70 in cash from a bank at Sixth and Spring streets and after placing the money in a bill-fold walked to his office at 620 South Spring street. Four well-dressed young men entered the elevator with him he stated, and when he attempted to leave the lift, crowded with him through the door. When he entered his office he discovered that his bill-fold and the money had been taken.

PEAK OF INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC PASSES.

With 2740 cases of influenza reported to the City Health Department during the week ending last night, it is considered by the local authorities that the peak of the epidemic has passed. The crest, it is believed, was reached on the last day of February, when the number of cases registered in the office of quarantine inspection reached 693. The death rate remains low, a total of thirty-nine deaths from influenza and forty-five from pneumonia being reported during the seven days ending Saturday at 6 p.m. New cases of pneumonia developing were set at eighty-two. The light form of influenza which has been manifest from the commencement of the epidemic and which runs its course in three days, approximately, persists, according to the health officials.

FIRE DAMAGES CIRCUS.

BOOM MOTORBOAT GAME.

Coast Magazine Proposes Pacific Coast Championship Race to Be Staged in the South.

Back in the snow-mantled East, where the lakes are frozen and the rivers solid with ice in the winter, motorboat owners are waking to the advantages possessed by Southern California as a racing center. According to information in the possession of Frank A. Garbutt, chairman of the executive committee of the Los Angeles Athletic Club Motorboat Racing Association, several eastern owners are planning to come to California next season.

Through the instrumentality of the Los Angeles Athletic Club Motorboat Association, which is alive to the possibilities of the sport in this section of the country, eastern papers and trade journals devoted to yachting and motorboating, have been acquainted with the facts. They have proved receptive and have devoted considerable publicity in the columns of their organs to what Southern California has done and is doing to promote water speed racing.

OUGHT TO HAVE IT.

But the last token of the L.A. A.C. success is heralded by the Pacific Motorboat, a motorboat magazine, published in Seattle. This publication, one of the leading ones of the country in its line, comes out editorially and says that Southern California, due to its progressiveness, is entitled to hold the Pacific Coast championship races here instead of in the north as heretofore, notably Seattle, Portland, Astoria and San Francisco.

As an earnest of its editorial Pacific Motorboat proposes to furnish a perpetual championship cup emblematic of the free-for-all championship of the Pacific Coast to be raced for all time under the auspices of the Los Angeles Athletic Club Motorboat Racing Association. The only condition attached to this is that it will devote all of the money that can be obtained from subscriptions in the south to the purchase of this cup. The cost of white paper, printing, mailing, etc., is in excess of the subscription price, so the National Old Trails Route Across Country Accurately Charted for Motor Trekkers.

Maps to the right of 'em, maps to the left of 'em, volley and thunder the fact that American highways now hold no secrets from the wily motorist.

Officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California yesterday proudly announced that the continent is split wide open, mappily speaking, for the largest set of road maps in the world has just been completed by the club's drafting department for the use of the throttle pushers.

SOME GOOD NEWS.

Other good things for motorists were also announced by the club officers, while the announcing was good. For instance, a complete give-away of all highway conditions between Florida and California, and vice versa, in the form of strip maps is being rushed to completion at the Auto Club offices here.

Any motorist who gets tired of Florida will soon be able to slip into his flivver or what-not and shove a mean trottle Californiaward without batting an eye for the very good reason that the great route through the Southern States will be an open book to him. Every mile of the way will be shown on the maps.

OLD TRAILS ROUTE.

The National Old Trails Highway, always popular, is made doubly so for the transcontinental trekkers by the recent completion of the set of 150 maps which carries the autoist triumphantly from coast-to-coast. A new set is also ready over the Lincoln Highway.

At the present time a set of guides is being completed which will carry the tourist from Los Angeles through the Yellowstone region and along the Canadian border into the East, and back again. They all come back again, and the Auto Club has provided for the fact in its map service. A new map of all national parks in the West is also ready.

Against the coming of summer, the club has prepared a new map of the desert places of the West. This map is a guaranteed pain killer in that it will prevent much sorrow to those who are habitually

PINK SHEET NEWS SUMMARY.

AUTOMOBILES—Twelve speed kings this afternoon will renew battle on Beverly Hills saucer halted by the rain last Sunday. Tommy Milton, Jimmy Murphy, Pietro Bordino and Ralph De Palma are favorites in the opening race of the 1922 season. Many expect the world's record of 110.6 miles per hour made by Jimmy Murphy at San Carlos last December to be broken this afternoon.

Leading plants in the East report increased activity and output. As an instance of the improved situation the Hupp Motor Car Corporation shows a record of four times as many cars shipped in January, 1922 as in January, 1921. Other plants report in a similar vein.

Automobile Club completes task of mapping the highways of the country. Every road, every artery of travel, has been covered exhaustively in the maps prepared by the Auto Club.

Registrations compiled by the State bureau show Los Angeles county to have about four times as many automobiles as San Francisco county.

Ray McNamara, the long distance driver, gives some interesting facts for autoists in his "More Miles Per Gas" column.

Problems of drivers solved by James Marsh in the Owners' Service Department.

Drivers who forgot their new license plates subject to arrest and twenty-five per cent penalty.

SPORTS—Capt. Tom Marshall contributes an interesting story on duck shooting.

Los Angeles Athletic Club Motorboat Association is planning to stage a Pacific Coast championship race here this summer. Motorboat, magazine of the Northwest, proposes to put up handsome trophy emblematic of the Coast title which will be fought for each year, and is leading fight to hold race in Southern Calforna.

West Fork Trail Open for Travel, Says Camp Head

The Sierra Madre trail to Camp West Fork is open again, according to E. De Vore, manager of that camp. Telephone lines in that vicinity are again in working order.

Work is progressing slowly on the new government trail, which, when finished will leave the present automobile road to Mt. Wilson one-half mile west of the Mt. Wilson Hotel.

The Mt. Wilson Stage Company is now building a stage depot at that point. The trail will be four miles in length, and will enable fishing parties to take the Mt. Wilson stage to Mt. Wilson, and then hike directly into the middle section of the West Fork stream.

Connection is made by this trail with the through trail from Sierra Madre to the desert at the junction of the West Fork stream and the Sierra Madre desert trail. It is expected that the work on the new trail will be completed in time for the beginning of the coming trout season.

Thieves Steal Danger Signs from Streets.

Instead of "Button, button, who cut the traffic button?" it is now "Light, light, who stole the red lights?" that is worrying various officials of motordom throughout the southern part of the State, as well as locally.

Red lanterns used to mark dangerous spots on the highways, where piles of sand endanger lives, have been stolen recently, according to a report just filed by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Auto Club officials are much concerned over the matter, as the absence of red warning lights at night in some of the more dangerous spots have narrowly missed causing some serious accidents. No attempt is made at an explanation of the matter, because club officers cannot determine what use the red lanterns are to any person.

LANSING HOPES TO BUILD LIGHT CAR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LANSING (Mich.) March 4.—Speculation is rife here over rumors that W. C. Durant is to manufacture the $348 car at the Durant plant in this city. Edward Ver Linden, head of the Lansing Durant factory, is now at Miami Fla., where Mr. Durant and his family went last week for a short stay. The new car, it has been announced, is to be shown for the first time in Washington, March 9.

Los Angeles County Has Four Times as Many Machines as San Francisco.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, March 4.—California motor vehicle registration for the year which closed Jan. 1, 1922, totaled 747,122, according to a report just issued by Charles J. Chenu, director of the State Motor Vehicle Department. The 1920 registration was 597,831.

The registration, which dates back to Feb. 1, 1921, includes all types of motor vehicles with automobiles in the lead with a total of 689,620. Motorcycles registered totaled 18,582; trucks, 35,092, and trailers, 3828. The automobile registration in 1920 was 532,934, giving 1921 an increase of 156,680 machines.

Los Angeles county has the largest number of automobiles, her registration being 211,679, as compared to San Francisco, her closest rival, with 56,104 cars. Los Angeles also has the largest number of motorcycles, the total being 5816.

DELINQUENTS TO PAY THE PIPER.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, March 4. Automobile owners of California who neglected to make application for their 1922 license by March 2 will be forced to pay the delinquent penalty of 25 per cent of their license fee, Charles J. Chenu, director of the State Motor Vehicle Department, announced.

Chenu declares the delinquency law will be rigidly enforced and no excuses will be accepted. Besides being forced to pay the 25 per cent penalty, the tardy automobilists will run the risk of being arrested for failing to have their 1922 plates. He notified the police and other peace officers in all parts of the State to arrest all motorists who drive their machines with a 1921 license.

While Chenu has not made an accurate check, he doesn't believe the delinquency list will include more than 15,000 autoists.

TOMMY MILTON STARTS RACE A BIG FAVORITE.

But Eleven Other Pilots Claim That Goddess of Speed Will Pick a New King This Afternoon.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

Terrible Tommy Milton, the man who had $8000 in his hand last Sunday and then had it washed away by the rain, has a rather difficult task to perform this afternoon. The speed king who won the national championship for the 1921 season has eleven of the fastest racing men in the world to conquer in the 250-mile dash on the Beverly boards.

Twice the race was to have been. Once the opening event of the 1922 championship series did actually start; but this afternoon a dozen daring knights of the castor fumes will break away from Starter Fred J. Wagner's red banner, starting all over again for the $25,000 purse that was to have been won on February 22. The deeds of last Sunday will be forgotten. The mistakes of last Sunday will be forgiven. The race fans get practically two races for the price of one; and the speed merchants must charge their work in the matinee last week to profit and loss, or experience, or advertising, or policy adjustment.

BIG FAVORITE.

While Tommy Milton starts today as the big favorite, he is by no means a sure winner. Success in the racing sport is 90 per cent luck and 10 per cent speed and driving ability. The fans wish Milton luck and the drivers wish him luck, too, on account of

FOREIGN OUTPUT IS HITTING HIGH MARK.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—Foreign factories of the Ford Motor Company produced approximately 85,000 cars and trucks in 1921. Canada and export territory under the Ford, Ontario plant, turning out 42,348 cars and trucks. Manchester, Copenhagen, Bordeaux, Sao Paulo, Cadiz and Buenos Aires show a combined total of 42,663. During December the Buenos Aires plant assembled nearly 1000 cars, a substantial increase over November. The output at Sao Paulo also showed an increase. In 1921 Buenos Aires built more than 8000 cars; Copenhagen, 8517, and Bordeaux more than 2000.

May was the banner month at the Canadian Ford plant, when 6711 cars and trucks were produced.

The tractor plant at Cork, Ireland, built 1347 Fordson tractors, the highest month being September.

"STREAMLINE" IS EXPLAINED.

Had Its Origin in Purely Mechanical Principle.

Lessens Wind Resistance to Appreciable Extent.

And Thereby Increases the Automobile's Speed.

Buried deep in the lexicon of automotive terms is a scientific meaning for the word "streamline," that is not even hinted at by the average motorist of today, who uses the term solely with reference to the style of a motor car's body design, it is found.

The history of the streamline design is told by Harry Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company, local Velie distributors, in this way:

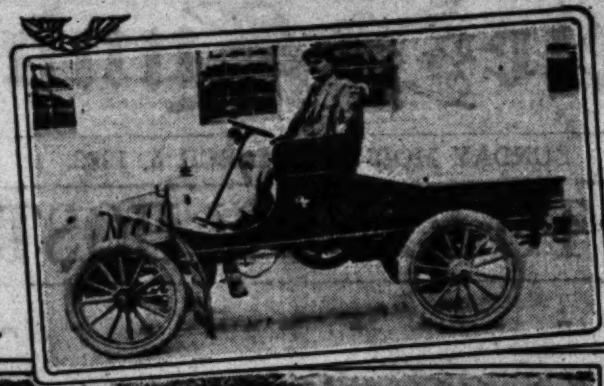
A BIG ITEM.

"It isn't news to the mechanic, of course," he says, "but the streamline idea of motor car body design had its origin in a purely mechanical principle, being first employed as a means to reduce wind resistance. Just how much of a factor this is in the speed and propelling energy of the car, this item is seldom realized by the average motorist. Suppose you had a fifty-horsepower car, capable of fifty miles per hour, for instance. It has been found that to increase that speed to sixty miles per hour another fifty horsepower would be necessary. Wind resistance is the reason.

CREATES VACUUM.

"And this resistance is much more than that of the force encountered when the wind meets you directly in the face while you are standing on a street corner. A vacuum is created by the eddying of air currents around an obstacle. When this factor was first taken into consideration by automotive engineers, an internationally famous race driver went so far as to fill in with wood the rear of the I-beam car axles to get the streamline effect that would reduce this vacuum. He even designed a special radiator cap that would have less wind-resisting service.

"While the streamline body design for passenger automobiles was a natural development, therefore, it was soon realized that this method was also uniquely adaptable for improving the appearance of the car. In fact, the idea was carried so far that the term streamline is now almost analogous with style in motor car design, in spite of the fact that it has a much more important reason for emphasis."



No Wonder W. J. Burt's Going to Celebrate.

Some difference between the first car built by the Auburn folks and the one the Burt company will hold open house for this week. The gentleman examining the new Auburn, the first one to arrive in Los Angeles, is Judge Warren L. Williams.

AUBURN TICKLES BURT.

W. J. Burt is probably one of the proudest men on gasoline row with the arrival of the Auburn beauty-six sport model, which first made its bow at the New York show and created a lot of comment and attention from the many thousands who attended the show.

Since there is to be no automobile show in Los Angeles, W. J. Burt Motor Car Company is having an open house week at their place of business, Pico and Hope streets, and will be open until 11 p.m. every night with music and dancing to entertain those who desire to come.

Invitations are extended to everyone interested in the latest creation in automobile construction, and this sport model is really good for sore eyes and is probably one of the most complete automobiles ever turned out as a stock job by any manufacturer in the United States.

Its lines are beautiful, its trimming the best and its equipment complete, which consists of built-in adjustable wind deflectors, cowl ventilator adjustable from the seat; eleven-inch, barrel headlights, barrel side lights, parking light on left, rear fender, five disc wheels, five cord tires, two spring bumpers, four shock absorbers, muffler cut-out, and the luggage compartment built back of the front seat forms a foot rest in the tonneau. The standard color is in Napier green with light panel in the doors all in gold lead striping.

MILTON STARTS AS A FAVORITE.

his work last week and the fact that he practically won the race before the rain made it necessary for Referee Ed R. Maier to call the event no race; but the goddess of speed, Kid Mercury's baby sister, is a temperamental thing and what she will do to Tommy Milton and his fast Durant special no one knows.

If the jinx can hit Tommy, it should today. He has the aroma of garlic and the fragrance of the shamrock to fight off. That combination should be enough to spoil the chances of any driver ever seen on the race course.

JOIN FORCES.

The smiling Irishman, Jimmy Murphy, and the daring Italian, Pietro Bordino, have become allies. They are arrayed against the house of Milton and each hopes to help the other beat the champion in the fast ride today.

Murpy's attitude is quite different today from what it was a week ago. Last Sunday the little Deusenberg driver was for sending Bordino home without a dime and he had no use for any foreigners. Today he says Bordino is a regular fellow, he likes the Fiat car, he says that Italy is a nice place and he hopes that Bordino wins enough money in America to become a padroni and sport the finest wine cellar in Europe.

ONE GAME BOY.

It all happened when Jimmy was behind Pietro when the Italian skidded all over the course last Sunday. Murphy admired the way the Italian handled his car and he was forced to admit that Pietro proved himself to be one game boy. The next day he paid a visit to Pietro and Ireland and Italy immediately became allies. During the week Jimmy has been coaching Pietro on driving the boards. He has tipped him off to a lot of the little tricks of the speedway game and the Italian now feels that he can do a lot better than he did last week, when all he had was speed and hope—having to stop three times for tires and falling behind cars that were too slow to get his dust.

Murphy said last night that he believed that both he and Bordino had eliminated the trouble that caused them to burn up tires in the curtailed race last Sunday. If they can keep tires on their cars, they will in all probability give Milton a fast ride as the trio put up one of the greatest speed exhibitions ever seen when they kissed hubs for the first twenty laps of the race last week.

Milton goes into the race full of confidence. Tommy knows that he has the speed to run away from every car on the course with the possible exception of Bordino and he knows that Bordino's speed is no good because if the Italian tries to battle him on the turns, he will chew off his shoes. Milton also knows that every other driver in the pack knows his speed and they may change their tactics in the race.

There are two men in the classic who did not show what they had last week. Joe Thomas was in third place when the race was called but he said last night that he was playing with Harry Hartz when he let the little fellow pass him. If that was the case, Joe Thomas had a lot more speed under the hood than he showed in the race.

HAD SOME MORE.

Harry Hartz, the youngster who startled the race fans by playing up in the fast company and finished the race in second place, claims that he also had more speed than he cared to show and he says that Joe Thomas was wide open and would never have allowed him to go past him if he could have helped it. As a result it sounds like Harry and Joe were preparing to put up a nice little battle all by themselves this afternoon.

Eddie Hearne and Roscoe Sarles stayed back and took it easy. Both drivers figured that the race would not go the full distance and they took a chance on its being called before the prize money could be awarded. They didn't want to take any chances with their cars and they will go into the race today in better shape than ever.

Art Klein and Eddie Miller were misfortune's favorites last week. They both went hopelessly out of the race; but they had rain checks. Today they will start with a clean slate and their chances for the first cut out of the $25,000 purse are better than they were last Sunday.

WILL BE FAST.

Never has a race offered such possibilities from the spectator's standpoint. That the race will be fast is a certainty. Fred Wagner, the veteran starter, says that it will go better than 111 miles an hour. That means a new record for the Los Angeles Speedway.

A. M. Young, manager of the speedway, said last night that with those who would be out today on the rain checks issued last week, and those who had made reservations during the past week, in addition to those who would come in for the race today from all over Southern California, the crowd promised to break all records for the local speed plant. Holders of rain checks, which were attached to all tickets, will be admitted to the reservations they held last Sunday, when the event was halted on account of the rain. Manager Young said last night that those purchasing tickets at the course today should buy them only from the official ticket sellers who will all wear badges.

MOTOR DEMAND HOLDS STRONG.

a Michigan corporation, capitalized at $500,000, has been organized in Flint to make the Mason one-ton truck which will be known as the "Mason road king." The plant will have 35,000 square feet of floor space and will have a capacity of thirty trucks a day. Arthur G. Mason, president of the company, says that capacity production will be reached by the middle of summer. The truck will sell for about $1000.

"Nash Motors has risen from twenty-fourth to eighth place in the automobile industry in volume of business, and is today one of the six organizations manufacturing 84 per cent of all motor cars made," said C. W. Nash, president. Mr. Nash announces the promotion of Charles B. Voorhis to vice-president and director of sales of the Nash Motors Company, and simultaneously Mr. Voorhis announces the appointment of Earl H. McCarthy, formerly of the Studebaker corporation, as sales manager.

COMPLETES BIG ROAD MAP DRIVE

getting lost when they are far from home.

DO AWAY WITH IT.

Getting lost in the desert, particularly in that section immediately bordering on Death Valley, is an unpleasant and painful operation at best, and the club has made a map which will do away with getting lost for all motorists who heed its guiding lines.

All sign-posts are announced as being in excellent shape throughout the desert in anticipation of the heavy travel this spring and summer over the burning sands. A plea is issued at this time by the club sign-posting department that all travelers who think they must brush up on their marksmanship by shooting the daylights out of road-signs will please have a heart and vent their enthusiasm on a piece of cactus or something other than on the life-saving sign-post system.

Southern California, as usual, now leads in having the most enterprising automobile club on earth, as no other organization of its kind has ever attempted the mapping of the entire road system of a continent. But it hasn't stopped yet, according to Secretary Mitchell, and will continue to mark roads throughout America so long as there remain roads to be marked over which its members may care to trek.

RICE DELIGHTED AT COAST SALES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) March 4.—H. H. Rice, president of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, who is on the Pacific Coast, wired the factory in here yesterday as follows:

"Model 61 continues its heavy sales. Los Angeles branch of Don Lee has delivered more Cadillacs in February than any February in its history."

BIG BOOST FOR MOTORBOATING.

offer amounts to the magazine passing out the actual cash.

WANTS EXPRESSIVE CUP.

The subscription price is $2, and Garbutt says that 500 subscriptions already have been secured, which means a $1000 cup. But he wants to see a $2000 cup at least, or even a $5000 or $10,000 cup.

A Southern California championship is all that has ever been fought out in this neck of the woods, but with Pacific Motorboat committing itself to a Coast championship here and offering to put up a real trophy, the time does not seem far distant when the South will take its place in the sun as the motorboat center of the Coast.

AUTOS ARE GIVING REAL SERVICE NOW.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK (N. Y.) March 4.—Early in 1921 various authorities agreed that at least 600,000 cars would be scrapped during the year. National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and other production figures for the year compared with the increase in registration show this total to be well under the 400,000 mark.

Cars are giving exceptional service these days. Instead of being discarded at the end of the estimated five-year period, they are giving at least six years' service.

The total production of cars and trucks in 1921 was 1,575,686. Registration increased 1,329,022. It is reasonable to believe that the difference between these two figures or 246,663 represents the number of cars that were junked last year.

AN ACTIVE SELLING SEASON IS PREDICTED.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) March 4.—"If we may judge from our own figures," Alvin McAuley, president of the Packard Motor Car Company, stated Thursday, "the automobile industry is entering upon one of the most active selling seasons enjoyed in recent years.

"Our twin-six and truck market, strengthened by price revisions lately announced is responding splendidly and the single six is displaying an activity equally notable. A considerable increase in our factory force has been made necessary by this turn in business.

"So bright is the outlook for a healthy spring demand that we are creating a reserve of finished cars against which we can draw in case of a possible shortage."

This explanation may be taken as being correct with the theory as to water decomposition wrong.

This theory assumes that the water present during the explosion is decomposed into its elements, oxygen and hydrogen, and that the presence of the oxygen makes it possible for the free carbon to combine with it, thus effecting perfect combustion. There is no proof of this, though it may be possible that the water does decompose to some extent at high pressure, and the high temperatures which are obtained in automobile engine cylinders.

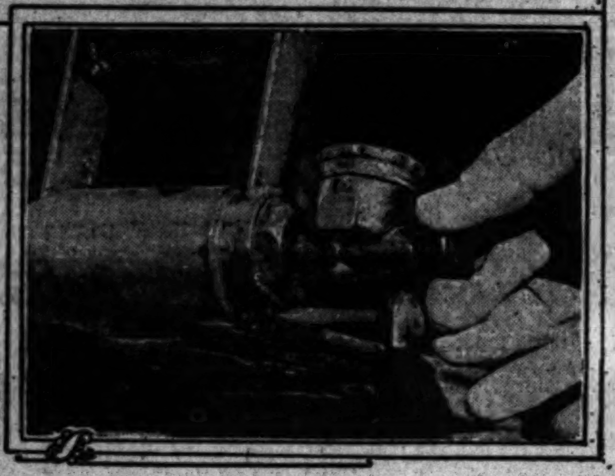
However the matter is explained, the fact remains that the use of the water is beneficial and the apparent magic which gives the engine more power on a damp day, is something real. As to the carbon removing ability of the water, there is something to be said. Surely a caked deposit cannot be removed by water or steam unless by luck. Many owners have said that the use of water stopped preignition and knocking, and very likely this is true because the water may have removed the small particles of carbon, which became incandescent and cause preignition, which in turn causes the knocking. It also is possible for the water to prevent carbon from depositing in any quantity which it would under normal conditions.

The owner who doubts the ability of the water to increase the power of his engine, should not try to prove it by pouring a quart or so into the carburetor intake and interfere with carburetion by temporarily stopping the gas flow at the nozzle, but he should feed it above the throttle so that the water enters with the mixture?

MORE THAN TRIPLES PRODUCTION IN YEAR.

According to a statement issued by the Jordan Motor Car Company its production for the month of February is 350 per cent better than February, 1920.

That this high rate of production will be maintained is assured by the fact that bona fide, noncancellable orders from distributors and dealers are already sufficient to run the factory at full capacity up to July 1, 1922.



The Last Word in Minute Man Six Development.

The new Lexington, five-passenger touring car, known as series U, said to be an abbreviation of the word ultimate. The lower photo shows the new oiling system, a labor saver which requires only a gentle twist to thoroughly lubricate the latest Lexington.

FLIVVER CLIMBS FLIGHT OF STAIRS.

GALLOPS UP TO SECOND STORY WITHOUT FALTERING ON THE WAY.

Believed to be remarkably illustrative of the Ford motor car's ability to surmount obstacles, no matter what their magnitude, is the feat of a Ford coupe here last week told by J. Benjamin Fahy, local authorized dealer.

The Rutherford School of Dancing bought this coupe of Mr. Fahy to be used as a gift to one of its patrons, and the particular plan of presentation that had been decided upon demanded that the car be displayed on the dance floor. But getting it there was a problem.

The Ford solved the problem itself. Under its own power it climbed the whole distance up the long flight of stairs to the second story without faltering once.

"That sounds like a freak stunt, of course," says Mr. Fahy, "but you must admit it's a real test of a car's stamina."

Latest Minute Man Six Puts in Appearance

Reports that the Lexington Motor Company is introducing a new model were proved authentic when the first of these 1922 Minute Man six creations put in their appearance here this week at the salesrooms of the Lexington Los Angeles Company, local distributors.

The new Lexington, a five-passenger touring car, is known as Series "U". The letter designation, while following in natural sequence after "S" and "T" used for preceding models, is really an abbreviation of the word "ultimate," according to W. F. Seel of the above firm.

The series "U" has the Ansted engine and exclusive Lexington features such as two-way head lamps, Moore multiple exhaust system, Lexi-gasifier and unified frome. For a car of 122-inch wheelbase the spring suspension is regarded as unusually long, the front springs being 38 and the rear 59 inches, designed to produce the minimum of rebound and the maximum of cushion against road shocks. The remarkably complete appointments and accessories of the car include, power tire pump, windshield wiper, exclusive scientifically designed spring bumpers front and rear, boots for protection of springs, which are said to be squeak- eliminators as well, and spare tire rack.

AUTO OWNERS GIVE TOP NO ATTENTION.

As a substantial part of the car investment, from the viewpoint of its necessity to comfort, and as regards its importance to the general appearance of the car, the automobile top receives as much consideration by manufacturers as any other feature of auto construction. Oppositely, auto owners give it the least attention, and, as a rule, fail to take the simplest protective measures that would increase materially the life of the top, and maintain its original beauty.

These facts are being pressed to the attention of auto owners through the advertising of Black Duck polish in Los Angeles and by means of demonstrations given at many service stations throughout the city. Convincing figures show that with this quality product applied twice a year to any auto top its protective quality will result in 100 per cent increased service and better appearance.

The Black Duck dressing is a compound of tropical and other vegetable gums that preserve leather or fabrics and thoroughly weatherproofs them. The dressing contains nothing injurious to the finest top coverings.

ART SHAFER TAKES TRIP TO THE EAST.

A. J. Shafer of Shafer-Harrigan-Cleveland, Inc., distributors here of the Duesenberg "straight eight" passenger-car line, eft on Monday for the factory at Indianapolis, where he will endeavor to hurry along shipments to the Coast. Before leaving Mr. Shafer said: "The factory has been a trifle slow in getting into production, but I believe we will begin getting shipments of cars very soon now. The chassis we have on exhibition on our sales floor has attracted a lot of attention, and our main trouble has been in getting cars for delivery." Mr. Shafer expects to be away about two weeks.

FREAKISH DESIGNS ON WANE.

Best Car Builders Look to Mechanical Side of Auto, Says Eastern Man.

Bringing to an enthusiastic climax the final preparations for a further concentrated sales campaign on behalf of the Stephens salient six the entire Southern California dealer organization behind this car joined in an optimists' meeting one evening last week at the salesrooms of the White Auto Company, local distributors.

R. W. Lea, vice-president of the Moline Plow Company, and C. M. Goble, western district representative for the Stephens salient six, here on a tour of inspection from the factory, started the ball rolling with rousing appeals to the whole organization to take full advantage of the unusual sales opportunities in this territory. Reviewing the history of the car, Mr. Lea gave particular emphasis to the stable manufacturing policy that had continually marked its career in the past and that would still be adhered to in the future.

"Freakishness of design has always been most carefully avoided in the construction of the Stephens," said Mr. Lea. "Just to show how conservatively stable our policy has been, you will find that the first Salient six sold the White Auto Company has practically the same lines as those in the salesroom now. Radical style changes mean nothing to us. While others follow these whims of the moment we are concentrating our efforts on building the best car possible from the mechanical standpoint. It is performance that counts."

AUTOMOBILE IN THE AFRICAN JUNGLES.

Today the automobile has penetrated the heart of the African jungle. In spite of the lack of roads and the tremendous obstacles to transportation of gas, oil and tires by negro carriers, many cars are in use by government agencies along the Gold Coast. According to Miller tire export officials, American motorists would be appalled by the conditions under which these cars are operated. Most of the drivers are natives, who have little respect for tire or car and overloading is universal.

HAYNES

Haynes engineers have just perfected an automobile power plant that will deliver practically unlimited power to the rear axle, with a minimum of gasoline consumption. They have produced a big car that is economical to the last degree in the new Model "75."

"The Haynes Gains"

Continually in popularity among Southern California motorists because the Haynes factory is producing cars that satisfy. Haynes owners boost the Haynes.

An Invitation
Three Years Old

Three years ago, when the Paul G. Hoffman Company became the Los Angeles distributor of Studebaker cars, the public was invited to drive the Studebaker and judge it by its performance.

As a result of the investigations and comparisons of performance by a critical motoring public, Studebaker sales in Los Angeles were more than tripled in the past three years, increasing from 535 cars in 1919 to 1803 for 1921.

No other leading make of motor car has ever shown such a remarkable increase of sales. In 1921 the Studebaker outsold all other makes of sixes in the city, the county, the State and the country.

This claim of leadership has never been disputed.

Today Studebaker offers a much improved car. It was good enough before to win its leadership in the keen competition of a buyers' market.

Our sales policy for 1922 remains the same. We continue to urge you to ride in the new 1922 Studebaker or, better yet, take the wheel, drive where you will and satisfy yourself that Studebaker has again set a new world's standard of six-cylinder motor car performance.

Two very common causes of crankcase dilution are leaky vacuum floats and leaky carburetor floats. The former will cause a constant spray of gasoline flowing through the suction pipe to manifold and acts like a very rich mixture or as though the choker was partially on. This condition can be detected by disconnecting the suction pipe from manifold to vacuum tank. Then place a small glass tube, with rubber washers at each end, to form a seal between the connections.

After starting the motor, if a continuous spray of gas can be seen passing through then the vacuum tank is out of order, either due to a leaky float needle or leaky float. By removing the float, an inspection of the needle seat can be easily made, or if float leaks it can be detached by shaking the float. In some cases the float leaks are so slight it may take weeks for a very small amount of gasoline to get inside. As this accumulates, the float becomes heavier and will hold the needle off its seat permitting the gasoline to be drawn direct to motor.

FIND THE LEAK.

In order to repair a leaky float, it will be necessary first, to find the leak. The best way to find small leaks is to dip the float in boiling water. This works up a pressure and will cause bubbles to pass through the slightest kind of leaks. The spot should then be marked and soldered carefully. Do not pile up solder, as this may unbalance the float or make it too heavy. Before soldering the float it must be drained. On account of fluid being air bound it will be necessary to make a vent hole before the gasoline will drain off. After carefully draining and drying out the inside of the float by heat, the vent hole and leak should be carefully soldered, then make test for leaks, by placing float in boiling water and watching for bubbles. This is very necessary, for merely immersing the float in gasoline will not show up tiny leaks unless allowed to stand twenty-four hours or more.

SAPOLIO IS GOOD.

Leaks at vacuum tank float needles are unusual. However, these can be remedied by careful grinding with very fine powdered abrasives, preferably Bon-Ami or Sapolio which will polish rather than scratch.

The above operations apply to leaky carburetor floats as well as float needles. However, be careful not to alter float adjustment. This should only be done by carburetor service stations. Any change from the proper level will make carburetors impossibe to adjust.

TRIPLES THE BUSINESS.

Tripling the business in three years is the record of the Paul G. Hoffman organization, which acts as Studebaker distributor for Los Angeles. Starting in 1919 with thirty-two employees on the pay roll the forces have grown until there are now 195 members of the company drawing regular pay checks. The gross volume of business of 1919 was slightly over $2,000,000 and this was tripled for 1921 with a total of $6,290,602, which included car sales and parts business.

Soon after the firm took over the retail sales of Studebaker cars in Los Angeles, which city had been served by a factory branch organization for a number of years, the firm felt the need of larger quarters. A new store and service station was built for them on South Figueroa street, near Pico and during the next year a branch store at Hollywood was opened with a service station. Within the past six months it has been found advisable to open a neighborhood service shop with no sales department in connection with it. This was placed in the residence section in a location that investigation showed would be convenient to a large number of Studebaker owners.

With the two stores and a brand new building on Pico connecting with the main store on Figueroa street the Paul G. Hoffman Company now occupies five buildings with a total floor space of 105,000 square feet.

Some idea of the growth of the car sales can be gained from the registration of new Studebakers during the last three years. In 1919 there were 535 cars registered, while 1920 showed 925 and for 1921 the first year's business was more than tripled with 1903 new cars.

FIND SOLUTION FOR SIGNAL DIFFICULTY.

A very practical solution to the signal difficulty for automobile drivers is found in a new device being manufactured in Hollywood by the Davis Radio Signal Company.

Many accidents are caused by drivers giving wrong signals, or neglecting to give any signal at all. Hand signals are demanded by law, and the Davis signal consists of a white hand affixed to the rear left fender, in plain view of cars approaching from the rear.

When the foot brake is used, the hand automatically turns to the "stop" position. When the driver is going to turn to the left or to right he presses his foot on the heel rest provided with the signal and the "hand" makes the necessary sign.

Swears by It.

H. O. Hall prefers a Hupmobile touring car and trailer to a truck in selling staple grocery lines. Rain or shine he is on the road every day in the week. His car has been run more than 40,000 miles in a little over one year.

MAKE A HIT WITH HAWAIIAN NATIVES.

TIRE MANAGER SAYS ROYALS ARE JUST AS POPULAR THERE AS HERE.

According to J. B. Magee, manager of the Southern California and Arizona branches of the United States Rubber Company, who has just returned from an extended trip to the Hawaiian Islands, Royal cords and the new Royal tube manufactured by that big company are just as popular with motorists in the "land of liquid sunshine" as in the States.

"Because the roads on the islands—principally of disintegrated lava and coral formation—are a trifle harder on tires than is usually the case on well-traveled thoroughfares in the States, motorists there are naturally keen for the longest tire mileage," he said. "As there is every inducement to motor in that paradise, cars are generally on the go all the year around, and consequently tire expense is a factor in car upkeep that is bound to be seriously considered by the average motorist."

Sells Groceries With a Touring Car and Trailer

Employing his 1921 Hupmobile touring car and a trailer instead of a truck, H. O. Hall of Los Angeles covers a wide territory in Southern California in selling staple grocery lines to dealers. In addition to the weight of the trailer, which weighs about 1100 pounds, Hall carries about one ton distributed between his Hupmobile and the trailer.

Rain or shine he is on the road two days of each week between here and Santa Barbara, another two days between Los Angeles and San Bernardino and one day covering Santa Ana territory. His Hupmobile—the second one he has owned—has been run more than 40,000 miles in a little over one year. In that time he has had the valves ground three times and replaced one spark plug. In spite of the heavy loads that he carries, he averages, he stated, between eighteen and twenty miles to the gallon of gas.

"I make use of my Hupp in this manner because it serves two purposes," he said. "During week days it serves the purpose of a truck and on Sunday it becomes the family car. Except for valve grinding the car has never been laid up for repairs and the engine seems to run smoother the longer it is used."

BRAKE INSPECTION.

The usual method of inspecting the brake system is altogether too perfunctory for this essential part. As a matter of fact all parts of the brake system ought to be tested every two weeks. The pins and clevises should be examined and it should be ascertained that none of the bearings has frozen because of rusting. The condition of the brake lining should be examined and it must be ascertained that the action is uniform on operation of pedal or lever. See that all pins and nuts are properly secured by cotters or some other locking means. Likewise the [illegible] should be oiled.

Mack TRUCKS

21,000 MILES FOR $40.00

that's MACK performance

E. H. Shull's MACK Truck has made 21 round trips to San Francisco, traveling a distance of 21,000 miles at a total upkeep cost of $40.00. This was not a one-time "stunt" performance, but a genuine business operation. The MACK, a 2½-ton model, dragged a trailer and the total load each trip was 6 tons.

Performance such as this is not uncommon for MACK Trucks. We have other haulage records that will interest you, but there is something spectacular about the Shull operation as each time the famous Ridge Road was traveled.

The inbuilt quality that is in every MACK Truck accounts for the low cost of upkeep. When you pay the price for a MACK Truck you get the very best motor equipment it is possible to manufacture. You are not buying a mixed assembly of "parts" put together and called a truck.

"Richly dotted with landmarks of historical significance, and important, not only as a commercial factor in the life of the nation but as a military highway as well, the Old Spanish Trail is fast becoming the main artery of overland vehicular travel," said Mr. Locke. "It is a veritable storehouse of relics of the days of De Soto, Coronado, Ponce de Leon, and the Jesuit fathers. All along the trail the motorist can trace the footsteps of these hardy explorers.

"In a short time this transcontinental route will be one unbroken line of high type highway, that is, hard-surfaced roads of cement or its equivalent despite the almost unsurmountable obstacles presented by the lack of rock and other roadbed foundation material in the Gulf States.

PICTURESQUE PEOPLE.

"Among the many interesting sidelights of my trip across the country," Mr. Locke told Mr. Albertson, "was the insight in the lives of the picturesque 'cracker' or poor whites of the region of the gulf, and the peculiar fusion of new ideas into the lives and habits of the old-time Texas cattleman. The panhandle of Texas still holds cattle ranges and cowboys still ride the range, but the ranges are fenced and the cowboys ride in automobiles."

WABASH MAN TAKES OVER DISTRIBUTION.

MOVES HIS HEADQUARTERS TO THIS STATE FOR DOLING OUT SERVICE TRUCKS.

F. G. Whipple, for several years district manager for the Service Motor Truck Company of Wabash, Ind., and during the past year district sales manager for the company on the Coast, has taken over the distribution of Service trucks in California and Arizona.

Mr. Whipple states he will operate under the name of the Service Truck Sales Company, and will continue to have the co-operation and backing of the factory, so that the permanency of the institution is assured.

Mr. Whipple, who has just returned from a trip to the factory, where he attended a conference of the distributors, advises that the factory's business is improving nicely. In addition to large foreign business, they have more business on their books than at any time in the last two years. The company received orders for over 1000 trucks during the meeting at the factory.

Paige Wallows Through Gumbo and Rut Holes.

Mud baths are not an unwelcome experience for hippopotami and pigs, but a motor car never goes wallowing in gooey mire unless the circumstances make it absolutely unavoidable.

Circumstances of that character certainly overtook a Paige 6-66 owned by R. R. Brey, recently. Mr. Brey is president of Randsburg Mines, Inc., a company operating and developing property adjoining the famous Kelly silver mine near Randsburg, Cal., and several days ago the exigencies of his official position demanded that he motor up there at the week-end in spite of weather and road conditions.

Accordingly the Paige was headed northward. On the last stage of the journey it took three hours of constant struggle to cover forty-three miles, and the consensus of opinion in that region is that the Paige was lucky to get through at all.

But coming back was where the real mud bath came in, according to Mr. Brey's account of the journey. The desert highway, with its wobbling ruts and intermittent chuck holes, had been graded up, but not packed. Then had come one of those nice wet rains that soak alkali clay to its absolute capacity. And the Paige was the first car to come along afterward. The road looked smooth; fine in fact. But it was all camouflage.

The wheels sank past the axles to seek out the old ruts; the car slipped and skewered around, actually wallowing its way along. The right fenders had been lost in the fracas and the mud flew everywhere. It was more than a splatter; it was a flood. And wherever it hit it stuck. The entire body was covered, the top was smeared, the seats were painted, the windshield bedaubed and the running board buried. But somehow the Paige won through. And now Mr. Brey swears by the car.

GOOD BRAKE SYSTEM IS FINE INSURANCE.

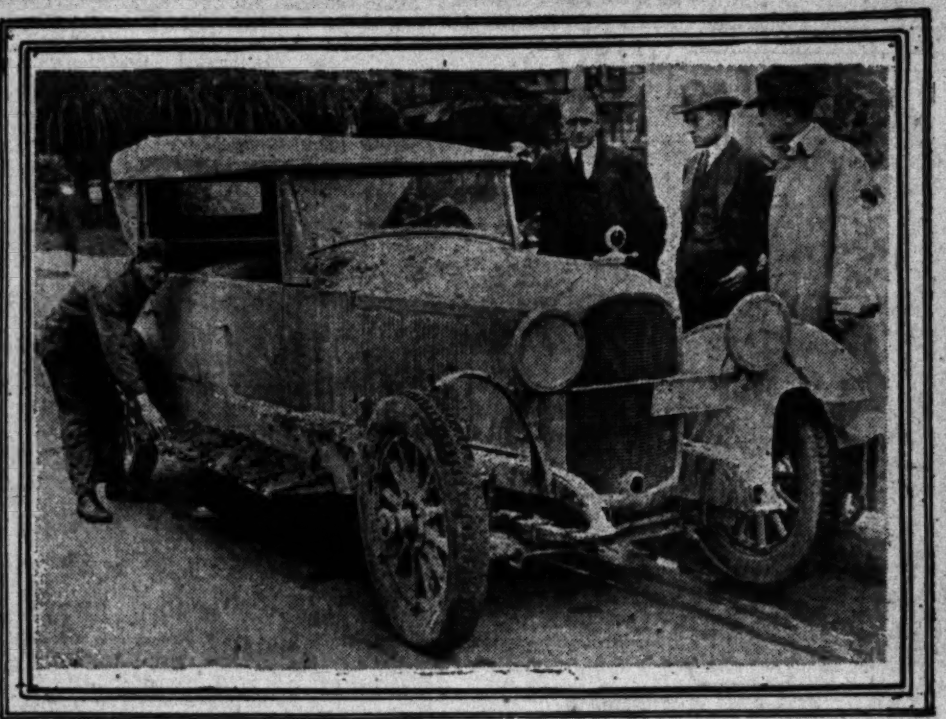
INJURY, AND SOME TIMES DEATH, MAY OCCUR IF BRAKES FAIL TO HOLD.

A good braking system on the motor car is insurance against injury or even death, according to George Pearson, salesmanager of the Union Motors Company, Maxwell distributors.

"You can never be too certain about the brakes on your motor car," says Pearson, in discussing the situation. "Quite often we are given graphic instances of where a faulty brake has caused injury, and even death.

"In this connection the new series Maxwell is well provided with brakes that are guaranteed to meet with any emergency. Only recently we were offered testimony to prove this. Carl G. Berry, a resident of Fresno, was visiting in this city, and was driving on one of the public thoroughfares, while the streets were extremely slippery from the heavy fall of rain.

"In front of Berry was a car whose driver had the misfortune to collide with a child, although he had applied the brakes in plenty of time to stop. The brakes, however, did not hold, and the result was disastrous. The Maxwell, which was right in the rear of the lighter car, had it not possessed sturdy brakes, would have added to disaster and bumped the rear end of the auto in front. Berry applied his brakes, however, with the result that he brought his car to a dead stop and helped in rendering first aid to the injured child."



Slightly in Need of a Good Bath.

Here we have a Paige 6-66 which took a trip to Randsburg, Cal., and back. The car, owned by R. R. Brey, president of the Randsburg Mines, Inc., was driven through ruts and chuck holes and mud over a graded but unpacked highway. It wallowed its way through in great shape and lost nothing, but its shiny appearance and the right fenders. When the car arrived at Paige headquarters in Los Angeles the entire body, the top, the seats, the windshield and the running board were a beautiful lather of mud. But Mr. Brey swears by its running qualities.

Exercise Your Spare Casings Once a Month.

The likening of a pneumatic tire to a human body is one of the favorite topics found in manuals circulated by tire manufacturers for the purpose of helping the motorist secure all the mileage that has been built into the tire.

The carcass of the tire corresponds to the bones and muscles of our bodies. The outer rubber covering (tread and side cushions) protect the tire as the skin protects our bodies. Cuts in this rubber must be repaired to prevent disintegration of the tire just as cuts in our skin must be treated to prevent infection. Inflated pressure to a tire is what food is to our bodies.

There is another similarity, however, that has not been described—the tire's need of exercise. It is a fact, says the United States Tire Company, that a spare tire resists natural ageing much better if it is put into service for a day every month. The reason for this is obscure but is probably due to what physicists call "molecular rearrangement" in the rubber portions of the tire caused by flexing. Whatever the cause of the deterioration it is a fact that a spare carried month after month without being "exercised" occasionally does not retain its wearing qualities as well as one that gets an occasional day's use.

REMOVING SPOTS.

At this time of year it is particularly useful to remember that the best way to remove spots from varnish is to rub in well a little boiled linseed oil with a soft rag, until all the spots have disappeared, afterward removing the superfluous oil and polishing with a soft rag.

LEAVITT SERVICE

Leavitt Service has won a reputation for quality and efficiency that extends far beyond the borders of California.

Back at the Olds Motor Works in Lansing, factory executives point to it as an example of what real service should be.

This high reputation has not been won in a day. It has been built up over a long series of years, through which automobile owners have learned to depend upon its quality, its economy, its thoroughness, and its accuracy.

Oldsmobile owners know when they bring in their car that it will receive prompt attention by expert Oldsmobile mechanics, in a shop completely equipped with the most modern machinery, and that any necessary replacements will be made with genuine parts, tested and made to standard specifications at the Olds factory.

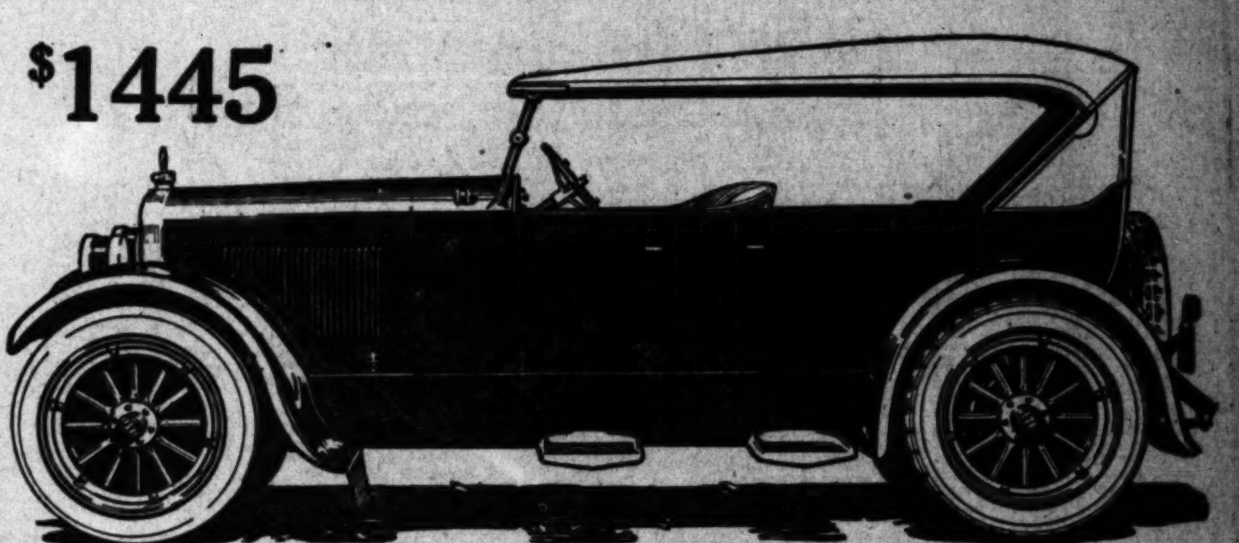
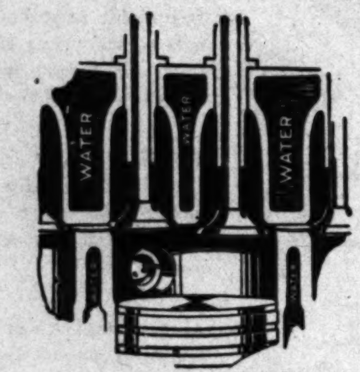
Its Exclusive Motor Proves Its Excellence



CLEVELAND SIX

The individual style and unusual beauty of the new Cleveland Six are conceded by everyone. This advertisement will convince you that the car is as fine mechanically as it is in appearance.

Carburetor and Straight-line Manifold



Complete water-jacketing of Valves

THE most important mechanical unit in any car is the motor. The Cleveland Six exclusive motor, built in its own shops, is the culmination of six years intensive effort. In design and in details it is as fine a piece of engineering as will be found under the hood of any car.

Power with flexibility, durability and efficiency, are the qualities that make the Cleveland Six motor the most highly refined of the overhead-valve type.

This motor is so designed that it actually develops 58 per cent of its 45 horse-power at twenty miles per hour. Few motors develop more than forty per cent of their power at this speed.

The Cleveland Six gives more power when you need power most (for quick acceleration, hill climbing, or for the long hard pull) than is obtainable in most other motors.

Power With Economy

THE remarkable fuel economy of the Cleveland Six is largely due to the unique straight-line manifold which is cast integral with the cylinder head. Gas travels the shortest possible distance from carburetor to cylinders and as the manifold is evenly heated throughout its entire length, condensation is eliminated at all points in its travel.

This feature insures quick starting, complete combustion and means high power with economy, at all speeds. It also reduces carbon deposit, which is further minimized by completely machining the combustion chambers to a smooth finish.

Balanced Pistons of New Design

LIGHT WEIGHT pistons are of the latest design and all six machined to the same exact weight. Conventional design has been improved by the addition of three V-shaped grooves which have a wiping action on the down-stroke to prevent oil from working past the three rings to foul the spark plugs and form carbon.

Silent Valves That Never Stick

IN the Cleveland Six the admitted advantage and efficiency of overhead valve design is advanced to its highest point. Valves and stems are completely surrounded by water and being evenly cooled from all sides they can not warp and stick. They are actuated by double springs insuring quietness and eliminating clatter or vibration.

The valve lifters are fitted with large, accurately ground rollers, and the entire valve mechanism, including rocker shaft, rocker arms, valve stems, etc., is completely enclosed and thoroughly lubricated by wicks through which oil is fed from two large cups on the top of the engine.

All Motor Parts Easily Accessible

THE Cleveland Six motor is built to function continuously and efficiently with a minimum of attention and the least necessity for adjustment. Lubrication has been made positive at all points. The silent chain drive for camshaft and pump can be adjusted from the outside of the motor case. The crank case can be drained by a lever under the hood.

Quietness, smoothness, absence of vibration at all speeds, quick pick-up, and plentiful power are combined with very slow depreciation and long life.

Your Cleveland Six will be an efficient, economical, mechanically excellent car even after many season's use—because it is built to last.

THE CLEVELAND AUTOMOBILE COMPANY - CLEVELAND

GROWTH IN FORD OUTPUT FROM 1903 TO DATE IS PHENOMENAL; OVER MILLION CARS THIS YEAR.

"Close adherence to the principle that 'service comes before profit,' is the secret of the success achieved by Henry Ford," says B. L. Graves, district manager for the Ford interests.

"From a modest beginning in 1903, the Ford Motor Company has grown to the point where it manufactures half of all the automobiles, truck and tractors sold in the United States. It is interesting to note the growth of this production. The first year's output was only 1708 cars. Five years later the sales reached 6398, while another five years saw a total of 168,220 Ford cars marketed. By 1918 the yearly production had reached 875,000. The schedule for 1922 calls for 1,250,000 cars and trucks, and I have no doubt this goal will be attained.

"The price of Ford cars today is only 33 per cent of what it was in 1903, yet today, the Ford Motor Company pays higher wages, higher prices for materials and turns out a better product than eighteen years ago."

"What is it that stands in the way of the purchase of a car by the salaried man?" asks R. T. Dawson, manager of the Wm. L. Hughson Company. "This question confronted us, as it has all Ford dealers, and we believe we have answered it. The inability of many people to make the initial payment is preventing thousands from securing the enjoyment that a car brings. To overcome this condition we have organized the 'Hughson Ford saving plan.' The customer deposits with us each week between now and summer, a small amount, ranging from $7.80 to $11.95, depending upon the model desired. By the opening of the vacation season, his car is ready for delivery, and the balance due is handled on similarly easy terms. The plan is proving a great boon to the men of limited income."

"With the close of 1921, the popular Ford educational weekly motion pictures, which were featured at many of the largest theaters, were discontinued. In their place, Mr. Ford will produce pictures to form the 'Ford Educational Library,' designed especially for the use of schools," says G. E. Noll of the Noll Auto Company. "These films will be sold or rented at a very low rate to schools and colleges throughout the country, and will soon be an important factor in modern visual education. Mr. Ford is donating hundreds of thousands of dollars each year to this enterprise, and it is his hope that these films, which are of the highest educational value, will soon be as universally known as the Ford car."

"Spark plug trouble is practically a thing of the past," says J. S. Spence of the Spence Motor Car Company, Inc., Ford dealers in East Pasadena. "When it is occasionally necessary to remove a plug for cleaning, it is well to remember that in relacing the plug, it should never be tightened down into the cylinder head when the engine is hot, as the diameter of the spark plug hole is at that time slightly enlarged. When the motor cools, it will be found very difficult to remove the plug, should a further adjustment be necessary."

"Judging from the number of requests we have received for demonstrations of the Lincoln, the market for cars of the highest grade has scarcely been scratched," says William E. Smith. "The announcement of Mr. Ford to the effect that the Lincoln would continue to embody the finest in motor-car manufacture has reassured many who feared that a reduction in quality would follow the recent decrease in price."

"Breakage of Ford springs is an infrequent occurrence in this land of good roads," says Gifford Todd of Walker & Todd. "When it does happen the cause can usually be traced to a failure to keep the spring clips tight. When these clamps are allowed to loosen, the spring leaves twist out of alignment, and instead of distributing the load throughout the assembly, the entire strain is thrown upon one or two leaves."

More Shopping for Machines Than in Past.

That it is noticeable that those buying automobiles are doing more "shopping" than heretofore and that many of them are keenly alive to values is the opinion of D. H Thomason of the Thomason Motor Car Company, Scripps-Booth distributors for Southern California and Arizona.

"We are selling a limited number of the series B of the Scripps-Booth at a very low figure, in fact at a figure that is a 'knockout' when car value all the way through is taken into consideration. It is the experience of our sales department that many of those who purchase these cars have done a lot of 'shopping' before they came to us while there are others who have kept on shopping before they finally placed their name on the dotted line," said L. A. Hannon, manager of the concern.

"I is evident from many prospects' conversation that they have been considering several makes of cars, that they are giving thought to automobile values more than ever before and that they want all they can get for their money, service included. You can't blame them for that—it indicates sound business sense."

NOISY GEARS.

When it is desired to overcome the noise of a set of badly worn gears, it must be understood that the replacement of one of the gears will not do the trick. Only by replacing both members can it be hoped to quiet the noise.

John J. Mowe,

Vice-President and general sales manager of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, now in Los Angeles on an annual inspection trip.

TIRE HEAD PREACHES OPTIMISM.

General Manager of Kelly Springfield Firm Predicts Wave of Prosperity.

John V. Mowe, vice-president and general sales manager of the Kelly Springfield Tire Company, is now in Los Angeles on his annual inspection tour of the local branch and the city distributers, Guasti, House & Giulii, Inc.

While Mr. Mowe is admittedly an optimist, believing that business conditions are created by the individual or concern, and holding that there is always business to be had if a man only works, yet he was greatly impressed with the increased activity in all lines in every city he has visited. As evidence that conditions in the country are nearing normal he cites the the low money rates in New York financial centers, the release of funds by the bankers in the Middle West, the big demand for lumber in the Northwest, where orders are piling up faster than timber can be cut and delivered, and the optimism prevailing in Oregon and Northern California.

"Last year more than 20,000 automobiles were out of service, and stored in garages in Seattle," declared Mr. Mowe, "but now the majority of them are in active service and the people of the Northwest are apparently doing as much business as ever.

"Both Oregon and Northern California are seemingly prosperous, and our business over the entire Coast is in a better condition than ever before."

According to Mr. Mowe, the Kelly Springfield Company has enjoyed the greatest business within its history during the year of 1921. The large modern factory at Cumberland, W. Va., was completed and put into operation during the year, increasing the output of the company fully 50 per cent. Productions now running nearly 100 per cent more than at any time since the company has been in business. When it is remembered that many tire manufacturers were only operating to 50 per cent or less of normal production, it will be realized just what it meant for the Kelly Springfield Company to boost their production nearly 100 per cent in 1921.

LENS CLEANER.

By far the best compound to use in cleaning reflectors, is a mixture of denatured alcohol and water in equal parts. The solution should be applied with a soft cloth, which will not scratch the surface.

VISITS MINING COUNTRY

Charles H. Bigelow Tours Through Old Camps in the Luxury of a Nash Six.

The fact that Southern California, while never the "bonanza" country that the northern portion of the State proved to be, has produced some gold and large quantities of silver, copper and other precious and semiprecious metals is often lost sight of. This is largely due to the fact that the "Days of '49" have been played so strongly in poetry and prose by writers whose works have taken their place among the household classics.

Conditions in the mining regions of Southern California at the present time have recently been investigated closely by Charles H. Bigelow, well-known project engineer and mining authority, who visited several of the old camps a few weeks ago while on an automobiles reconnaissance trip and who left again last week for a visit of several days in some newly opened territory which promises to outshine the best that the early-day prospector unearthed, and which caused many a "stampede" to the "diggings."

Bigelow is making the tour in a Nash six touring car, which he has used on several occasions in the past and which has proved ideal for overcoming the bad road and weather conditions usually met with on such a trip.

This Nash is the same one he used on his recent round trip to Phoenix, when he was the first motorist to come through by way of Gila Bend, Yuma and San Diego after the terrific rain and snow storms which turned the desert roads into quagmires and the mountain roads into slippery mud mixed with snow and ice. The present trip is being made over much better roads, but speed and dependability are factors absolutely necessary.

Before leaving on the trip Bigelow told H. J. Coger, vice-president and general manager of the Troy Motor Sales Company, Nash distributors, that he had every confidence in the Nash after his recent strenuous trips and that he believed he would trust it to take him anywhere, on time, and under almost any sport of weather and road conditions.

PEERLESS COMPANY BOOSTS DIVIDENDS.

STOCKHOLDERS WILL BE PAID THREE DOLLARS PER SHARE DURING 1922.

As a direct result of the doubling of Peerless business and a consequent further strengthening of the company's enviable cash position dividends on Peerless stock were increased from $2 to $3 a share and were declared for the entire twelvemonth period, at a meeting of directors of the company in Cleveland last week.

The increase in sales this year is generally attributed to the refinements and improvements embodied in the 1922 series of Peerless cars by R. H. Collins, who assumed control of the Peerless factory last October, and has been operating it since that time.

BIG ADVANCE IS NOTED IN DESIGN.

MANUFACTURERS NOW DESIGN PRODUCTS TO COVER SPECIALIZATION.

Manufacturers of today have advanced far ahead of their predecessors of ten or a dozen years ago in their tendency to plan ahead and to design their products in such a way as to cover more fully than ever before the specialization that has come to be a feature of modern business and professional life.

"The tendency of the present market is for far-seeing manufacturers to study the individual needs of their prospective purchasers," said Byron C. Foy, manager of the Reo factory branch here.

"The Reo shops have a long and enviable record of pioneering and originating in the application of automobiles to practical uses, and the company is now reaping the benefits of Reo foresight in the successful campaign now in progress whereby we are introducing the newest [illegible] business coupe.

"The business coupe, [illegible] pecially for the business [illegible] fessional man, has jumped [illegible] immediately into popular [illegible] because it fills a definite [illegible] the daily activities of this [illegible] of motor-car users.

Oakland 6-44
now

Inspired with the ambition for leadership, Oakland engineers have toiled ceaselessly for fourteen months on the new Oakland creations.

All that engineering genius could muster has been called into use in the building of this new Model Oakland 6-44.

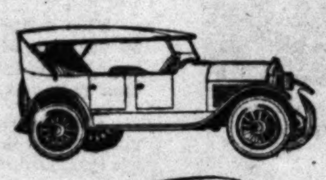
Every fault, no matter how slight, has been overcome. Though perfection is unattainable at any cost, Oakland engineers and body designers have approached as near the utmost degree as human skill and scientific practice can produce.

New! New in almost every particular, and in being new the Oakland now represents the maximum in value — a fact easily established by a careful survey and comparison. We welcome it.

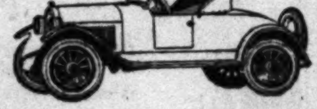
Come in and see these fine new models on display in our showroom.

A few of the many [illegible] standing features:

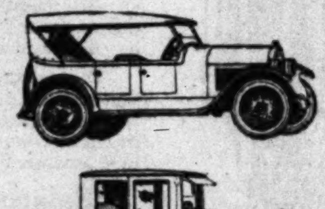
Morse Silent Chain [illegible] timing gears — [illegible] backed bearings — [illegible] camshaft — better [illegible] reinforced gear and crank [illegible] —redesigned ignition cowl [illegible] tilator—spiral bevel gear [illegible] axle—new brake adjustment— improved fan assembly—[illegible] the 15,000-mile [illegible] against oil pumping in cylin[illegible]



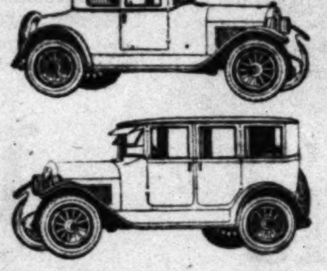
Low and rakish with the new high radiator, squared back, rich finish and commodious driver's and tonneau compartments.



Immediately recognized as one of the most attractive cars of the Roadster type, with carrying space behind the seat and under the rear deck.



The ideal car, for four only, a real Sport model, finished in Spanish leather and equipped with white wire wheels. A car that fills a long felt want at a modest price.



The Coupe—The ultimate in closed car beauty. Woodwork finished in genuine walnut and upholstered in beautiful velour. All glass of finest plate.

The Sedan—A roomy five-passenger closed car of unusually smart and pleasing lines, equipped with snubbers as is the Coupe and equally attractive in finish.

Goodyear Plans Expects to Increase Output.

[illegible] Export Trade Has a Good Effect.

[illegible] Happenings in the Tire Field.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AKRON (O.) Feb. 25.—Comparisons made by officials of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. between [illegible] in the Los Angeles district and the Middle West and East show that the western territory has not been as hard hit by the business depression which has now been running more than a year and [illegible] and for that reason the [illegible] subsidiary of the parent company has made a better showing than plants in the [illegible]

EXPECT INCREASES.

While no definite figures regarding the future of the Los Angeles [illegible] have been given out, indications are that not only will [illegible] production of 2500 tires be [illegible], but some increases, such [illegible] completed in Akron, may [illegible] at the plant during the [illegible] months. Officials here [illegible] California conditions [illegible] satisfactory and express the opinion that the present [illegible] will be a very good one for [illegible] company.

[illegible] some time it has been [illegible] that the continued improvement in export conditions [illegible] the world, although [illegible] and comparatively small, [illegible] much to improve conditions in the Canadian subsidiary [illegible] further expansion in [illegible] in this plant may be [illegible] during the next few [illegible]

With the exception of the B. F. [illegible] Company, where some [illegible] in production are [illegible] out and some departments are reducing output, the [illegible] tire factories generally [illegible] conditions either stationary [illegible] improved. The Mason [illegible] Rubber Company furnished the rubber sensation during the past week, when announcement [illegible] made that new capacity [illegible], which provides for doubling output, will be required just as [illegible] installation of machinery [illegible] early next month. The [illegible] is being operated on the [illegible] 2500 tires a day and will [illegible] by March 15.

RUBBER HEELS.

During the week the Seiberling [illegible] Company announced that [illegible] heels will be part of the [illegible] of the new company. Al[illegible] specialized in the manufacture of other rubber goods than [illegible] taken into the Seiberling organization shortly after its [illegible], it was generally believed [illegible] the company would [illegible] efforts to tires, although [illegible] other lines might be [illegible]. At the same time announcement [illegible] heel production [illegible] was stated that H. J. [illegible] formerly manager of heel [illegible] Goodyear Tire and [illegible], and R. H. Lyon, [illegible] representative of [illegible] joined the Seiberling [illegible] At the same time it was announced that W. H. Oburn, formerly secretary of the Goodyear board of control at Goodyear, has joined Seiberling.

The improvement in export trade which has been reported by a number of the larger factories spells a further improvement of Pacific Coast shipping. The Far East, India, Australia and New Zealand are generally reported to be showing constant improvement which will mean shipments through Pacific ports.

OF SIGNIFICANCE.

Another announcement significant to the Southwest made during the week is that Arizona cotton is again finding a better demand in spite of small fabrics sales. During the past six months there has been very little demand by automobile tire manufacturers for fabric made of cotton grown in the Southwest. The past week, however, has seen a change in this situation and this product is again subject of inquiry and quotation. On the whole, however, sales of fabric are very slow at the present time.

Reports that automobile tire manufacturers, pressed to decrease manufacturing cost have turned toward cheaper fabrics and are demanding less than formerly in fabrics are denied by fabric mill representatives although a lower classification of fabric generally and the use of carded instead of combed is growing in importance. The use of combed fabric instead of carded saves an average of ten cents a pound or between 50 and 60 cents per tire for the manufacturer; and since the carded material is being used where formerly only combed was considered.

Cash on hand shows reduction on net result is just about the same, according to manufacturers, this little more than $1,000,000.

The B. F. Goodrich Co. in its annual statement as of December 31, 1921, issued recently shows total assets of $89,644,417 as compared with $138,000,000 shown in 1920 and $175,000,000 shown in 1919. Inventory is shown at $29,618,935 as compared with $72,000,000 carried in 1920 and $54,184,975 shown in 1919.

CURRENT ASSETS.

Current assets show total of $51,644,417 as compared with total current liabilities of $3,413,128. In 1920 current assets totalled $97,000,000 as compared with liabilities of $33,000,000 and in 1919 the relation was $85,000,000 assets and $31,187,000 liabilities. The balance sheet this year shows the payment of $29,000,000 owed to banks at the beginning of the year.

Surplus account was reduced from $22,000,000 in 1920 by further operating loss of $10,000,000 and payment of preferred dividends and one common dividend to $1,194,537. In 1919 this item stood at $31,203,046.

What the Experts Brought Forth in One Year.

Twelve months ago new management assumed charge of the Oakland factory. These men consulted with a corps of experts, secured all knocks and complaints from owners and set to work to correct the faults. The reward of their twelve months of labor is five entirely new models of Oakland cars. The first shipment is now on display at the Los Angeles Oakland company's show rooms on South Olive street. The coupe is shown herewith.

SENSIBLE SIX IS ON THE TAPIS.

Five New Models Fire the Souls of Representatives of the Oakland.

Seven years ago the Oakland sensible six came into being. One year ago a new regime assumed direction of the factory. These men gathered about them a corps of automotive experts. Letters were sent broadcast throughout the land, to Oakland owners, dealers and distributors. What was desired was all the knocks and kicks that could be mustered from those sources.

When all this information had been combed and sorted, it was handed over to the engineers with instructions to correct every fault regardless of the cost. War-time practices were no longer tolerated. A new policy directed the destinies of the Oakland and this policy had no other aim than to make the Oakland the premier car of its class.

And now the fruit of these twelve months of patient effort is offered for the approval of the public, in five entirely new models of Oakland cars. The first shipment has just arrived and they are on display at the Los Angeles Oakland Company's showrooms on South Olive street.

"A score and ten changes and improvements are features in the new Oakland," says H. C. McVey of the Los Angeles Oakland Company. "An entirely new car is the practical result. All the commendable qualities of previous models have been retained but every shortcoming has been licked to a standstill."

SEPARATORS CAUSE BATTERY TROUBLES.

AND THE GILL PEOPLE THINK THEY HAVE SOLVED THE BIG DIFFICULTY.

Battery men and motorists alike know that a very large percentage of the difficulties with batteries originate in the separators. Eugene Clark, distributor of Gill batteries in Southern California, has something new and decidedly different to show his customers in the Gill battery which has no separators, and he is enthusiastic about the greater degree of satisfactory service that Gill battery users are getting.

The plates in the Gill battery are made thicker and heavier than those of the ordinary battery and are placed crosswise of the cell rather than the long way. The plates are held apart by rubber strips along the edges which keep the plates rigidly in place but still allow for free circulation of the electrolyte over the full length of the plate.

It is this greater freedom of circulation of the liquid content of the cell that makes so much difference in the action of the acid in the liquid on all parts of the plate at all times. This feature is given credit for the greater strength of current generated and for the remarkable recuperative power of this new battery.

A RECORD MONTH FOR WILLS ST. CLAIRE.

February was a record month for the Wills Sainte Claire in California. The sales of this mechanically perfected product of C. Harold Wills, have been gradually increasing, and, with the final price reduction in January, sales took a tremendous leap forward and Manager Robert S. Breyer of the Western Motors Company reports brisk business throughout the entire State.

Manager Breyer has just completed a hurry-up tour of the State, during which a number of new agency contracts were closed up.

In sales for the month, Southern California showed a slight lead over the northern part of the State, but this will be evened up during March and April, as business always opens up in the northern end of the State during those months.

Two models that prove the truth of the Nash slogan—"Nash leads the world in motor car values."

When you realize that more than four thousand owners are now driving Nash cars in Southern California you know that Nash has made good.

Ask any of these owners about the Nash. They will tell you of its many good qualities, and how well it stands up under severe service conditions.

The new model "691"—the newer and greater Nash Six—already has won for itself an enviable reputation for easy riding qualities and extreme comfort, but you must ride in it yourself to realize in full measure just how good a car it really is.

The new Nash Four is an unusually fine car. It is almost a duplicate of the "Six" on a slightly smaller scale—and you will be surprised at its excellent performance.

All Nash Models, both open and closed, have cord tires as standard equipment.

TO ELIMINATE GLARING LIGHTS

Auto Trade Association Plans Testing Stations.

To Issue Certificates When Adjustments Are Made.

Experienced Men to Handle the Business.

During the past few months police of many cities of the State have conducted raids on motorists, in an effort to eliminate the evil of glaring headlights.

Thousands of motor car drivers have been forced to report to the police officers the next day, and all were told to have their headlights properly adjusted before they took their cars on the highways at night.

The greatest trouble is the lack of knowledge on the part of the motorist, the police judges, garage men, motor car dealers, etc. of proper headlight adjustments and how to make such adjustments stay put.

Realizing the necessity of protecting the motoring public, and providing proper places where headlight adjustments may be made, the California Automobile Trade Association will soon establish official testing stations throughout the State.

Certificates are to be issued by all official headlight testing stations and will bear the well-known wheel and radiator seal of the California Automobile Trade Association. On the back of the certificate will be a note to the motorist from the State Motor Vehicle Department, to the effect that the department recognizes such certificates as evidence that the headlights on that car have been properly adjusted on the date mentioned to comply with all legal requirements. The certificate will not, however, absolve the motorist from keeping his headlights in proper adjustment thereafter.

All official testing stations will be carefully selected and the men who actually do the work will be educated by illuminating engineers before being allowed to make any headlight adjustments. Under this plan the motorist will receive an intelligent service at all times by uniformly equipped stations and without fear of having inexperienced mechanics picked up around the shop experimenting with his lights.

A White Brings It to Your Breakfast Table.

Eight new two-ton jobs from the White Company have just been jut in service by the Hauser Packing Company. Nine other Whites have been hauling Hauser ham, bacon and other breakfast tit-bits for years and have passed the 100,000-mile mark in continuous service. In the picture you see the oldest and newest of the White products in the Hauser service.

HAM AND—VIA THE WHITE.

Breakfast bacon, lunch ham, dinner chops—

Whatever it is, if it comes from the Hauser Packing Company, it is pretty apt to get a ride on a White truck before it gets to your table. In fact, the chances are better than ever now, for that firm, in line with its policy of standardizing on White equipment, has just purchased eight new two-ton jobs of that make from the White Auto Company, local distributors, it is announced.

Back of this deal and influencing its inception is the dependable record of nine other Whites that have been hauling Hauser products for years. According to R. B. Brown, superintendent of the company, these veteran trucks have all passed the 100,000-mile mark in continuous service, and at present give every promise of tripling that record. In fact, they are living up to the White reputation for long life in every respect, he says.

The eight new trucks, resplendent in their red, green and black trimmings, were officially initiated into the service of beef, pork and mutton transportation a few days ago by Charles Ganster, assistant superintendent.

How Time Passes.

A railway brakeman was passing down his train after it had come to a standstill at a country station, shouting out the name of the place as he went:

"March! March!" he yelled. And then he did funny things with a lamp and a flag.

Suddenly, one of the windows was raised and, to the brakeman's great surprise, an excited passenger cried out: "Good heavens! It was February when I left!"—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

LUBRICATION.

The following table may be accepted as generally accurate in its recommendations for lubrication attentions to the various parts of the mechanism, though there will be variations in regard to certain cars and models.

Daily Lubrication.

Clutch collar and thrust bearing: grease or graphite.

Spring bolts: grease or graphite.

Drag-link joints or steering gear: grease or graphite.

Tie rod and king bolts: cylinder oil.

Lubrication Every 300 Miles.

Steering gear case: grease or graphite.

Brake levers and clevises: cylinder oil.

Commutator: cylinder oil (few drops).

Steering post: cylinder oil.

Brake shafts and pedal bearings: cylinder oil.

Lubrication Every 500 Miles.

Spring leaves: graphite or heavy oil.

Crankcase: cylinder oil, drain, flush out and refill.

Magneto-distributor: drop of cylinder oil in holes.

Gearcase: oil, light in winter and heavier in summer.

Lubrication Every 1000 Miles.

Wheel bearings: grease or graphite after thorough cleaning.

Universals: grease or graphite.

Torsion tube, radius rods and similar parts: grease or graphite.

Gearcase: drain, flush with kerosene and refill with oil, light for winter, heavier for summer.

Big Increase in Business on the Row is Expected

Increased business in Southern California during the last few months among some of the better grade old-line cars on the "Row" has created a feeling of optimism and brought expressions of great confidence in the large volume of business that the coming months will bring.

Lynn C. Buxton, distributor of the Haynes here, has just received a letter from the factory at Kokomo announcing an increase of one-third in production figures based upon orders resulting from the New York, Chicago and San Francisco shows.

The letter says, in part: "At the beginning of this week the factory was unable to meet the demands of the sales department for immediate car shipments, and so we were forced to make a substantial increase in our production.

"We are convinced that the demand for our new, improved '55' and '75' models will increase steadily from now on and that another month will see our plant running to a 100 per cent production schedule."

Mr. Buxton expressed himself as highly pleased at the volume of sales of Haynes cars here in Los Angeles and said that a large proportion of them were closed cars, or special jobs with "California" tops.

FARMERS ARE BIG TRUCK PURCHASERS.

FIGURES SURPRISE MEN WHO FIGURED MOSTLY ON CITY BUSINESS.

"One reason why the farmer did not take hold of the motor truck to do his hauling as quickly as did the city business man was because he could keep horses more conveniently than a man in the city," says L. P. Poyer of D. F. Poyer and Son, Transport Truck distributors.

"Lately the farmers are seeing the advantage of the modern motor truck, which does their hauling more quickly, efficiently and economically.

"One of the things which surprised the members of our organization most was the demand from the country for our line of trucks. We thought that over 90 per cent of our business would come from the cities and large towns neighboring Los Angeles. As a matter of fact we sell about 25 per cent of our trucks to farmers and concerns in small towns.

"It is no longer any question as to the superiority of the motor truck over the horse-drawn vehicle for hauling purposes, because the motor truck has proven itself to be more efficient and economical in every way. It is now only a matter of choosing the proper size truck to meet the requirements of one's business."

HAYNES OFFICIAL TO TOUR THE SOUTHLAND

J. A. Benell, factory representative of the Haynes Automobile Company, is planning a tour of the Southern California cities the coming two weeks, visiting in San Diego on Monday, El Centro and Imperial Valley towns on Wednesday and Thursday, San Bernardino and Riverside Friday, and during the following week Bakersfield, Santa Barbara and Fresno. Lynn C. Buxton, distributor for the Haynes here, will accompany Mr. Benell on at least a portion of his trip.

RESOLUTION

To build, not merely an exceedingly good motor car, but a motor car that should itself establish the fact of its supreme excellence:

To bring to this task the fruits of twenty years' experience as designer, manufacturer, metallurgist and engineer:

To employ for the building of this car of his design his new precision of manufacture that makes possible the highest quality of workmanship on a commercial basis:

To prosecute this task with that driving urge without which no great creative work has ever been accomplished:

Since the inception of his enterprise, this has been the resolution of C. Harold Wills, the designer and builder of the Wills Sainte Claire.

Today millions of Wills Sainte Claire miles, every mile a safe mile, every mile a thrilling mile, offer the best evidence of Mr. Wills' final achievement.

GIVE A THOUGH TO SERVICE

Before you decide upon the purchase of a motor car, seriously consider service.

What is the reputation of the dealer for taking care of his customers?

How is the dealer equipped to take care of your car throughout the State?

Will you be welcome to drive into any of his service stations and have your car properly cared for?

Will you be assured of the treatment to which you are entitled as a purchaser of a high-grade car?

We are proud of Don Lee's reputation for giving service.

Any time of the day or night the Don Lee service department is ready to care for your car; not only in Los Angeles but throughout the State. And remember the Don Lee organization has the desire to give good service in addition to having the equipment and mechanics trained to know the Cadillac car.

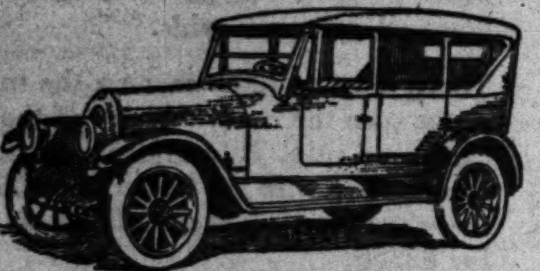
50 to 500 Miles—or More

The Franklin Standard of Demonstration

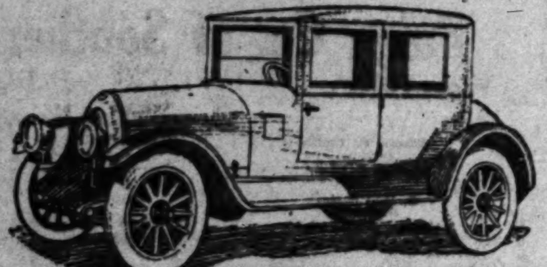
There are two ways to find out about performance. Buy the car and take the risk, or get the complete facts before buying. The latter course seems the more sensible, so we have made it possible. This demonstration shows exactly how the Franklin competes as a road car and on a cost-per-mile basis. Go to any one of our 500 dealers any time. It will pay you to know this car.

THREE NEW FRANKLIN MODELS



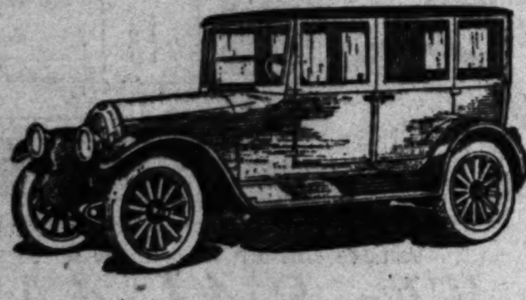
THE DEMI-SEDAN

Two cars in one—a five-passenger type which is already one of the most popular Franklin models. Permanent top; four doors; removable, non-rattle glass panels. The latter permit three different degrees of weather protection to suit all seasons. Weight, 2550 lbs. $2850.



THE COUPÉ

The newest Franklin model, a compact enclosed car representing several new developments of this convenient type so generally popular for personal use. Comfortably placed driver's seat; offset seat with ample room for two passengers; upholstered cab chair for fourth passenger which folds upon the toe-boards when not in use. Weight, 2650 lbs. $3200.



THE TOURING LIMOUSINE

An exclusive Franklin type for the motorist who employs a chauffeur; so designed, however as not to isolate the owner when he himself wishes to take the wheel. Removable glass panel between front and rear seats gives privacy or permits intimacy, as desired. Limousine comfort with Franklin road-ability. Weight, 2875 lbs. $3800.

Brougham $3300 Sedan $3450
Demi-Coupé $2750 Runabout $2400
Touring Car $2450

Today's Franklin Again Leads With A Score of Recent Improvements

JUST as Franklin was first with the four-cylinder engine, the six-cylinder engine, valves in the head and many other contributions to automobile progress, so today it again comes to the front with a score of important improvements.

The new case-hardened crankshaft alone is the most valuable advance in years. It triples the life of bearing surfaces—they now last an entire ownership without requiring taking up!

Starting is quicker, surer, easier—in any temperature. New and powerful starter, improved electric vaporizer and closed-circuit ignition system make this possible. Perfected silent-chain starter drive and patented Long-type aluminum pistons introduce quiet engine operation.

Lengthened rear springs increase Franklin comfort. Automatic lubrication of valves and of steering yoke pins lessens routine care. Propeller shaft is larger. With the new adjustable spring pivot bolts, every important point of wear in the Franklin is now easily adjustable—a big factor in longer life which no other car possesses.

And there are a dozen other improvements, each adding similarly to Franklin worth.

The most comfortable car to ride in
The easiest and safest car to handle
The most economical car to operate
The car that is freest from trouble
And can cover most miles in a day

There Are Several Points of Interest About This Picture.

First there is the nifty young lady about to alight from a gorgeous machine. Then there is the pensive miss at the rear, and thirdly there is the car itself. Its lines are graceful to say the least. It is a new Cadillac coupe, two-passenger, on display by the Don Lee Company.

OPTIMISIM SAVED BUSINESS.

BY J. D. MANSFIELD,

General Sales Manager Dort Motor Car Company, in an address to the sales and dealer organization of the Mission Motor Company.

Optimism saved the motor-car business. Never since the dark days at the outset of the motor-car industry did things look so black as they did in 1920, yet there was not a builder of motor cars that threw up the sponge and let the sheriff put a padlock on his plant. It was the inborn optimism that courses through the veins of every man in the great business of making and selling motor cars that restored the business to a state of equilibrium far in advance of that of any other industry.

Factories had piled up big inventories in order to be able to meet the demands that were far in excess of the possible supply. The crash came and the same factories were caught with all their profits of years tied up in inventories and no business ahead. They did not lose their nerve. They bit their lips and launched a campaign of liquidation, and the way those immense inventories melted away was the marvel of the powers of absorption by the the American manufacturer.

The Dort Motor Car Company woke up face to face with the fact that their resouces were mostly tied up in such an inventory. The executives were called together and a definite course of procedure was outlined. It was decided that we should take our losses and then go on and build motor cars along the lines that had been our policy since the inception of the business. We invested thousands of dollars in new equipment. Expensive changes were instituted, all for the purpose of building more thoroughly a good automobile. It was optimism that gave us the courage to do this when things looked awfully black. And what we did has been repeated in the leading motor-car factories in the country. The result is that today the buyer can get a better motor car than he was ever able to obtain at any previous time at a lower price than in any previous year.

Buick

We believe that the new Buick D-54 Roadster is the most strikingly beautiful car ever exhibited in Los Angeles and we cordially invite the Los Angeles motoring public to see the first of these new models now on display at our salesroom.

Dashing in appearance, the Buick Special 6-54 Roadster was exhibited for the first time at the New York Automobile Show, where it was the undoubted sensation of that National exhibit.

It is gratifying to the Howard Automobile Company to be able to place on display one of these new models so shortly after its production, and to offer to Los Angeles an opportunity to personally inspect a car fitted with every latest convenience found on the finest cars at home and abroad.

PRAISED FOR HIGH STANDARD

President of the Cadillac Company Compliments Local Dealer.

After two weeks in California, Herbert H. Rice, president and general manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, highly complimented Don Lee, not only for the extent of his organization in California and the number of cars sold, but also for the high standard of Don Lee Cadillac service.

"Don Lee is a worthy representative for Cadillac," said President Rice, "and his continual efforts to carry out Cadillac ideals and Cadillac principles are to be complimented. I find everywhere throughout the Don Lee organization, and in this I include dealers, a desire to give service. A dealer must have the proper equipment and the trained mechanics, but he must also have that honest desire to take care of the cars in the hands of owners. Don Lee service has always been of a very high standard, and I find after a trip through the territory that it is everything that has been claimed for it."

BE SURE BRAKES ARE UP TO SNUFF.

PEOPLE STARTING ON WEEK-END TRIPS SHOULD LOOK AT BRAKES IN ADVANCE.

"In a few weeks people will be starting out on the usual round of week-end trips," says Walter Smith of E. M. Smith Co., manufacturers of Emsco brake lining, "and it behooves every motorist to look after his brakes in advance.

"If you expect to travel over mountain roads," says Mr. Smith, "you should make doubly sure that your brakes are safe.

"Start at the brake pedal and the emergency brake lever and follow every connection back to the drums or transmission or rear wheel. See that all mechanical parts are free from dirt and rust and are properly oiled or greased and in working order.

"Have the brakes re-lined, if necessary, with a good asbestos lining, applied by a man who knows his business.

"It pays to ask for your lining by name and insist on getting it, then you can know in advance what bake safety to expect."

TRUCK MAKES HOUSE MOVING VERY EASY.

ELIMINATE BOTHER OF CRATING WHEN YOU SHIP FURNITURE BY MACK.

There was a day when the householder, if he decided his prospects were better in another community, loaded his earthly possession on a wagon, together with his family, and with dog trotting underneath they set out for the new location. But that was before the advent of the motor truck in the long-distance hauling business.

In almost every instance railroad shipping requires that the goods be crated. This is not necessary for truck transportation. The trucks not only cover the long haul, but attend to collection and final delivery. Because of this mobility, E. H. Shull, Jr., has ben able to build up an extensive business in the exclusive shipment of household goods by truck. Recently he was granted franchise to cover his operations between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Mr. Shull's equipment for the intercity run consists of a two and a half ton Mack truck. Recently he told a representative of the Mack-International Motor Truck Corporation his Mack had made twenty-one round trips between Los Angeles and San Francisco, hauling furniture, a total distance, including incidental mileage of 21,000 miles. Mr. Shull operates over the valley route, and each time his Mack negotiates the famous "Ridge." In addition to its own load the truck drags a loaded trailer. For the 21,000 miles of this kind of operation, Mr. Shull says the total upkeep cost of the Mack truck has been only $40, or less than 1-5 of 1 cent per mile.

ADDITIONS OUT TO FLYING GOOSE CLAN.

Three new Wills Sainte Claire models have issued from the factories of C. H. Wills & Company at Marysville, Mich., and are rapidly being distributed to dealers. The latest additions to the Flying Gray Goose family are an imperial sedan, a limousine, and a town car. These cars complete the Wills Sainte Claire line for 1922—the others already in distribution being the five-passenger touring car, the roadster, the coupe and the sedan.

Hupmobile

$1465 Here

Unless it gives the simple, staple results which the Hupmobile owner gets, no car can truly be said to be worth what it costs.

It should everlastingly keep going. It should not have to be "hauled home" except for accident.

The repair costs per year should be negligible. (We believe the average cost per car for Hupmobile repairs is lower than any car in the world.)

It should, like the Hupmobile, have a reputation for low-cost long life so good that it will always command a high price when resold.

These things are axiomatic. They make up the thing known as value. They are the things you pay for and get in the Hupmobile.

A. B. C. Hardy. Guy Peasley.

Going the Rounds of the State.

A. B. C. Hardy, president and general manager of the Olds motor works, and Guy Peasley, general sales manager of the Olds motor works, are visiting all the J. W. Leavitt & Co. branches in California. They stop off in Los Angeles this week.

OLDS EXECUTIVES HERE.

Bringing with him an air of conservative optimism, radiating with energy and enthusiasm, Mr. A. B. C. Hardy, general manager of the Olds Motor Works and a veteran automobile executive, arrived in Los Angeles for a brief visit last week.

Mr. Hardy was accompanied on his trip by Guy Peasley, general sales manager of the Olds Company; George Carroll, representing the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, and A. D. Plughoff, vice-president and general manager of the J. W. Leavitt organization, distributors for the Oldsmobile line in California and Arizona.

On Tuesday night Manager L. V. Starr of the Leavitt organization here, tendered a banquet in honor of the visitors in the Blue Room of the Athletic Club, at which more than forty dealers and salesmen of the Oldsmobile family in Southern California were present.

The gathering listened to talks by Mr. Peasley on sales; by Mr. Carroll on the General Motors system of handling automobile paper, and by Mr. Hardy on the manufacturing situation and the prospects for the future.

Mr. Hardy outlined the plans of the Oldsmobile factory organization for the year and also told of some of the ideas that were only in the embryo and that he believed might take two or three years to work out.

SEDIMENT TRAP.

Most present-day gasoline tanks are fitted with a sediment trap, which usually is located at the place where the pipe line leaves the tank. This trap has a wire gauze screen and a cup is provided to catch foreign matter. The car owner should make it a practice to clean this sediment trap out twice a month during active operation. The present grade of motor fuel is not strictly pure and foreign matter rapidly accumulates in this catch all.

All communications intended for this department should be addressed to John Dougherty, The Times, Los Angeles, Cal.

AMONG THE FANS.

The inoculation of L. M. Lewis with the Southern California germ failed to "take" and he departed for Indiana on the 25th of last month.

W. I. Lundy of Warsaw, Ind., was a visitor at the clubrooms last week.

The Pasadena and Long Beach players held a team match at Long Beach on Feb. 16, and the Pasadena players walked off with the big end of the score, 26 to 18 and 16 draws. Schoolcraft, Stone, Stern, Wheeler, Moulton, Park, Seabury and Vail were the "big men" on the Pasadena team, while Knight, Micklejohn, A. McLain, McLeod, Callahan and Morrison did the best playing for the Long Beach team. Although this is the second time Pasadena has beaten the Long Beach team, the latter are still not satisfied and have challenged for a return match to be played in Pasadena in the near future.

Their continued success has caused the Pasadena players to become a little "chesty" and they are now contemplating issuing a challenge to the Los Angeles club.

Team match play is one of the best ways to keep interest in the game at the "boiling point" and should be encouraged by all the clubs. Let's hear from Riverside, Pomona and other surrounding towns. Los Angeles could be divided in zones and at least four teams put in the field.

Mr. Charles A. Bradley, Kiefer, Okla., a former champion of that State was a visitor at the clubrooms this week.

Mr. James Adam, who has been in the East for several months, has returned to the city.

Mr. W. R. Hogsett and J. A. Nelson, two strong players from Kansas City, Mo., are in the city for a few weeks.

STEWART VS. BANKS ENDINGS.

The following endings were taken from the Glasgow Herald, via Pittsburg Dispatch.

"The ballot produced a 'Denny' opening for the first game. Stewart having the choice took the Black men and proceeded as follows: 10-14, 22-17, 7-10, 17-13, 3-7, 25 22, 14-17, 21-14, 9-25, 29-22, 11-15, the same as played by the late C. F. Barker, U.S.A., in his match against the late Richard Jordan, Edinburgh, at Boston in 1900, for the world's championship." This ending was reached:

Black—4, 10, 12, 13, 21.

"In the second game Banks had the Black side of the 'Denny,' usually considered the weaker side. Banks at the eleventh move varied from Stewart's play at 11-15 by adopting a new move, 10-13. Kear's Encyclopedia gives 10-14 and 11-15, but mentions nothing about this new move of Banks. It was quite clear to the onlookers that Stewart made the correct reply, as he very soon got a strong game on, and it looked as if Banks's new move would lose." This is the ending:

In the third game this ending was reached from a Kelso (10-15, 24-19) opening:

For some reason the American champion had the impression that Stewart had played weakly, especially after 22-18 at the tenth move, an impression he was to see dissipated before the end of the game, as Stewart forced a brilliant win."

Here is the ending:

"The fifth and sixth games were "Single Corner," but there was nothing of especial interest in the endings as given. Stewart adopted the 12-16 line and Banks replied with the 18-14 bust. With the Black side Banks played the older 8-11 line, but both games resulted in draws.

OVER SIX MILLION FROM AUTOMOBILES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, March 4.—The State Motor Vehicle Department during the year beginning Feb. 1, 1921 and ending Jan. 31, 1922, collected $6,036,284.72 in registration fees from the motor vehicle owners of California, according to annual figures just compiled by Charles J. Chenu, director of the department.

Chenu's report shows that Los Angeles county motorists paid the largest amount in fees to the State, the total being $1,942,100.91. Los Angeles county's share of the receipts totaled $971,050.45. The apportionment of the moneys collected is made to the State and counties on a 50 per cent basis, and the money is used for road maintenance purposes.

AUTOMOTIVE CHIEF ARRIVES TOMORROW.

One of the most distinguished figures in the automotive industry, and recognized for years as a real captain of industry, will arrive in Los Angeles tomorrow. John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, has just completed a tour of the country, visiting branches and their subsidiary dealer organizations with a view to "feeling the purse" of the industry, particularly as it affects the Overland and Willys-Knight cars.

John N. Willys,
President of the Willys-Overland Company, manufacturers of the Willys-Knight and Overland cars, who will be a visitor in Los Angeles this week.

Mr. Willys, who rescued the Willys-Overland from bankruptcy more than a dozen years ago by gathering over Sunday the few hundred dollars necessary to meet its payroll check at the bank on Monday, has for years been prominent in the councils of the leaders of the industry. From a small beginning, under his leadership, the firm has come to be among the largest in the country with a tremendous volume of foreign trade.

On Monday Mr. Willys, together with Mr. Charles Y. Knight, inventor of the famous Knight sleeve valve motor, will be guests at a banquet at the Alexandria Hotel at which executives and members of the staff of the Willys-Overland Pacific branch here, together with Overland and Willys-Knight dealers of Southern California, will be in attendance. Both distinguished guests will address the gathering.

TELLS RULES TO GOVERN TEST.

First Car Into Yosemite to Win Silver Plaque.

No Circus Stunts Required to Capture It.

Buick Walked Off With the Honors Last Year.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

YOSEMITE, March 4.—Rules to govern the annual award of the beautiful bronze and silver plaque offered last spring by Yosemite Lodge to the first car into Yosemite Valley over an open road were announced today.

In putting up a trophy, Yosemite Lodge was actuated by a desire to do something that would really benefit the thousands of persons anxious to pay another visit to Yosemite Valley as soon as the roads are open. Another resort for many years had been offering a cup to the first automobile into the park, which aroused keen competition and took care of the stunt side of Yosemite motor travel, as the winning cars performed many notable feats to achieve passage over the snow-blocked roads.

Accordingly, Yosemite Lodge undertook to provide a trophy which would not require any circus stunts to win, but would keep dealers and others on their toes to see who would be the first to demonstrate that it was possible to get into the valley by motor, thereby proving to the waiting world that the greatest of all vacation spots again is available to the automobilists. It is one of the conditions of the rules governing the award of the trophy, which have been drawn up with the advice of various motor experts, that the road must be opened to ordinary travel—that is, it must be possible for an average driver to follow the first car into the park. One test of this will be announcement by the superintendent of Yosemite National Park that the road traversed is open to the public within one week after the first car has entered.

The Yosemite Lodge trophy is one of the most beautiful ever offered in competition. The bronze and silver plaque, decorated with giant Sequoias in bas-relief, is mounted on polished redwood. It was won last year by the Howard Automobile Company of San Francisco, with a 1921 model Buick.

INDUSTRY BOOM AT REDLANDS.

Automobile Dealers Make Many Improvements; Big Year Anticipated.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, March 4. — Big improvements have been made along automobile row recently indicating that the automobile dealers are expecting a fine year. W. L. Thornquest, well-known tire man, has spent about $5000 in equipping his corner for a service station. He has put in two compression pumps for gasoline and one for oil. He has entirely remodeled the building to take care of this.

The Standard Oil Company has completed its new service station near the City Hall. Lawns and drives have been put in and the station is one of the most attractive in the city.

Spoor & Yerxa have remodeled a building on Cajon street and have established a show and salesroom for their cars, the Packard and Durant, there.

W. W. Tara has sold the Casa Loma Garage to Claude Sedgwick, but retains the Overland and Willys-Knight agency.

LOWEST TIRE PRICES IN HISTORY, CLAIM.

Attracting wide attention among motorists in this territory is the big stock reduction sale now in progress at the salesrooms of the Stephens Tires Stores Company.

According to Gordon Williams, general manager of that firm, production maintained in volume at the factory in order to keep up the standard of quality and keep down the price of Stephens tires has resulted in large overstocks in the East. These had to be moved, and a large share has been sent here for disposition. That accounts, he says, for the sale at this time, in which Stephens pneumatics are available at further substantial reductions in prices.

"The prices we are quoting on Stephens tires now," says Mr. Williams, "are the lowest in the history of these pneumatics."

HAMLIN CHOPS PRICES ON HIS USED MODELS.

When it comes to chopping prices on used cars you have to hand it to Ralph Hamlin, Franklin distributor. Desiring to clear out his used car stock before the tax collector rolled around, Hamlin instructed Frank Humes, his used car manager, to slice off 20 per cent on every used and renewed car on hand.

On first thought 20 per cent may not seem unusual in a used car sale, but when it is considered that Hamlin's prices were conceded to be at rock bottom before the sale, the additional 20 per cent cut was a decided shock to motor car dealers and the buying public as well.

REO PRESIDENT HERE ON VISIT.

P. L. Emerson, president of the Reo Motor Car Company of California and manager of the factory branch in San Francisco, arrived in Los Angeles Wednesday from the north for a visit of several days with Manager Byron C. Foy of the branch here. Mr. Emerson has placed Reo "on the map" in Northern California and during the few months since coming to the Coast has won a large place for himself in San Francisco and California automotive circles as a capable executive and a thorough business man.

Broke Into Race Game on a Bike.

Here is Pietro Bordino, the famous Italian speed hound, as he looked just after winning the Orbassnao road duel in which he defeated the greatest riders of continental Europe in a 468-mile battle. Before he took up automobile racing Bordino also won other memorable motorbike races.

BORDINO CHAMP CYCLIST.

While the public may have forgotten the fact, it is well known among the veterans of the motorcycle racing game that Ralph De Palma broke into the speed world on one of the benzine bikes away back in 1903 at Manhattan Beach, N. Y. It was not long after that he graduated to the wheel of a Fiat.

Now along comes his countryman, Pietro Bordino, who also happens to be a motorbike champion in his native land as well as one of the Fiat stars. Bordino has several big Italian motorcycle road races to his credit, including the Circuit de Oriassano, Circuit de Cremona and the Susa-Monsenisio event, all three classics in the Neapolitan motorbike racing world. It is of interest to note that Bordino's victories in these events were won on an American machine.

OWNERS' SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

BY JAMES W. MARSH.

[It is pretty generally admitted that the average motorist, while knowing a few things about the automobile he drives, is not an expert mechanic or finished repairman. Explanations of a too technical nature go right over his head. From the standpoint of the average motorist, then, James W. Marsh, professor in mechanic arts at the University of California, Southern Branch, is conducting the Owners' Service Department of The Times and will help solve problems that confront the average driver and in terms that steer clear of mixed fractions and the value of X. Mr. Marsh has made an extensive study of the use and care of the automobile, and questions addressed to him, care the Automobile Editor, The Times, will be answered through these columns.—Ed. note.]

The simple driving of an automobile, that is, starting, stopping, steering, gear setting, the use of the clutch, brakes and accelerator, is very easy to learn, but to handle a machine with ease, precision, skill and judgment, to drive perfectly and always do the right thing at the right moment is a state of perfection difficult of attainment.

We are all, I hope, students striving to earn the degree of highest efficiency in the art and science of driving.

After learning the use of the different levers, pedals and wheel under an instructor, and acquire the ability to steer, shift, start and stop, you are then in a position to learn to drive, and skill is gained by driving. Before starting out alone learn the written laws of the State and city and abide by them; but above all law learn to live up to the unwritten-law of human courtesy.

TAKE IT EASY.

Drive slowly, stop frequently, approach crossings with caution, and in a little while the hands, feet, eyes and brain will become co-ordinated and the right thing will be done without conscious mental effort.

Out on the road try to drive at a steady pace, use the brakes as little as is consistent, learn to control the speed by the use of the accelerator almost entirely. Leave the clutch engaged while approaching possible stops, close the accelerator and note how quickly the car slows down. Brakes are necessities, of course, but both tires and gasoline are saved by using them as little as possible. Drive with the spark advanced normally; do not control the engine speed by spark position. Learn to shift gears in all sorts of places.

Do not turn off ignition on a hill and permit the car to drag the engine; it is sure to damage the engine if done to any extent by the unburned gasoline washing the oil off the cylinder walls; further there is danger of the unburned gasoline collecting in the muffler and exploding, wrecking it and possibly setting the car on fire. If you must use the engine for a brake, set the gears in second, or low if necessary, close the throttle, and the car will be under control even on steep grades, requiring but a minimum use of the brakes. Learn to use judgment and moderation.

ON RIGHT OF WAY.

Good driving does not lie in always accelerating or stopping in the least possible space, in the highest speed attainable, in demonstrations of hair-breadth and hair-raising infinitesimal distances, nor in the conscienceless stealing of the right of way from another vehicle. There are circumstances under which every act above stated may be necessary and correct except the last. Stealing of right of way, rushing crossings, cutting corners and every other form of overbearing selfishness and disregard for the rights of others practically amount to a crime as they are the direct causes of a large percentage of accidents. Drivers who persist in such practices should be deprived of their licenses as the minimum penalty.

Question: I have just put in new valves and guides and new rocker-arm shafts on my Oakland. It runs very well at slow speeds, but misses when the engine runs fast. I can't locate the cause. What do you think it is?

A. A. A.

Answer: I infer that you have checked up your ignition system, that your battery is well charged and the contacts clean. If so, then you will probably find the trouble to be caused by weak valve springs, or it may be the valve stems fit too closely in the new guides, or the rocker arms bind on the shaft. This would have the same effect as weak valve springs, as the added friction of the new parts would prevent the springs from quickly and completely closing the valves. It will be better to run the engine and let the parts wear in rather than to take them down and lap them. If the springs are weak they must be replaced. To test the springs compress them on a platform scale to some given length, say two and a half inches, and see how much weight each will pull up when the scale is balanced against the downward pressure. Test a new spring in the same manner and the proper spring tension can be ascertained. The difference in strength should be but a few ounces.

Q.: The rear axle of my car is getting so that it vibrates, especially when going uphill. The ring gear and pinion are in first-class condition and do not growl.

W. W.

A.: Your trouble lies probably in worn bearings, especially the thrust bearings may cause vibration on a heavy pull. Your trouble may be in the adjustment of the bearings of the pinion shaft, or the universal joints may be badly worn. It will be best to take out the entire rear end, take it down, wash all parts thoroughly with kerosene and inspect carefully. You will be able to detect any worn or broken parts. These must be replaced with good ones. In reassembling be sure that all parts fit well, all nuts and bolts drawn tight and cotter-pinned. The gear and pinion should be so adjusted that they move freely together with no lost motion. The peripheries of the gears should be flush. Put in new felt washers, lubricate with a good nonfluid oil. Do not neglect the universal joints.

Q.: What makes my Ford miss fire after running all right for a mile or so?

A. L. N.

A.: Water in the gasoline pipe and carburetor. Clean the carburetor and gas line. Under the gasoline tank you will find a drain cock. It will be so badly clogged up with dirt that you will find it necessary to run a piece of wire up the cock to open it. Catch the stuff that runs out and see the cause of your trouble.

Q.: Why does a left front tire wear faster than the right when the front wheels are out of alignment?

H. N. H.

A.: Because the left front wheel carries less weight than the right. When a car runs on the right side of the road the wheel nearest the curb carries the greater weight because the car tilts in that direction. The wheel with the lightest load of course slips the easiest.

Q.: What is the cause of my speedometer swinging back and forth and not giving a steady reading? It has been getting worse.

M. E. D.

A.: It may be the inside of the flexible shaft is badly worn, but probably your trouble is lack of grease on the chain. Take the flexible shaft off, pull out one of the couplings as far as possible and unhook it from the chain. Tie a string on the end of the chain and pull the chain out. This will pull the string into the casing. Grease the chain with cup grease and pull it back to place by the string. Hook on the coupling and put the shaft back in place. This will, I think, stop the swinging of the indicator.

Q.: What causes a quantity of white powder to form on the bottom of a storage battery?

W. M. F.

A.: There is a leak in one of the jars. The sulphuric acid coming in contact with the iron supports of the battery forms iron sulphate, the white powder which you observe. This condition will shorten the life of your battery. Note which cell is leaking by observing the loss of electrolyte. The cell which requires the most water, of course, is the leaking one. Have a new jar installed.

REGULATE SPEED BY, YOUR COMFORT.

HORSE POWER A SMALL FACTOR IN GOVERNING THE DASH OF CHARIOT.

Roland Rohlfs, noted aviator who represented America in the International Gordon-Bennett Races in France, and who gained world-wide fame at one time as the breaker of the world's altitude record, recently drove a Franklin sedan many thousands of miles through the wildest and most unexplorable parts of Colorado, Utah, Arizona and New Mexico.

With the idea of taking up a rancher's life, he proceeded to explore some of the wildest and least developed parts of the United States. He forded mountain torrents, to attempt to cross which even the natives dubbed as foolhardy. He penetrated forests where he was forced at times to construct his own log roads in order to get through. He traversed deserts where there was oftentimes a day's journey intervening between signs of human habitation and frequently aided other motorists broken down in the midst of cactus-dotted wastes, some of whom had been stranded for several days.

After driving a Franklin 50,000 miles under practically every kind of road conditions, Mr. Rohlfs expresses the opinion that the average speed of an automobile is regulated by the comfort of the passengers and not by horse power.

BEARING ADJUSTMENT.

Whenever a wheel fitted with a cup and cone bearing is removed, the cup of the bearing is removed with it and the bearing must be adjusted in replacing the wheel. The proper way to do this is to turn the bearing up tight and then revolve the wheel a few times by hand. This does away with any tendency to backlash. Next the adjusting nut is backed off very slightly, so that by grasping two spokes in line, one above and other below the hub, a slight shake is felt in the wheel. This movement should be just barely perceptible and if it is more than this, it is too much and the adjusting nut should be a little tighter. When this condition has been gotten just right, lock the wheel in place.

PICTURES TO SHOW THE WAY.

Government Reels to Depict Best Way to Construct Our Highways of Asphalt.

In line with its policy of informing the public, especially those who pay the taxes, as to the economies that may be effected in the construction of highways, as well as the proper methods of construction the United States government, through the bureau of public roads, Department of Agriculture, has just completed for free distribution and use in motion-picture houses as well as at conventions, Chautauquas and educational conferences throughout the country, two reels of pictures showing in detail the construction of the various types of asphalt roads. The pictures were exhibited for the first time at the recent American Good Roads Congress in Chicago.

The pictures were taken last summer in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and other States under the direction of E. J. Wulff, senior highway engineer, U. S. bureau of public roads, and E. J. Kelly of the motion picture division, United States Department of Agriculture. The pictures were produced particularly for the purpose of showing how the best results may be obtained in asphalt construction. They are loaned to responsible parties free of charge, except for transportation costs.

Grows from Hole in the Wall to Large Building

It was only a few years ago when Dick Just, distributor for Diamond automobile tires and Goodrich motor truck tires, opened a little vulcanizing shop on Twelfth street near Grand avenue, and the service and personal attention which he gave his customers is the secret of his rapid growth from a little space of 16 by 40 feet to the present large, modern and well equipped building containing nearly 12,000 square feet which his company now occupies.

The last removal was only one of several expansions through the addition of more floor space, the building of balconies, etc., a larger building in 1914 at 209 West Twelfth street and another move in 1918 to 1217 South Hope street, and this time this large and well appointed building at 1000 East Eighth street, corner of Gladys avenue.

The new building is designed with six large doors to the service room opening on Gladys avenue. The press room, which is equipped with large hydraulic presses for applying solid truck tires, is separate from the service room. This was so arranged that the taking off and putting on of tires and the handling of wheels on machines could be done without interference, cutting down to a minimum the time required for tire changes, which is a feature appreciated by truck operators.

She Knew.

A capable housewife was trying to impress upon her maid the need of system in her work.

After carefully explaining her own methods in her work, she asked: "Now, Olga, just what do I mean by system? Do you understand what system means?"

"Ja, ja," giggled Olga, "seesteem means doin' theengs the hardest way."—[Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The very advanced couple. Thora and Sigfried are about six months ahead of all "movements." Way back in the dim days before psychoanalysis and Freud were subjects of conversation, Thora was even then having perfectly frightful dreams and complexes and was figuring them out all by her lonesome. And Sigfried is just as advanced. He thinks the futurist crowd is just a hidebound conservative gang "All these futurists," Sigfried will tell you, "aren't radical enough. They're too conventional!" In Sigfried's latest canvas, called "Organs of the Body," both he and Thora believe that Sigfried has something "ultimate." Oh, yes, Sigfried and Thora are married. They had to. It was getting so bourgeoise the other way. Sigfried and Thora are very congenial and spend practically every second Tuesday in the month together. Their congeniality lies in the similarity of their inhibitions, Thora will tell you.

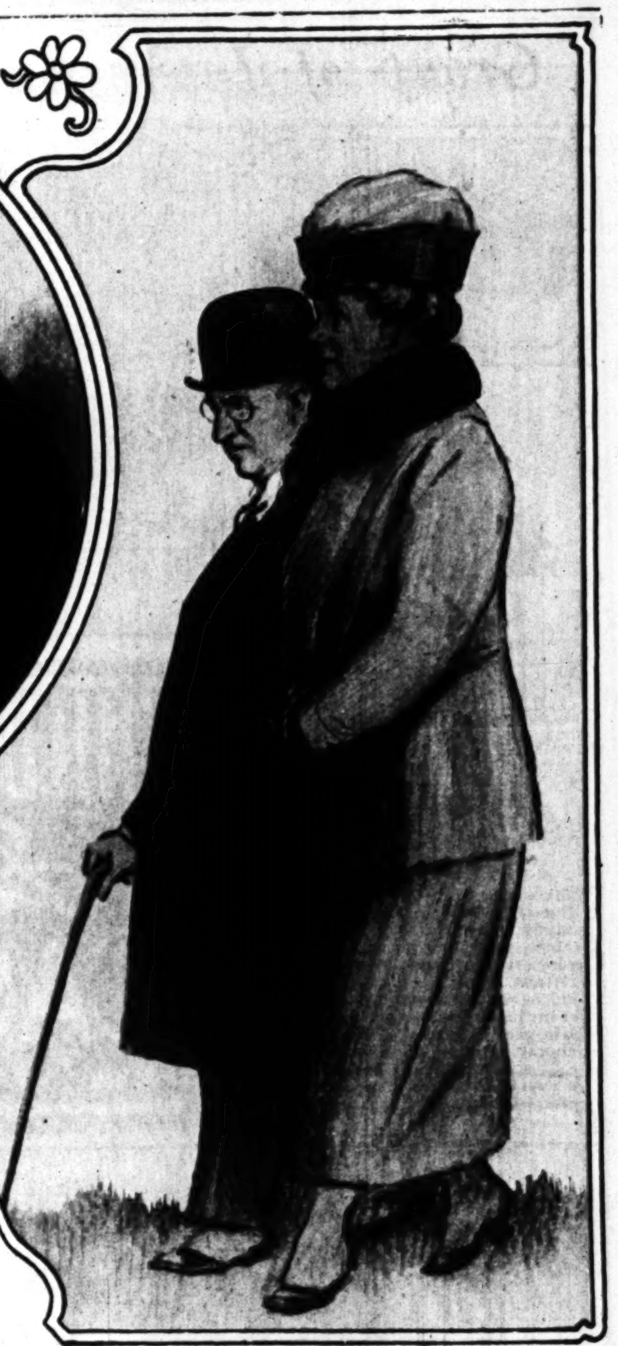
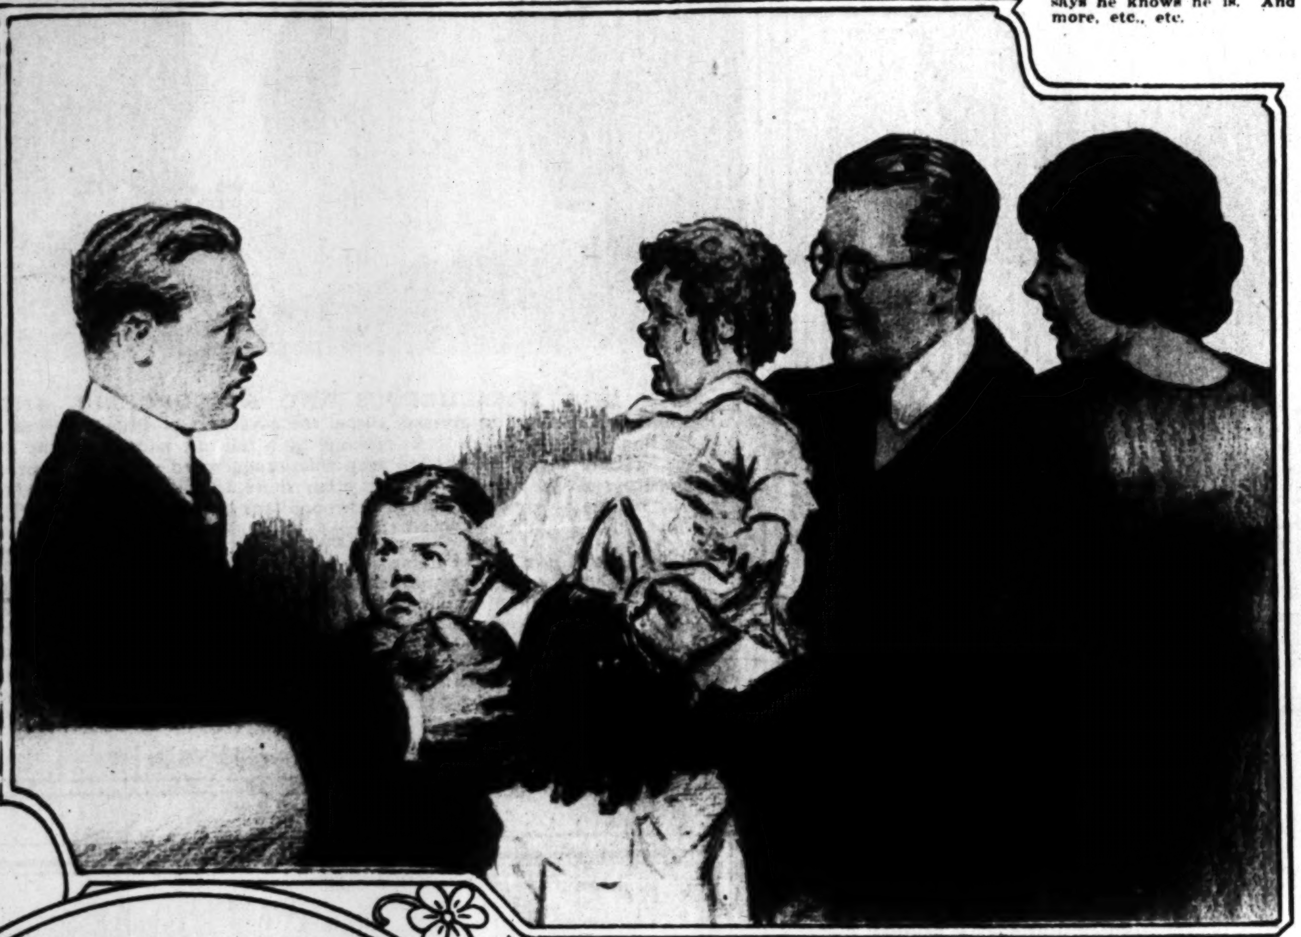
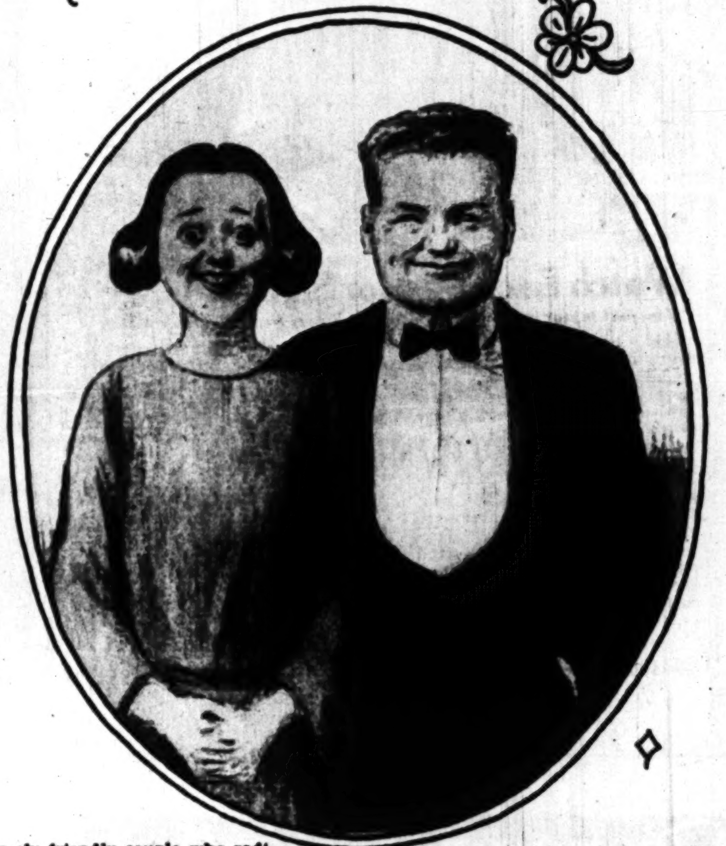
(ABOVE)
The awfully correct couple. They are great sticklers for good form and breeding. Humor has it that once Mrs. Van Wickless, the better half of the union, fainted dead away at a dinner party upon observing that a woman across the table had removed her gloves much too soon. Both Mr. and Mrs. Van Wickless are strong on propriety, and are constantly on the lookout for something low or coarse in the conversation. For instance, any reference to having babies gives Mrs. Van Wickless a headache for days.



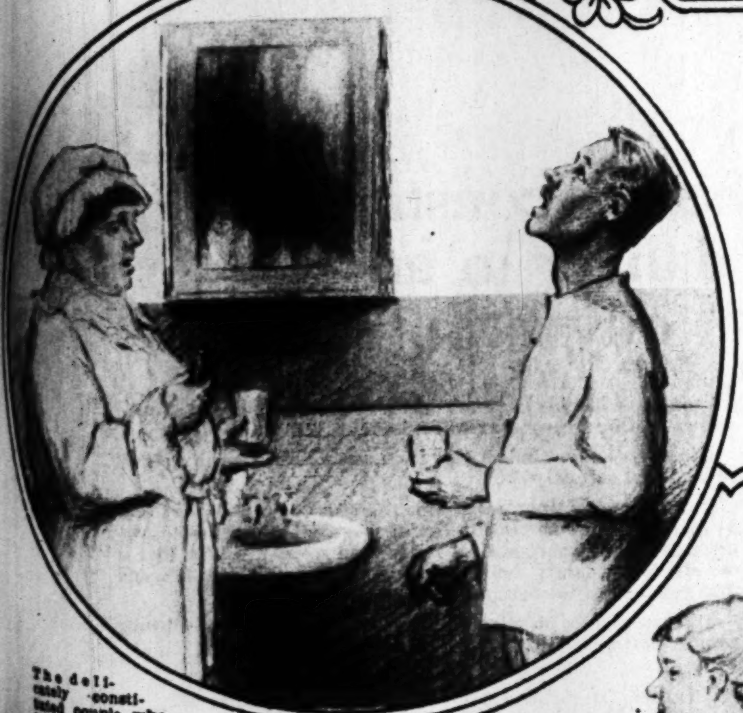
(RIGHT)
The contradictory pair. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are deep in wordy argument. About whether it was on the Tuesday before, or the Tuesday after Christmas that Dagna, Mrs. Brown's erstwhile domestic, told her to shut up. "I know it was the Tuesday before Christmas," Mrs. Brown is saying, and adds. "You just say it wasn't to contradict me!" Mr. Brown enters a denial. Of course, he isn't contradicting her. Right then and there Mrs. Brown says he is. And says he knows he is. And what's more, etc., etc.



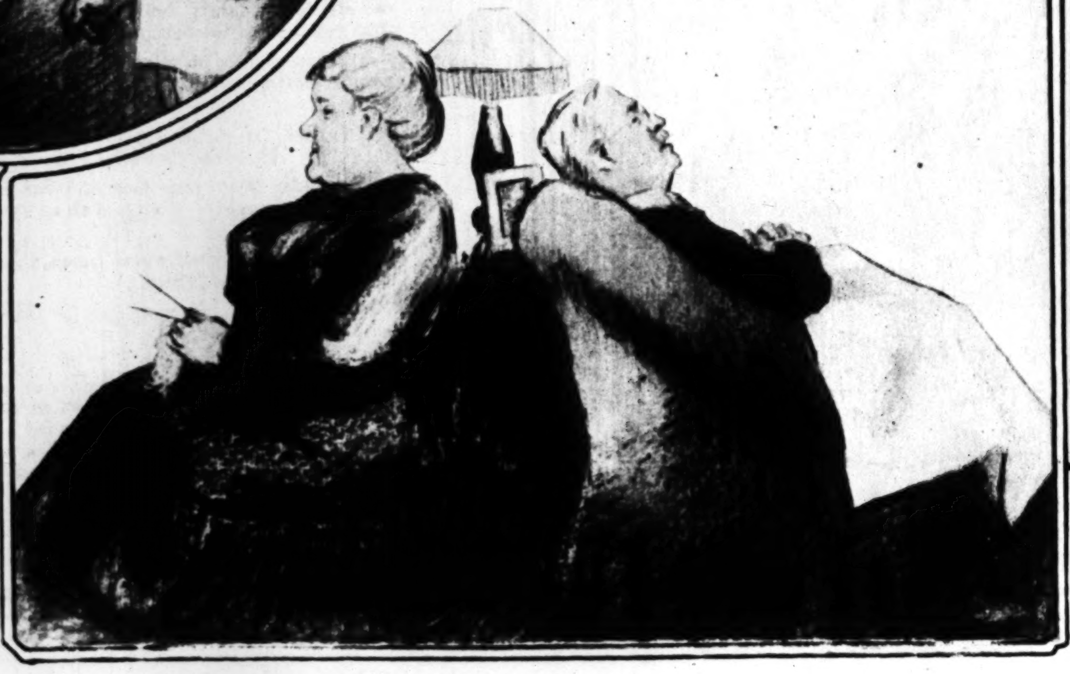
The couple who think in terms of their children. (They aren't a bit keen on other people's children, however.) Suppose that a male caller asks Mr. and Mrs. Moisten what they think of the latest dances. Right away Mrs. Moisten will be reminded of that awfully cunning thing Braithwaite the baby said last week when he saw Rags the Irish Terrier wagging his tail. Braithwaite turned to his mother and said with such a roguish twinkle in his eye, "See Wags, shakin' de simmy." "He meant 'Shimmy,'" translates Mr. Moisten when his laughter is somewhat controlled. "Pretty good for a kid of two years! Two years, think of it!" And if little Braithwaite is in the room he will laugh long and loud at the anecdote, and repeat it for the caller's benefit. In the accompanying picture little Marylinne is about to give, with reluctance, a great big love kiss to nice Mr. Sanderson, the caller. "Why aren't you married?" asked Mr. and Mrs. Moisten of their bachelor guest in, oh, such pitying tones.



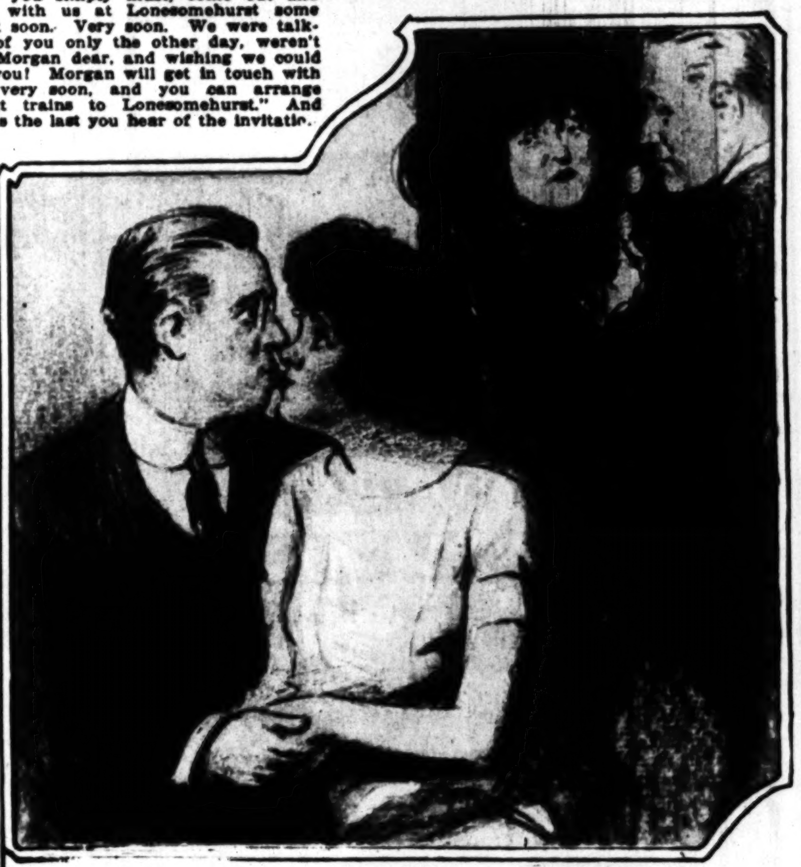
The extremely friendly couple who radiate cordiality. "Now you must," they say, "you simply must, come out and dine with us at Lonesomehurst some night soon. Very soon. We were talking of you only the other day, weren't we, Morgan dear, and wishing we could see you! Morgan will get in touch with you very soon, and you can arrange about trains to Lonesomehurst." And that's the last you hear of the invitatio.



The delicately constituted couple who believe that an ounce of prevention, etc. On the slightest provocation Mrs. Tuttle will tell you all about her dear Robert's terrible liver complaint, and how if he had waited one month longer before consulting a specialist—! With even less provocation Mrs. Tuttle will tell you all the choicest details of her last operation, and how Robert, the dear, gave it to her for a birthday gift. We show you here the Tuttles getting ready for the Land of Nod. Mr. T. is gargling with good old bicarbonate and Mrs. T. is swallowing three little pills for luck.



The home bodies. The home-loving couple love their home. They will tell you they love home just as another person will say, "I love my little girl," or still another, "I love the Baptist faith."



The very affectionate pair. Mr. and Mrs. Stowitts are an unusually loving couple. That you can see on very slight acquaintance. At home on in the public eye, it's all the same to Mr. and Mrs. Stowitts, or Lovey and Precious Baby, as they are wont to address each other. Sooner or later, in any gathering, there is the sound of kissing and Lovey and Precious Baby will be found snuggling in one chair, in a corner. And should Mr. Stowitts absent himself from the room for any length of time, Mrs. Stowitts will be terribly worried for fear Precious Baby may have fainted, or that something equally dreadful may have happened to him!

Watch Each Day for Signs of Gray

"Have faith in your mirror, though you doubt all other friends." Lillian Russell

Let your mirror tell you the truth about your looks. Be daily vigilant for signs of age or failing beauty. Beautiful hair is your greatest charm. Well-kept, becomingly-dressed, harmoniously-colored hair should be every woman's chief desire. Gray hair, even on a young head, means age to the unthinking majority. Banish the first gray lock with "Brownatone." Faded, streaked, bleached, or discolored hair nullifies facial beauty. Tint it to natural colors with "Brownatone." Apply it at home, quickly, easily and safely. "Brownatone" is greaseless and odorless, will not rub off or wash out. Guaranteed harmless to hair growth or skin. Sold at drug and toilet counters all over the United States and Canada. Two colors, shading from "Golden to Medium Brown" and "Dark Brown to Black"—50c and $1.50. There is constant danger in an oily skin

IF your skin has the habit of continually getting oily and shiny—you cannot begin too soon to correct this condition.

A certain amount of oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth and supple.

But too much oil not only spoils the attractiveness of any skin by giving it an embarrassing shininess—it actually tends to promote an unhealthy condition of the skin itself. A skin that is too oily is constantly liable to infection from dust and dirt, and thus encourages the formation of blackheads, etc.

You can correct an oily skin by using each night the following simple treatment:

WITH warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands.

Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion.

Rinse first with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better.

If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

GET a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter—give your skin its first treatment tonight. A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's will last for a month or six weeks of this treatment, and for general cleansing use. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.

To protect the skin against wind and dust, apply Pond's Vanishing Cream each time before you go out

Your skin needs different creams at different times

ONE cream alone cannot supply the skin with all the elements that are needed to keep it in perfect condition. Certain flaws to which the skin is subject can be prevented only by a softening, protective cream. Other flaws need an oil cream that cleanses and stimulates.

Flaws that require a daytime cream without oil

Wind and cold tend to dry the natural moisture out of the skin. To prevent this, protect your skin by applying a little Pond's Vanishing Cream before going out. This cream is based on an ingredient famous for its softening effect. It leaves the skin fresh and invisibly shielded.

Before you powder, smooth a little Pond's Vanishing Cream on the face. It is absorbed instantly, removing any shine there may be on the skin. Moreover it cannot come out in a shine later, for there is not a drop of oil in it. With this softening cream as a base, powder just as usual. You will find that the powder lasts many times longer.

Flaws that need an oil cream at night

Have you begun to notice little fine lines under the eyes, depressions at the corners of the mouth and the base of the nose? The way to prevent these from getting deeper is to give your skin regularly a tonic rousing with an oil cream. Pond's Cold Cream, smoothed into the little fine lines, keeps them from forming real wrinkles.

For the nightly cleansing also use this delicate oil cream. Let it remain on a few moments, then wipe it off with a soft cloth. This rich cream contains just enough oil to penetrate the pores and rid them of every particle of dirt.

Use regularly these two creams that every normal skin needs. Neither will clog the pores nor encourage the growth of hair. Your druggist and the department stores carry both jars and tubes in convenient sizes. The Pond's Extract Co., 131 Hudson Street, New York.

"Sunrise." An authenticated Blakelock. This painting, presented by Ralph Albert Blakelock to William Benjamin O'Brien in 1868, at the artist's studio in New York, was until recently owned by George R. Fower, 2516 Cincinnati street, Los Angeles. It was purchased by Baron Arpad Paszthory, 1825 Highland avenue, Hollywood. It was executed on a piece of common floor oilcloth.

SILVER MOON

A Rose That is Beautiful in its Simplicity

This climbing rose is as distinct in its way as the Paul's Scarlet Climber which we recently advertised. The flowers are of mammoth proportions, often measuring four and a half or five inches across.

The plant is a rampant grower, sending up strong canes which grow to a great length. The laterals and smaller branches are heavily clothed with glossy green leaves similar to the foliage of the Cherokee rose.

The name SILVER MOON well describes the rose, the color being a silvery white. The exquisitely cupped, wax-like petals, with the large cluster of golden anthers in the center are suggestive of a water lily. There is a frost-like sheen covering the petals which causes the flower to glisten in the sunlight, creating an effect of great beauty against the background of green.

In addition to its merit as a garden rose, the Silver Moon is exquisite when used as a cut flower, being particularly adaptable for low bowls or center pieces

The plants we offer are thrifty two-year-old stock in fine condition for planting at this time

"WHOM SHALL I MARRY?"

BY VALERIE WALKER.

WHEN a baby girl reaches the age of 15, she begins to realize, as she emerges clear-eyed from the sleepy, hungry period of adolescence, that Dan Cupid is sharpening an arrow—for her—perhaps just around the corner. Of course, she falls madly in love with the next young man who gallantly kisses her hand. That is but natural, it is inevitable after the thought has once been born. Then, like in the old fable, she meets another, and though she has the heart of the first cupped in her little hand, she wants the next too, as he glitters more brightly because he is not hers—yet. And when she has added his heart to her possessions, she turns to look again, for youth soon tires of the new watch after she has taken it apart and has discovered what makes it run.

This education, for that is really what it is, continues, and it is as it should be. In her thirst for knowledge she continues this greatest study of all for a woman—man, until she knows many, and all kinds; likes several; is loved by a few, and loves—does she ever know whom she loves? And now she is confronted with the big question, the only big question, the one question in her life. For if this one is decided, all others are almost automatically decided for they are but subissues.

"Whom shall I marry?" One so-called wise old sage will advise her, as if she were imparting a great secret, "Marry the man who loves you the most, my dear." And Miss Baby Girl will go around in deep thought trying to decide who loves her the most. Is it the one who bestows the greatest number of gifts? Is it the one who flatters her the most? Is it the big cave-man who says, "I want you for my own!" Is it the gentle attentive creature who says, "I want to make you happy, to live for you alone!"? Her problem is just as unsolvable as before.

Oh, Baby Girl, if you only knew! Look into your own heart, it is the only place to find your answer. It is not he who loves you the most who will make you happy, it is he whom you love the most. Do not mistake gratification of pride for love. You are not happy, really, in being loved; that is but elated pride. Your real happiness is in loving. We are not happy in being served, we are happy only in serving. No matter how much a man loves you, you cannot be happy unless you love him, for marriage will really mean nothing to you for you will keep on searching though you may not know it, for the one that you might love.

The great philosopher, Socrates, said, "Love is an unfair proposition at best; it consists of two parties: one who loves, and one who condescends to be so treated." That is true in this day too in many, many cases; ideally mutual love is very rare, those who have it are blessed indeed, but the unfairness is hardest on the party who condescends to be so treated, as the happier one is the one who loves.

Look into your heart, little girl, and if the answer is not there, you have not yet met him. Do not be in a hurry and take the next best, wait, he will come, and you will know it. It will cover you as a radiance; do not let it come too late. Someone else who is great said, "Do not marry until you cannot live without him—or her." And that is the best and surest answer. Do not marry until you love some one better than yourself; some one whom it is a joy to serve, if it be in poverty, sickness, or shame—some one who's life, thoughts, pleasures, griefs, ambitions, are your life, thoughts, pleasures, griefs, ambitions—some one whose glory makes you happier than if it were your glory, whose sorrow is more poignant to you than your own. When you marry like this, you are giving your life up to love and service, you have cast out selfishness—you are good. And we all know that to be good is to be happy, to be selfish is to be utterly miserable.

So look into your heart, Miss Baby Girl, and if you find him, if you want him, if you love him so that you are willing to cry it from the housetops, and you are proud of him, casting your own pride into the dust, and you love everything about him, love him for his faults, not in spite of them; if you wish to shoulder your half of the bargain—for marriage is a partnership, not a charity organization for either party, a fifty-fifty proposition, and if one is a slacker, the whole business goes on the blink—then take this big, this greatest step as though it were irrevocable, and be happy.

I cannot help but hope that when you look into your heart you find there a sweet, gentle, kind companion who loves you enough to wish you with him every moment in work and in play, and who does and says all the little things which are really the most important in a woman's happiness. For who can compare the most elaborate gift to a sweet little act of love, or a loving compliment? Maybe some. There are some girls who "adore" the cave man—the big, stubborn, arrogant, domineering, successful egotist, whose wife must bend her will to his in every detail, who considers himself a real he-man, and who thinks women have a place and should be kept in it. They have indeed, but it should be made so pleasant for them that they should love to remain in it. The latter type of man—there are just two types of men after all—are the best providers—of money, but not of happiness. As Rupert Hughes says "We can't have everything." But this is neither here nor there—who can tell Miss Baby Girl whom she should love! No one but the little arrow shooter. And when you feel the hot sear of his honeyed arrowhead, and know—don't lose any time, go straight home to your haven of happiness—his beloved arms.

You toss your curls, you do not believe it. No, youth cannot be told, she has to learn for herself. Only the pitiful thing about experience is that it takes such a long time to convince, and after we know our lesson, it is too late to practice it, and we are never called upon to profit by it in our own lives, as our next problem is a different one which again only experience can solve for us. And, alas, the young refuse to use our pathetically earnest advice, so we all continue to live and suffer and learn—for what? Perhaps the next world—who knows?

MUCH PESSIMISM.

out that this purse is filled with paper money, but the American public should know that while English paper money is still increasing, it is not increasing as fast as it did two years ago. We have an inflated currency, that is true, but we are still with America the only excombatant nation whose national bank will under pressure accept paper money for gold. We are still spending more than we earn, but it is likely that next year we shall pull down our expenses to something like a third below those of our last war year. We have a big floating debt, that is true, and it must increase a little more, but government issues become less and less, so much so that soon we shall be issuing only such new loans as enable us to pay off the old ones when they come due. Indeed, after next year there is no reason why we should not begin the automatic reduction of the British debt.

The reader will gather from this that the strain is still severe, that we are debt-ridden, heavily taxed, but it is not true that England does not know where to turn. Her recovery is slow, but if the American public will reflect that the British National Debt has risen from $2,800,000,000 to over $32,000,000,000 it will agree that if we carry on it is because England has more solidity than she is credited with.

The same applies to unemployment. It is severe, and it must be severe until the Washington Conference, or the lapse of time, puts Germany, Russia and France on their financial legs, i.e. until the exchange comes closer to the normal, so that the continent may become able to buy English goods. The same, by the way, applies to America; it may look very nice to find the dollar worth in France nearly three times what it used to be worth, but in fact this prevents the French from buying American goods.

When these conditions no longer prevail, trade will revive, shipping will follow, and unemployment will slowly be reduced to prewar proportions. Meanwhile, in England, by advancing public works, by road-making, by relief, by foreign credits, which should enable us to risk trading with the continent, we are managing to provide the unemployed with a minimum life standard. It is in my opinion much too low a standard, and much more should be done, but that is another question; what matters is that we can reply to the pessimists that by these means England is maintaining industrial peace and that she shows no signs of being dragged into industrial conflict. Here the future may still be dark, but I have confidence in England's common sense. We do not make plans ahead. We cope with troubles as they come. If these troubles come they will be handled in a simple and effective way, by old-fashioned remedies which may not work well, but which will not poison the body politic.

Asking Too Much.

Lord Leverhulme some time ago bought an island off the coast of Scotland, with a view of improving the lot of its 30,000 inhabitants, mostly small farmers, farm workers and fisher folk. Lord Leverhulme's lawyer drew up a very elaborate contract to be signed by each tenant. It contained no fewer than twenty-six clauses or stipulations.

"One old fellow," relates Lord Leverhulme with great gusto, "returned the contract unsigned and sent with it this note: 'I haven't been able to keep the Ten Commandments for the sake of a mansion in heaven, and I'll be d—d if I'll agree to keep twenty-six commandments for a sma' hoose in the Island o' Lewis.'"

Wants.

THE man who knows about the Saints was telling the neighbors about them, one evening lately when the talk was going around in the little gray house in the hollow.

And you would be surprised to know how interesting they are—the Saints whose names are fixed to stay on the calendar. And it is amazing how many of them there are. There are miles and miles of Saints' names on the calendar.

By gollies, said the man who has the phonograph, I had no idea there were so many of them; so many men and women in the world during the past 2000 years who were so good that they were elected to be Saints. It is worth knowing, he said. And it braces a man up to know it. It shows that these fellows who are shouting that the world is rotten, and that it always was, are talking through their whiskers, as the saying is.

Well, sir, after we had all listened for a long time to the man who knows about the Saints, there was a discussion as to how they came to be Saints. And we soon came to the conclusion that it had been no easy job, and that there wasn't much chance for any of us in the Verdugo Hills to get our names on the list.

Jordan is a hard road to travel, the Parson said. And we didn't feel that any of us were doing much better than just stumbling along.

It was along toward the heel of the evening, as the saying is, that the man who used to be a statistician spoke up and said that it was by having had few or no wants that the Saints had qualified for their halos. Cutting out the unnecessaries, that's how the Saints got to be what they are now, and where they are now, said the man who used to be a statistician.

And, by ginger, it seems that that was the way of it. The Saints wanted to save their immortal souls and to save the souls of their fellow-men, and, outside of that, they had no other wants.

They didn't want automobiles, or fifty-dollar hats, or fancy meals, or big houses to live in, and servants to wait upon them, or anything like that. A pair of sandals for their feet, or if not, just to go barefoot; their heads bared to sun and wind and rain; a crust to eat; that was the sum total of their wants. And this being the case, they had practically all their time to spend in prayer and in the service of their fellow-men.

By gollies; said the man whose house is on the mesa, it is a good scheme, even if a man isn't trying to make a Saint out of himself, at all. He will be a lot happier that way. For, he said, it seems to me that it is wanting so much that makes us unhappy—wanting so much that we can't have, or not giving a whoop for it after we get it.

Just a little patch of rutabagas, five or six fruit trees, about seven laying hens, nine bean rows and a hive for the honey bee—that's all I want, said the man whose house is on the mesa.

Well, said the Parson, when he heard what the man whose house is on the mesa said, that's plenty and enough for any man. More would only mean worry.

The Other Extreme.

IT HAPPENED on the steps of the postoffice at a meeting of the Millionaires Club of Contentment and Happiness. And the trouble was started by the man who reads the papers.

I see by the paper, he said, that the school board down there in the roaring town refused to permit the commandant of the fort at San Pedro to talk to the boys of the high schools about learning how to handle the big guns down there. The paper says the school board doesn't want the boys to be talked to about war.

Now, as it happens, the commandant of this fort is the son of the captain of whom we often make mention in our chronicles of the green Verdugo Hills. The captain is our neighbor. And his son, the commandant, comes to see us and to get some pointers from the neighbors.

And so, when the captain heard what the man who reads the paper said, he saw red, as the saying is. And he got us mad as the dickens. And he delivered himself of his mind, which is a thing he can do, any time of the day or night, as quick as you can pull a hair-trigger.

The captain is a man who can put a razor edge on words so that they can cut you to the bone. And what he said on this historic occasion was a-plenty, as the saying is.

All right, he said, let us raise up a generation of men in this country that the army of Yap and the navy of Jerusalem can come over here and lick. Let us tell the government to take its old fort away from San Pedro and give it to some other city that wants to be ready to defend itself against a hostile fleet. Let us have a generation of men that won't know a gun from a stick of chewing gum. And when the day comes that an alien fleet will appear in the offing between Santa Catalina Island and San Pedro to blow Los Angeles into the Kingdom Come, let the blue jays and the orioles have the guns of San Pedro stuffed with their nests. The fort at San Pedro can stand off any fleet of warships that sails the seas. But if we shall have no men who know how to man its guns it is about as much use to us as a ukulele would be when we are attacked, as we certainly will be. The fort is for our defense, pure and simple, and not for offense, as any blamed fool might know. And what I want to ask, said the captain, is whether or not it is a crime for a nation of men to be taught how to defend their country against an enemy?

It was then moved by the honorable postmaster of the Verdugo Hills, and seconded by the man who plays the flute, that it was the sense of the meeting that the commandant of the fort at San Pedro go right ahead with his ideas and let the school board go to thunder, or to any other old place it has a mind to.

At the Door.

WE WERE talking about business one night. It was in the house of the man who has the phonograph that the talk was.

And the man who has the phonograph was saying that Elbert Hubbard used to say that the definition of a business man is a "man who gets the business."

But the man who used to be a statistician says that the way of it is this, that a man opens a store or a bank or a factory, and that if people come in at the door and buy what he has to sell, then he is called a business man. But if they don't come in at the door he is called a bankrupt.

In other words, said the man who used to be a statistician, they say there is no such thing as luck; but business is mostly luck and nothing else.

"God Bless You"

God bless you! words are empty things;
We speak and think not of our saying—
But in this phrase forever rings
The higher tenderness of praying.
It means so much—it means that we
Would have no fears or threats distress you,
Nor have your heart timed to a sigh.
God bless you!

This trinity of blessed words
Holds all our wishes, oldest, newest,
The fairest deeds that can be wrought,
The halest greetings, and the truest—
It's more than wishing joy and wealth,
That kindly fortune may caress you
That you may have success and health
God bless you!

God bless you! why, it means so much
We almost whisper as we say it;
We dream that unseen fingers touch
Our hands in answer as we pray it.
May all it means to all mankind
In all its wondrousness possess you,
Through sun and cloud and calm and wind,
God bless you!

Promises and the Truth.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN once said that it is better to break a bad promise than to keep it. And sometimes we think it is better to dodge the truth than to tell it.

Now, you would think that if Abraham Lincoln made a promise he would keep it, no matter what the consequences might be. But he said he wouldn't do any such thing if it were better to break the promise.

And it is related of the late King Edward of England that when he was young he lied on the witness stand in court of justice rather than speak ill of a woman whose good name was in question. "He perjured himself like a gentleman," it was said.

By gollies, there are a lot of things like this worth thinking over.

Sheriff and Preacher.

ONE of our Congregation of the Faithful sends us a newspaper clipping which says there is a preacher in Iowa who is also the sheriff of the county in which he lives. And that next month, as sheriff, he will have two murderers to hang.

The church demanded that he resign either as sheriff or as preacher. And he has decided to resign as preacher. And our correspondent asks do we blame him?

And we answer, who are we that we should blame any man for what he does, or what he does not do? It is a matter for the man's own conscience.

But, maybe he wasn't much of a preacher, anyway.

Kindness is the Thing.

CONDUCTOR, says a member of the Congregation to us in a letter—Conductor, she says, the court granted a divorce to a man the other day and permitted him to put his wife away just because she liked to go to dances and he didn't. And was that right? she asks.

No, we don't think it was right. The court should have made them stick together and fight it out to a finish in the good old-fashioned way. When they both got to be older they would have something else to think of, and maybe be as happy as clams, as the saying is.

By gollies, it is getting too danged easy altogether for folks to get divorces.

There isn't enough kindness among folks. Kindness that heads off so many quarrels and patches up so many, too.

We remember a fellow who used to be crazy about dances. He would walk ten miles to attend a dance. And his wife was just the other way. She wouldn't cross the street to go to one.

And one time this fellow bought a new pair of pants to go to a dance in. And when he tried the pants on at home the evening the dance was to be held, they were too long. And he asked his wife to cut the legs off a couple of inches for him. And she said no, she wouldn't, that he ought to stay home, anyway, and read his prayer book and be thinking of what would happen when he died.

But, after all, he was a good fellow. All that was the matter with him was that he was just woozy on dancing. So, his wife felt sorry for him, and sneaked the pants off to a back room and cut a couple of inches of the legs off. And then his mother-in-law got to feeling sorry for him, too, and so she sneaked the pants away and cut a couple of inches more off the legs, not knowing it had been done already.

And so, when the man came to put the pants on, having decided he would roll the legs of them up or something, or draw them up tight with his suspenders, by gollies they were so short that they looked almost like knickerbockers on him.

And when the truth came out, and he saw how kind his wife was to him, and his mother-in-law, too, and that they loved him with all his faults, as the saying is, he just broke down and cried. And he never went to a dance again but stayed home nights and read his prayer book and the home paper.

There is a magic in kindness. It will break down barriers and bring down the very stars of heaven to be a light unto our feet.

Visitors.

ON A SUNDAY morning not long ago we came down the trail from our little high house in the hills, and we came across a camping party on the other side of the road.

It was a lovely morning. The birds were singing. And the sun felt good on our back.

Isn't it wonderful how good the sun feels on your back after there has been a spell of chilly weather?

And so we went singing down the trail through the chaparral with the radiance of the spring morning in our heart, on our way to church. And, by gollies, first thing we knew, we were right on top of this camping party under a cluster of live oak trees on the other side of the canyon wash.

Well, sir, it was a whole family out for a picnic with their first automobile. Never till the day before was there an automobile in the world that they could call their own. But they had one now, at last. And it was there. A second-hand auto, a "used car," as the saying is, but none the worse for that. And they owned it from the ground up.

And the man, somehow or other, knew us. And he shouted, hey, Conductor, come sit down and have a piece of apple pie like your mother used to make, and some baked beans, and piccalilli and doughnuts, and jam and a glass of real milk and a cup of coffee.

And there were seven kids, or maybe eight, in the family—a string of them ending with the baby. And the mother was along, of course. And she had a new apron on to keep her gown from getting mussed.

And, say, if you want a picture of what real happiness is, just try to imagine you see that bunch as we saw them on a Sunday morning under the live oak trees when the peace of God was on the hills, and His glory upon the world.

And we got so danged interested in the picnic and those folks that when we got to church the sermon was over and the service more than half through. And when the padre looked hard at us for coming in late, we gave him back a look which said, never mind, padre, we saw folks out there under the trees that God loves, and we wanted to bask a little in that love while it was going around.

CARE OF THE BODY.

work, the retranslation of the Bible from the earliest obtainable manuscripts. A scholar in Hebrew and Greek, he has managed to enlist expert assistance all around the country. A country minister in Michigan (in a country parish, because of his health) checks over the Greek verbs. Scholars elsewhere render other editorial assistance. A farmer contributes $100 a year to the expenses of printing, a physician gives $50 a month. So the work goes on, its center the home of this journeyman printer in Los Angeles.

"The work was hindered during the war. Knoch is a German name, and a man with a German name at a printing case was—who knows what? He needed a few pounds of Greek type, which was 'foreign' and queer looking, so the type foundry refused. Knoch made the type himself. It was a tedious process. Each letter was cut, filed or punched at the end of a piece of soft steel. This was hardened by heating and tempering. These steel dies were then sunk in copper plates which were used as matrices in casting the type. It was then found that this face was too heavy for the superlinear so another font was made, much lighter and smaller.

"Knoch was born in St. Louis, Mo., and is in his forties. He went to Los Angeles twenty-five years ago. Becoming interested in the Bible he noticed the discrepancies between the Greek and the English. He resolved to make an accurate translation, or to put the Bible in such form that the intelligent reader could judge as between translations. He had no theories to confirm, except that the original could be intelligibly reproduced. Knoch obtained a mastery of Greek and Hebrew. He card-indexed every word in the Greek, tracing it to its source and recording all the variations of its use. For twenty years he thus equipped himself to weigh the words and syllables of earliest extant sources. . . .

"Knoch and his assistants work without remuneration. All the help he receives is voluntary. His helpers are everywhere, one of them in Scotland. Some, who are not Greek scholars of distinction, help him by counting the words and letters, that no word or phrase may be omitted."

Medical Liberty.

NO. 1, VOL. I, of the Medical Liberty Association Journal has been received (American Bank Building, Los Angeles.) Following is given as the policy of the publication:

"We will publish educational and constructive articles concerning medical liberty.

"We will not attack any profession, but only the methods used by some of the M.D.'s and surgeons, in their abuse of power.

"We believe in the broad proposition that every person should have the right or liberty to select any mode of healing desired.

"That the Constitution of the United States of America guarantees religious liberty. Why not medical liberty?

"That every form of healing should be standardized, and we will work to that end.

"That there are quacks in every profession who must be weeded out.

"That no one has a copyright upon health, except Mother Nature.

"That no clique of men have the right to set themselves up as dictators over your body but should act only as advisors.

"That no true science fears the truth, therefore we do not look for an attack as we shall only publish the truth."

The Eyes.

TO ELIMINATE the huge national loss of men and money for which defective vision is held responsible, the Eye-Sight Conservation Council of America has announced that a nation-wide campaign of education would be conducted in schools, industries and professions, and even on college athletic fields.

The eye, it was declared, is involved in 11 per cent of all the permanent industrial accidents of the nation, and approximately 25,000,000 persons have vision that requires correction.

The eyes are a part of the body. Therefore, they depend on the condition of the body.

Refined sugar is particularly harmful to the eyes. Cut out sugar in every way, shape and form, for three months, and see how your sight improves; also your general health.

Walter Camp's
New Way to Keep Fit

Walter Camp, Yale's celebrated football coach, has been teaching men and women everywhere how to keep fit—"on edge"—full of bounding health and youthful vitality—and how to enjoy doing it. Walter Camp says that a civilized, indoor man is a "captive animal," just as much as a tiger in a cage. But the tiger instinctively knows how to take the kind of exercise he needs to keep fit—he stretches, turns and twists his "trunk muscles"—the very same muscles that tend to become weak and flabby in indoor men and women. With Mr. Camp's permission the "Daily Dozen" exercises have now been set to spirited music on phonograph records. They supply exactly the right movements to put these vitally important "trunk muscles" into the pink of condition, and keep them there. These twelve remarkable exercises, done to music, with a voice on the record calling out the commands, are all you need to keep your whole body in splendid condition—and they take only 10 minutes a day. You will also receive a set of handsome charts, with actual photographs showing exactly the move to make at each command. It is simple as A-B-C.

RECORD FREE

See for yourself what Walter Camp's "Daily Dozen" combined with the Health Builder System will do for you—without a dollar of expense. We will send you, entirely free, a sample phonograph record carrying two of the special movements, with a voice giving the directions and commands, and specially selected music to exercise to. Also a free chart showing positions, with complete directions. Get this free record, put it on a phonograph, and try it. There is no obligation—the record is yours to keep. Just enclose a quarter (or 25 cents in stamps) with the coupon to cover postage, packing, etc. Send coupon—today—now—to Health Builders, Dept. 473, Oyster Bay, New York.

Rupture Kills 7000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more that a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of his own home. The PLAPAO Method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD, when adhering closely to the body, cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended, so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., 298 Stuart Bldg., St Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the information necessary.—(Advertisement.

Rheumatism Left Him As If By Magic!

Had Suffered Over 50 Years!
Now 83 Years, Yet a Big Surprise To Friends

Laughs at "URIC ACID"
How the "Inner Mysteries" Reveals Startling Facts Overlooked By Doctors and Scientists For Centuries

"I am eighty-three years old and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army over fifty years ago," writes J. B. Ashelman. "Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures,' and I have read about 'Uric Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now, as if by magic, I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all day with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change."

HOW IT HAPPENED.

Mr. Ashelman is only one of thousands who suffered for years, owing to the general belief in the old, false theory that "Uric Acid" causes rheumatism. This erroneous belief induced him and legions of unfortunate men and women to take wrong treatments. You might just as well attempt to put out a fire with oil as to try and get rid of your rheumatism, neuritis and like complaints, by taking treatments supposed to drive Uric Acid out of your blood and body. Many physicians and scientists now know that Uric Acid never did, never can and never will cause rheumatism; that it is a natural and necessary constituent of the blood; that it is found in every new-born babe; and that without it we could not live!

These statements may seem strange to some folks, who have all along been led to believe in the old "Uric Acid" humbug. It took Mr. Ashelman fifty years to find out this truth. He learned how to get rid of the true cause of his rheumatism, other disorders, and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries," a remarkable book now being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this particular trouble.

NOTE: If any reader of the Illustrated Magazine wishes the book that reveals these facts regarding the true cause and cure of rheumatism, facts that were overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past, simply send a post card or letter to H. P. Clearwater, No. 476-N Street, Hallowell, Maine, and it will be sent by return mail without any charge whatever. Cut out this notice lest you forget! If not a sufferer yourself hand this good news to some afflicted friend.

The Perfect Day

By Eugene Manlove Rhodes

Illustration by C. D. Batchelor

MR. TUBS WHEELER sat on the shady porch before his store. The store was perched on a wide ridge separating and overlooking two great valleys. From the west, a mile of brown river, the Rio Grande, made a dead set at this ridge, turned southward, at right angles, and presently swerved to the southeast, leaving behind it a perpendicular bank thirty feet high and half a mile long.

It was some eighty yards from Mr. Wheeler's feet to the precipice, and in those scanty yards a single track railroad, the wagon road and the big Dona Ana Mother-Ditch crowded, following the river's curve.

Far down the narrow highroad a shod hoof rang on a stone. A string of horses swung jauntily into sight. A tall horseman lolled easily in his saddle.

"Humph! That fool, Spud Wallis!" Wheeler sniffed.

The fool, Spud Wallis, drew rein before the store. He was a tall, raw-boned, broad-shouldered man with a berry-brown face and twinkling blue eyes.

"Know where the Tumble-Tee wagon is?" asked Spud.

"Left this morning for Point o' Rocks," said Mr. Wheeler shortly.

Mr. Wallis rolled his eye at the sun. "I can terrapin along up there this evenin'. After dinner," he added pointedly.

Mr. Tubs Wheeler spoke accusingly: "Now, young man, you just natchelly mosey right along out of this!"

"Why, Mis-ter Wheeler! An old-timer like you, and grudge a body a meal's victuals."

"Meal's victuals be blowed!" said Wheeler wrathfully. "I ain't going to have you making up to my girl."

"Oh-h! I see-ee! Gertie?" said Spud. He looked up, frank-eyed. "Say, that's a good idea. I'll go see her right away now!"

Mr. Tubs Wheeler towered tiptoe. "Look here, Spud—I ain't got anything against you, as a man, but a fellow that wants a wife has got a right to get some stuff together first."

"Well," drawled Spud reflectively, "what's the matter with my little bunch of cows?"

"That's just it. You don't know nawthin' but cows—and cows is nix, nada. That day's over. Summerford, Joe Haskell, Herron—they got farms for themselves ready for the big ditch. Look at Joe Haskell, now. He's got as fine a piece of land as there is in the bend. And when there's no work for him on the farm, he goes teamin' on the dam. There's a forehanded man."

"Yes, Joe stacks up pretty fair—but Joe Haskell don't figure in this case," said Spud. "He likes someone else better than he does Gertie."

"Who?" demanded Mr. Tubs Wheeler, sharply.

"Why, just himself. So we'll leave him out of the question. And Herron?" Spud said earnestly. "H'm-m! Well, really—"

"Well, what about Herron? Don't you ever take a drink?"

Spud slid from the saddle. "I don't care if I do," he said.

"You banshee!" cried Wheeler. His scowl ended in a broad grin. "Come along with you."

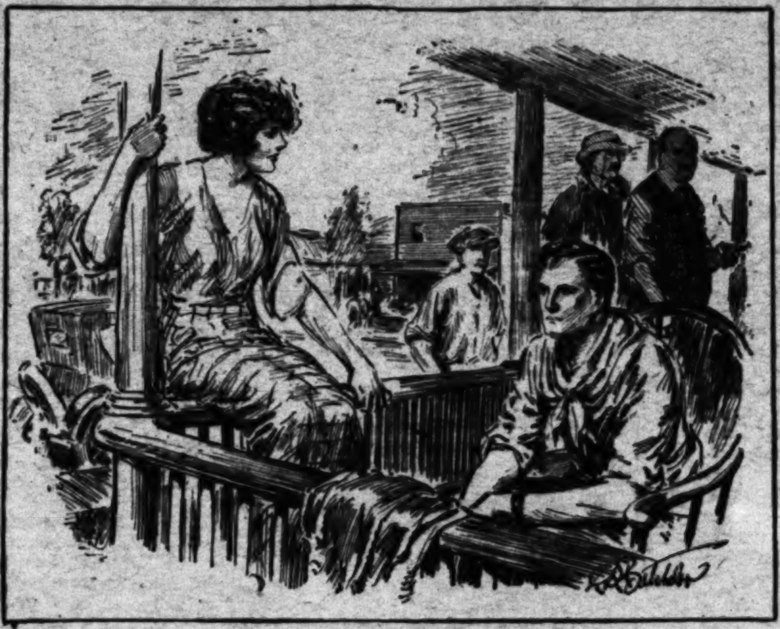
When they returned to the porch, Spud Wallis sank into a chair.

A touring car stood in the deep road between track and ditch. Two men were on their hands and knees peering under. A sound of clinking steel came through the heated air.

"I suppose when that good road gets through to the dam, the cars'll be thicker'n flies," said the young man disconsolately.

Wheeler chuckled. "Do you think they'll build that good road down there, where there's no room, and only a matter of years till the river gnaws the bank away? No, sir-ee! The Dona Ana Ditch'll go through the hill back of my house, and the good road will go over my hill—that's what. And they'll pay little old Tubs Wheeler a good big price for a right of way. Maybe the railroad'll have to move, too, some time. And when Mr. Big Old He-Ditch comes here, Mr. Ditch'll make a big cut—or a tunnel, maybe—through my old ridge—and there's another right of way. Four—count 'em—four!"

"Jo-ve, Mr. Wheeler, yuh [illegible] wondah!" Spud drawled. "And you want Gertie to have a man that'll cipher out plays like that? What's the matter with that car?" he inquired as the automobile started, then stopped again.



"You two seem to be enjoying yourselves," he said.

"Lost something, I guess—see 'em goin' back down the road all stooped over. Let's go see."

But Wallis dreamily considered the country beyond the river.

"See how the river makes a big ox-bow loop opposite here?" he mused. "Looks like the roads and ditches would throw in together and build a wing-dam, slant-wise, where the river heads this way and turn it right across that neck of land—maybe digging out some for a starter—and leave this place all safe and hunky, a mile out of danger and lots of room. It ought to be cheaper. Only one patch of land to buy, and that all grown up to tornillo and cottonwood sappings."

Wheeler's jaw fell. "Cracky, they could do that!" he exclaimed. "That ground, now—it belongs to old Pablo Montoya's boy. I'll just go over there and buy it tomorrow—then I'll be fixed, either way. Well, I'm sure obliged to you, Spud."

"Oh, that's all right," said Spud generously. "Let's go and see what's lost."

The strangers met them at the car. One was a middle-aged man of slight build and severe but prosperous appearance, with a Panama hat, gold-rimmed eye-glasses, and close-clipped and grizzled mustache. He wore a duster and long black driving gauntlets. The other was a much younger man. His stalwart six feet were arrayed in white flannel, his shirt sleeves were rolled up, his collar turned in. His face was smooth shaven; he had wide, honest brown eyes under heavy brows; his mouth was small, red and well shaped. Curly chestnut hair showed under his careless cap; his hands were soft, white, plump and perfectly cared for.

"I beg your pardon, gentlemen," he said, "I have lost a very valuable diamond ring. Could we get you to help us look for it?"

"We will pay you well for your time," prompted the older man.

"Of course—certainly," said the young fellow, smiling pleasantly.

"Whether we find it or not," added the other.

"Oh, but I say, old chap, we must find it. I can't afford to lose that ring, really."

"You stand to lose enough to buy you a box full of pretty rings if we don't get to Grindstone tonight," said the little man.

"Sure we'll help you," said Wheeler. "Do you know where you had it last?"

"Oh, yes," said the youth, leading the way. "It is somewhere between here and where we tinkered up the machine. I took it off and laid it on the running-board—on this side. The setting was loose and I was afraid I'd lose the stone. Then I forgot about it. Deucedly careless of me. See, here's where we stopped. It's somewhere between here and the car. Oh, we're sure to find it."

"I hope so, Robert," said his companion. "For we can't stay here long. I'd rather buy you another ring."

"It isn't so much the value of it, Mr. Dwyer—though it cost a pretty penny, I believe," said Robert. "But—it was poor old dad's."

"Oh!" said Dwyer, less brusquely. "In that case, we'll stay till the last possible moment." Sifting the sand through his gloved fingers, he looked up at Wheeler. "You see we have to meet a party at Grindstone to sign up an important mining proposition. He comes on the 5:40 train and we have to be there. Phew! but it's hot!"

"It's going to be some job," said Wallis. "There's a heap of sand. Look now—I got a mount of horses up here, squandering all over the country. I'll round 'em up and put 'em in the pen first, before they stray off. I'll be right back. Any wagon that comes along, you want to make 'em drive on the other side of the road."

He did not come back at all. "Reckon some of his horses quit him," said Wheeler, wiping his dripping brow.

But half an hour after Spud's departure, Joe Haskell rode down from his farm. In the corral he found Spud's mount, and on the porch he found Spud himself in joyous conference with Miss Gertie Wheeler.

Joe glowered from the step.

"Well! You two seem to be enjoying yourselves," he said.

"Yes—don't we? It's right cool and pleasant here," said Spud. His eye wandered to the busy scene down the road.

"What's up?" said Haskell, following Spud's gaze. "Lost something?"

Spud exclaimed.

Joe sniffed; his black eyes snapped. "I'm going to hunt for that ring," he declared, and stalked down the sunken road to join the search party.

"Now, there goes a nice boy," said Spud, admiringly. "Plumb full of ginger. Good looker, too. And thrifty—my! Never see him laze around when there's a dollar in sight. Always up and doing. Why, he left camp this mornin' at break o' day, whilst I was poundin' my ear. 'A little more sleep, a little slumber, a little closing of the eyes to sleep'—that's my motto. Did you notice, Gertie, he didn't even say good morning to you? Some way he didn't seem right pleased."

After much searching, Joe marched back. Spud hailed him cheerfully.

"Find it, Joe?"

Joe shot him a triumphant look. "No, but you sure missed out, old-timer. They paid us $10 apiece. I'm going to lope down to Willit's and have a screen sent up to run the sand through."

He strode on to the corral.

"Spud Wallis," said Gertie, as soon as Joe was out of ear shot, "you're holding out something. I know you like a book. You're up to some devilment."

"Gertrude Lucretia," said Spud. "I'd scorn to deceive you. I am."

Joe whisked around the corner on a fat and fiery black.

He was a crack horseman, and not averse to proving it. Nearing the car the horse snorted, shied, and stopped, all a-quiver.

Joe plied whip and spur. The black swerved suddenly across the acequia bridge, then took off on the other side with a tremendous bound. Joe leaned over and wrapped his hand in the rein to turn the horse from the bluff; the rein snapped; pitching mightily, the black held straight on to the river. One plunge—two—at the third, horse and man went over the thirty-foot bank into the Rio Grande. The sound of a terrific splash rose to the silent porch.

Gertie gasped.

Spud smote his knee in vexation. "There!" he said, "I told him this morning not to do that!"

"Spud! He'll be killed!"

"Him? No! The water's deep under the bluff. We might go look." He picked up Joe's hat as they raced to the bank. "Wish I could ride like that," said Spud.

They were in mid-stream, swimming strongly. Joe clung to the horse's tail and acted as rudder.

"Beats all where that Joe Haskell is," grumbled Wheeler. "Maybe he went over the ridge. That's it—couldn't make his horse go by your car I reckon."

Mr. Dwyer snapped his watch decisively. "Robert," he said, "we can't wait here any longer. Mr. Wheeler will doubtless find your ring. He can wire you at Grindstone when he does. If he doesn't—well, we can come back day after tomorrow, if you prefer. But we've got to be travleing."

"I suppose so," said Robert reluctantly. "Mr. Wheeler, I shall depend on you and your friend to keep up the search. I have decided to double that reward—make it an even thousand. That is about all the ring is worth; but I wouldn't lose it for twice that. And if you don't find it—well, keep looking for it till we get back and I'll give you a hundred apiece anyway—keep wagons off and all that."

"But you'll have an early dinner before you go?" urged Wheeler. "We can throw something together in a jiffy. Joe'll be back by that time."

Dwyer shook his head. "Thank you very much, but we'll just wash up and go on. We have lunch with us. The road, we hear, is very slow and sandy, and we want to be on time. Come, Robert."

The car drew up before the store. Spud leaned over the rail.

"Find it?"

"No," said Wheeler. "They're going on. This way, gentlemen."

He ushered his guests in, with a black look for the young couple as he passed. He came back out at once.

"What's all this? Gertie, go in the house this minute and start dinner. Spud! You're a trifflin' scoundrel. Where's Joe?"

"Gone to Willit's after a screen."

"How'd he go—over the ridge?"

CARE OF THE BODY.

Bouchard of Paris, has said. To eliminate these poisons is one of the most important of the systemic activities. To interrupt this elimination means death in a very few minutes. Anything which interferes with such elimination means disorder, and the treatment for disease should be, not medicaments and other measures looking to the relief of symptoms, but such methods as will assist the organism in its struggle to expel the retained matters. Such measures in a general way are fasting, diet, free water drinking, enemas, sweat baths, breathing exercises and so on. There is every indication that before many years these measures will be the main therapeutic resources of the practical physician. Disease will be recognized, not as an enemy to be routed, but as a cleansing process to be assisted. Such assistance can be given only by measures which will increase elimination. And an ounce of elimination is worth a ton of medication."

To the above it should be added that the less poisonous waste you accumulate by wrong eating, the less you will have to eliminate.

"Medical Research."

A BOOKLET of nearly a hundred pages, entitled "The Future Independence and Progress of American Medicine in the Age of Chemistry" contains reports of physicians and surgeons on American institutions for laboratory research. It brings to mind vividly what an immense amount of money and energy are wasted in such useless and often harmful work.

While experimenters bend their noses over test tubes, in laboratories, new hospitals are constantly founded to accommodate victims of wrong living, of which they are told nothing.

In a conclusion to the book the author says:

"Every single change of every living organism is unquestionably chemical and physical in its fundamental character, but the organism as a whole is still far beyond the scope of the chemist and physicist. No one has converted lifeless into living matter without the aid of life itself. We have in life a marvelously organized system for co-ordinated, highly complex physical and chemical reactions which are in a normal condition largely self-regulating. With all the advances of exact science, it will probably be beyond the power of man to duplicate life's organization, even in its lowest and simplest forms, for many, many generations to come. We still must adhere to the profound advice of Bacon: 'Nature is to be commanded only by obeying her.'"

Just so. Yet, notwithstanding this, the efforts of medical science are directed to interfering with the curative processes of nature.

Break Away.

DOROTHY DIX writes:

"Do you know the prescription that I give oftener than any other? It is separation. I have found out that what ails most people's nerves is an overdose of family, and if I can just get my patients to break away from their husbands and wives and children and mothers and fathers and their sisters and their cousins and their aunts, they get well of themselves.

"That's the main good of sanatoriums. They give people a respite from their near relatives and make the separation diplomatically, without hurting anybody's feelings.

"It is love, and not hate, that causes a woman to make her husband's and children's lives a burden to them by her perpetual, 'Don't get your feet wet or you will take cold.' 'Have you got on your rubbers?' 'Did you tie up your throat?' 'Do put on a heavier coat.' 'Don't wear those thin slippers.' 'Don't eat that, it is bad for your stomach.' 'Don't sit up reading.' 'Don't go to that party tonight, it's too cold, or too dry, or too wet.'

"Day in and day out, such a woman's family lives to an accompaniment of these perpetual reminders that everything they want to do is bad for them, and this never-ending interference with their personal liberty. She never dreams that she is hacking away at their bodily and mental fiber, and that sooner or later it will give away."

Good advice. Break away, once in a while.

The Bible.

MANY of the meanings of the authors of the various books that are bound up together and known as "the Bible" have been twisted and obscured, in translation.

Thus, the English word "hell" does not represent the true meaning of the Greek word "hades." The Bible says that after his death Jesus went into "hell." Certainly he was not supposed to go into a place of torment.

"A man is a prophet save in his own country." The Dearborn Independent recently contained an interesting story of Adolph Knoch, a Los Angeles printer who has devoted many years to an improved translation and concordance of the Bible. The writer says:

"Today he is employed in a downtown printing establishment—he is an expert printer—and gives the early hours of morning and the late hours of night to his life

[illegible]

“[illegible] down the river?”

“Where?”

Spud explained and Wheeler's bad humor disappeared in laughter.

“Well, that's a good one. We'll have to tell that to the strangers. You might as well stay to dinner, Spud.”

“No,” said Spud. “I'm feeling bad. If you'll leave me put my horses in your pasture, I'll go up to Rincon on the passenger and see the doc. Oh, say, Mr. Wheeler. If I make good as a business man—better than Joe, say—or as good as you—you'll have no further objection to me as a son-in-law, would you?”

“Now, Spud Wallis, don't you pester me—”

“That's a bargain, then. If I can outdo you and Joe—”

“Drat you, yes—and welcome. Let's go tell the gentlemen about Joe and his horse.”

The gentlemen were greatly amused.

“He'll get well paid for it, at least,” said Robert. “A thousand if you find the ring—a hundred apiece anyhow—that's the bargain. Here's my card. Wire me at the hotel at Grindstone. Good-by.”

They climbed into the car and whirled gaily away.

Mr. Wheeler puffed into his inclosed courtyard, with an exultant whoop.

“You, Spud! We found it!” he shrilled jubilantly.

Spud appeared at the corral gate.

“Got the ring, eh? That's good. Who found it—you or Joe?”

“Neither one. Feller came along the track trampin'. He asked us what we'd lost, and I up and told him before I thought. He come on down and it wasn't fifteen minutes before he found it.”

“Shucks! That's too bad. I was in hopes you or Joe'd get it.”

Wheeler's eyelids fluttered on his cheek. “We ain't complaining any, Joe and me. We let him think it was ours and we dug up $200, and sent him hiking up the road.”

“You're the schemers,” said Spud, admiringly. “Where's Joe?”

“He's gone on home. Huffy. Joe is—huffy at you. Eight hundred and twenty dollars—pretty good morning's work, I think. You'd just as well have been in on it.”

“Only eight hundred, isn't it?”

“They paid us twenty in advance, Spud,” said Wheeler triumphantly; “you see now why I don't make you welcome here. Whilst you was philanderin' around, Joe was on the job.”

“But I'm not huffy,” objected Spud, placidly, “and Joe is.”

“There'll be other days for Joe. Most train time. Spud—so long! I'm going to tell Gertie the good news.”

“Oh, I heard about it all right, papa,” said Gertie, tripping demurely through the corral gate. “Congratulations! I'll expect a new dress.”

Wheeler gave the pair a withering look. “Spud Wallis,” he said, “go flag that train! There'll be no little tender partings, please.”

“We thought of that,” said Gertie, blushing and laughing. “Good-by, Spud—again!”

“Good-by Gertie—again! There's the train,” said Spud. “Come on.”

Spud waved his hat back and forth across the track. The engine whistled twice in acknowledgment.

“Oh, I wanted to tell you. No use for you to try to buy that place of Montoya's boy,” said Spud as the train slowed up. Spud swung on the smoker step. “Someone bought it a month ago.”

The train gathered headway. Wheeler ran alongside, red-faced, and shouted up to Spud.

“Who bought it?”

Spud looked down at him benevolently.

“I did,” he said.

The wagon road ran beside the track across the Bend. Spud was gratified, where the desert road left the river, to observe a touring car toiling up the sandy slope that led to the desert.

At Rincon, Spud hunted up Charlie Simpson, his particular crony. When the train started again, both were passengers, Simpson carried a long repeating rifle tucked under his arm.

At Rincon the railroad leaves the river, climbs painfully up Lookout Hill, and strikes across the desert. Spud got off at Hess, the second siding; Simpson waved joyous farewell from the car window.

The Tumble-Tee wagon was in plain sight on the mesa beyond Lookout Draw, a great dust rose from the cutting-ground beyond. Spud set out for a two-mile walk to the wagon.

Where the first curve of the road hid them from Wheeler's, Messrs. Dwyer and Whalen drove the car under an overhanging cottonwood and halted. They opened the toolbox and laid the tools on the running board in businesslike fashion; but they spread robes out in the shade and composed themselves for a peaceful sleep.

Long afterward a man on foot came up the railroad track through the quivering heat. He was roughly clad and bore a little bundle on a stick. He clambered down the embankment and thrust a coarsely shod, plebeian foot into Mr. Whalen's immaculate ribs.

“Wake up, bo,” he said gruffly, “and pay for your night's lodgin'!”

Whalen sat up and rubbed his eyes.

“Ugh—aah—oah!” he said. “Well, Bill, did the hicks came through?”

“Two hundred—hundred and eighty net,” said Bill crossly. “I tried to rib 'em up for more but the young one made such a squeal that I took what I could get. Come, now, let's get out of this.”

“That's not so worse,” said Dwyer. “Makes about twenty-one hundred. Fairish clean-up for a boob country like this, starting from a shoestring.”

Dwyer removed the number plate, Ill. 41372, and substituted Ky. 13306. “It's just as well,” he said. “We've worked that gag for all the traffic will bear. 'Twon't be safe to work it again till we get up in Oklahoma.”

“Well, get a wiggle,” admonished Bill. He climbed into the tonneau, which was crowded with three suit cases and a goodly hamper.

“You fellows drive awhile. I'm going to try some beer and a little sleep. Take the first right-hand road. It's fifteen miles shorter than following along the railroad, they say, and no worse.”

They were a long hour climbing the sandy slope to the level of the desert. Then they enjoyed a substantial luncheon from the hamper. Bill opened his suit case, shaved carefully, and attired himself in joyous apparel. His spirits rose accordingly.

“Blooie!” he said throwing the discarded garments into a mesquite bush. “Home, Jeems!”

It was past mid-afternoon when they drew near to Hess. At the round-up wagon, half a mile to the right, the cook's fire blazed brightly; beyond it, a few riders held a bunch of cattle near the trampled round-up. The horse-herd grazed beside the road, guarded by a youthful wrangler, seemingly asleep in the saddle. A hundred yards farther on the car came to the rim of Lookout Draw and turned down the steep and sandy slope.

Half-way down Bill threw the brakes and stopped the car with a jerk. “Wake up, you fellows! Look there, will you?”

Down the slope from the Point of Rocks, across the draw, came a wild rider in a whirl of dust. Beyond and a little behind him another horseman raced at top speed. He was shooting at the first man; he was forcing him obliquely along toward the car. Scattered far behind, spread in a straggling fan across the draw, a dozen cowboys rode furiously after. A yell came from behind; the horse wrangler, frantically urging his horse, tore down to the car; a tow-headed boy, wide-awake now and pop-eyed with excitement.

He screamed: “Got a gun? Got a gun?”

“No—what's the matter?”

The answer came in gasps. “Train robber! Bill Panky! Ten thousand dollars reward! If I only had a rifle!” The wrangler whirled back toward the chuck wagons. “Go to the station—telegraph!” he shouted back over his shoulder.

“Go to the station, hey?” jeered Whalen. “In front of that scrap? I guess not! Can you turn around in this sand, Bill? Lord! Look! Look!”

The first pursuer gained on the fugitive. He was reloading his revolver as he passed from sight behind a little ridge. The outlaw swerved to meet him. The pursuer flashed into the open, still loading his gun; the outlaw closed in, shooting. He fired once—twice—three times; the luckless cowboy clutched at the saddle horn, fell over along the horse's neck, hung for a second and rolled off in the deep sand.

Yells of wild rage, a popping of guns filled the air. Unheeding, the assassin rode close to the body and deliberately fired again—once—twice. Bullets puffed the sand about him, but he swooped down from his saddle, came up with the gun of his fallen foe, turned and thundered across to the car. He leaped off, he scrambled toward the car, gun in hand.

“Hit her up!” he commanded jumping in. “Give her all you got!” The car leaped forward. “Climb over in front, you little fellow!”

The car lurched and bounded across the gullied draw. Bullets whined overhead; the nearest cowboys were not more than 200 yards away.

The outlaw prodded Bill with a gun muzzle. “You'll have us in the ditch! Sit up, you, or I'll blow you to Kingdom Come!”

For Bill was trying to duck. Mr. Dwyer was scrunched on the floor in front. Mr. Whalen, in the tonneau, was trying to squeeze himself between two suit cases.

Thus admonished Bill sat up. On the smooth road beyond the draw, the car gathered speed and shot ahead with a roar; the shots and shouts grew fainter.

As the fleeing car topped the first rise, the avengers, with one accord, jogged soberly back in little groups of two's and three's.

Even more remarkable was the conduct of the murdered man. He brushed himself, rubbed the sand from his hair, took up his sombrero, mounted his horse, captured the loose horse left by his late assassin and led him to camp. The horse wrangler rode out to meet him.

“Spud Wallis, you red hellion,” said the horse-wrangler, “them fellows'll be at the North Pole by sundown.”

In the kidnaped car, conversation languished.

“Pull her up, son,” advised the new passenger. “We've made out get-away. Just let her trundle along. There, that's better.”

He was a powerful bulk of a man, great of body and bone; he filled the eye. In his left hand he held his enormous high-peaked Mexican sombrero of thick red felt, heavily braided with silver; the other hand, carelessly holding the six shooter, rested easily on his thigh. A massive head sat on a bull-neck. His features were heavy but not ill shaped: his mouth was tensed to a grim straight line; his mustache was black and long; his eyes were black and hard, his brows heavy and black, the thick tangle of hair jet black; his great red-brown face was streaked with sweat and dust.

He turned his attention to Mr. Robert Whalen. “What's the matter, brother? Got a chill?”

Mr. Whalen picked up spirit.

“Great Christopher K. Columbus!” he answered, “I'm scared!”

Chauffeur Bill flung a remark over his shoulder. “Well, you needn't put on any high-and-mighty airs about it—so am I.”

The robber laughed.

“I really ought to shake you fellows down for your change,” he said apologetically, “but I haven't the heart to do it, the way the play come. You done me a good turn, and I'm grateful. You just carry me along till I get a horse and we'll call it square. But if you got any guns you'd better dump 'em overboard. Guns make me nervous.” ous.”

“Shrimp's got one,” said Bill. “Toss it out, Shrimp, as the gentleman tells you.”

Mr. Dwyer produced a dainty affair in silver and pearl.

The outlaw gave a cry of delight.

“Oh, what a cunning little thing!” he cooed. “Don't throw it away, Mr. Shrimp. I'll sew it on my hat. No—I'll use it for a scarf pin.” He thrust his own gun in the holster and put the new one in his pocket. “Now, we'll go along, all nice and cosy,” he said.

The Point of Rocks lay far behind; the railroad was close to the left. In the north, Lear section house, water tank and telegraph shack—grew large against the sky. They crossed the railroad track and plowed through a stretch of sand.

“We follow the railroad as far as Lear,” ordered Panky. “The telgeraph operator keeps a saddle horse. Maybe he'll loan it to me.”

Just out of Lear, they dipped down in a draw; Bill slowed to cross a deep and narrow wash.

“Hands up! Stop her!”

Ten feet away a rifle barrel poked from behind a washed-out bank. It was pointed at Bill, but in a half second it swung to cover the tonneau.

“If it ain't Bill Panky! Don't move a hand!”

To steady himself in crossing the gully, Mr. Panky's hands had gripped at seat and stanchion. He now rigidly held that strained position. The car stopped astride the ditch.

A man stepped cautiously from the washout—a little man with a long 30-40 repeater. He looked very much indeed like Mr. Charlie Simpson. He held the muzzle of the long rifle within a foot of Mr. Panky's ribs.

“Put your hands on the back of the front seat!” he ordered. “Shut your eyes!”

Mr. Panky did this. The little man reached forward gingerly for Mr. Panky's six-shooter. Getting it, with a little audible sob of relief, he cocked it, backed off a step, and laid the rifle behind him.

“Get out!” he said. “Keep those hands up! Turn around. Back out!”

Panky meekly submitted while the little man frisked him for weapons.

“What—in—hell—is—this?” said the little man, in a rising crescendo of astonishment, when he came to the little pearl-handled gun. “Turn around, Bill, let's have a look at you!”

“Why, it's old Hank!” said Mr. Panky.

“Yes—it's old Hank.” The little man sat down on the bank. He had a wizened, freckled face and a stubby red mustache, which now bristled to a snarl. “Old Hank—him you bullied and run over, and cheated out of his share on that Lordsburg money. Well, well! What a joyful surprise! I see this ortermobile acoming, and I thinks I'll just pick up a little piece of money—and here I got the drop on old Bill Panky, and 10,000 perfectly good dollars reward for him, alive or dead. I hope this will always be a lesson to us.”

Mr. Panky laughed uneasily. “You wouldn't do old Bill dirt like that, old fellow.”

“Yes, I would,” said Hank, positively.

“I got a big bunch of money hid-out, Hank—I'll whack up even with you—honest I will.”

“No, you won't. You want a chance to put me to bed with a shovel—that's what you want. Here's where I get even with you, for keeps. I'm getting old, Bill—and that 10,000 will sorter ease my declinin' years.”

“Maybe I was too rough on you,” admitted Mr. Panky. “But I'll make it up to you. You keep the guns, Hank—take what dough this bunch has, if you want it—we'll get some horses and hit the brush for my hide-out.”

“You'll hit the back track for Dona Ana,” retorted Hank, ferociously. “Back out that car, you feller, and turn her round.” He reached back for the rifle.

“You can't do that Sim—simpleton,” said Panky. “They'll send you to the pen for that Lordsburg job.”

“They'll let me off light, me givin 'myself up and bringing' you in,” asserted Hank confidently. “They want you, Bill. You'll swing for that conductor you got. They'll give me two or three days at most—maybe a full pardon. And you'll be hung till you're dead—dead—dead!”

“I'll give you all the money I got cached, Hank.”

“You'll give me a shot in the back. To hell with your money!”

Panky wilted. He was trembling. He cringed. “Take me to Grindstone, then, Hank,” he pleaded abjectly. “The Tumble-Tee outfit will lynch me if you take me back that way. I—I killed a man down there this afternoon, Hank.”

“You did? Is that right, you fellows?” Hank asked.

“He did,” said Whalen. “Cold-blooded. Shot him twice after he was down. We saw it. Then he made us bring him up here. Don't you be afraid of us. We're with you—we take you in the machine wherever you want to go.”

Hank surveyed the prisoner with ferocious joy. “That settles you. I get the reward just the same—alive or dead. And what's more, if you open your ugly head for just one more word, I'll kill you right now and here. I mean it.” His fingers twitched along the rifle barrel.

By the car, the three partners had been holding a whispered conference. Now Dwyer came forward. He was very pale, but the light of greed was in his blinking eyes.

“Wait—wait a minute,” he faltered. “We want to make you a proposition. We happen to have with us a considerable sum in ready cash. You couldn't very well rob us on your way to tell the court you wanted to reform. But why should you go to the penitentiary? Why wouldn't you have us pay you a good cash percentage right here, and let us have the reward, while you go free?”

“They might send you up for a long term, you know. You never can tell,” urged Whalen. “Why you might get sick and die there.”

“How much?” Hank did not move his little glowing eyes from his captive. I never did care much for the penitentiary, nohow,”

Chauffeur Bill became the spokesman.

“Fifteen hundred dollars.”

“That listens pretty good. Come again. You hadn't ought to try to hold out on an old man that way,” said Hank sorrowfully. “I got the guns. Try once more.”

“We can scrape up a little more, between how to eat. Teach them to be inwardly and outwardly clean, and they will be immune from epidemics. Indeed, epidemics of disease will then cease, because there will be nothing left for them to feed on, just as flies would disappear, if we entirely removed the filth on which they flourish.

Cigarettes.

SIR WILLIAM ORPEN, the famous English portrait painter, who painted "The Chef," was sent home to London, from Paris, suffering from cigarette poisoning, and was ordered by physicians to reduce his fifty cigarettes a day to ten. "Don't inhale," he advised a reporter.

The English papers played this up, until suddenly the articles ceased. By a curious coincidence the cigarette advertisements increased.

Cigarette smoking is especially harmful to immature boys and girls, who have not attained their full growth. It stunts them physically, mentally and morally.

The Church and War.

THE Churchman makes this frank admission:

"The churches, among all the warring nations, shared the sins of their governments. We hated as our governments bade us hate. We spread lies about our enemies, as those lies were meted out to us in official propaganda. We taught unforgiveness, even as our rulers and diplomats inspired us to do. Wherein did we show the spirit of Christ in these things? . . .

"Nothing will end war, except the conviction, dominating the church, that war is sin. When the Christian churches become convinced that for nations to fall to killing one another, hating one another, lying about one another, in order that they may hate one another, then only will wars be made to cease throughout the world."

Elimination vs. Medication.

WHAT we call "disease" is an effort of nature to remove waste matter from the system. Therefore, it should be encouraged, not suppressed, as medical science does, with disastrous results. Following is from Health Culture:

"Two well known European physicians have come to the conclusion that melancholia is a disorder of metabolism—that is, a disease due to the retention and accumulation within the body of certain poisonous waste matters, products of tissue change in the body.

"The plan of treatment applied to the patients suffering from melancholia consisted of measures to increase elimination.

"The measures consisted of free water drinking, fluid diet, sweat baths, etc. The results, as shown by elaborate charts and diagrams setting forth momentary fluctuations of temperature, pulse rate, arterial tension, amount of food and time spent in sleep, where eminently satisfactory.

"There is a growing conviction among the most enlightened medical men the world over that the cause of disease is to be sought for within the body and not in outside agencies—that while these agencies (impure air, water and various other influences) may affect the state of health, they are affective not as direct producers of disease, but only in so far as they prevent the body from relieving itself from its own poisons. 'The body is a factory of poisons,' as one of the wisest of living pathologists.

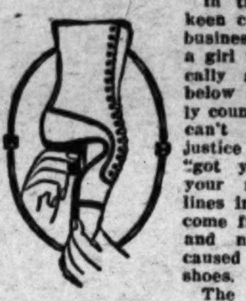
Cantilever Shoe For Men, Women and Children
The Handicapped Girl



In these days of keen competition in business and society, a girl who is physically and mentally below par is quickly counted out. You can't do yourself justice when you've "got your feet on your mind." And lines in the face do come from the pain and nerve-strain caused by improper shoes.

The first step toward success is to wear comfortable Cantilevers. It's not as if you had to sacrifice style by wearing them. They're just the sort of smart, well-cut shoes that the fashion magazines illustrate for walking, sport and business wear.

But they've got a lot of features that ordinary shoes haven't. For instance, a flexible shank that supports the arch of your foot, yet bends with it, so that your foot muscles are kept elastic, supple and springy as a dancer's. This does away with any possibility of flat foot.

Cantilever Shoes are cut on natural lines, so that your toes are free to straighten out and wiggle luxuriously. The heels are placed to give perfect balance and enable you to step firmly and gracefully. You may have thought you had some comfortable shoes before, but just treat your feet to a pair of Cantilevers, and you'll learn what comfort is!

Deafness
CATARRH, HEAD NOISES
Scientific and Effective Treatment That Gives Relief Without Drugs or Operation. No Instruments—No Pain.

Our system of treatment for Catarrh, Head Noises, Deafness and the troubles which accompany it is not only effective but absolutely free from pain. No disagreeable instruments are usually necessary; in curable cases the inner tubes, which become blocked up and cause ringing and buzzing sounds and impair the hearing faculty, open up readily and the bones of the ears are restored to elasticity. The disagreeable noises are then stopped. The treatment has immediate effect.

Advice free and invited. 356 SOUTH BROADWAY, Room 710. Hours, 10 to 5; Sunday, 10 to 12; Wednesday evening, 6 to 8.

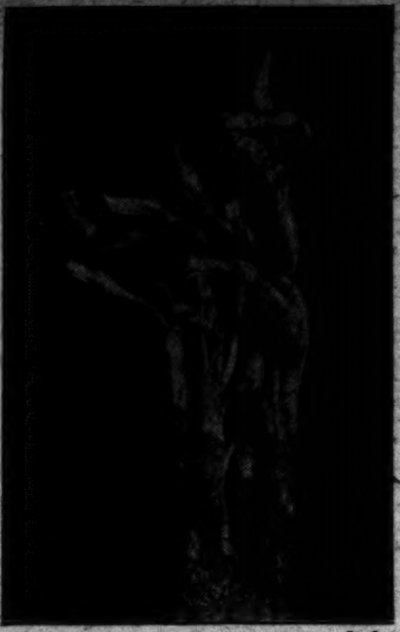
Plant Pirates of Southern California.

BY FRANCIS M. FULTZ.

(ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS BY THE AUTHOR.)



Thalesia, one of the broom ropes. It has pretty, yellowish flowers, but is a villainous plant pirate.

THE dodders are no less interesting than the mistletoes. They are plentiful wherever we go here in the Southland. In fact, they are so common that scarcely anyone pays any attention to them, except to note their tangled masses of yellowish-brown vines which here and there crown bunches of weedy growth, or perhaps low shrubs whose yearly increase is largely of herbaceous character. We have several different species, but they all look so much alike that no one but a botanist distinguishes at all between them. Nearly everyone is quite willing to bunch them and call them simply "Dodders.' There are several common names which are sometimes applied to them, such as "Golden-thread," "Love-vine," and "Strangle-vine." This last-mentioned name is perhaps the most appropriate that could be devised, for the vine certainly gets a strangle-hold on its host, often blotting out its life.

During its existence it passes through two phases of growth—a somewhat unique condition for plants. Its life history is so interesting that I am going to take space here for a brief account of it.

The seed germinates in the soil and sends up a leafless, threadlike stalk a few inches in height. Almost no roots are formed—for the plant is not going to depend upon the soil for its food. The substance which the seed contains largely feeds the stalk until it finds an herb to which to attach itself. For a few days this threadlike stalk swings round and round, the top rotating in a circle, until it touches some herb, when it immediately attaches itself—acting for all the world as if it were endowed with real intelligence! Once it is attached, it winds around its host, the growth often being so rapid that by watching it for an hour or so you can note the increase which is taking place. At the same time it begins to send out suckers—"haustoria" the botanist calls them—into the stem about which it is coiling. As soon as it becomes firmly attached to the host, the stem below the point of attachment withers and dies. But the dodder goes on along its upward way, lengthening with wonderful rapidity, and branching and spreading as it advances. In a short time the host is a mass of vines. Besides being choked and strangled by the closely-coiled vines, the host is also starved to death by having its substance stolen! No wonder it soon dies!

Pyrola, a leafless plant with charming wine-colored flowers.

When the host dies, of course the dodder which is attached to it also dies. But by this time it has blossomed and produced its seed, so it is ready to die. That is, the dodder attached to the original host is ready to die. But long before this happens, it has reached out to neighboring plants and started new colonies. And these new colonies in due time spread out to still more distant plants. So you can readily see what a blighting pest the dodder really is!

One word more about the dodder's rapid growth:

I once brought into the house a Bloomeria, or golden-star, upon which a dodder plant had just got fairly started. I placed the golden-star in water, and watched the development of the dodder, which made a growth of fully three inches a day, day after day, until the golden-star began to wither.

Very few persons think of the dodders as flowering plants, and scarcely anyone but a botanist suspects them as being close relatives of the morning-glories. Yet they have flowers with a complete floral dress, and for a long time they were considered by botanists as members of the morning-glory family. By some botanists they are still considered as a subdivision of that group. Others, however, give them a family of their own—the dodder family. Their generic name is cuscuta. The flowers are very small, and are quite likely to escape our notice, unless we stop especially to look at them. The vines are practically without foliage, the few leaves they have being minute bracts.

The dodder is a striking and characteristic feature of our foothill landscapes. A slope so covered with masses of the vines as to take on a yellow tint is no uncommon sight. And such a view has a certain beauty and attractiveness—which would appeal much more strongly to us, if we did not know the presence of the dodder meant disaster, and perhaps death, to many of the plants over which it runs.

Now for the plants which conceal their nefarious adventures beneath the surface of the ground.

Let us first give our attention to the broom-rapes. This is an interesting group, and the plants are much commoner than most of us have any idea of, although we often pass near them, if we are in the habit of frequenting the upper foothills and mountains. We are usually not aware of their presence because they have no foliage, and at the same time are quite apt to be close up to the base of the shrub upon whose roots they have fastened themselves. Thus many persons never know what the broom-rapes look like, although they may have frequently passed near them. When one knows what to look for, and when and where to look, the plants are not difficult to find.

There are at least three or four species in Southern California. The most common of these is one which is usually called "cancer-root." But this name is not very distinctive, as there are other broom-rapes in different parts of our country which are also called that. In fact, it seems to be almost as general a name as "broom-rape." The botanical name of this, the most common of the broom-rapes in our region, is Thalesia fasciculatum. We can lay no particular claim to it, for it grows to the eastward almost to the Alleghanies. I have never been able to find out from my own observation, or from the investigations of others, whether or not it has a preference for shrubs of one particular species. I rather think not, as I have found it on the roots of several different shrubs—most frequently, however, attached to the roots of some species of ceanothus. It has been reported as parasitic on roots of the Yerba Santa, wild buckwheat and sage brush. Its stems are from three to five inches tall, and entirely naked of leaves. There are apt to be several stalks in a sort of clump, more or less loosely united beneath the surface of the ground. Each stem bears several inch-long, curving, tubular flowers, which are of a yellowish color, tinted with purple.

At least two other species of broom-rape (Orobranche Californica and O. tuberosa) are growing in this region. Their flowers are in spikes or racemes, and are smaller and more numerous than those of the thalesia mentioned above. They are of the same yellowish color, however, and those of the Californica are tinted with purple. This latter one has been found in Elysian Park.

The Pholisma is another parasite that is found very generally throughout Southern California, but only in sandy or gravely soil. I have seen it, from the sand dunes below Alamitos Bay, and have collected it on the gravely foothills on the north of the Mojave Desert. It is one of the strangest of all California plants—it and another plant from the southern part of Arizona being the only representatives of the plant family to which they belong, north of Mexico. One of the nearest relatives of the Pholisma in our region is the snow plant, which it resembles somewhat in form.

The Pholisma is an odd-looking plant. When we see it for the first time, and before we have stopped to examine it, we are quite apt to think it a slender species of mushroom. When we take a close look at it, however, we are astonished to find it a fleshy, elongated-oval spike, closely set all over with small purplish flowers. There is not a sign of a leaf, and the whole thing has a queer, uncanny look. When we dig down into the hard, dry soil we find that it goes very deep before it attaches itself to the root of the shrub upon whose substance it lives—just as if it were ashamed of its manner of life and wanted to hide the evidence as deeply as possible. Its length underground is frequently three or four times the part above the surface. Once in the foothills of the Tehachepi Mountains I tried to dig out a specimen with a large jack-knife. The plant was an extra fine one, about five inches tall above the ground. After working diligently for about half an hour in the hard granitelike, gravely soil, and getting down to a depth of fully a foot, I was compelled to cut off the stalk, without reaching the root to which it was attached.

The snow plant, that striking, red-coated dweller of the pine forests in the higher parts of our mountains, is often referred to as a plant-parasite. But close investigation has always shown it not guilty in this respect. Although perfectly honorable, its mode of life is not very far removed from that of the broom-rapes, as it seems to draw its sustenance from decaying vegetable matter. It is commonly considered leafless—a parasitic characteristic—yet to some extent its ample bracts supply the want of foliage.

Dodder in bloom. One of the most deadly of all the plant pirates.

Pholisma, a mushroom-looking plant, covered with purple flowers, but leafless.

The coral-root is another of our mountain plants that is often accused of being a plant pirate. And its appearance would seem to indicate that such a charge is well placed, for the plant is leafless. Like the snow plant, however, it feeds on decaying vegetable matter. It is like the snow plant, too, in the matter of choosing a home. It is found among the pines. There are three or four species in Southern California, one of which has been found on Mt. Wilson. The name is taken from the plant's coral-like mass of roots. It is an orchid.

One of the pyrolas—cousins of the snow plant—is generally classed as a parasite. It would seem, however, that this charge has never been fully substantiated. Some investigators claim that it is in the same class with the snow plant; that it lives on decaying vegetable matter. A somewhat thorough job of digging, which I personally did in the San Bernardino Mountains a couple of years ago, failed to settle the matter in my own mind. So we will have to leave that point unsettled here.

The pyrolas are members of the wintergreen family, and the foliage of some of them is strongly endowed with the wintergreen flavor and aroma. One of the fragrant ones is rather plentiful in the mountains about Arrowhead Lake. But the parasitic one to which I have referred is leafless—as befits a plant pirate whose depredations are carried on beneath the ground. But it is a charming plant, for all that. It has an abundance of beautiful wine-colored flowers, which attract you at once by their rich coloring and odd shape. The stem is without branches, from five to ten inches high, the upper half surrounded with its half-pendent irregularly-shaped flowers. This odd, yet very attractive, plant lives in the pine forests of the San Bernardino Mountains. But its range is from Cuyamaca Mountains in San Diego county to British Columbia. Here in the south its blooming time is July.

In taking a general survey of the plant pirates we find they do not belong to any one particular class of plants, but that many different groups are represented among them. Little is known about the circumstances through which they have been led to take up the kind of life they are leading. But the fact that they are plain thieves, robbers and murderers but adds to the evidence—more plainly seen in the animal kingdom—that in nature the struggle for existence knows neither pity nor justice—according to human standards.

Foolish People.

HERE is a dispatch from New York: "When young Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Herbert of Brooklyn planned a vacation in the Maine woods last summer, their holiday was spoiled by their physician's warning that both might be suddenly stricken with appendicitis. To make sure that the 1922 vacation won't be spoiled, they have decided to have their appendices removed at the hospital today. The Herberts explain they will thus be able to keep each other company."

It is lamentable that many people are so grossly ignorant of the basic laws of life, as to suppose that they may escape the consequences of their dietetic sins, by having something cut out of them.

In a majority of cases of so-called "appenticitis" the appendix—a necessary organ of the body—is not even involved. What is called "appendicitis" is inflammation of the bowels, due to gross errors of diet.

Lumps in the Breast.

A SANTA BARBARA man writes that his wife has a lump in the breast and the doctors want to have the breast cut off. Of course. Always carve.

Such lumps are quite common at the menopause, and during menstruation. They are due to waste matter in the blood, which nature stirs up at those periods. An operation can never possibly cure this condition, as it does not remove the cause. After an operation, such a growth may break out in another part of the body, or may become a malignant cancer.

Would you let them cut off your nose, because there is a pimple on it?

Cease to do that which causes the accumulation of waste matter in the blood, and the growth will be absorbed and disappear.

Coarse Bread.

TO SATISFY curiosity, I bought a rye loaf that was as dense as lead and as heavy as a brick. The maker had boastingly labeled it: "The Coarsest of Coarse Bread."

Such bread is indigestible and harmful, especially to invalids, for whom it is principally intended. It is the other extreme from starvation bread, made from devitalized ultrarefined white flour.

Why go to extremes?

Quarantine.

I RECEIVED from the Department of Health of the city of Los Angeles a list of diseases that must be reported and quarantined. There are seventeen of them, and the list is constantly being added to.

At a recent medical meeting in the East a physician stated that some disease germs can go through a stone wall. Yet "medical science" proposes to keep them out with a screen door, or a gauze mask, or a notice posted on a house.

Of course, every person who contracts what is called a "contagious" disease comes in contact with many people, before the disease has been definitely pronounced contagious by a physician. And these come in contact with others. And so on.

The New York health department has abandoned fumigation as useless, after it has been strictly enjoined upon everybody for many years.

The whole theory of quarantine is quite as absurd and silly, and just as ineffective, as the nailing of a horseshoe above the door. The microbes that it is sought to guard against are microscopically small. Manifestly, some apertures must be left in a quarantined house. Also, a doctor—sometimes with a long, black beard and a long, black coat—goes in and out. Also nurses.

They say: "We take precautions." Bosh! What precautions can they take, that may not be taken by anybody?

Then, again, as I have said, in all cases of so-called infectious diseases, dozens, scores, or hundreds of persons have come in close personal contact with the patient—sometimes sleeping with him—before the disease had been diagnosed and quarantined. Yet these people do not catch the disease.

There is no such thing as "infection" or "contagion," as the words are usually understood, except that a skin disease may be communicated by direct contact, as lice may be communicated, from one body to another. When atmospheric conditions are favorable, those who, by wrong living, here their blood surcharged with waste matter, and are, therefore, lacking in resistance, will "catch" a disease, just as at sea, when it is rough, those whose stomachs are unbalanced will all get sick simultaneously. Yet we do not call that an epidemic.

Quarantine is an annoying and useless infliction, enforced for the purpose of instilling fear into the minds of the people, and increasing the authority of the political doctors.

We hear much of "preventive medicine" of late, since the people have begun to refuse to swallow drugs for the suppression of symptoms of nature's efforts to heal. Medical "prevention" is no better than medical "cures."

Teach the people how to live, especially

"I WAS frightened about myself. Was so weak I trembled. A sample of these wonderful Tablets helped me from the start."

O-M

INFLAMMATION TABLETS

A Trial Is Proof

Unexcelled in stomach troubles, indigestion, gastritis and gas, colitis, liver complaints, kidney and bladder troubles, catarrhal or mucus inflammation. My trouble just seemed to let go, says one lady who was suffering with a bad stomach trouble. Two or three doses sufficient to relieve inflammation of the bladder.

If an organ is inflamed it ceases to perform its work, poisons gather, and if not relieved there is ulceration or a breaking down of tissue. In internal inflammation and ulceration nothing gives such wonderful results as these O-M Tablets.

Because of their neutralizing effect in auto-intoxication (self-poisoning) they insure almost universal relief in neuritis and rheumatism.

How to tell neuritis from rheumatism: "If pain increases when pressed with the fingers it is rheumatism. If not oversensitive to pressure it is neuritis." In inflammation of any part or organ these O-M Tablets are equally successful; often there is a noticeable improvement with a few doses. Try the sample and see what they will do in your case.

HARDENING ARTERIES
(High Blood Pressure—Arteriosclerosis)

After ten years' experience in treating hardening of the arteries and Bright's Disease, we have found a natural solvent of the mineral deposits that collect upon and within the walls of the arteries, restoring the arteries to normal, correcting the chemical laboratory of the body, thus stopping the formation; also in Bright's Disease heals the kidneys. The patient finds himself back to normal health. We will be pleased to give you full particulars. Symptom blanks will be mailed upon application. Treatment shipped to all parts of the United States and Canada. Sanitarium in connection. VITO-NUEVO TREATMENT CO., INC., 1049 American Avenue, Long Beach, California.

THE ANTIDOTE

By Elizabeth Bush

MILDRED BIRDELL'S heart leaped at the sound of that light tap on the door. She hoped it might be her husband, seeking one last word with her before their dinner guests arrived. Her momentary disappointment gave way to the genuine gladness she felt as Mazie Grant danced into the room in response to her welcoming invitation.

"You're a joy—you resplendent butterfly spirit!" Mildred cried, as her friend continued her pirouette. "Such a darling to come early, too. You're the only one of my set invited to George's party and it's nice to have a word before the others arrive."

Mrs. Grant drew close to her hostess on the divan as she asked, with shining eyes and eager voice:

"Is it true, Mildred darling, that the government is sending George on that important mission to Poland?"

Mildred nodded assent.

"A husband to be proud of. I am glad I know him," Mazie enthused.

"Yes," Mrs. Birdell agreed with a mirthless little laugh. "George has a genius for diplomacy and I'm really glad he received the appointment, although it will mean a separation of at least three months."

"Oh-o-o." Her guest gave a low whistle.

"You're not going with him then?"

"No—no—I—you see, he will be very busy over there and I may as well confess the truth, Mazie, he hasn't invited me."

Then with a sudden jerky upward movement of her lovely head as though she would pull out of the pool of depression in which her thoughts threatened to plunge her, she abruptly changed the subject.

"I tried to make my party tonight perfect from George's point of view."

"What do you mean, George's?"

"Well, you see, cherie, I've asked only these new friends he has so suddenly gone mad about."

"Thank you for remembering me," Mazie beamed.

"You are the exception that ever proves the rule, Mazikins."

"Ah, and these others, writers and artists and musicians from Bohemia I suppose—"

"Yes, from a semi-Bohemia, but from what I have been able to observe, they are not averse to the fat of the land served on a silver platter. They are not the real doers. They only play at it and look wise and talk innuendo and look for prey. George is simply a victim and with all his brilliance he isn't wise enough to scent their game"

Mrs. Grant's lips smiled but her voice was quite serious as she asked.

"Is there any special woman, Mildred? Your tone made me suspect there might be."

Mrs. Birdell's eyes sought the heart of the coals before she replied.

"I—I rather think there is. She's coming here tonight. She's a Mrs. Trent. Mrs. Boadway Trent, she calls herself. She writes in a brilliant sort of way and George has manifested a very keen interest in her. I don't think I'm jealous in the ordinary sense but I feel an aversion for her, somehow. She is such a poser. If only George could see through her and the rest of them as I do."

Mazie's voice crackled as she asked:

"Why did you invite her? You did ask her yourself, I suppose."

Mildred's smile held a trace of weariness as she replied.

"Oh, yes, I'm responsible. I knew George would not enjoy his party if she were not here and I wanted this last dinner to be a memory of my thoughtfulness for his happiness. Altruism born of selfishness, you see."

Mrs. Grant gave her friend a quick appraising glance then rose and with a step that rivaled the flame itself, danced over to the fireplace. She toasted one dainty foot, then the other and, as if warmth applied to her extremities had clarified her brain, she turned and fastened a canny eye on her hostess and let her words pour forth.

"You've been a wonderful wife to George, Mil. No other woman could have understood his latent genius as you have; none could have borne his erratic temperament. He has tried you sorely, and no one knows better than I with what heavenly patience you have borne it; but, you'll forgive me for being brutally frank Mil, you've cultivated the doormat quality till you've become just that to George. You're useful to provide comfort for him and that is the place you occupy in his thoughts."

Mildred's fascinated eyes never left Mrs. Grant's face but Mazie went bravely on, undismayed by her friend's mute appeal from her verdict.

"Try to bring some romance into your thought, Mildred. That is why George enjoys these people; they seem to play at life while you make such a serious business of it. They surprise him; you never do; you lack poignancy. You never even irritate him. Take this 'phone, for instance." She pushed the dainty screen from before the instrument. "Do you ever lavish thought about what a wonderful invention it is? How admirably it contributes to your well-being in comfort? How it bridges distance? Do you hang such adorning thoughts on it when it is in good working order? You do not; but let it refuse to work one day—one hour, even, and it becomes the pivot about which your thinking apparatus revolves; it becomes a factor worthy of your attention and your time."

Mildred had risen with the dawning light of a new consciousness disturbing her face. As Mazie talked, she indicated with a wistful gesture the clock on the mantel.

"They will be here in just a minute, Mazie. We must go down." She slipped her arm through her friend's as she said "Thank you, old dear, I think I understand what you have been trying to tell me. I take so many things for granted. I—"

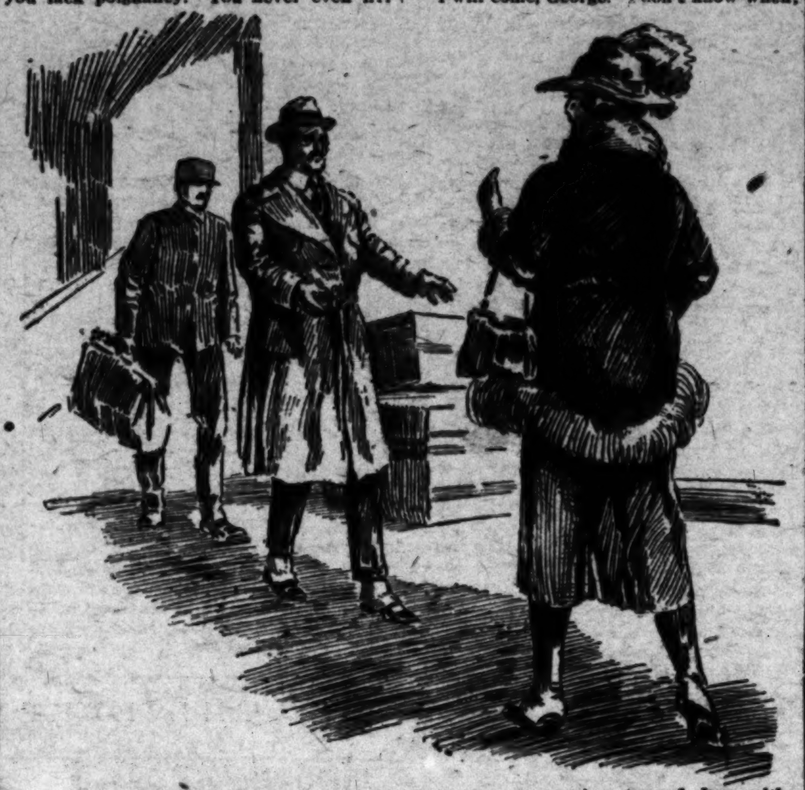
"That's just it," Mazie interrupted. "You have let yourself become finished. Think it over, Mil."

An immaculate, magnetic George joined them and flung an arm about each as they descended the stairs. The first guests were beginning to arrive as they entered the drawing-room. They straggled in like Christmas packages, some early, some on time, some late and some, Mildred was beginning to fear, not at all, as she anxiously consulted the time piece. The dinner was going to be spoiled. Thirty minutes late and one guest had failed to arrive. It was, of course, Mrs. Boadway Trent. Ah! She was being announced! A surreptitious glance at George revealed nothing. The perfect host, he stood in the center of an admiring, animated group. Mildred scarcely had time to send more than a glance in their direction. When George came forward to greet her, there was nothing disturbing to her in their meeting.

The dinner was proving successful. Mildred, warmed with the mellow wine, wondered if she, herself, might learn to like these people. They seemed so genuinely fond of George, now that he was going away. Their toasts were really clever and sparkling. When he came back she would try to cultivate them for his sake. Mazie was right. She was too practical—a domestic shock-absorber for George.

Her heart missed a beat. What was that she was hearing above the man's voice at her right? She looked at George and Mrs. Boadway Trent seated beside him. Absorbed in each other they were lost to the others. Time and space had ceased to exist for them and the woman was saying:

"I will come, George. I don't know when; I don't know how; but as sure as eternity is, I vow I shall come to you."



Her waiting was rewarded by an eager dominant George coming toward her with outstretched arms.

Mildred was not sure whether her eyes or ears had reported the damning words to her brain. Her glance searched quickly and covertly the other faces about the table. Had they, too heard? No, they were engrossed in each other. She had read a lip language. Panic seized her, followed instantly by a deadly calm. She saw red. This woman, her guest, for whom she had humiliated herself, was wooing her husband here in their home!

"We will see that you do not get too lonely while your husband is away, Mrs. Birdell," ventured the man at her left, making conversation; but she stared at him in a dazed sort of way before she found voice to quote. "They also serve who only sit and wait. I shall be happy in that thought." She had risen as she spoke and now they were all animatedly crowding into the drawing-room.

Well-bred and well trained in repression, Mildred's poise was sustaining her; but she felt that at any moment she must cry out—resent this unspeakable insult offered to her under her own roof. Instead she smiled, though a bit wanly, and tried to play the game. If Mazie was right, it was she who must change. She was to blame; but this woman, this brazen creature, how she hated her! She found courage to bid each guest good-night. To Mrs. Grant she gave a tender kiss and grateful squeeze, and turned to face, alone, the man who still held this unbelievable power of wounding her. Fifteen years of hectic life with him, laden with the uncertainties of his ever-changing moods, had not fortified her heart against such an attack as had surprised and wounded her tonight. Steeling herself, she calmly faced him.

"You love her then, George." Her tone was quietly declarative.

"My dear Mil," George's spirits were still high. "We live in New York and this is the twentieth century. Don't be absurd. You will never understand these people. I don't see why you asked them tonight. Try to play the game. I still have some matters of importance to wind up, so good-night, dear. Forget your foolish fears. You need a good sleep, that is all."

His callous indifference to her visible unhappiness crushed her and she quickly left him, carrying her pain and heart-ache to the quiet of a pillow that brought no rest to her disturbed heart.

Mildred shed no tears when her last farewells to George were said, but her heart was in a tumult. How impatient he had seemed to be off! His voice had held a strange, unnatural note as he had given her last instructions and final details of his plans for her during his absence. She had stood drooping and irresolute until the great liner was a tiny speck out at sea. But now a new thought animated her. There must be some way to thwart this woman, and, yes, to thwart George. She hotly resented his attitude of the night before, when she had accused him. He had put her off with that dominant conquering manner of his and she had meekly gone to bed and cried. Why hadn't she let him understand that she had changed; that he could no longer treat her in such a manner?

Ah! She would go to Dr. Winthrop! She could count on his friendship. He would advise her. There had always been a way out. There must be an open door to this last terrible dilemma.

There was resolution in the voice which directed the chauffeur, "Dr. Winthrop's office, Charles." As the car whirled through the crowded streets, Mildred's mind busied itself with the story she would tell Jim Winthrop. He had been her playmate in childhood, her friend and physician through all these later years. He, alone, of her world could understand and help her.

Occupied with the whirling thoughts of her predicament, she heeded little the long wait in Dr. Winthrop's office. She had sent her name in with the message that she wished to see him when his office hours were over, and she waited. Finally the busy man welcomed her with that gentle sympathy which had made of him such a successful physician.

His practiced eye diagnosed her disease before she had told him a symptom, and he listened with sympathetic interest while she recited in a sweet, trembling voice the story of her fear of her husband's love for another woman and the episode of the dinner at their home.

"But why do you think George loves ner?" he asked.

"Because when we first met her his enthusiasm was so great. He admired her and her work and talked of her incessantly. He suddenly ceased speaking of her. I knew he saw her, dined with her, spent hours in her studio; but her name became too sacred to be whispered even to my ears."

Doctor Jim smiled. "You undervalue your own charm, Mildred. Of course, George has always admired, and I dare to prophesy, he always will admire beautiful or brilliant women; but you are his mate. He has ever come back."

"Mate!" She reiterated, with a sigh. "No, Jim, I have been his mother. I have let him take me for granted; but I can't bear the agony of her going to him over there when I, his wife, may not go—but she—"

"Mildred!" Doctor Jim sensed the rising emotion, and fearing hysteria, threw a commanding note in his voice.

"Only the calmest thought will help you now. I know of no way in which we could prevent Mrs. Boadway Trent from going to Poland; but we can control your mental attitude about her going if you will be quiet and listen to me. The surest way for George to be cured of his infatuation is for him to be thrown in her society. Do not visualize them together. You surely understand your husband now after the intimacy of your years together. It is not his first lapse— may not be his last. You have been patient before. Try to bear it with fortitude now. There is a way out, I promise you; but you, yourself, must hold the key which shall unlock the door."

"I'll try to be quiet, Jim. Tell me what to do. I—I'll do anything you say."

"Go home tonight and rest. Forget George and Mrs. Boadway Trent if you can, and leave tomorrow's snarl to be untangled tomorrow. Come to me at 4 as you did today."

"Just the telling has lightened my burden a little, Jim. I shall come to you tomorrow, and now, if you will get your hat and coat, you may ride downtown in my motor."

CARE OF THE BODY,

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N. D.

Natural Diet.

THE late Dr. T. R. Allinson of England was an eminent physician, an opponent of drugging and operations—except in rare cases—and an advocate of a rational diet, as the main factor in obtaining and retaining health. He met with great success, as must all who follow the laws of health.

Dr. Allinson died last year. I gave a brief outline of his life, a few months ago. His son Bertrand is a "chip of the old block," and is following in his father's footsteps. This from the Vegetarian Messenger (Manchester) is an address delivered by him at the annual Vegetarian Conference, held in Manchester in October, 1921:

With the popularisation and application of evolutionary principles, it seems quite natural that diet should be considered in their light. Indeed, the evolution or devolution of the human race is closely bound up with diet.

We must look back to the probable origin of man and determine the nature of man's ancestors. It is not difficult to suppose the frugivorous ancestry of man—evolved, no doubt, under tropical or subtropical conditions. It is much less difficult by considering man's structure, by comparing it with that of the other mammals of the earth, to lay down very definitely a frugivorous habit for man himself.

With regard to the physiology of the human body the question to determine is the following: "Under what conditions does the human body function most perfectly?"

This I find most readily attained by a fleshless diet, accompanied by hygienic living.

It is essentially attained by obedience—an obedience that is a pleasure. Above all it must be known what to obey—"Obey the natural dictates of the body." The body is a book in which is written large what it requires. Shortly, it is proper food, proper air, and proper exercise taken in the proper way. The qualities conferred by right living are clearness and elasticity of mind, endurance and suppleness of body and absence of preventible disease. Natural food taken in a manner as near natural as possible. The most natural foods are fruits, nuts and grains—then come pulses and vegetables, lastly animal products such as eggs, cheese, cow butter and milk. It is even doubtful if these last have the right to be considered natural in any degree, save that milk is natural food for the baby until it has molar teeth.

Until quite recently the inhabitants of temperate subtropical and tropical countries were mainly vegetarian. It is only within the last century that the peasantry of the more civilized countries have changed their appreciation of flesh-food from that of a luxury to that of a necessity. This change of attitude, combined as it has been with one of practice, has been attended by a change of vitality and health. It is partly the result of industrialism.

A considerable factor in this has been the gradual spread of the consumption of white bread. The removal of the staying power contained in the whole grain bread has left an appetite which has been satisfied by the increased use of flesh food. Modern bread is no longer the staff of life, but a withy wand incapable of proper support.

The free use of flesh food is one of the greatest causes of disease. This is due to two things—firstly, the stimulating nature of the food and secondly the excessive waste produced. The first results in quicker living and increased wear and tear—the second in clogging of the body and irritation of the various organs. The sensational increase of cancer is due, in part, to the increase in flesh consumption. Rheumatism, rheumatoid arthritis, gout, kidney disease, atheroma or thickening of the arteries, appendicitis and colitis, and many skin diseases, are a few of the diseases that are characteristic of the free use of animal food.

Again, there is no doubt that the free use of flesh food has a marked effect upon character. What are popularly termed the animal passions are encouraged by the consumption of flesh food. This is no small consideration, in an age that busies itself with social reform. I contend that no great advance in social conditions can take place until human nature itself undergoes a sweetening and modification, and that this cannot happen until physical right living becomes universal. Flesh food, by its stimulating nature, excites all the lower passions—choler, greed, avarice and sexual appetite.

Such are the general principles affecting diet. It will now be advisable to examine in detail the question of food. I will commence by insisting upon a differentiation that must be made by any one approaching this subject, and that is, we must determine not what the body is capable of doing, but what it should do. With regard to the foods best adapted for man's use, fruit must take the first place, then nuts and then grain.

Vegetable food—green meat—is an addition of civilization more valuable as a corrective to wrong living than as an essential part of diet. Vegetables are my strongest medicines.

Grain foods and the pulses are equally the outcome of the civilized state and are important in temperate climates.

For an adult of average height, leading an average existence, his daily bodily requirements are roughly one pound and a half of fresh fruit and green meat, one pound of whole grain food, and two ounces of nuts or pulse foods. These quantities are ample—in fact, more than enough, and it must here be insisted upon that with regard to quantity there is only one qualification, and that is "the minimum for health." Many vegetarians are as great dietetic sinners as flesh eaters. They consume large quantities of sweet foods, dried fruits, nut meats, pulse foods and much cheese and eggs in addition. To forswear flesh is no means of ensuring health.

With regard to fluids, if a diet is properly consumed, then I say—drink when you are thirsty, and preferably water. On a wrong diet much more must be drunk to get rid of the excessive waste, but a simple liver under ordinary conditions will not require a pint of fluid a day.

In sickness, if the digestion be good, then the case is simple and cure is usually merely a question of time.

Thus rheumatism can be most satisfactorily treated by a diet of whole meal bread, fresh fruit, tomatoes and raw green stuff, flushing the system with pure water, but many digestions are not equal to such a diet to begin with, and a diet of whole meal bread, baked apples, raw tomatoes and thin vegetable soups may be necessary.

Natural living is not only a means of maintaining but also of attaining health.

However, in certain diseases a stricter diet must be observed, such as that described for rheumatism. Diabetes is best treated by a sugarless and fruitless and fleshless diet, but whole meal bread can generally be eaten. The same strict diet helps cure in all septic and chronic inflammatory conditions. In acute conditions fasting or very low diet give the best results. In no form of disease are drugs more harmful than in acute conditions. The simplest diet, such as barley water, vegetable juices or fruit juices, or diluted milk are all that the body needs until the crisis is over. More food, the use of powerful drugs, the consumption of any form of stimulant beverage, be it wine, brandy, beef tea, meat extract or ordinary tea, prejudice not only the likelihood of recovery, but have a retarding effect upon convalescence.

It must be remembered that in such conditions all that the body demands is to be left alone, that to feed the body usually only feeds the disease.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating and no statements of principle have a sounder basis of actual fact than these I put before you.

The problems of diet in disease are more complicated than those of health, but in their broad outlines they are the same. If diet is important for the maintenance of health, it is very much more so for the riddance of disease.

Inasmuch as most disease is no more than the outcome of wrong living, in so much is health best regained by right living. Attention to diet, air, exercise personal hygiene is the finest means of combating disease that I know of. It supersedes the use of drugs, and renders unnecessary the use of the knife, in ninety-nine out of a hundred so-called surgical conditions. By these means the healing power of nature is freed and seconded. Diseases now considered terrible are rendered simple. Epilepsy, appendicitis, syphilis, consumption, tubercular abcesses and diseased bones can all be cured by its means without the hindrance of drugs or the ravages of the knife.

Many diseases must be regarded as beneficial. As a thunder storm clears the air, so these clear the system. The full advantage of this cleansing process can only be obtained by the simplest of treatments. The use of drugs, stimulants and so-called strengtheners acts directly contrary to the cleansing process. After many diseases we should enjoy a period of better health. Naturally some diseases are conditions due to excessive wear and tear of particular organs. In these it is essential that a proper diet be followed. Thus in heart disease, kidney disease, all digestive disease and liver conditions dietetic treatment cannot be surpassed.

Kipling's Evolution of Tommy Atkins.

Y BELLE COOPER.

IN HIS early writings, "Departmental Ditties," "Plain Tales From the Hills," "Soldiers Three," and "Barrack Room Ballads," Kipling evolved a typical British soldier, Tommy Atkins, who, while a good fighting man, is not ideally heroic, but rather in the humoristic vein. "Plain Tales From the Hills" introduced its readers to three privates who were boon companions serving the Queen in India—Terence Mulvaney, an Irishman, Stanley Ortheris, a Cockney, and Jock Learoyd, a Yorkshireman. These three distinct variants of "Tommy" have won the hearts of all readers, and make a modern "Three Musketeers" as distinguished and beloved as Dumas's triumvirate.

In the "Ballads of 1892" Kipling set Tommy Atkins achanting, and let him relate his own story in ballad form. The result is the most faithful picture of the common soldier to be found in modern literature. While fiction had hitherto devoted reams to accounts of gallant officers-on-leave, picturesque veterans, or sentimentalized privates, Kipling has given us the unidealized common soldier both at work and at play. His Tommy strikes no attitude; he is a simple wearer of the uniform, an everyday human being, with the common frailties and the ordinary passion for fair play:

TOMMY.

I went into a public-'ouse to get a pint o' beer,
The publican 'e up an' sez, "We serve no red-coats here."
The girls be'ind the bar they laughed an' giggled fit to die,
I outs into the street again an' to myself sez I:
O it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy, go away;"
But it's "Thank you, Mister Atkins," when the band begins to play.
The band begins to play, my boys, the band begins to play,
O it's "Thank you, Mister Atkins," when the band begins to play.

I went into a theater as sober as could be,
They gave a drunk civilian room, but 'adn't none for me;
They sent me to the gallery or round the music-'alls,
But when it comes to fightin', Lord! they'll shove me in the stalls!
For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy, wait outside;"
But it's "Special train for Atkins" when the trooper's on the tide.
The troopship's on the tide, my boys, the troopship's on the tide,
O it's "Special train for Atkins" when the trooper's on the tide.

And yet he feels that he has the fighting stuff in him, and knows that he will respond to the call of duty:

We aren't no thin red 'eroes, nor we aren't no blackguards too,
But single men in barricks, most remarkable like you;
An' if sometimes our conduck isn't all your fancy paints,
Why, single men in barricks don't grow into plaster saints;
While it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy fall be'ind,"
But it's "Please to walk in front, sir," when there's trouble in the wind,
There's trouble in the wind, my boys, there's trouble in the wind,
O, it's "please to walk in front, sir," when there's trouble in the wind.

Elsewhere we have pictures of Tommy at different stages in his development. In "The 'Eathen" Kipling gives us a picture of Tommy the recruit, and the necessary training he must undergo. There is the first condition of rawness:

The young recruit is 'aughty, 'e draf's from Gawd knows where;
They bid 'im show 'is stockin's an' lay 'is mattress square;
'E calls it bloomin' nonsense—'e doesn't know no more—
An' then up comes 'is company an' kicks 'im round the floor!

Then after a good deal of hammering and mocking, which the lad finds it difficult to bear, the true Tommy begins to evolve.

The young recruit is silly—'e thinks o' suicide;
'E's lost 'is gutter-devil; 'e 'asn't got 'is pride;
But day by day they kicks 'im, which 'elps 'im on a bit,
Till 'e finds 'isself one mornin' with a full an' proper kit.

The young recruit is 'appy—'e throws a chest to suit;
You see 'im grow mustaches; you 'ear 'im slap 'is boot;
'E learns to drop the "bloodies" from every word 'e slings,
An' 'e shows an 'ealthy brisket when 'e strips for bars an' rings.

The hard training, the "ragging," the meticulous discipline, teach him patience and self-control; and he "finds himself" as a non-commissioned officer:

'E learns to do 'is watchin' without it showin' plain;
'E learns to save a dummy, an' shove it straight again;
'E learns to check a ranker that's buyin' leave to shirk;
'E learns to make men like 'im so they'll learn to like their work.

The process seems to have very little of the ideal in it; but it is real army life, hard matter-of-fact soldiering:

Of all 'is five years' schoolin' they don't remember much
Except the not retreatin', the step an' keepin' touch.
It looks like teachin' wasted when they duck an' spread an' 'op—
But if 'e 'adn't learned 'im they'd be all about the shop!

And, after all, military critics assert that it is the British noncommissioned officers—the corporals and the sergeants—who are the real strength of the army, and can hardly be duplicated elsewhere. They are quiet men who give themselves no airs. Rightly, there is no glamor or glory about Kipling's Tommy; he is possessed, it is true, of native valor, and can recognize bravery in others, even his enemies:

So 'ere's to you, Fuzzy-Wuzzy, at your 'ome in the Soudan;
You're a pore benighted 'eathen but a first-class fightin' man.

Tommy must, however, be trained by discipline to fight, or, what is often more important, to stand and suffer for the good of his nation. Discipline is the keynote of Kipling's soldier. It is discipline which makes Tommy efficient to do his work well. In "That Day," a soldier recalls with shame a certain battle which ended in disgraceful panic and flight, and he logically reasons that the cause of the panic was that the men were not disciplined:

We were rotten 'fore we started—we was never disciplined;
We made it out a favour if an order was obeyed;
Yes, every little drummer 'ad 'is rights and wrongs to mind,
So we had to pay for teachin'—an' we paid!

That discipline could teach the men to stand bravely to the last, is recorded in "Soldier an' Sailor Too." The concluding stanza commemorates the marines who met death on the sinking Victoria. The tragedy occurred in 1893 when the Mediterannean fleet was maneuvering in two columns off the coast of Syria. Admiral Tryon made a really impossible signal for the course to be inverted—the ships to turn quickly in succession. During the execution of the maneuver the Camperdown collided with the Victoria, Admiral Tryon's flagship, and sank her; and Tryon, together with over 350 officers and men, was drowned. Those who knew the feat was impossible simply obeyed, and went to their death. The regulars show their appreciation of the Victoria's marines in these words:

We're most of us liars, we're 'arf of us thieves, an' the rest are as rank as can be,
But once in a while we can finish in style (which I 'ope it won't 'appen to me.)
But it makes you think better o' you an' your friends, an' the work you may have to do,
When you think o' the sinkin' Victorier's Jollies—soldier an' sailor too!
Now there isn't no room for to say ye don't know—they 'ave proved it plain and true—
That, whether it's Widow, or whether it's ship, Victorier's work is to do,
An' they done it, the Jollies—'Er Majesty's Jollies—soldier an' sailor too!

Later Kipling's Tommy becomes an institution. The ideal of the efficient soldier is transferred to bridge-builders, colonists, governors, or any other men at work. By Kipling, work is represented as lovely because of its disciplinary value. One of his collections of short stories is called "A Day's Work." It is symbolic, standing for the locomotives and the marine engines do force. All the men, and even the horses, the locomotives and the marine engines do things. "The order in all cases was to stand by the day's work and wait instruction," is the philosophy of "The Bridge Builders." To struggle and to obey also comes into the day's work. "It's all in a day's work," says Scott in "William the Conqueror." "It's all in the day's run," says '007 in the locomotive story. "Play the game—don't talk," advises the "Maltese Cat." "Captains Courageous" teaches the necessity of learning to take orders. This, too, is the lesson which the Scotch engineer M'Andrew draws from his engines:

"Law, Order, Duty an' Restraint, Obedience, Discipline."

Even Kipling's God is either the "Lord God of Battles," the "Master of all Good Workmen," the "Great Overseer," or "Our wise Lord God, master of every trade." Faithful work on earth is made the price of admission both to Heaven and Hades. Gunga Din dies in the performance of duty, but will "carry on" in "the place where 'e is gone." The nondescript Tomlinson is refused admission in turn to Heaven and Hell because he cannot answer satisfactorily the test, "What ha' ye done?" The Scot M'Andrew—and it is to be noted in passing that Kipling's grandfather, the Rev. George Macdonald, was a Scotchman—takes comfort in reflecting:

"I am o' service to my kind. Ye wadna blame the thought?"

Discipline, however, is only to the end of more effective activity. Every trained Tommy, whether in military or civil life, becomes an effective machine in the making and upbuilding of the empire. The young men may follow obedient, in the first instance, to the call of the Red Gods:

He must go—go—go away from here!
On the other side the world he's overdue.
'Send your road is clear before you when the old spring-fret comes o'er you,
And the Red Gods call for you!

But the social consciousness developed in each individual will some day speak in no uncertain tones to the explorer who has been advised:

Till a voice, as bad as Conscience, rang in-edge of cultivation."

He halts at the little border station and plows the land and builds barns and fences. Kipling describes such an adventurer, to whom the irresistible call comes to move onward, in "The Explorer:"

Till a voice, as bad as Conscience, rang interminable changes
On one everlasting Whisper day and night repeated—so:
"Something hidden. Go and find it. Go and look behind the Ranges—Something lost behind the Ranges, lost and waiting for you. Go!"

After enduring harassing difficulties, the explorer stumbles on the mountain pass, only to meet with further obstacles:

"Thought to name it for the finder: but that night the Norther found me—
Froze and killed the plains-bred ponies: so I called the camp Despair
(It's the Railway Gap today though.) Then my Whisper waked to hound me:
"Something lost behind the Ranges. Over yonder! Go you there!"

Then I knew, the while I doubted—knew His hand was certain o'er me.
Still—it might be self-delusion—scores of better men had died—
I could reach the township living, but . . .
He knows what terror tore me . . .
But I didn't . . . but I didn't. I went down the other side. . . .

His perseverance is finally crowned with success:

Saul he went to look for donkeys, and by God he found a kingdom!
But by God, who sent His Whisper, I had struck the worth of two!
Ores you'll find there; wood and cattle; water-transit sure and steady
(That should keep the railway rates down, coal and iron at your doors.
God took care to hide that country till He judged His people ready,
Then He chose me for His Whisper, and I've found it, and it's yours!

Tommy Atkins's social consciousness is transferred not only to the explorer, but to the whole empire. Kipling's idea of the empire is that it should possess the same homely virtues that make the army efficient; he insists on the obligations of the empire, and preaches that as possessions increase new responsibilities must be met. This is, in fact, the "White Man's Burden." To understand the real meaning of the term—as many fail to do—is to appreciate and honor the ideal of duty even in its crudest and quaintest manifestations.

THE PERFECT DAY.

us," admitted Dwyer, reluctantly. "But it will leave us bare. We need some expense money."

"You give it here," returned Hank implacably. "Expense money be blowed! Give me 2000 even, and it's a go. But you got to go back the way you came. I'm goin' north—and I need room. The boys won't lynch him—not with you bringin' him in that way. They'll take him to Dona Ana for you. That's my last word. Take it or leave it."

The money changed hands. Under Hank's gun, Panky was trussed up with suit case straps, his hands behind his back, and was assisted into the car. Then his ankles were strapped together. Whalen took the steering wheel with Dwyer beside him and the two Bills in the tonneau. The car turned back toward the Point of Rocks; behind it, Hank climbed to the railroad track and howled a trucculent farewell.

Mr. Panky chatted freely, mainly about Hank. His companions, being in high spirits, met these lively sallies with laughter and applause. After a few miles, however, Mr. Panky lapsed to sulky silence.

A cool breeze tossed the wayside mesquites; a far mountain notched black and sharp across the red sun, the car came again to Lookout Draw. It chugged up the sandy slope, it turned across the plain to the chuck-wagon.

A horseman trotted out to meet the car, waving his arm. "Gee whiz! Ain't you got no sense?" he cried in an angry voice. "Get away with that devil-wagon. You'll stampede these cattle. Go 'way round, if you want to get to camp."

Whalen made a wide detour, driving slowly over the grass hummocks; dusk had fallen when he reached the wagon.

By the bright fire stood a battery of steaming Dutch ovens and pots and a vast kettle of coffee, sending out a savory incense; in the firelight, a broad semicircle of cowboys sat cross-legged, laughing and talking or busy with plate and knife and fork.

"Supper all ready, strangers! Come and get it!"

The hail came from Cole, the foreman, as the car stopped.

"We've got your train robber!" called Whalen triumphantly. "Here's your Bill Panky."

The semicircle went suddenly hushed and still.

Cole rose and came forward. "Bully!" he said heartily. "Good for you! There's a big reward offered for him—ten thousand, I think. You're in luck. Where'd you get him?"

"Another man captured him," explained Whalen, modestly, "and turned him over to us to bring in." He tugged at the strap on the captive's legs. "I'll tell you about it later."

He took the prisoner's elbow, Bill assisting from behind, and helped him to the ground. Dwyer followed.

"Gosh, my feet are asleep," remarked the prisoner, to a vast silence. He shambled a step into the firelight. "Undo my arms, somebody."

Cole unbuckled the strap; the outlaw hobbled straight to a tin plate and cup. Cole spoke in a pained and shocked voice.

"Why, this isn't Bill Panky. This is old Jim Hendricks, and he isn't worth $20 a dozen to anyone."

"But he killed a man here!"

Cole shook his head. "We was just playing moving-picture cowboys."

Whalen's heart stood still. Dwyer felt a cold faintness creeping over him and leaned heavily against the mud-guard. "But our m-money!" gurgled Dwyer. "All we had—gave it to the man that caught him!"

A drawling voice rose from the fire. "What sort of a looking man? Little sawed-off runt, red eyes and brindled mustache?"

"That's him!"

"Oh, it's all right then!" said the voice. "I told him to do that." Spud Wallis, the speaker, rose and loitered over. "I'll take care of the money. You just make a little list of the rings you've lost lately, Mr. Whalen—your poor old dad's rings. Jot down the names and amounts, near as you remember, and I'll fix it all up for as far as the money holds out."

Bill stepped into the car and grasped the steering-wheel firmly.

"Home, Jeems!" he said.

And thus Spud got the girl!

THE ANTIDOTE.

(Concluded from Page 1.)

"You won't mind waiting while I write a few prescriptions before sharing the luxury of your car?"

"As long as you like," she replied, and left him to finish his necessary work.

As she walked to the outer office her heart went up in thanksgiving for Jim's friendship. Susceptible to beauty in all things, she was reacting to the kindness which had prompted the busy man to listen patiently to her story. Her spirit was lifted, for she felt he could and would help her.

Within ten minutes they were in the limousine. Mildred, of course, was impatient to renew the topic where they had left it. It comforted her to be able to confide in this sympathetic man.

"I have always hated domestic squabbles, Jim," she began. "Triangles are as obnoxious to me as smallpox. I will not allow the poison of scandal to corrode my life. I will do anything you say, but you must save me."

"We will work together, Mil." An assuring determination was in his tone. "After many years of trying to bring healing to human bodies I have learned there is no royal road to health. Neither can one wear a purple robe on the path to peace. But even a rough road may be interesting if you open your eyes to the pictures along the way. I can only point them out to you."

The car had stopped at Mildred's door. "I can't thank you now, Jim."

"Don't try," he smiled.

"Until tomorrow, then," she said. "Charles will drive you to the club."

Mildred touched the bell with a feeling of dread. The house, how empty it would seem! Unsupported by the physician's positive personality she was beginning to droop again. She hated self pity, but she wanted to cry and all those miserable tormenting thoughts were clamoring for recognition in her brain.

"Ah, madame," said the little French maid opening the door, and her kind voice was soothing to the ear. "You and the flowers have come together—a box—the boy have just gone but now."

"Thank you, Marie."

Mildred's heart quickened. George had thought of her then. Her trembling fingers opened the box and the fragrance of violets filled the room. But she had no eyes for the exquisite flowers. Her eager gaze sought the white square which lay on top. She dismissed her maid with "I shall arrange the flowers, Marie," and hastily tore open the envelope. Her amazed eyes read but two words in the upper left hand corner of a full size sheet of note paper—these words in an altogether strange chirography, "Dream Lady."

George had not sent the flowers. Who had, then? Mildred felt sure no one she knew could have done so. Perhaps they were not meant for her. Yes, there it was, "Mrs. George Birdell." As she read again those romantic words "Dream Lady," Mildred walked to the mirror. Smiling a bit wistfully, she examined her sweet, attractive face with close scrutiny. She was 33. The rose of illusion had long ago made way for the gray of fact in her life. She had not been embittered but she knew now, as she held the fragrant flowers to her face, that she had longed—even before Maizie had told her the truth about herself—was longing for the old sweet illusive world again. Now emotion engulfed her. George—her husband and this woman—Dr. Winthrop's admonition "do not visualize them together" flashed in her brain. Who had sent the flowers? "Dream Lady." When would Mrs. Boadway Trent go abroad? Was George's ship safe? How soon could his cable announcing his safe arrival reach her?

After hours of complex, whirling thoughts she finally fell asleep, the fragrance of violets in her nostrils, a wife's tragedy and the subtle enjoyment of a promised romance struggling for supremacy in her heart.

She telephoned Mrs. Grant in the morning—the flowers might have been sent by her; but her denial rang true and the mystery remained unsolved.

Two startlingly interesting weeks had passed for Mildred. She had kept her appointment with Jim the following day. He has complimented her poise. Pointed out the path she was to tread to outwit fate. "Work" he had said "is to be the antidote that is to eject the poison of doubt and jealousy from your heart. Come with me. I shall take you to homes where help, which only a woman can give, is needed. You will learn to think of others, to forget yourself. You shall have your first lesson today."

They had gone. Everywhere she encountered that sublime faith in Jim. They all told her how he never thought of himself, but tried to bring healing and comfort everywhere. What a man he was! She had always accepted him—taken his friendship as a matter of course—never realized his greatness. God had led her to him, surely. Strangely enough she had not confided the incident of the flowers to him. She somehow felt half ashamed, half reluctant to share her romance with even this staunch ally.

Two days later, as she came back from her round of the poor with Jim, she found a box on her dressing table. With pounding heart her fingers tore it open to find revealed a delicate bunch of lilies of the valley, almost covered with a now familiar white envelope. The sheet within contained two words in the center of the first line, allowing sufficient space for the words "Dream Lady," but omitting them. The words that caught her startled eyes were "These blossoms."

She sank into a chair with the box, flowers and note in her hand, thoroughly thrilled with the excitement of the strange mystery. What did it mean? Her little maid found her there, lost in rosy thought when she came to announce dinner.

It had been a week later when breakfasting in bed and read that the distinguished writer, Mrs. Boadway Trent, was planning a trip abroad to write up conditions in Poland and in Russia, too, if she might enter the latter country. Mildred had pushed her breakfast aside untasted and pain, jealousy and doubt had again taken full possession of her soul. How she hated this woman, this demon, bent on destroying her happiness and security! She had telephoned to Dr. Winthrop and he had come to her, and, as always, she had been comforted and strengthened by his presence. That day he had found more absorbing work for her to do. She had done it listlessly, without heart. She just could not go on with this overwhelming struggle.

That afternoon another box awaited her on her return home. This time it contained heavenly roses. Again a hidden note! She found herself wondering what this note would contain. Pleasurable excitement and curiosity filled her as she opened and read, on the right hand side of the full sheet. Quickly she took from a perfumed French case the other two notes and read

"are my messengers,"

"Dream Lady: These blossoms are my messengers." Her eyes sparkled, her blood danced as she instinctively walked to the mirror. A very lovely smiling Mildred looked out at her; a Mildred who had forgotten that only that morning she had read a dangerous rival was going to join her husband in a far country.

As Mildred turned from the glass she searched the box cover for the florist's name but found it perfectly plain, without any lettering. Who could the sender be?

The following day Dr. Winthrop had again complimented her. "You see for yourself now, Mildred, that work is the panacea, don't you?" And she had agreed with him that it got rid of the long weary hours anyway. But she did not inform him of the other cause, nor why her spirits were so buoyant. So much for the two weeks.

At last the long expected cable arrived from George. He was safe and well. Just as the message was handed her she had been thinking of the three boxes of flowers that had come in two weeks and wondering if more would come. And more did come in the weeks that followed. Sometimes two days would elapse, and again three and four; but they came, always perfect, always the two or three written words in exact sequence of where they would have been if the whole note had been written on the same sheet. Never had she been able to speak of them to Jim. Always she had thought "I will tell him the next time;" but somehow she felt she must not betray the secret of that unknown mysterious sender. Nor did she speak of the flowers again to Maizie. That dainty person was happy in the belief that this new bewildering Mildred was the fruit of the germ she had planted the night of the dinner.

Thus three months passed and George was coming home tomorrow. His letters to her had, in the last month of his absence, been more like the chummy letters of their early married life. He wrote of Mrs. Boadway Trent, too. Of her work abroad. She would not return to the States for some months, but "Thank God" he wrote, "I am coming. It makes a man appreciate home and all that it means when one has been an exile, even a willing one, for three months. I have missed you."

Mildred's lips smiled an almost girlish smile as she read. She opened her French box and took out many sheets and placed them together, with the following result:

"Dream Lady:

"These blossoms are my messengers. Their perfume is my offering at the shrine where I am forbidden to worship. I have naught to say which could not be better said by them. Their silent sweetness must convey more than words of mine, the secret my heart holds, e'en though I were possessed of a thousand tongues. Keep them ever near you. No age can silence their language which must, though they be withered and faded, speak to you of a love which is content to give, asking no greater boon than the privilege of giving."

Would this be the end? Mildred questioned her thought. She found herself regretting the lost liberty George's presence must bring should she continue to receive the phantom flowers—as her heart had learned to call them.

It was well that she made no further analysis of her mind and heart. Her husband was coming to her and she was—yes, surely she was glad. She vaguely sensed that something in his experience in that far war-torn country had changed him. Her letters had intrigued him, too. How interesting life was when one had just a little understanding of the game! These months of freedom—how much they had taught her!

Her waiting at the pier was rewarded by an eager dominant George coming toward her with outstretched arms. She thrilled ecstatically. Her mate was coming back to her, and in the light of her new knowledge, she felt that he was coming back to stay.

It was a few days later that she went to Dr. Winthrop's [illegible] with a triumphant, [illegible] smile.

"Your face tells your story, Mildred. George is back and you are the happiest woman in New York."

"Yes, Jim, and I came to thank you."

"Don't thank me, Mil. Thank work, the blessed panacea for all our ills—the antidote for every poison which threatens our lives."

She opened her lips to speak but before a sound came he continued.

"I tried it out once, Mildred. I thought I was hopelessly in love; that my life was ruined because the one woman in the world for me loved another. My work taught me that love for humanity was greater than love for the individual; that man could only effectually find himself by forgetting himself in service to others."

"Yes, Jim, I think you are the very happiest person I know; but I must tell you that it was not work alone which brought solace to me. Something else—"

Jim revealed two rows of strong white teeth.

"Yes, I know."

Mildred eyed him with quick appraisement.

"What do you know, Jim? Do you know about the flowers?"

Dr. Winthrop's eyes sparkled as he admonished.

"Mildred, if you have a secret, keep it in your heart. Its romance will warm you and your warmth will radiate to others; and—" his tones vibrated like the strings of a violin as he took her hand at the door. "Never use this little hand to raise one of the thousand veils that shroud a mystery; the charm lies in the veils."

NOT TOO MUCH PESSIMISM.

BY W. L. GEORGE, Author of "Hail Columbia," "Ursula Trent," etc.

WE STILL tell the good old story of an English traveler in France who, on the wharf at Boulogne, observed a red-haired woman with glasses and put down in his note book: "In France all the women wear glasses and have red hair." This is an apposite story, for many of us seem to glean our opinions from information just as scant. For instance, in the case of modern England, there is an idea about that the poor old island is in a bad way. To a certain extent the Englishman himself helps on the illusion. He differs from the American who readily boosts his country; the Englishman tends to run his country down. He likes nothing better, when he has had a good dinner, several glasses of port and an excellent cigar, than to declare that the country is going to the dogs. He enjoys the idea, just as he enjoys funerals. The amazed American guest hears him say that England is losing her trade, her morals and her manners. His surprise grows if he echoes these mournful sentiments; the Englishman may run down his own country, but if a foreigner joins in he does not protest or argue, these not being English habits but his cordiality slowly vanishes like an offended cat.

So it is rather our own fault that such black pictures are drawn of England. She is in a bad way, certainly, but bad ways are purely relative things. Just as in some small towns a man is rich if he owns half a million dollars, in greater cities this fortune may place him merely above the poverty line. England may be in a bad way, but she is in a better way than Germany, Austria, France, Italy, Russia, Hungary and all the Balkans. She has had a serious shock, and she is naturally suffering from the effects, but that does not mean that she is an industrial wreck, financially a bankrupt, that her unemployed rove the streets like hungry wolves, that morality has been submerged, or that she is a mere hysterical vestige of a once great polity.

One can overdo pessimism, like optimism; we all know professionals in each of these methods, but what is strange is that we always discount the optimist, dear, lightheaded fellow, while we accept the pessimist at his own estimate. We are all very English, even the Americans; we like to think the world is going to the dogs. We like the idea so much that when we are told that our course towards the kennel is slow, circuitous and most uncertain, we grow angry; we quote arguments in a canine direction; if provoked, we invent arguments; in despair, we will bark down opposition.

In fact things in England are not as bad as they seem. Many people eat meat quite often. At certain hours, in the stores, charmingly garbed women struggle for goods in a manner less charming, but denoting a full purse. Some pessimists point

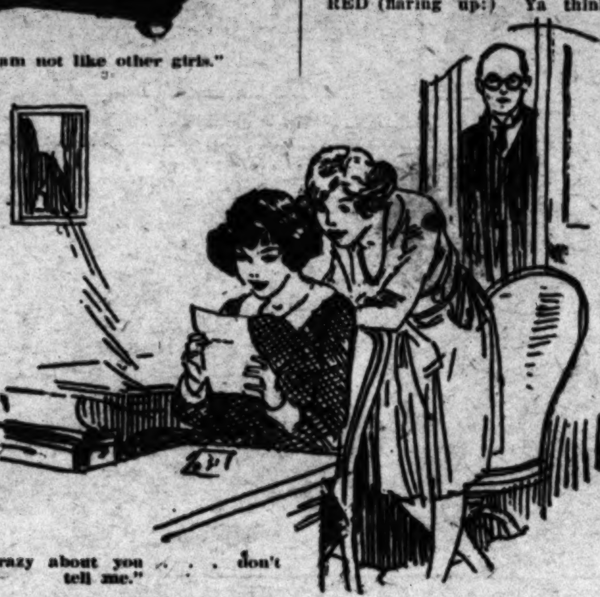
PROLOGUE.

In the old days of the peripatetic philosophers the professors did all the traveling . . . today the professors stay on the job and the students do the traveling—that is, if they are fortunate enough to belong to a few athletic teams . . . there is "Red" Miller, for instance, who belongs to all the teams dear old alma mater can dig up . . . . as a result he spends most of his scholastic year studying geography from the train windows . . . . he is out on a basketball junket now and Mamie Potter is a widow . . . not so good!

Scene I: A Page From Mamie's Diary.

Dearest Diary: I will have to write to Red and make up with him. I can stand this suspense no longer. I just can't bear to think of what he may be doing while he is away from me on that horrid old trip. I wish I hadn't paid any attention to that busybody clairvoyant with her nasty predictions. What business did she have telling me that Red was untrue to me? It's none of her business even if he was. Besides, Diary, I don't believe a word of it.

"I am not like other girls."



"He's crazy about you . . . don't tell me."

I wonder what I should say to Red? I wonder if he is really angry with me. Maybe he has found another girl and has forgotten about me already . . . one of those smart-aleck college girls that are hanging around him all the time . . . I should think they'd have more self-respect than run after a man the way some of them run after Red. Catch me running after him or any other man, I should say not!

Scene II: Red Receives a Letter.

"Dear Red:

"I have been wondering what you must have thought of me the other evening the way I acted. I bet you said, 'Isn't she the peevish little thing?' And I was peevish, wasn't I? But you would have been peevish, too, if you had just turned your ankle. But then great strong men like you don't turn their ankles do they? And even if you had, you would have been too brave to act peevish about it. But 'women are poor weak creatures after all.' And I know you will be big enough to overlook such a little thing.

"What have you been doing with yourself all this time? I know you will tell me that you have been playing basketball, but you haven't been playing basketball all the time, have you? I suppose you have been stepping around with a lot of these smart, good looking college girls, and have forgotten all about me. Write and tell me that you haven't, and I will try to believe you.

"I miss you dreadfully and can hardly wait until you come back. When do you expect to return? I saw in the paper where you played such a fine game and I was so proud of you I could hardly talk. All my friends tease me because I read the sporting page now in preference to any other page in the paper, but I don't care. You can guess why I read it. Maybe I will find something about a certain some one who has probably forgotten all about me.

"Oh, there goes the telephone. I suppose that is Harry calling up again. He has been pestering me to death. But you know I wouldn't go out with him just because you're out of town. I am not like other girls.

"Well, I must close. Here I am curled up as warm and comfy as can be in my pink silk kimono, but lonesome, oh, so lonesome—just like in the song, 'All By Myself.' Your ——? "MAMIE."

(Of course the telephone never rang and, even if it had, it wouldn't have been Harry, even if there had ever been a Harry . . . while the "warm, comfy pink silk kimono" is just "atmosphere" . . . very effective with the males . . . all of us girl letter writers use that one . . . but Red doesn't know it . . . alas, they never do until long after they come down the aisle, and then the pardon comes too late.)

RED (to Pete, with whom he has been reading Mamie's letter:) Harry, eh? . . . Let me see . . . who d'ya s'pose that guy could be? When I get back he'd better sneak—I'll bounce a fast one off his beak.

(Red is needlessly alarmed—there isn't any Harry and never was, but Mamie must do something to keep the interest alive, and the old stuff is the best in the game.)

PETE (sympathetically:) Let a guy step out and there's always some pup of a sub on the sidelines warming up.

(No truer words were ever spoken!)

RED (savagely:) He'll leave Mamie alone if he wants good luck; I'll hit him so hard he'll think it's a truck.

(Refers to letter.)

But she says she's turned this guy down flat . . .

PETE (sadly:) Red, old boy, they all say that; that's what my girl told me, too. She didn't have one—she had a whole crew . . . they're all alike . . . ya can't trust one.

RED (flaring up:) Ya think Mamie'd trifle with me? . . . Like fun!

PETE (nodding his head sadly:) Red, my boy, it has been done . . .

(No doubt about it . . . !)

RED (pensively:) She kicked up a fuss last time I seen 'er. If she was a man sometimes I'd bean 'er. Y'never know what them girls'll do; I can't dope 'em out at all . . . can you?

PETE (mournfully:) They've dunced lots better men than I'm . . . they go clear over me every time.

RED (half to himself:) I guess I'll drop her a line or two; Y'never can tell what them gals'll do . . .

(Oh, yes, you can: just imagine what you would do if you were a girl, and then do the opposite.)

"Dear Mamie:

Scene III: Mamie Receives a Letter.

"Well, Mamie, I got your letter and I was sure glad to hear from you. How are you, anyway, and how are all the folks? I hope well. Had a punk trip so far . . . the food in these diners is rotten. I'm so darn sick of roast beef I'll never be able to look a cow in the face. Weather's been pretty cold so far and they say it's going to get colder before very long. Wish I was back home. These trips get a guy's goat after he's been away for a while. What are you doing with yourself anyway, these days? I guess you ain't pining away for lonesomeness or nothing, are you? Well, I guess I better close—it's getting late. We'll be back home pretty soon and then I can tell you about the trip and everything. Gee, it'll feel good to get back to some home cooking after these darn diners.

"With love n'ev'rything, RED."

MAMIE (to Elizabeth, her bosom pal at the office, with whom she has been reading Red's letter:) "With love n'ev'rything" . . . isn't that dear! And he says he'll be glad to get back here.

ELIZABETH (with the true instinct of the friend:) It's easy to see he's lonesome for you, and yet you thought that he wasn't true!

MAMIE (gayly:) Oh, that's all forgotten . . . that's all through; we'll start all over again like new . . . let's read it again . . . I feel this way: he had lots of things that he wanted to say that he didn't put down in black and white, but it's there 'tween the lines, all right, all right.

(And yet they say love is blind when it can read hidden meanings between the lines of such letters . . .)

ELIZABETH: Did you read down here what he has to say: "What are you doing with yourself, anyway?" That shows he's worrying, don't you see? He's crazy about you . . . don't tell me!

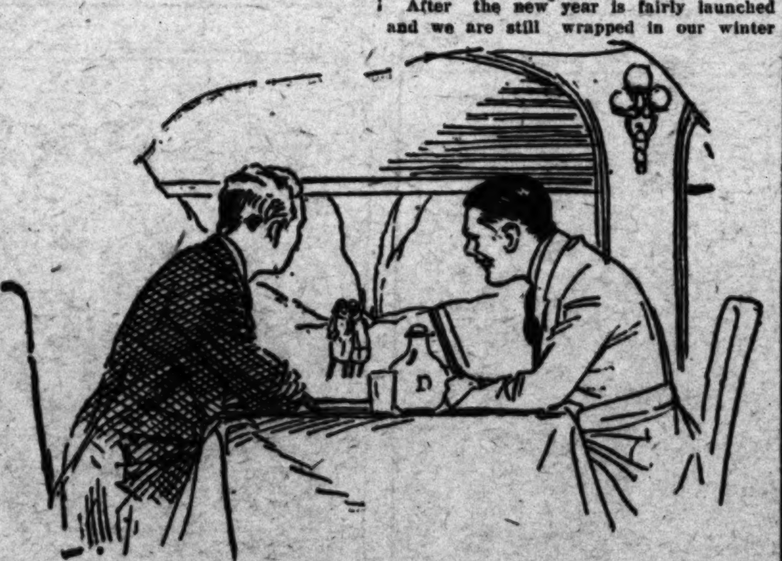
Make Over Your Frock.



Studying geography from the train windows.

After the new year is fairly launched and we are still wrapped in our winter furs, most of us begin the task of replenishing our wardrobes so as to be ready at the first sign of spring to appear in splendid new clothes. No frock or suit is so hopelessly old-fashioned that it cannot be used in some way in the new season. If you have taffeta, foulard or satin that has outlived its usefulness as a dress, it could be very easily remodeled into a costume slip to be worn under an overdress of new material. A costume slip also forms an important part. The blouse and tunic are cut in one and worn over the slip. This style lends itself nicely to making over two old dresses if one is silk and the other cloth. The slip, side body and sleeves are of one material and the tunic and collar are of another.—[February Designer.

Business Outlook Favorable.

I have been talking with such industrial leaders as John D. Ryan, head of the largest copper company in America; Charles M. Schwab of Bethlehem Steel fame; Earl D. Babst, head of the American Sugar Refining Company; A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation, as well as numbers of our foremost bankers, and if their views were summarized into one sentence, the sentence would read something like this:

Business will show appreciable improvement in 1922, but no active, vigorous prosperity can be looked for until Washington makes certain changes in existing laws.

The general attitude of responsible men of affairs is one of moderate optimism. A rare few are indulging in predictions that 1922 will be the biggest business year America has ever known. Another few shake their heads and express fears that things will drag along very disappointingly for at least another year.—[B. C. Forbes, in Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

The Favored Industries of 1922.

"It is the classes, not the masses, that are poor," says Paul Clay in Forbes Magazine (N. Y.) "The war tended to wipe out personal fortunes and to lodge wealth in new hands. At present it is easier to sell 2000 pairs of silk stockings than it is to sell 2000 pounds of iron. Our industrial, rather than our agricultural, sections are likely to get the cream of 1922 prosperity. Prominent among the prosperous industries are boots and shoes, hides and leather, cotton and woolen mills, wholesale and retail grocery concerns, tobacco manufacturers, dealers in raw silk, department stores, gas and electric lighting companies, and dealers in meats coal, gasoline and jewelry. Almost anything that goes into personal consumption is either prospering now or on the straight road to prosperity. There is no drastic economy in the household. The biggest and best world's market during 1922 will probably be the typical American home outside the agricultural sections."

Are you Like This?

Our good friend James Bowe was telling me the other day the story of the man who lived in a rented house to whom someone gave a dog. Of course the dog had to have a kennel. The man got some old packing boxes and made it himself. He had never built anything before and making this house for his dog gave him so much pleasure that he bought a small piece of land on the outskirts of the town and with the help of a local carpenter built a house for himself and family. It is likely that he would be a renter today if someone hadn't given him that dog. Most of us are like the old-fashioned automobiles without self-starters. Some one has to crank us before we'll run.—[Tom Dreier, in Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

"Dreams."

I dreamed you sat beside me
While the Limited was flying
Toward the slowly fading twilight
Where a Western sun was dying.

I dreamed your smiles and laughter
Were still the same sweet ones of old
While we rode there in the evening
Toward that sky of crimson gold.

I dreamed you walked beside me
As I strolled beneath the palms
And your voice was low and soothing
Like the evening Vesper Psalms.

I saw the waves come racing
And I dreamed they came from you
Far across the broad Pacific
From the little Isle Oahu.

I dreamed each brought a message
And laid it at my feet
And all the waves together
Formed a story most complete.

And I tried to write the answer
As the Tide pulled out to sea
Thinking sometime you might read it
And come sailing back to me.

But, alas, for all the dreaming
There's no answer I can write
For you never sent the message
That I'm dreaming here tonight.

THE HOW IN HOUSES

HOW TO PLAN HOW TO BUY HOW TO SAVE

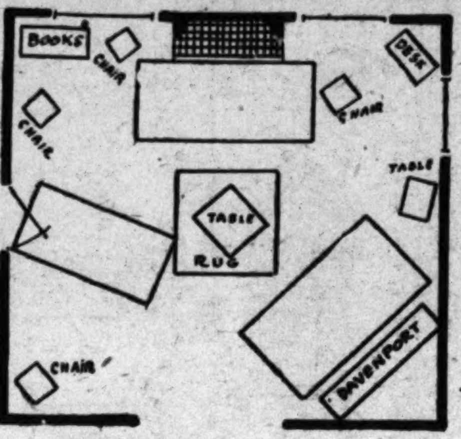
THE ARRANGEMENT OF FURNITURE.

THE arrangement of furniture in accordance with the structural lines of the room is conducive to harmony, order and balance. Such an arrangement eliminates most of the diagonal lines. The first way in which this principle is violated is in the placing of rugs. Frequently these are laid at all sorts of angles to the lines of the wall as well as to each other. This creates the impression of confusion and unrest and makes it almost if not quite impossible to bring harmony out of the chaos begun.

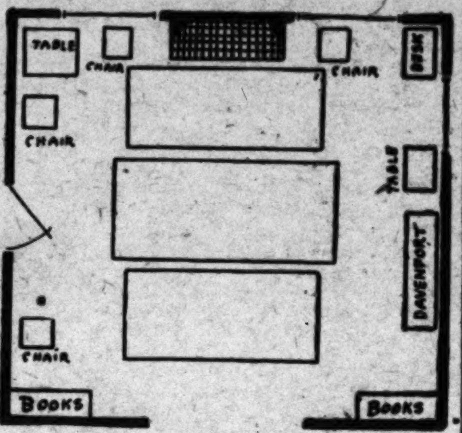
While in a living-room one or two large rugs are to be preferred as a rule, a number of small rugs can be used successfully provided they are properly placed side beside and parallel with the walls of the room.

The diagrams show the confusing effect of rugs placed at angles and the more ordered and pleasing result of the parallel arrangement.

Furniture placed across corners has the disadvantages of leaving a staring, vacant hole at the back and also of being out of line. While this may be overlooked in the case of a smaller piece, a davenport or piano so placed creates a discord that goes far to spoil the whole. With the furniture related to the wall by being drawn near it and by being placed as the wall spaces suggest, the center of the room is left free for the unimpeded movement of the occupants. That is one reason why the center table has withdrawn from its old-time place of honor in most homes. Another is that such a position for the table gives the room a stiff and unfriendly appearance.



Incorrect arrangement of rugs.



Correct arrangement of rugs.

To Break the Structural Lines of the Room Creates Discord.

LOOPED back curtains are objected to on the same grounds as diagonally placed rugs. They break the structural lines of the room and so detract from its character. Pictures hung hit or miss have the same objection. Even when these are grouped the broken lines are conducive to unrest. When hung in relation to the furniture, with the tops on a line, the room is better balanced and the result more pleasing. The substitution of two straight wires for the one forming a V is another concession to the rule in favor of following structural lines wherever possible.

Along with rugs askew, looped-back curtains and hit or miss pictures may be mentioned table runners at an angle and sofa cushions arranged to resemble a design on a "crazy quilt."

While it may seem that the precise arrangement recommended might produce a stilted and unnatural effect, in actual practice there is no such danger. Chairs are constantly being moved, books placed carelessly on the table, windows and doors left open, and these with numerous other factors give the relief from a too strict formality that otherwise might prevail.

In a room that is studied and arranged with an eye to balance and design, the mantel is given due consideration. No ornament, however beautiful, is placed there without studying the effect. The relation to one another of the two or three or possibly four objects allowed on the mantel is of paramount importance. If these objects are so placed as to give a top-heavy appearance to either side, restlessness results.

A Restful Room Avoids Superfluity and Display.

WHILE it is in the living-room that bad arrangement is most common and most objectionable, each room in the house may lose much of its character from this cause. In the dining-room a formal arrangement is the rule rather than the exception, though the placing of chairs across corners and at unnecessary angles is not unknown here. So, too, an overloaded buffet is the rule rather than the exception, if three-fourths of the objects were removed from most buffets and the remaining pieces placed in a balanced relation, the clamor and confusion would be greatly reduced.

With the many built-in conveniences found in most houses, the furniture required in the bedroom is reduced. The full bedroom set with bed, bureau, chiffonier, dressing table, side table, desk and chairs is seldom required. Such an array of furniture in an ordinary bedroom suggests Grand Rapids at exhibition time. No piece of furniture should be admitted that is not really needed. The aim should be to avoid superfluity and display. A restful bedroom has its bed or beds, the necessary drawer space, a chair or two and possibly a desk or chest. The taste and requirements of the occupant is the test, not the number of pieces sold together as a set. Free spaces in the center and unobstructed access to closets and doors are worth striving for, as it is the elimination of inconvenience and annoyance that is the first consideration.

Good Cheer and Good Order in the Kitchen Result From Planning.

NOWHERE is arrangement quite as important as in the kitchen. Not only convenience but cheerfulness and order are here largely dependent upon careful planning. With a place for everything and everything in its place, household drudgery is reduced to the minimum and the acuteness of the servant problem is dulled. Two items of first importance in kitchen planning are a sink with a double drain board, preferably convenient to the range, and continuous cupboards so that in preparing a meal the utensils needed and the cooking materials, such as flour, spices and sugar, are all within easy reach.

A convenience is a movable table on casters or wheels. A tea wagon with lower shelf may take the place of this table. This may be placed beside the sink at dishwashing time, by the range when a meal is being prepared or at any convenient place and it may be shoved back out of the way when not in use.

The range is best placed at one end of the kitchen, with free access on either side. A corner cupboard that takes up little room is a convenience when near the range. Such a cupboard is best fitted with sliding doors, which may be left open during the preparation of a meal and closed at other times. Instead of this a shelf or shelves hung quite low may be provided. On these seasoning, utensils and materials to be used in cooking are placed so as to be radily available as needed. A high stool on which to sit while preparing vegetables, mixing batters and doing the countless tasks involved in the preparation of three meals a day should have a place where it may stand when not in use.

The Placing of the Refrigerator Merits Consideration.

AN ALCOVE for the refrigerator should be provided when the house is built. If this has not been done, the placing of this frequently becomes a problem. It must not be near the range, but it should not be so far removed from the work table or shelves as to cause unnecessary steps. An inside wall has its advantages, but these are more than compensated for when provision is made for having the ice placed without entry into the kitchen.

The center of the kitchen should be unobstructed, so that rapid passage is in no way impeded. Rugs on the kitchen floor gather dust and invite accident through tripping. A tiled floor is best; next to this is one smoothly covered with the best grade of linoleum cemented to the floor. A kitchen should not have many doors, as these so break the wall space as to interfere with the placing of the cupboards and other essential equipment. In most modern houses of medium size the pantry has been abandoned in favor of the cabinet kitchen with the compact arrangement that saves steps and effort.

Side Lights.

COLOR IN APPLIQUE.

If carefully done artistic effects may be produced by conventional designs from cretonne, appliqued in a buttonhole stitch, to thin window curtains. It adds color to the room as many of the tones brighten as the sun shines through them.

COLOR SCHEME FOR THE BREAKFAST-ROOM.

A breakfast-room is wonderfully attractive with curtains of mustard linen, lined with leaf green silk—a simple flower stencil used as a border or allover pattern, in neutral gray gives the appearance of a shadow.

SPEAKING OF REFRIGERATORS.

It will soon be time to think of buying a refrigerator. While yo uare looking around take the time to investigate the electric ones. They are more expensive than the ordinary kind, but have the advantage of being colder. In one compartment ices and deserts may be frozen and water frozen into cubes for table use.

A NEW WINDOW FINISH.

A small box hood at the top of a window frame conceals the curtain rod and serves in place of a valance. In rooms where there is painted furniture this hood may be painted a color to match some other color used in the room. In order to harmonize properly, the window frames, should be painted a neutral tone of taupe, cream or gray.

COTTON SHEETING AS COUNTERPANES.

Stenciled counter panes, pillow and dresser covers are made of wide unbleached cotton sheeting. The design on these are done in yellow and green if they are to be used in a north room. The same design carried out in rose and green is suitable for a girl's room, with a frieze of the same design in the wall near the ceiling.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

Helen's Inexcusable Carelessness Leads to a Disastrous Social Offense.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"I HATE to get these gloves wet—they'll spot," worried Helen, tucking her white-gloved hands into her sleeves.

"Get a wiggle on," Warren turned up his coat collar. "Let's get home before it pours."

"I hope it won't rain tomorrow night—when the Reeds come."

"We'll give 'em a good dinner, Reed knows something about food."

"I thought I'd have guinea hen—it's more distinctive than chicken. And I'll try to get some alligator pears for the salad. I'm glad this was Anna's afternoon off—maybe she'll be more amiable tomorrow."

The portal lights of their apartment-house now blurred through the misting rain. Running ahead, Helen darted up the steps and into the shelter of the marble hall.

"Lady and gentleman was here to see you," the elevator boy handed Helen a card. "They thought they was to have dinner with you all, this evenin'."

"The Reeds!" Helen almost screamed.

"What's that?" Warren snatched the card, "Great Scott, is wasn't tonight?"

"It's their mistake! I've got it down for tomorrow. I'll show you!"

Fumbling in her purse, she rushed from the elevator, breathlessly down the hall. But Warren had his key out first.

In the library, switching on the light, she dashed to the desk.

The calendar pad was triumphantly reassuring. Today's leaf held only a scribbled reminder—"Clean silver" and "Fix blue evening gown." On tomorrow's, Friday's, was underlined—"Mr. and Mrs. Reed for dinner—7:30."

"You see? It's their mistake. Oh, how could they have got it mixed!"

"I'm not so sure they did," Warren was glowering over her shoulder. "You're always balling up dates. Reed's pretty damned accurate. She wrote you, didn't she? Where's her letter?"

Feverishly, Helen rummaged through the disorderly desk.

"Wonder you can find anything in that ness! Why in blazes don't you keep your papers straight! I'd get a helluva lot done if I kept my desk like that."

"Here it is," eagerly extricating a sheet of pale gray note paper.

"My dear Mrs. Curtis:

"Mr. Reed and I will be pleased to accept your kind invitation to dine with you next Thursday at 7:30. As I have not been well, I am looking forward with pleasure to my first evening out for some time.

"Sincerely,

"ALICE E. REED."

"Thursday!" thundered Warren, scanning the letter at a glance.

Stupefied, Helen gazed at that ominous word. So firmly had Fridty been fixed in her mind, she had thought Friday, and even read this letter "Friday!"

"Oh, how awful! How awful!" covering her face with her hands.

"Now, cut the heroics and let's get at the root of this thing," sternly. "What day did you invite 'em for? Can you dig that out of your addled brain?"

"Thursday! I can't explain it—but I know now I did say Thursday. I must've put it down on the wrong leaf and ever since I've thought 'Friday.'"

"Well, of all the mutton-headed ninnies!" exploded Warren. "She's written Thursday plain as day. How you could read that 'Friday' beats me! What's your dome stuffed with—excelsior?"

"What will they think?" hysterically. "And she isn't well—it's the first time she's been out! Oh! Oh!" dropping on the couch, her face in the pillow.

"Get up from there and let's see what were going to do about it."

"'Phone right now! You explain. Say I—Oh, what can you say?"

"That you haven't the brains of a rabbit. But you'll do the 'phoning! Holy Smoke, we don't know the number. They've just moved—not in the book."

"Get it from Central," tearfully. "There's the address on her letter."

The address was not on the letter! It had been, but apparently Helen had scribbled a grocery list on the margin at the top, for it was unevenly torn off leaving the penciled "ragus" of "asparagus."

It was on Park avenue, Helen knew, but could not remember the number.

"I've got it at the office," announced Warren, grimly. "You write a letter! I'll have to take it down tonight and address it there."

"Send it special delivery," tensely.

"No, that'll get 'em up before breakfast. It's not 10 yet—if I mail it by 11, they'll get it on the first delivery. Here," he cleared the cluttered desk with a ruthless hand. "Now, sit down and get busy explaining."

"Warren, can't I write something that'll seem more plausible? Can't I say I wrote her changing it to Friday—and my letter must've gone astray?"

"No you won't!" volcanically. "You'll do no lying about this! Put down just what happened. You've queered us anyway—but you're going to tell the truth!"

After spoiling seven sheets of her best engraved note paper, Helen turned to Warren who was puffing at a big cigar in glowering silence.

"Dear, I can't—I just can't! You've got to write it."

"Read me what you've got there."

Quaveringly, she read her last effort:

"Dear Mrs. Reed:

"What can I say? It was my mistake. I know now that it was. I did invite you for Thursday and you wrote accepting for Thursday, yet all along I had it on my desk pad, Friday. I thought 'Friday' and even read your letter 'Friday.' I know this will seem hard to believe—but it is true. I'm just sick over it all.

"Can you ever forgive me? Won't you and Mr. Reed come next Thursday? Please do! I'll not have a happy moment until I see you. Perhaps, this is asking a great deal, but I am hoping you will be generous.

"Mr. Curtis is as greatly distressed as I am. We were out all evening, and did not know a thing about it until we came in a few moments ago. When the boy gave me your card, I was almost hysterical.

"Abjectly,

"HELEN E. CURTIS."

"Huh, that's rotten!" snorted Warren. "Too slushy and too much of it. Of course they won't come next week—got a nerve to ask 'em. Cut that all out. Take another sheet of paper—I'll tell you what to write."

Accustomed to his stenographer, Warren's dictation was curtly rapid. Striving to keep up with him Helen wrote with feverish haste.

"Dear Mrs. Reed:

"Both Mr. Curtis and I regret exceedingly the misunderstanding about our dinner engagement. It was entirely my fault. I remember now that I invited you for Thursday, but I erroneously noted it on my desk pad for Friday. This day was so firmly fixed in my mind, that even when I read your letter, I misread it Friday.

"I can only trust to your generosity to pardon this inexcusable error.

"Sincerely,

"HELEN E. CURTIS."

"Now, put that in an envelope, I'll take it down to the office for the address."

"Let me inclose this calendar leaf—to prove everything you say. Hold on there,

"Huh, you're so used to lying, you have to prove everything you say. Hold on there what're you doing? Now, no doctoring it up."

"No, dear, I was just rubbing something off the back," for on the reverse side, Saturday, were the homely, plebeian reminders:

"Put bath mat and kitchen curtains in wash."

"Clean ice box."

"Order new garbage pail."

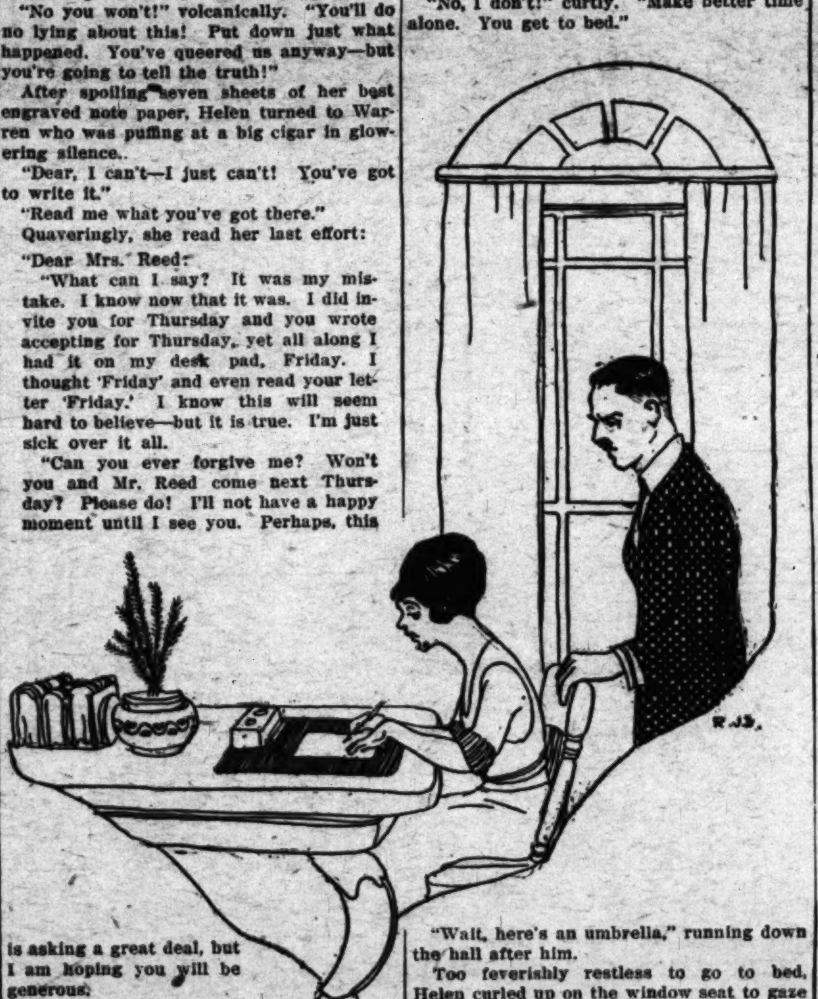
For these inelegant items, Helen hastily substituted the more aesthetic,

"Fitting at Mme. Elaine's—16:30."

"Tea at Ritz with Mrs. B.—4:30."

"I hate to think of you going way down to the office alone," slipping the leaf into the letter. "Don't you want me to go with you?"

"No, I don't!" curtly. "Make better time alone. You get to bed."



"Wait, here's an umbrella," running down the hall after him.

Too feverishly restless to go to bed, Helen curled up on the window seat to gaze wretchedly out at the dripping night.

If only they had not gone to a restaurant for dinner! If they had been in, even though unprepared, it would not have been quite so dreadful. But to invite guests to dinner and then not even be at home! It seemed like a deliberate affront. And after the Reeds had entertained them so delightfully!

What had they thought? What were they thinking now? Where had they gone for dinner? Back home or to a restaurant?

What would they think when they got the letter in the morning? He might be lenient—but would she? Women were much less forgiving.

If it had been anyone but Mr. Reed—president of the Reed Rubber Company, for which Warren was the attorney!

And the letter! It seemed inadequate for such an heinous offense. Warren had condemned her letter as too long and gushing, but his had been too brief and coldly formal. It had not sufficiently expressed her bitter regret.

An hour passed. It was after 11 before she heard Warren's key in the hall door.

"Hello! You up yet?" when she ran out to greet him. "Well, I was in luck," peeling off his raincoat. "I saw Reed."

"You saw him?" excitedly. "You went to the house?"

"No, I blew in at the club on the way down. Had a hunch he might be there. Told him just how it happened and how upset you were. Here, stick this in the bathroom," thrusting at her the drenched umbrella.

"What did he say?" breathlessly, the water dripping unheeded on the hall rug. "Was he very indignant?"

"No, he was mighty decent. Reed's a good sport—I told you that. He said they felt sure it was some such mix-up."

"And will they come again?" eagerly. "Did you set a date?"

"Didn't try to. Think they're going to fall over themselves to come here next week? You expect to ball things up like that and then have 'em right in a minute? Huh," with a snort, as he stalked into the bedroom, "ought to be darn thankful I patched this up as well as I did!"

The Cowboy's Last Ride.

When the last old long-horned cow is shipped,
  With her calf still by her side,
And the last damn "bronk" is roped and rode
  That I ever expect to ride—

And the last old ornery renegade
  In the cedar-brakes is caught,
And my loop swings clear in the atmosphere,
  And its swinging avails me nought—

Then I'll saddle a horse in the dawning light
  While the grass is all heavy with dew,
And the birds are singing their song of flight
  Into a day that's new—

And into the cool of the mountain dawn
  With the spell of the night still o'er the land,
I'll head him towards where the sky line's drawn,
  Far off in the fading distance—and

There by the side of a swift-rushing stream
  With its waters all silver and white,
I'll pitch me a camp where its shady and green,
  And there with the stars spend the night.

Lucky Number.

DEAN INGE told a story recently that looks like endangering his reputation for gloominess. He was remarking that the byways as well as the highways of church life furnish much in the way of wit and humor. He proceeded to relate the story of a certain rector's cook. One evening they allowed her to choose the hymn for family prayers.

When the ceremony was over the vicar's wife said to her: "That was a very nice hymn you chose this evening, cook!"

"Yes, mum," said the cook, "it's the number of my policeman."

Found Wanting.

A STORY was recently told to exemplify the pride which every man should take in the work by which he makes a living, no matter how humble the work.

Two street sweepers, seated on a curbstone, were discussing a comrade who had died the day before.

"Bill certainly was a good sweeper," said one.

"Ye-e-s," conceded the other thoughtfully. "But don't you think he was a little weak around the lamp posts?"

* * *

Misconstrued.

AN OLD Scotchman, David Gordon, was seriously ill, with scant hope for his recovery. He had been wheedled into making a will by relatives, and they were gathered about his bedside watching him laboriously sign it. He got as far as D-a-v-i—then fell back exhausted.

"D, Uncle David, D," exhorted a nephew.

"Dee!" ejaculated the old Scot feebly, but with indignation. "I'll dee when I'm ready, ye avaricious wretch!"

Slight Difference.

A CLERGYMAN who was a widower had three grown-up daughters. Having occasion to go away for a few weeks he wrote home from time to time. In one of his letters he informed them that he had married a widow with six children.

This created a stir in his household. When the minister returned home, one of the daughters, her eyes red with weeping, said:

"Where's the widow you married, father?"

"Oh, I married her to another man. I ought to have told you that," said the minister.

Dramatic Hours.

THE late Edgar Saltus was sometimes prevailed on by New York editors to write dramatic criticisms. His criticisms were always severe and amusing.

Mr. Saltus one evening went to criticise a very popular actor in "Hamlet." He did not like the actor, and his criticism consisted of the words:

"Mr. Blank played 'Hamlet' last night at the Lyric. He played it from 8:15 till 11:40."

In the Larder.

"BEFORE Shackleton sailed south on the Quest," said a friend, "he got all kinds of boxes and packages from cranks—tea tablets, medicated whisky, cowhide underwear, compressed fuel and so forth.

"A club acquaintance sent him a small keg at once. The keg was labeled, 'Not to be opened till the furthest point south is reached!'

"But Shackleton, a wily bird, opened the keg at once. It was full of lard or some such substance, and inside the cover was this word:

" 'Axle grease for the pole.' "

SENATOR LENROOT from a wind-swept pier waved his cigar with an approving gesture over the glittering beach of Atlantic City.

"All these pretty girl bathers down there," he said, "are clad in modest bathing dresses. That pleases me. In California now—"

The Senator frowned and shook his head.

"In California," he went on, "the girl bather wears a maillot, a one-piece suit of black silk, skin tight, cut without arms and practically without legs. I don't deny that such suits are very convenient for swimming and that they set off a fine figure admirably, but—but what would our grandmothers say?

"A beautiful Chicago girl came out on a California beach in a black silk maillot one day and gazed timidly at the tremendous Pacific breakers.

" 'Is it safe?' she said to an attendant. 'That wild surf makes me nervous.

"Don't be nervous, lady,' said the attendant, as he studied the girl's figure with respectful admiration. 'All the young fellers'll be keepin' an eye on ye all the time.' "

Forewarned.

GEORGE Bellows, the eminent painter, said at a Brooklyn tea:

"You know these British highbrows who come over here to astonish us all the time? Well, I attended a lecture by one of them, a writer, on the literary art last night."

"How was the lecture?" a sculptor asked.

"The best criticism of it that I heard," Mr. Bellows answered, "came from a fat old man at the end of the show. He gave his wife a bitter look and said:

" 'Well, you would come!' "

Striking Out.

PRESIDENT COX of Cox College was talking about a mooted strike that was very unpopular with the general public.

"Those workmen," he said, "make more money than the average college professor, the average minister or the average lawyer. And now if they are not paid more money still, they threaten to go out."

Dr. Cox smiled grimly.

"Well, they may learn," he ended, "that when you strike you don't always make a hit."

Just Like a Woman.

A FULLERTON man says he gets two eggs a day from a single hen. His plan is ingenious and might be worth trying on a larger scale, so we print it for the benefit of some of our suburban readers.

He has arranged a mirror opposite Biddy's nest, so that when she hops off and cackles she sees in the glass what she supposes is another hen cackling. This arouses her jealousy and not to be outdone by a supposed rival she jumps back on the nest and lays another egg.

Great Emergency.

SETH had been advised by his physician to cure himself of the liquor habit by taking something to eat whenever he felt the craving for drink coming on. One day he came rushing down from his hotel room to the dining-room and yelled at the astonished waiter:

"My God! The man in the next room has just killed himself! I just heard the shot. For heaven's sake, bring me a double order of ham and eggs and a piece of lemon pie right away!"

Getting Even.

AN UNFAITHFUL steward embezzled a large sum and his employer asked advice as to how he should be dealt with, so goes the story.

"Get rid of him at once," advised an Englishman.

"Keep him and deduct the sum from his wages," said a Scotchman.

"But," said the employer, "the sum is far greater than his wages.

"Then raise his wages," suggested an Irishman.

Profiteer.

"YES," said the old man to his visitor, "I am proud of my girls and would like to see them comfortably married, and as I have made a little money they will not go penniless to their husbands.

"There is Mary, 25 years old, and a really good girl, I shall give her $1000 when she marries. Then comes Bet, who won't see 35 again. I shall give her $3000, and the man who takes Eliza, who is 40, will have $5000 with her."

The young man reflected a while and then asked, "You haven't one about 50 have you?"

The Overtime Trot.

"THE Japan of Lafcadio Hearn and Loti is no more," said Hamilton Hartley, the author-traveler, at a Washington dinner party. "Labor troubles you know.

"You have heard of the Japanese rickshaw runners? These men trot between the shafts of a rickshaw at the rate of five and six miles an hour. I mean to say they used to trot at that rate. Since they've been unionized it's hard to get them out of a walk.

"Once, having forgotten my valise, I offered a Tokio richshaw man a double fare if he'd hurry back to the hotel for it. Well, as he galloped down the road his fellow workers stared after him in amazement, and one of them yelled:

" 'Hey, what are you running for? Aren't you working today?' "

Short Term.

FEDERAL PROHIBITION DIRECTOR YELLOWLY was talking in his New York office about the clean-up he has been making.

"I admit," he said, "that a lot more cleaning up must be done before the prohibition laws can be properly enforced. I believe," he added, "in facing the truth. No excuse, no palliation. I am not like the movie star.

"A beautiful movie star of eighteen summers married a tottering old ruin of an octogenarian banker, and her young press agent bitterly took her to task.

" 'To think of it!' he groaned. 'You so beautiful—selling yourself to that old man!'

"But the girl laughed gaily.

" 'My dear boy,' she said, 'this isn't a sale—it's only a lease.' "

* * *

Too Much.

MISS JANE ADDAMS of Hull House said at a Chicago tea:

"Laundry prices are so high that clean things are a luxury, even to dukes.

"The old Duke of Devonshire once saw in a newspaper that among a certain young bride's wedding presents was a set of silver napkin rings.

" 'What the devil are napkin rings?' the Duke asked.

" 'In a certain class of society,' a noble sociologist explained, 'clean napkins are not furnished with every meal, and therefore each member of the family has a distinctive napkin ring.'

"The old duke thought this over in silence for a long time. Then he exclaimed:

" 'Good God!' "

No Chance.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB said in an after-dinner speech in Pittsburg:

"The Connecticut Yankee in the business world still holds his own. He may never become a Carnegie or a Rockefeller, but he never becomes a bankrupt, either; a modest million or so contents him.

"A Hartford man one day entered a hotel in Hongkong, the Astor House, and found that the clerk was an American—in fact, a Connecticut Yankee.

" 'How long have you worked here?' said the Hartford man.

" 'Ten years,' said the clerk.

" 'What?' said the Hartford man. 'You, a Connecticut Yankee, have worked here ten years and don't own the place?'

" 'Ah, but you see,' the clerk explained, 'the boss is a Connecticut Yankee, too.' "

A Hygienic Mind.

"LLOYD GEORGE," said a Chicagoan, "made a good speech at a dinner we gave him in London last season.

"Lloyd George said he was often accused of being inconsistent, of changing his mind.

" 'Well,' he went on, 'men change their shirts, don't they? We rather admire them for that. It's hygienic.

" 'So with the mind. As conditions change, the mind must be changed to conform with them. Blame the man who never changes his mind. How stale and soiled and dusty such a man's mind must be! He who changes his mind to harmonize with circumstances, though, is spiritually clean and fresh, is living according to the laws of spiritual hygiene.' "

Life's Flowers.

Butter-cups and daisies,
  Each one plays its part.
Each one gives its message
  To the tired heart.
Each one fills its own place best
Nor might change with all the rest.

If but orchids filled the earth,
  They would soon lose all their worth.
Each sweet flower in its place,
  Each its own glad sun-kissed face.

Whether white or whether blue,
  Whether gold or orchid hue;
Each one brings its message glad
  To the heart that's lone and sad.

LOVE-IN-A-MIST.

and silvery, with a shy sort of catch. She told him formally in the midst of it:

'Mine is Amelie Lawrence."

"It's utterly adorable," he commented. "Sounds like tea roses and moonlight."

"What's yours?" she demanded.

"Don Reynard."

"As in fox?"

"As in a French fox—Reynard—accent on the last syllable. I'm fussy about that. What do you think I sound like?"

"You sound like the lover in a modern French comedy," Amelie told him quickly; "but you look like a Spanish grandee—once or twice removed."

Reynard said with a softened note in his voice, "My mother was Spanish. Her name was Mercedes Castellanos."

"How lovely!" said Amelie softly. She added with a shy sense of sudden intimacy: "Mine's name was Amelie Manning before she married my father."

"What is it now?" he teased, as to a delightful child.

"Amelia Manning Lawrence Wolters," said Amelie.

"Oh!" said Don Reynard. "I see." He looked so sympathetic that Amelie's underlip nearly quivered. "Are you running away from a stepfather, by any chance?"

"I am going—" Amelie began. She stopped and looked down at her two hands folded nicely together in her lap. It occurred to her suddenly, almost violently, that to say to this fascinating stranger that she was going out to meet Arthur and be married to him would undoubtedly put a period to what was beginning to seem the most romantic of adventures.

Also, once married to Arthur, romantic adventures would likely not come her way every day in the week, if any day in any week.

It was not, deliberately, as a last fling that she embarked upon the thing, but something like it. Her mental processes were such as to bring a flush to her smooth, soft cheek and keep her long, dark lashes at halfmast.

"What shall we talk about?" he inquired suddenly, watching her, "that is likely to get us past the preliminaries quickest and put us heart to heart, so to speak. I know a lot of things on which I'd like to compare preferences with you."

"Begin at the beginning and tell me about you," continued Amelie. "You'll like that; and I can be thinking what to leave out about me."

She had a faint, a very faint and rather provocative dimple in her left cheek. Don Reynard observed on it at once.

"I'll tell you one thing," he said earnestly, "and that is this: I never expected, when cursing my luck at having to take this upper yesterday, that you—oh, well! How far back shall I begin? I was born of honest parents—not so poor then as later, unhappily—in a place in Louisiana of which you never heard —on Bayou Lafourche. My father had some money, from his father; won some more, in the Louisiana lottery, of cruel fame; lost everything in the same convenient way—and shot himself through the head one fine morning in April, when I was 5 years old."

Amelie exclaimed sharply—a small, shaken sound. For all his light tone and the slightly bitter mockery of his words there was, for the moment, a heavy shadow in her companion's eyes.

"My story at least begins with a shock—technically, I believe, that's said to be good. It's when I think of my mother it seems indecently unfair. She wasn't made for hard times. She didn't know how to be poor. Nor unhappy. She was lovely and frail and helpless. She died a year after my father, and an aunt in Chicago took me. I must have been a handful. But she had three boys of her own who licked me into shape, gratuitously. I went to school with them, went to college, got out, floundered around a bit, tried business, tried law—to please my aunt—tried architecture, to please myself—and found myself."

"Oh, you are an architect!" said Amelie happily.

"Of sorts," he admitted, smiling into her eager eyes. "Why? Do you like the tribe? Or is it just because you are going to build a house—unless it's built already?"

"I like houses," she explained, smiling back at him. "And I've been working in a shop where we did a bit of decorating, you know! Oh, not a big shop. But we used to help people about framing and draperies and things."

"I like girls who work at something," said Don Reynard, approvingly. "I was afraid you might be an idle rich."

"Ha!" said Amelie, scornfully. "Do I look it?"

"Now that," he returned gravely, "is something we won't go into, because if I tell you, so early as this, what I think you look like, I shall be snubbed and put out of this section."

"I'm glad you realize it."

"So, instead, suppose you tell me about you," he finished gravely. "And then we can proceed to likes and dislikes, favorite flowers, pet aversions and such. Begin at the beginning. When I was a little girl—by the way—you aren't much more than that, now, are you?"

"When I was a little girl," copied Amelie, ignoring frivolities.

She told him a great deal about herself in the next half-hour, all of it quite truthful, but none of it involving Arthur.

And when she had done with her feminine Odyssey, they went on as he had suggested, likes to dislikes, of which it appeared almost at once they had an extraordinary number in common.

Amelie had never known a man with whom she felt herself so instantly and utterly at home in the most beautiful sense of the word. She began to feel and so, apparently did he, almost at once, as if they had known each other forever.

"Simpatica—that's what you are, most of all!" he told her just before they went out to luncheon together.

"Sympathetic?" inquired Amelie, frankly pleased.

Don Reynard looked at her a moment, smiling his dark, amused smile before he answered:

"Not just that, exactly. Sympathetic, of course, congenial—all that sort of thing. But it implies as well—let me see! Someone you—you could love, if you see what I mean. That's really the sense of it."

Amelie saw. It was what in a less definite phrasing she had been working out to herself about him. A trifle early to have arrived at it, on either side.

They lunched together. Part of that afternoon he took himself off to the smoker while Amelie tried to sleep and tiresomely couldn't; but part, they sat and talked as in the morning, of a thousand suddenly important nothings, after which they dined together, and for two moonlit dusty hours watched thin silver rails, spinning out into the flying shadows behind the train.

A folding chair on the rear platform of an observation car is not a cushiony seat, but Amelie could not remember afterward any deep discomfort. She went to sleep with the sound of a slow caressing drawl in her ears—meaning to dream of Arthur.

On the following day she meant to tell about Arthur. But she didn't. For the following day, advancing out of farms into prairies and out of prairies into long gray stretches of sage brush with painted rocks smudging the sky line, advanced also with an incredible swiftness and a breathless charm into a multitude of acutely personal discoveries—as that they both liked quantities of sugar in coffee (after all—it had begun with the sugar bowl—significant,) as that neither of them could bear "Main Street" (with all the rest of the world devouring it,) as that he adored beautiful hands, and Amelie's were the innocent pride of her life. As that he—as that she—as that they!

It's never a new story, unless you happen to be starring in it.

Don Reynard had laughed at a hundred other men for the same sort of thing into which he was now rushing, himself. His sense of humor, so early as that second day, ceased to function. He was happier than he had ever been before in his life, prisoned in a stuffy Pullman swaying hotly through an arid landscape. What Amelie had seen in him, that first poignant moment, he had also seen in her.

Only, he had a right to see anything he wanted. She hadn't. There was no female Arthur in his life. Amelie, by adroit leads had discovered that, early on the second day. He liked women but he hadn't had time for them. Too busy pursuing success, which it appeared he had just about captured.

In spite of which she didn't tell him. She couldn't bear to. She was like a girl in a dream. It wasn't only his outright physical charm, although that was potent enough, to a beauty loving wisp like Amelie—it was the way in which their souls kept step! Something in her was conscious of wings those long hours they talked together while the train rattled and clacked through a sun baked world. It was exactly as if he had put out a hand to her and she had suddenly found that the feel of that hand was the feel of life at the peak of the world.

She said to herself that she would tell him about Arthur the second evening, but she didn't. As before, they sat out on the observation platform and watched the little lights go by, of small, far scattered towns—watched the stars, when they could see them, and each other's eyes when they couldn't. Amelie didn't even try to dream of Arthur that second night.

And the third day came the desert. Women in the Pullman sat with the necks of their blouses pulled open over panting, sweaty throats. Children whimpered and complained unceasingly. Men left off their coats and in a few brave instances their collars as well. The porter shone like greased ebony when he could be found at all. In at every crevice of door and window sifted a sickening heat and with it a fine gray gritty dust. The desert—miles of gleaming, pallid barrenness—not a cloud in the brassy sky—not a shadow on the sand—not a wing in the air—nothing but the breath of a fevered hell forever shimmering up into nothingness!

It was in the desert that Amelie chose to tell about Arthur—rather, the truth burnt its way out. Don Reynard was so heartbreakingly careful of her. She, who had no right to his care—no honest right.

He lowered shades and lifted windows and adjusted cushions. He thought of cool drinks for her; made a fan of a magazine cover tal;ked lovely lazy nonsense to make her forget that ugly searing furnace outside the car.

He must have suffered from the evil heat himself, but he never said so. His every thought was for her, lying against the hot green plush of the car seat, her small face pale and tired, with the dark hair damp against her temples.

"You've never asked me," she told him suddenly about two in the afternoon, when the furnace was at its worst, "why I'm going out to Riverside."

Then she lay back and looked at him hopelessly, gripping her hands together tight in her lap. The cloth of her skirt was hot to her fingers.

"No?" said Don Reynard, smiling. "Just the fact that you were going was good enough for me." But he saw that she wanted to be asked. "Why are you going out to Riverside, then?"

"To meet—to meet a man and marry him," said Amelie. Brutally done. But she couldn't be sure of herself on a longer explanation.

He looked at her and laughed—saw in the same breath that she meant it, and continued to look with something in his eyes that hurt her heart.

He didn't ask for any more. He sat turning the silly fan he had made for her about and about, and presently he didn't even look at her. Down at his brown fingers instead, with a sort of dangerous quietude. A child down the car from them wailed steadily. Across the aisle a woman was peeling a banana. It gave off a heavy, distasteful sweetness. The air from the desert came in through the wire screen in the window and lay on Amelie's throat and face like hot, sick hands.

"I wish," said Don Reynard in a low voice, a trifle hoarse, as if [illegible] overlong in the dawn of [illegible] you had told me that before."

"So do I," said Amelie miserably.

Then indeed he looked at her and she looked back at him. In which moment they had no words and needed none.

"Well," he offered presently, still rather low, "that doesn't mean I can't take care of you until we get there, does it?"

"No, it doesn't," answered Amelie unsteadily, "if you still want to. Should you like to hear about Arthur?"

"No, I shouldn't," said Don Reynard grimly. He added with a flash of reluctant humor. "Do you think Arthur would like to hear about me?"

Amelie hung her head. She felt the merest flicker of his hand over hers before he settled back with a book in one hand and a new strained look of reticence about his mouth.

"Try to go to sleep for a bit," he advised. "We're late—we come into San Bernardino about 5, you know. Don't bother. I'll see about everything. We drive over from there to Riverside."

The strangest afternoon in the world! Amelie lay back with shut eyes and saw herself getting nearer and nearer to Arthur! Saw and shuddered to see. She was cruelly conscious of that quiet figure facing her, of its steady hands, its lowered lids. Could he really be deep in the book he held, or was he, too, fighting his thoughts?

She drew a long sigh.

The trill of a bell floated to her ears.

"I'm ringing for a cold drink for you," said Don Reynard's voice. "Poor child, you've had a horrible day!"

The drink came eventually—he refused one himself—and eventually the time slipped by. It was half past 4, a quarter of 5, 5 itself. Eventually, also, they left the train together; they had been aware for two days of a certain amount of comment among their trainmates, but Amelie was past caring.

"I want a machine," she said, standing on the platform at San Bernardino with her neat new bags at her feet.

"I'll drive over with you, if you don't mind," Don Reynard suggested coolly. "You didn't expect him to meet you here?"

"No, at that inn," said Amelie doggedly.

They sat side by side in a rather dusty hired car and drove over excellent roads, with hardly a word between them.

Once Don Reynard asked carefully, "What shall you do if he isn't there when you arrive?"

"He will be. You don't know Arthur," said Amelie. She managed a tired little smile. She felt like a dead leaf driven by the wind, whipped and whirled, with no will of its own for resistance. "He'll be there," she repeated.

But he wasn't. In four strange days, that was the strangest thing of all. There wasn't even a letter or a telegram.

Amelie turned away from the desk of the inn, her dark eyes wide and startled, a chill starting at her finger tip.

"How funny!" she said childishly to Don Reynard, waiting a little at one side to register. "He hasn't come—how funny!"

Don Reynard came forward quietly. He had an air of authority that answered for the complete naturalness of the situation and silenced a faint question in the eyes of the clerk holding a pen in one hand, a blotter in the other.

"Probably delayed unexpectedly—a washout or something. Why don't you just register and have your things sent up," he suggested. "There's sure to be word tomorrow. Most likely he'll be here himself before you get down to breakfast."

Amelie registered obediently. Don Reynard wrote his name at a discreet distance below hers upon the page.

"Miss Lawrence?" said the clerk tentatively.

"Miss Lawrence," said Don Reynard distinctly, "is expecting to meet here a gentleman who is on his way up from Mexico. Will you be good enough to see that she gets any letters or telegrams, at once?"

"Why, it's Mr. Reynard, isn't it?" said the clerk suddenly, with a suggestion of relief. "How do you do, sir? You've been here before, haven't you?"

"Twice before," said Don Reynard, smiling.

Things after that moved much faster. He drew Amelie aside while the bellboy picked up her bags and made for the stairs.

They stood by a low table which held an enormous bowl of mauve and pink foxgloves. At a wide window just across from them several garrulous tourists were deciphering a road map.

Love-in-

Gossamer Threads of Old Romance and New Weave Some Surprising Changes in Three Lives.

THERE is a certain old-fashioned flower called Love-in-a-Mist. It suggests Victorianism, crinolines, gift books, and chignons—young women given to dying of broken hearts and young men handsomely given to consoling themselves thereafter.

And yet—Love-in-a-Mist! When was love not a mist? Dawn or miasmic. Some mists, of course, melt away before the sun; some don't. Let us not crowd the metaphor. Take the story of Amelie Lawrence, instead—there, if you like, is a modern instance.

When Amelie was 20—which may have been no great shakes of an age a generation or so ago, but is now the time when one sits among the prophets—she promised one night, standing beneath a honey locust in full flower, to marry Arthur Sherwood.

Not at once, of course; Arthur was at that time only just out of tech and in no position to marry anybody. He had worked his way through college, emerging therefore comparatively late—25 or so—and his sole fortune consisted of three modest Liberty bonds, a fat gold watch which had belonged to his grandfather and would probably belong to his grandson, and $215. (Strange, the odd cents which always disfigure one's bank account—however—)

Arthur asked Amelie to marry him, and beneath the honey locust, her little uptilted face pale as the drooping flowers, her dark eyes languorous, Amelie said [illegible]ld. It should not have been used against her, for it was not a night on which any girl could easily have refused any man except a tattooed South Sea Islander. But Arthur took the moment seriously. He held her close and kissed her—fumblingly at first, but much better the third and fourth times. His voice grew husky; his hand shook. At which, of course, Amelie's hand shook, too. Arthur was distinctly good looking in a straightforward, fair, solemn way. Also, he was tall, and Amelie experienced the most delicious thrill when he stooped above her. The same thrill, no doubt, which in the botanic world leads a rose-veined, azure-throated morning-glory to stretch up [illegible] tendrils to clasp the honest fence.

"Darling," said Arthur (there are two kinds of lovers—those who say darling seriously and those who put a laugh in it—Arthur was not the later. His "darling" had already a delicate aura of coffee, bacon, and eggs.) "Darling—it will have to be a long engagement, I'm afraid—do you mind?"

What could a nice girl have said if she did?

"No—truly, Arthur—" said Amelie, close against his cheek.

"I shall have to make good—for you!" he told her.

Making good and a square deal were among Arthur's clinches. He was the sort of young man to whom politicians refer as the backbone of the country or the salt of the earth. Really, it needs no language but English to describe him. But his chin was wonderful.

Smooth shaven, of course, as perfect in line and contour as the chin of a statue. Women take great stock in chins. Amelie looked at Arthur's, and throbbed with pride. She reflected happily that he had a nice taste in collars. Of course, one may marry a man to reform [illegible] it's [illegible] not to have to.

"You see," Arthur was saying, "this offer I've had from those people in Mexico means a comfortable living, but not at once. It may be a year, even two years, darling!"

"I'll wait for you, honey," murmured Amelie.

"And when I write you—you'll come?"

"Oh, Arthur—way down there?"

"Darling—we'll have to live way down there, for a while at least. If things turn out as I hope they will. You'd like it. I'm sure you would. You're such a romantic little girl—" Here he tightened a strong arm, and Amelie sigh[illegible]. "You'd be sure to like it; palms and lots of flowers and patios and fountains an—er—palms!" said Arthur.

"I do love Spanish stuff," mused Amelie—"I always have—that sort of catch in the music—as if your heart missed a beat—or something—because you saw somebody coming. And the big carved combs and mantillas—oh Arthur, will you send me a Spanish fan? They're going to be smart next winter."

Arthur said he would. He wasn't entirely clear as to the pure Castilianness, so to speak, of Mexico, but it was bound to be something like that. And the scent of the honey locust was potent as old wine.

"Only—" said Amelie, doubtfully—"only Arthur, honey—I couldn't go all the way there, you know—I really don't think I could. It seems so sort of—conspicuous. Why couldn't you come up instead and meet me somewhere half-way?"

"Darling," said Arthur, "do you know, I can see how you feel, absolutely, and I love you for it. Let's see, now. There must be some place in between—some place I could come up to."

"And that I could go down to," cooed Amelie.

There was. There always is. Even between heaven and hell, as lovers a-plenty had charted it before these two.

"I've got it," said Arthur at last. "Riverside—a little town in California. I was out there one summer. It's a nice place, with rather a wonderful inn—Spanish. Now, Amelie—here it is! At the end of two years—"

"Or less, if possible," whispered Amelie.

"Absolutely," said Arthur—"however, at the end of two years at the outside I will come to Riverside—you will meet me there—and—we—will—be—married! Is it a bargain?"

"Say, 'Is it a promise?'" she corrected sweetly.

He obeyed her. She gave her word. They kissed each other with a touch of delicious drama. A flower of the honey locust fell and caught in her hair. He disentangled it gently, put it to his lips, and eventually bestowed it in his pocketbook.

"O, Amelie, darling," he groaned; "two whole years—"

"Or less, if possible," said Amelie consolingly.

But she was just as beautifully distressed as he. They stayed out in the yard till midnight, when Arthur's well bred conscience drove him home, seeking in each other's arms and eyes and lips the frail assurance that journey's end means one thing only.

"I shall never forget this evening," said Arthur just before he left her.

"Say night—" sighed Amelie whimsically—"it's a so much more loverly word!"

She cried herself to sleep when he had gone. He was really her first definite suitor. And the sincerity of his lovemaking had set her heartstrings singing like a wind harp.

Arthur himself slept little. Across the sleeping town they wove a web of rosy fancies from his heart to hers.

One week later Arthur departed for Mexico.

A week is not a long time in which to be engaged. It allows for all of the thrill and none of the anticlimax. Amelie and Arthur achieved in those seven days a pretty cycle of devotion. They accepted congratulations—Arthur was for shouting his news from the housetops at once—in a sort of lovely haze, and clung to each other as the time for parting drew near in a noble agony of renunciation.

"We'll have our honeymoon at the inn in California two years from now," was Arthur's ultimate good-by. "Promise that nothing—nothing in this world shall keep you from coming to me, darling!"

Amelie promised, in tears. Arthur was really extraordinarily good looking, with that steady flame in his fine gray eyes. She flung herself into his arms and sobbed wildly.

"It's killing me to let you go—"

But it didn't kill her, of course.

She sat about the house and moped pathetically for a full month after his departure, then gradually drifted out into the current again and back into something like her old routine.

Nothing exactly as it was before, of course—for one thing, Arthur's ardent announcement of their engagement had set her a little outside the gayeties of her old crowd. Men said, "Amelie Lawrence? oh yes! She's engaged to Sherwood—going to be married as soon as he can get a start," and neglected to ask Amelie to dances. She felt it, rather wistfully, at first, and had not quite meant to put her youth in pawn when Arthur left, but that apparently was what she had done. Neither matron nor debutante—neither fish, flesh, nor good red herring!

Still Arthur wrote devotedly, just at first every day, later on with a faithful regularity three times a week; and she fed her soul on the repeated expression of his love, his loneliness without her, his continual longing for her.

"I'm making good," he wrote toward the end of the first year. "The two years we set will just about see it. Then we can have a little house on the side of the mountain, with vines growing about the door."

The old, old dream, whose background has been usually a far country—but not always Mexico.

Amelie read with a smile tipping up the corners of her sensitive mouth and one eye on the honey locust. It took a deal of concentration sometimes to evoke the magic of that brief, glamorous hour. Sometimes she found it hard even to visualize Arthur's frank, kindly face. But she focused the eyes of her soul on it determinedly. She had only to wait—love and be true!

That winter her father died, suddenly, without a shadow of warning, and Amelie found herself and her mother, when the dead man's affairs were finally settled, facing the world with only a small insurance policy between them and outright penury.

She announced, with a courage that surprised herself: "I'm going to find a job somewhere. I ought to have been doing something long ago."

"Do call it a position, my child?" wailed her mother out of a fog of crepe.

"Wait till we see what I can get," said Amelie. She smiled her rather plaintive smile. Black clothes made a pale small wraith of her, but her spirit shot up like a candle flame in the wind.

She found a place ultimately in a combination book and art shop of which Beechwood was justly proud. Books she had always loved in a haphazard, omnivorous way; pictures she proceeded eagerly to learn about.

Arthur's epistolary protest was prompt and earnest:

"I don't like the idea of your being in a store. I am working harder than ever with an eye to the day when I can take you out of it and set you in our little house, where you shall have nothing to do but be my little wife."

"And sweep floors," thought Amelie perversely, "and wash dishes, and mend socks." She turned back to her beloved job. Like a new world, the goods on the shelves about her opened a thousand vistas. Her awakening intelligence nearly foundered itself, trying to drink the stream dry. She realized for the first time what color and line might mean; her finger tips lingered happily over silken fabric and tissues crusted with embroidery. She was like a new creature, vibrant and exquisitely responsive. She tried to write Arthur something of her evolution.

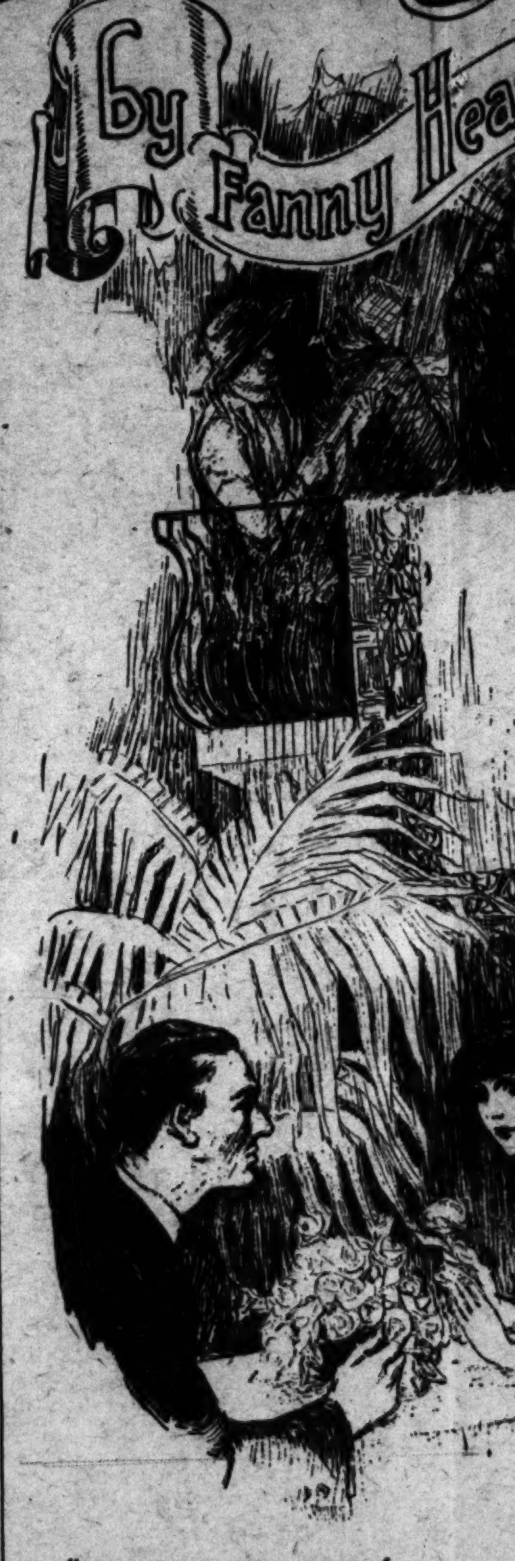
He replied with characteristic consideration:

"Are you sure you aren't overworking, darling? You sound so excited. I don't want my little girl wearing herself out. I have a piece of news for you that may make you forget the store, for once. I am getting a raise this month. One more like it and all our hopes can come true. Isn't that wonderful! I wish I could see your face when you read this!"

Amelie read it, standing beside a box of new prints that had just come in, colorful things, French and English, with an occasional spirited bit of black and white among them. When she had done reading she lifted her eyes to a frivolous gilt-framed mirror on the opposite wall of the shop.

She saw a small, pale face with a touch of delicate rose on the cheeks; cloudy dark hair, artistically loose (Arthur loved it sleek and netted;) a mouth touched with mockery—eyes full of dreams, but the ecstatic happiness which Arthur would have liked to be able to watch the mirror did not give back.

"What is the matter with you?" cried Amelie to herself amazedly. "What have you been waiting for all this time?"



"I wouldnt give tonight for the rest of my life, this place and that song and you."

She tucked the letter inside her soft, gray frock and turned away humming "Annie Laurie," but a psycho-analyst, from whom none of us is quite safe nowadays, would have observed that she had first to stop and consciously recall that it was Arthur's favorite tune. Then she flatted it.

She wished sometimes that Arthur's letters had more of Arthur himself. How many a woman has wished that before her, of stolid, businesslike, masculine script! One remembers a moment of beautiful madness—a husky masculine voice, breaking with tenderness—eyes that burn a hole in one's soul, and the postman obliges next day or next week with a chilly crackling sheet of paper beginning clumsily:

"My dearest M. or N.: I am sitting down to write to you after a busy day. I know you will be glad to hear that I found the place Okeh—and everything ready for me to take hold."

It isn't quite what one would be glad to hear, of course; however, the average man makes but inadequate love with a pen. Which probably saves him a good deal of trouble, at that.

Arthur, in any case, was no knight of the quill. He said what he had to say definitely and on time, added the customary number of darlings and little girls, and called it a day.

"He takes me just as much for granted as if I were his—collar button!" Amelie thought rebelliously. She thought of the honey locust, but with the passing of two years, the honey locust grew vague somehow, like a tree in a lovely stage setting, hung with artificial garlands. It still stood in Amelie's yard, two springs it flowered heartlessly without Arthur, but its magic waned. It was now, at least, a tree. A little stereotyped, like the letters, which were now all Amelie had of her great moment.

Toward the end of the second year, Amelie's mother remarried.

That was a distinct blow to Amelie, who had not even seen it coming. She knew the man had been an old suitor of her mother's, knew that he sometimes came to the house, knew that he seemed still to care, in a stolid, inarticulate sort of way—but marriage—with Amelie's father so new a ghost! With the crepe veil and black kid gloves so lately put away!

Amelie was hurt. She was affronted. She quivered with disgust—the fastidious unreasoning disgust of youth for middle-aged ardors.

The stepfather had been some years a widower, and possessed already a tidy family. When Amelie thought of his grizzled mustache and neat, black alpaca coat, of his grown daughter's shrill inane laughter, and the deviltries of his two small freckled sons, she felt as if cuckoos had crowded her out of her nest.

She stayed late at the shop and came home with reluctance to her place at the noisy dinner table over which her mother now presided.

Mrs. Lawrence, Mrs. Lawrence no longer, torn between old ties and new, offered the obvious solution when Amelie's unrest became apparent.

"Anyhow," she protested pathetically, "you'd be leaving me, sooner or later, to get married yourself, you know, you and Arthur."

It made Amelie turn with a desperate dependence to Arthur's letters, which just about that time displayed a renaissance of ardor, as if in answer to her need.

"The time's almost up," he wrote. "I'm due another raise in a month and as soon as I get it I'll wire you. Then you will start west to meet me, darling! Riverside, Cal.—remember? Take the California Limited—that's the best train—get off at San Bernardino and drive over to the inn. I'll be waiting for you, there. I wonder if we will find each other at all changed. I am sure you will be the same dear little girl. As for me, I am what I have always been, your faithful old sweetheart. It's been a hard two years, but we'll forget all that once we're together again. A man has temptations" (he had blacked something out there and gone on again,) "a lot of temptations a sheltered little girl like you knows nothing about—but I've kept your picture on my desk and your promise in my mind—and here we are, almost out of the woods! When I wire, be ready to start. It might be any day now."

Amelie was distinctly moved by that letter. She went out and bought herself a gray coat and skirt to travel in, also some demurely smart blouses and an engaging little gray hat. She added other things, a small but dainty trousseau, then held her hands and waited for Arthur's wire to come.

Her road to Rome, as it were. Her key to the garden of the world.

It troubled her a bit, nevertheless, that even Arthur's photograph could not make real for her now his eyes and mouth. She had lost her power to visualize him, completely. "I feel—as if he were—almost strange," she told her mother in a moment of insistent misgiving. "It's so hard to keep it all real—over two years—and he" (a flare of nervous shyness) "he seems so—sure and so—so" (she stumbled over a reticent word) "so affectionate."

"It'll all be all right," said her mother comfortingly. "Arthur's a good boy. Just you be as faithful as he is."

That really seemed to cover everything, that last homely bit of advice.

When Arthur's wire eventually came Amelie packed her trunk, gave up her position in the little bookshop, and climbed aboard the California Limited with a sense of high fulfillment—if a most irregular pulse.

Arthur had said merely, "Meet me Mission Inn, Riverside, June fifteenth, love."

Not a lengthy slogan at the sound of which to tear up one's life by the roots, but Amelie responded gallantly. She said good-by to the locust tree the night before she left with a vague feeling that she who was about to die saluted it. The locust tree was blooming but sparsely that year. It dropped no amorous blossoms on her hair.

Approaches now the distressful and problematic part of the story of Amelie Lawrence.

She slept none too well that first night, as might have been expected, rose late the next morning—she had a lower berth—and dressed and made her way out to the dining car. A negro waiter came forward to meet her. He was either a stupid or an uncommonly clever creature. He seated Amelie at a small, spotless table on which silver and glass and china glittered brightly in the rays of the 8 o'clock sun, and presented her with a menu. Just across the small, spotless tables sat a man reading a book and waiting apparently for his breakfast. In the fact of him lay the stupidity or uncommon cleverness of the waiter.

Outside the window the Kansas landscape streamed by, naked as God had made it, yet with a certain flat freshness about it.

Amelie wrote upon her order slip:

Orange juice, coffee, rolls.

But she nearly set down her startled subconscious cry, "Oh, Amelie, my child. What a man! He couldn't possibly be as wonderful as he looks."

She shouldn't have responded to the wonderfulness of him, of course, but she did in an odd sort of way, with Arthur looming always in the back of her mind.

For one thing he, the man across the table, looked like the direct lineal descendant of caballeros and hidalgos. His dark eyes were full of a melancholy amusement. He had dark, smooth hair and a small, sophisticated, dark mustache. In another day he would have worn ruffles at the wrist and carried a rapier. As it was, his clothes were good, not too new, and he wore a black opal in a dark knitted tie. His hands, holding the book, which Amelie made out by indirect ladylike glances to be a play of Benavente's, were slim and brown and incongruously strong looking. They gave her, those hands, merely in looking at them, a faint warning thrill, which she could not help but feel to be illicit.

In the midst of her musings he looked at her and spoke, in a voice that could have belonged to no other man that Amelie had ever met.

Of course, he only said. "May I have the sugar?" (His grapefruit had arrived.) But that voice! It was tragically beautiful. Full of whimsical inflections and deep velvety undertones. The voice of Harlequin, rhyming the moon in an old garden, among foxgloves and roses, where fountains played—but languidly—and one time gods and goddesses stood formally about, their marble limbs gleaming palely against the massed dark green of laurel and rhododendron.

Amelie gave him the sugar bowl, smiling faintly. Not in the least beyond the degree prescribed by convention for ladies traveling alone.

"It's a delightful morning," he assured her gravely. There was an undoubtedly humorous glint in the deep, dark eyes.

"A little warm, I think," said Amelie primly.

"I like it warm," he said, as if that obviously affected the thing.

"But not too warm," said Amelie.

To herself she cried in scorn. "He'll think you're a hopeless prig. Do behave as if you'd talked to a man without an introduction before. As a matter of fact she never had, which glamoured the whole affair and put her at a disadvantage.

She shut her teeth, took a deep breath, wiped what Arthur would think of her out of consideration, and said sweetly:

"Do tell me what that is you're reading. I've been dying of curiosity."

He held it up for her to see with a sudden and charming smile.

"'Autumnal Roses,' by Jacinto Benavente. Do you know him?"

"No—it's good?" said Amelie eagerly.

"It distinctly isn't. Although I hoped it would be. Are you ever violently disappointed in books you take on trains with you? It matters so much more, then—you're so helpless. You can't trot an entire library about. I suppose one should rely on Shakespeare and the Bible. But fancy either one of 'em in an observation car. It doesn't seem decent somehow. What do you read?"

She could see he was really interested in what she read and answered with a touch of shyness:

"I've got two—this time," (she was glad he couldn't possibly know she had never been two whole days on a train before in her narrow little life.) "'The Way of All Flesh' and, in case I shouldn't like that, 'The Book of a Hundred Houses.'"

"You must be going to build one," he offered. His eyes, even in the lightest moments, had a glow and a warmth that startled.

"I—unless it's built already," said Amelie.

She applied herself hurriedly to her breakfast, which the waiter set down before her. After all, one didn't tell one's intimate affairs to strangers.

"May I have the sugar back again?" she inquired quaintly.

"Which means," he interpreted, handing it, "that you consider we're getting on too fast for dining car acquaintances. Sorry! Shall we go back and begin at the weather? I'll try to progress more slowly. Let me see—books look safe enough, and yet they got us into personalities in no time."

"I really like personalities, rather," said Amelie unexpectedly.

"Which means you've reconsidered and are willing to take a chance on my being respectable."

She lifted an eyebrow at him impertinently.

"Oh, respectable—no question of that—how safe are you?"

"Not too safe to be interesting, I hope."

"A dark man—and a blonde woman, you know," said Amelie daringly—"nature's danger signals, so I've been told."

"Then it must have been a blonde man or a dark woman that told you," he retorted pleasantly.

He finished his breakfast and lingered, making conversation, obviously attracted by her! Amelie deliberately dawdled over hers. They discovered a bookish tendency in common—laughed at the same things.

She said at last, rising: "Good-by—you may go back to Benavente, now."

"Perhaps I shall see you later on in the observation car?"

Did he sound assured? A frequent conqueror? Amelie replied coolly:

"Oh, I scarcely think so."

He bowed, accepted the rebuff with a dignity so delightful Amelie felt herself absurd to have offered it.

Nevertheless, she left him standing there and made her way back to the Pullman where among her bags and wraps and magazines she sat down determinedly to think of Arthur and the future. It was not so easy to think of Arthur. He seemed at first to wear a small dark mustache, which was, of course, ridiculous. Amelie swept her mind clear of extraneous matter and said to herself over and over like a charm, "Riverside, June fifteenth, love." In the midst of which, some one paused in her section, murmured a vague apology, and sat down in the other seat. It was the man of the dining car.

Amelie flushed brilliantly. Alarm took her. Had her first and only adventure in unaccredited romance resulted unfortunately?

"Sorry," he said, with an appeasing smile, "know it seems like a silly musical show or something. I nearly doubted my eyes when I came down the car just now and saw you sitting here. Have you the lower?"

"Yes," said Amelie, a trifle coldly, "I have."

He continued deprecatingly:

"I'm going as far as San Bernardino."

"So am I," said Amelie.

At which a tide of amusement rose in them both.

"Riverside?" he suggested, hopefully.

Amelie nodded, trying to look grim.

"And the Mission Inn?"

"Oh, this is too absurd!" she cried.

"Isn't it?" he agreed; "but I do think, in the interests of propriety, we should now tell each other our names and produce letters from our respective pastors—or whatnot—in the way of credentials. Don't you?"

Amelie had really a delicious laugh, slight

PROGRESS AND PRODUCTION

SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 5, 1922.

PLANTING THE SUBURBAN ACRE.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

THE present is a fine time to propagate deciduous flowering shrubs from cuttings. We have seen material cut from shrubs with pruning shears, stuck in the soil in bundles to await time for cuttings, forgotten—and yet it nearly all grow. But lilacs, bridal wreath, deutzias, wigelias, lemon verbena and all that class may be cut into cuttings with a sharp knife, inserted in the soil three or four inches, kept damp, and nearly all will grow. No need to buy such plants, or to get along with but one in your garden when you may have scores.

Clumps of golden rod, golden glow, perennial asters, sunflowers, and all that class may be divided and replanted, and will yield perhaps a hundred-fold over the flower crop last season. Good crops of flowers are seldom borne on old matted clumps. A little later, division should be made of cyperus, papyrus, elephant's ears, and those plants which luxuriate only in hot weather. It is still a little cold for such plants, as well as for dahlias, chrysanthemums, and a few others; but early in March all should come to the slaughter and be torn to pieces for the new and better life that awaits them in the coming summer.

A Parkway of Pansies, Balboa Park, San Diego.

Plant seed of tender plants, as nasturtiums, petunia, verbena, zinnia, mignonette, marigold, cosmos, ageratum, fuchsia; also soft-wood cuttings of hardy plants and shrubs, as carnations, marguerite, phlox, pyrethrum, hibiscus, dianthus barbatus, stocks, geraniums and all hardy shrubbery and vines. It is not too late to plant Japanese bulbs, tuberoses, lily of the valley, spirea Japonica, Spanish and Japanese iris. Sow seed in the open—forget-me-nots, decorative asparagus, asters, balsam, calendula, carnation, coreopsis, delphinium, dahlias, daisies, Clarkia gaillardia, hollyhock, poppies, heliotrope, verbena, sweet peas, and all deciduous shrubbery and trees.

In vegetables, plant seeds of tomatoes, peppers, egg plant and late celery, which may be planted in the open as soon as large enough. All other vegetables, with exception of corn and the vines, such as pumpkins, watermelons, cantaloupes and cucumbers, may be planted in the open without any danger. Keep the ground well cultivated and free from weeds.

Dwarf Washington Navel Orange.

If not already accomplished, you should at once prune grape vines, berry plants and deciduous fruit trees, such as peach, prune, plum, apple, pear, quince, etc. It is usually best to remove all dead wood, interfering twigs and suckers, and then thin judiciously. A thorough spraying or brushing of the trees, especially the trunk and main limbs, with whale oil soap dissolved in warm water (one pound of soap to five gallons of water) will cleanse them from bark pests and prove a good fruit investment. If scale infects them, kerosene oil should be emulsified with the soap solution (half a gallon of oil to each five gallons,) or some other good scale remedy, such as resin wash or lime-sulphur spray, should be applied.

A Suggestive Letter.

"It has occured to me many times how valuable it would be to your readers if you were to publish instructive articles on the poisonous trees, shrubs, plants, vines, flowers, fruit, berries, edibles, etc., found throughout California, especially our southern part of the State. This would be of value to motorists, hikers, picnickers and those merely on outings or vacations. I understand that some of these poisonous growths are so very pretty that they are frequently picked by nature lovers who take these sprigs, etc., home for the vases. Together with the articles ought to appear how disease or poisoning is contracted, the symptoms, treatments, and whether or not they recur. Also advising campers not to use certain kinds of wood for their fires, lest the fumes poison the surrounding air. As a further suggestion, which I deem most valuable to the entire public, would be to get our Park Commissioners to set aside a space in one or more of our parks where these poisonous trees, shrubs, etc., could be grown behind tall wire fences, so school children and adults could learn by seeing at close range what is poisonous and what is not poisonous This would be highly instructive as well as a wonderful preventive to the discomfort and pain suffered because of ignorance."—W. O. I.

Soil for Lawns.

A correspondent states that a lawn made last year upon very sandy soil and given an abundance of good manure, looks yellowish and sickly. To make a good lawn and sustain it, the underlying soil must have body or substance, sand will not do. Our heaviest soils make the best permanent lawns, and here is where our black adobe shines, for after a lawn is established in this sticky stuff it cannot be surpassed in beauty or luxuriance by lawns grown on any other sort of soil. That containing large percentage of clay is also famed for its support of luxuriant blue grass.

Toads Eat Ants.

A gardener had a place much infested by ants, a pit or depression in the garden where he grew melons. Upon watching them day by day he observed the ants eating into the melons, and once thought he saw a toad that inhabited the pit, eat a few ants. He accordingly went on a toad hunt, securing about a dozen, all of which he put in the pit. In less than a week not a single ant could be found there, and now the gardener carries home every toad he finds. Flies, young snails, slugs and a host of insect pests fall victims to the garden toad, one of mankind's most humble yet most useful friends. There is an old saying that it is lucky to have a cricket on the hearth, though it is a hundred-fold luckier to have a toad in the garden.

Sour Soils of Spring.

A little later, when the rains have ceased, there will be gardens and parts of gardens where the soil will be black and soggy, and so cold that no vegetation save a very lowly, green coloring, will put in an appearance until late in the spring. Such soils are sour and need a corrective. The most powerful corrective is lime, which should be dug well into the soil, as deeply as possible. Pulverized old plaster or sharp sand will aid in keeping it open; or if scattered over the surface, will prevent undesirable growth of plants of a very low order, mosses, scums, lichens, etc. If conditions are not bad, an application of soot will probably be sufficient. You cannot apply too much of this, if you dig it well into the soil. While not so powerful a corrective agent as lime, soot has a heavy fertilizing value in addition to its purifying qualities.

Rhus Poisoning.

Soon we shall hear of poisoning by contact with Rhus diversiloba, a native "poison sumach;" also known as "poison oak," on account of its leaf resemblance to oak leaves, and "poison ivy" for its occasional strong climbing habit, it being one of our most variable plants. A man whose business takes him among these plants and who has been poisoned many times, says: "I have tried every remedy that has been suggested to me and have found none as good as hot soapsuds. When I find I am poisoned, I simply wash the affected parts with suds as hot as I can get them, preferably made with Castile soap. I keep on washing until the itching or tingling ceases, and am seldom bothered further. It is well to let the suds dry on; and above all don't scratch!"

Coddling Potted Plants.

Do not try to nurse or coddle potted plants. Give them plain, commonsense, vigorous treatment. When watering, soak them and have done with it. Give them drink as though they were camels about to start on a long desert trip. Do not give them water every little while, but only when they need it, and then a generous supply. No better way to give potted plants drink has been found, than to stand them in a tub or large vessel containing sufficient water to come nearly to the top of pots; let them stay in until you see the top soil darkening from the rising moisture. Set them down out of doors for a time, so that surplus water may drain out of soil and pot. Such treatment does the job thoroughly without overdoing it.

Blue gum (Eucalyptus gobulus) over 30 years old, San Gabriel Valley.

For Dry, Hot Soils.

Portulacas are tender annuals which grow from six to eight inches high, and a bed of them makes a dazzling display of color in the bright sunshine. They should be sown during warm weather, as the seeds require a moderately high temperature for germination, and should be sown where the plants are to grow. The soil need not be rich. The flowers close in shadow, but are open in sunshine, and are therefore peculiarly suited to our climate. The improved varieties have very large flowers.

Sulphur for Mildew.

The best kind of sulphur is the sublimed. It has the finest grain and therefore has the most surface exposed, from which the fumes may escape. The finer the grain, the lighter in color will be the sulphur because there will be more surface exposed; and the more surface there is exposed, the more light will there be reflected. There need not be any fear of adulterated sulphur if bought from a reliable firm. However, if you burn a little on a piece of tin and only a few black scales remain, you may be satisfied that it is pure.

This is a SUPER-pea for home gardens or commercial growers. Pods are often five to six inches long and are chock full of the sweetest, finest peas you ever tasted. The bush is sturdy and bears prolifically. Packets 15c; lb. 50c, postpaid.

Inoculate peas with Farmogen and double your crop

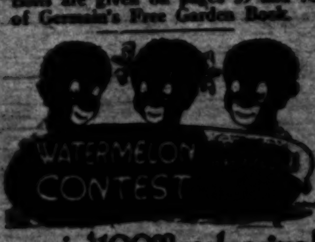
ORNAMENTAL GRASSES DESERVE MORE NOTICE

They add grace to boquets, form a most artistic border for tall bedding plants and are indispensible for outlining pools and water gardens. Some of the choicer varieties are Briza Maxima, or Quaking Grass—Coix Lachryma, or Job's Tears—Eulalia Japonica, or Japan Plume Grass and "Purple Fountain Grass." These and many other varieties, 10c packet, postpaid.

Everlasting Flowers—15 handsome varieties $1 postpaid

ZINNIAS MOST POPULAR OF GARDEN FLOWERS

Perhaps it is because they give such generous return for the little we do for them—and perhaps because they are so artistic in form, so diversified in coloring. They range from the most gorgeous hues, thru soft pastel shades to rich, dull tints with satiny finish. This season we are offering some truly remarkable varieties in Dahlia flowered, Picotee and Quilled strains, which are incomparable in size and beauty. Complete descriptions are given on pages 59 and 70 of Germain's Free Garden Book.



—win $100.00 cash prize!

Don't fail to enter Germain's Giant Watermelon Contest this year. All you need is a packet of seed—rules are on the back. Last year we paid Mrs. Ed. Brennan of Torrance, $200 in cash for the heaviest melon grown from Germain's seed. Even if you don't win a prize—you WILL have some of the largest, juiciest, finest flavored watermelons you ever tasted. Packet 20c, postpaid.

None More Luscious Than Rastrawberries

This is our pet novelty for 1922. The bush is highly ornamental and bears freely over a long season. Fruit is large, juicy, deliciously flavorful and sweet. Eaten fresh, in pies or jams, the Rastrawberry is a delicacy every garden should boast of. We predict a wonderful commercial future for this choice new variety. Sturdy bushes 75c each, postpaid.

Tuberous Begonias love shady places. P. 87 Germain's free Garden Book.

ROSES

The Empire of Rare Roses acknowledges a new Queen—Lolita Armour. Fanciers agree that this exquisite new beauty is in a class by itself—that it is unsurpassed in form and coloring. We have a limited stock at $2.50. If you want to be among the first to grow this lovely rose, don't put off ordering. Other important roses—both novelties and the best of old favorites—are described and priced in Germain's free 1922 Garden Book.

GARDEN PAYS 1000%

You pay 10c for a packet of seeds and reap a harvest of dollars. Can you beat this for a substantial investment? There is everything in favor of a home garden—and nothing against it. You build up your own health and that of your family thru clean, healthful exercise of body and mind, you supply your table with the best in the land, you cut down your produce bills and build up your bank account. Everything you want to know about planting will be found in Germain's FREE Garden Book.

plant this one! it's d-e-l-i-c-i-o-u-s!

Prepare now for summer breakfasts, when a deliciously cold melon starts the day right. Germain's Persian is a splendid new type of salmon fleshed melon. It has a wonderful flavor, grows to large size and is always of excellent quality. Packet 20c postpaid.

Another luscious treat is Germain's Golden Honey Dew. The flesh is a rich, golden color, and is very thick and sweet. It combines the spicy flavor of the Emerald Gem with the sweetness and excellent keeping qualities of the original Honey Dew. Packet 15c, postpaid.

Germain's Big 4 Muskmelon Specialty 40c; Persian, Honey Dew, Indiana and Golden Honey—delicious, every one

Germain's Epicure Radish Delights the Palate

One of the earliest varieties known. It matures in 18 days from planting. You never tasted a more delicious appetizer. It is sweet, crisp and tender. 10c a packet, 3 for 25c, postpaid.

HAVE YOU EVER EATEN AN "APPLE" CUCUMBER?

It is a rare delicacy for salads and mighty appeticing peeled and eaten with salt. When ready for picking it is the color of a Pearmain apple, and just as good eating. This variety is a heavy yielder and a favorite wherever grown. Packet 10c, postpaid.

GIANT PODDED LIMAS MIGHTY GOOD EATING

You've a rare treat in store if you plant Germain's Giant Podded Lima Beans. They are tender as butter and are pronounced superior to all other pole limas, both in flavor and heavy producing qualities. Packet 15c; lb. 55c, postpaid.

LEARN HOW TO COOK GERMAIN'S ZUCCHINI

Three recipes by Marcell's wonderful chef are given on page 18 of Germain's FREE 1922 Garden Book. Also a description of this deliciously piquant vegetable, as well as Germain's new Banana Squash. Packet of either 10c, postpaid.

NUVIDA Makes 'em grow!

Don't expect bumper crops or choice blooms without fertilizer—it isn't being done. Your soil must have FOOD—elements which are constantly being withdrawn must be replaced. Germain's Nuvida is rich in nitrogen and other vital growing elements. It makes crops more prolific, lawns thick and velvety, blooms a richer hue and more perfect in form—in fact, it works miracles in your garden. Nuvida is clean to handle, is odorless and free from weeds. It's cheaper by the 100 pounds—$4. Free city delivery.

Germain's Proven Hairy Peruvian Alfalfa—best poultry greens

you can't beat home-grown corn

—and Germain Evergreen is California's best. It comes into bearing early and produces abundantly over a long period. The large ears are packed with sweet, palatable kernels, which are protected from worms by the tight folding shucks. Pkt. 10c; lb. 40c postpaid.

WHAT WILL YOU PLANT IN YOUR FLOWER GARDEN?

For long, wide borders plant tall flowers, such as Celosias, Marigolds, Zinnias, Cosmos, Shirley Poppies, Larkspur, Calliopsis in the background and intermingle with them early Asters, Centaureas, African Orange Daisies and Phloxes. This border may be edged with white Alyssum, Verbenas or other dwarf plants such as Ageratum.

If you want flowers which will supply an abundance of choice bloom, select as many of the following as you can find room to plant: Salpiglosis, double Poppies, Scabiosa, double Cornflower, Blue Butterfly Delphinium, Gaillardias, Chinese Pinks, Painted Daisies, Penstemons, Snapdragons, Asters and Clarkias.

You can grow very fine dahlias from seed the first year and reap a harvest of exquisite cut flowers. Large flowering Cactus or Pompon are 15c a packet. Single mixed 10c packet, postpaid.

We are featuring the American Legion Poppy—a magnificent Shirley of dazzling orange scarlet. The blossoms are of enormous size and are borne on stout stems. Because it is rare, it is 35c a packet, postpaid.

Germain's Giant Pansies can be sown now—but choose a shady spot

Some rhubarb!

We've waited 15 years to introduce Germain's Panama Rhubarb to the home gardens and growers of California. It bears the year round—but most heavily when prices are highest. The flavor is delicious and elusive. Less sugar is required for cooking. Stalks are mammoth—often three feet long and weighing 2 lbs. This feature greatly lessens expense of picking and packing. Frost won't hurt it. Fruit can be picked three months from planting. Easy to grow. Healthy roots from pedigreed plants 75c each, postpaid; $8 dozen.

No field corn equals "Big Jim," p. 48 Germain's Garden Book.

WINNIGSTADT CABBAGE A SURE HEADER

A wonderful variety, practically immune to disease; very hardy; withstands wet and cold. It commands a high price because it is extra fancy, matures early and is usually on the market far in advance of all other strains. Packet 10c; 3 for 25c, postpaid.

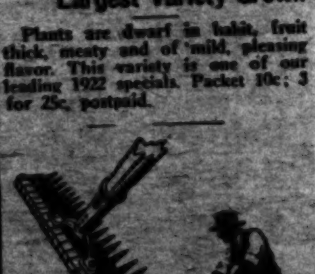
Grow your own

Northern grown seed potatoes mature earlier and are much hardier than the same varieties grown in the south. Whether you are growing them for your own use or for market, these are important features to consider. For years we have specialized in choice northern-grown stock and can supply you at market prices, with any variety you may desire.

Two drought resisters—Germain's Sudan Grass and Dwarf Milo Maize.

Chinese Giant Pepper Largest Variety Grown

Plants are dwarf in habit, fruit thick, meaty and of mild, pleasing flavor. This variety is one of our leading 1922 specials. Packet 10c; 3 for 25c, postpaid.



DON'T DO WITHOUT THIS LAWN BEAUTIFIER

The city parks of Los Angeles and Pasadena USE and recommend the Cutter-Bar Rake. It eradicates devil grass, aerates the soil, promotes new luxuriant growth of clover and blue grass and controls fungus—the green moss that helps devil grass turn your lawn brown. Rake—composed of heavy steel bar and twelve specially designed sharp knives—complete with handle, $5. Free city delivery.

Value of Natural Shade in the Poultry Yard.

PLANT SOME TREES NOW. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

STRICTLY speaking, economic and ornamental trees can hardly be considered fundamentals of poultry culture yet as a matter of fact their presence in the poultry yard is of service and may also be one of profit. During summer shade is of more than passing moment to the physical prosperity and comfort of fowls; and of the various means of supplying it nothing is the equal of trees in the chicken yard. It is not so much of importance as to the kind of tree, as it is that some sort occupy a place in the runs; nevertheless, there is some scope in the way of a selection. For our part, deciduous fruit trees are favorites; when developed they provide a good shade in summer, and in the winter, when sunshine is desirable, their leafless branches admit of it quite freely. In addition, they will also provide a plentiful supply of fruit for family use, and if the poultry farm is of some dimension their product may also possess a commercial importance. Those varieties that present an umbrageous growth, like the apple, peach, apricot, etc., throw the widest shade; trees of columnar growth, like the pear, are not so good as shade trees. Of rapid growth is the mulberry, providing a dense shade; and while its fruit possesses a negligible value, it is relished by the birds. The walnut is another tree admirably adapted to our purpose, and the Planes (sycamores) are also good. In evergreen trees there is a wide range from which to make a selection, but their dense shade in our cold and rainy months, when sunshine is better than shade, in our judgment militates against them in the poultry yard.

In planting fruit trees some precaution in the way of protection may be advisable, especially for the first year or two; otherwise the birds may eat off the growing leaf buds and so retard a robust development. However, this is a minor matter—the important thing is to provide natural shade for the birds in summer. The planting season is now about in full swing, which admonishes that if it is to be done, it were best it were quickly done.

How Many Females to a Male!

The common practice in selling breeding pens is to inclose from three to five females and a male. From this some people have supposed that this represented the number of birds usually alloted in breeding operations. Such, however, is not the fact. The general rue is about six to ten females to one male in the Asiatic (Brahmas, Langshans, etc.,) class; for the American, or Rocks, Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds, from eight to twelve; in the Mediterraneans, (Leghorns and Minorcas) ten to twenty-five. These numbers may require some modification, as much depends on the character of the male, whether his attentions are evenly distributed, and also as to his virility and breeding propensities. Often good results are obtained with large flocks to a single male. This for average purposes. When it is desirable to secure particular color markings or a close record as to pedigree, the whole subject assumes a more definite procedure, and may even result in single matings, in which case the cock bird is given access to the hen or hens at regular intervals.

A Matter of Fertility.

Here and there are still people who buy hatching eggs and operate with sitting hens, though the practice is not nearly so much observed as it was previous to the advent of commercial hatcheries and the day-old chick business. With all who still follow nature's way to replenish their flocks there is often a tendency to anticipate fifteen chicks from fifteen eggs. This is figuring for maximum results, which are the exception rather than the rule. Experienced breeders and fanciers of course know better and feel quite well satisfied if they secure eight to ten chicks out of a hatching, particularly if the eggs were shipped a long distance. So many problems are to be considered, other than good fertility, that it is not within the possibility of things to always secure large hatches; even the old hen may fail to function properly, not to mention other contingencies. To remove the question of doubtful fertility, many breeders offer to "make good" all unfertile (clear) eggs (above 80 per cent hatch:) if returned within seven to ten days in the original package, carriage prepaid. To our way of thinking a 50 to 60 per cent hatch is good evidence of average fertility. Many people unfamiliar with breeding problems have an erroneous idea of the reproductive functions as applied to food life. Just remember that in the scheme of nature every egg is presumed to represent a chick and since they are produced singly, the great American Business Hen has hardly ever been subject to birth control.

Start the foundation for the turkey flock now by selecting vigorous birds for mating.

Operating the Artificial Hen.

People who still maintain their flocks by doing their own incubation and brooding are not nearly so numerous as they were before commercial hatching assumed the importance of an industry; still there are those who buy and operate incubators, particularly in the case of fanciers and people who are breeding for "points," hence demand an accurate record of their blood lines. In addition to these, however, there are people situated away from poultry centers, who still do their own hatching; and since the season for incubating eggs is close at hand, the subject is not without interest, especially to beginners.

At this time and date it is quite safe to say that all makes of incubators will function; some, of course, better than others, and it makes little difference whether it be a hot-water or a hot-air machine. And since each manufacturer is presumed to know the behavior of his machine, it is almost mandatory that the printed instructions be followed to the very letter. Observing this, it should be borne in mind that no machine will hatch infertile eggs, nor "bring out" robust chicks from weak fertility. Obviously, the essentials to a good hatch are strong, fertile eggs from a virile and productive strain of fowls. They should be of uniform size, symmetrical in shape, even color, and good shell. The sooner such eggs are placed in the incubator after being laid and candled for proper consistency the better.

In placing an incubator choose a dry, well-ventilated situation, free from draughts and sudden changes of temperature; see that the machine sets perfectly level, and that the heat is steadily and evenly distributed throughout the egg chamber. A good plan is to set up and operate it for a couple of days so that it will be running properly with an even temperature. Also test your thermometer; it should register about 103 degrees. By following the printed instructions, the matter of moisture and ventilation will be solved. For the first week the temperature in the machine should be 102 degrees; the second, 103, when the thermometer bulb rests on a level with the tops of the eggs. After thirty-six hours the eggs should be turned at least twice a day, morning and evening, until the nineteenth day, when they should be allowed to remain undisturbed. In addition to turning, the eggs should be thoroughly cooled from the seventh to the nineteenth day. Eggs must also be "tested out," first on the sixth day, and again on the fifteenth, though some advocate three testings, viz., on the fifth, tenth and fifteenth days. All infertile, weak and dead-germ eggs should be removed. After hatching, which usually happens on the twenty-first day, the chicks should be allowed to remain in the incubator until thoroughly dried off, when they may be removed to the brooder ready at hand for their reception.

A Crevecoeur cock.

The modern incubator is operated either with oil burners, gas or electricity. If by the first mentioned, care must be exercised in the use of a high quality of illuminating oil; the lamp must be filled daily and kept trimmed and cleaned down to the minute; with gas, see that the pressure is even and that the flame burns clear and even; with electricity (which we regard as the ideal heat) there is less risk and anxiety than with either of the other two. The small, modern incubators operated by electricity have proven their capabilities, and given general satisfaction wherever used.

White Eggs and Brown.

Although the color of an eggshell is no indication of the chemical composition of its content, people in different cities and in different parts of the country have rather decided preferences for either white or brown eggs. The wise producer considers the likes and dislikes of his prospective customers, even though they may be based on a mistaken notion. A brown egg is just as nutritious as a white egg, and a white one is just as full of meat as a brown one. If a person's color idiosyncrasy is satisfied, however, he may get a little more good out of the egg he eats.

The color of an egg is largely, or almost entirely, dependent upon the breed of the bird that laid it. In general, the American breeds—Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and Wyandottes—lay brown eggs. As all these breeds have red ear lobes, it may be said that red lobes mean brown eggs. The brown egg is popular in New England, and brings a premium on the Boston and Providence markets. Although the content of this egg is the same as that of a white one, there is a difference in the covering. The shells of brown eggs are harder, and the skin just underneath the shell is tougher. In hatching, the chicks have a little harder work getting out than those that happened to develop in shells of lighter hue.

In New York, the white egg brings a premium of 7 to 10 cents a dozen at some seasons, but it is probable that the New Yorker gets no more nourishment nor enjoyment out of his breakfast than the Bostonian, who pays a similar premium for brown eggs. Owners of poultry farms serving the metropolis are well aware of this preference and as a result keep fowls, mostly Leghorns, that produce white eggs. The white egg breeds, in addition to the Leghorns, are the Black Spanish, the Minorca and all the Mediterranean breeds. All of these breeds have white ear lobes.

In Philadelphia, the preference is largely for white eggs and this market draws largely from the same territory as New York for its highest grade eggs. Chicago gets farm eggs from all parts of the Middle West that are sorted and graded by those who pack them. There is no pronounced preference in that city. The Pacific Coast prefers white eggs, and the large poultry plants keep Leghorns.

RAINS KILL GOPHERS.

SANTA ANA.—The gopher, which is responsible for damage amounting to many thousands of dollars annually in Orange county groves and orchards, will be less in evidence this year, according to a statement by the horticultural commissioner. The recent rains have played a prominent part in the partial extermination of the gopher clan. An estimate on the annual loss from gopher damage in Orange county will range between $200,000 and $250,000. Checking shows that approximately two trees out of every ten acres of citrus fruit were seriously damaged or destroyed by the attacks of this pest.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION

SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 5, 1922.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and other engaged either in a large or small way in th vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

Planting Time.

NO HOME garden of any size is complete without a few small fruit bushes and vines, a few fruit trees and some of what might be called the more permanent vegetables such as rhubarb and asparagus. These are not for the little postage-stamp kitchen garden, of course, but it is surprising just how small a place will support these extras. More surprising still to the gardener who thus branches out will be the enjoyment and profit he will receive from the home fruit and the other permanent plantings. There is no variety to diet like the variety that can be introduced through the use of just these products.

Now, too, is the time to be planning and planting that larger, better garden so easily within reach of the Southern Californian. Planting time is here, the ground is more than usually receptive, the nurserymen and seedsmen have good stock for the buying. Here is an investment that will pay increasing dividends with the years. It is almost a crime, too, not to plant out available ground to fruit trees, berries and grapes when all nature conspired to make this the paradise of earth for their growth and development. They can't plant themselves, but given a start and a modicum of reasonable care, they will certainly do the rest.

Look over that back yard, Mr. Family Man. See if you can't find space for a fruit tree or two. What about some berries in that bare place by the fence? There are too many barren-looking back yards in Southern California's cities and towns. Is yours one of them?

His Work Goes On.

THE agricultural industry owes its debt of gratitude to the memory of the late G. Harold Powell, whose contribution to the advancement of co-operative marketing must always stand as one of the important services rendered the American grower in this generation. The California Fruit Growers' Exchange, to the upbuilding of which Mr. Powell dedicated his life, stands today as the model for successful co-and distribution. The work of the Exchange, in fact, will constitute an enduring monument to his memory. Mr. Powell has gone on, but the principle of co-operation which he did so much to advance lives and grows. All agricultural America is turning to it as the way out of the economic wilderness in which the producers of the soil so often find themselves. What the citrus men under Mr. Powell's guiding inspiration were able to do for themselves other producers will do. Thus will the brilliant Southern Californian's good work be carried on and on.

More Botulinus.

SIX members of the Tuttle family, at Boise, Idaho, have recently died from eating canned greens. The family physicians stated that botulinus caused the deaths. The greens were put up by an eastern manufacturer, it is said. Let the eastern canners take as much pains with their canned products as the olive growers of California are taking, and there will be fewer deaths from this dread poisoning, which affects all canned food products not properly processed.

GIVE THE ORCHARD A PROPER START IF YOU WANT RESULTS.

BY ROBERT W. HODGSON.

THE next few weeks will see hundreds of acres of deciduous fruits planted in Southern California. Already walnut planting is in full swing and for the past six weeks the planting of grapes has been under way in various districts. This season, there does not seem to be any pronounced planting tendency as to any class of fruits, if the interest in grapes be excepted. There is quite an interest in canning peaches, and to a much less extent in the olive. Nurserymen report substantial demands for stock, but do not indicate overwhelming demands for certain varieties which have characterized the planting seasons of recent years. As has been the case for three years, nursery stocks are low on certain varities, clearly indicating that the peak of orchard planting has not yet been reached. A considerable decrease in grapefruit acreage will likely occur on account of the shortage of stock occasioned by the recent freeze.

The intending planter of fruit trees or vines too frequently makes the mistake of being in too great a hurry in establishing an orchard. He would do well to consider that planting an orchard constitutes a long-time investment and a venture which should be gone into with considerably more care than is necessary in the planting of an annual or biennial crop. Mistakes made in laying out and establishing an orchard are in the very nature of the situation apt to be costly, hence too great care can hardly be given to the details of the selection of varieties, preparation of the soil, and planting and care of the trees. The intending planter would also do well to bear in mind a fundamental difference between the orchard and the field crop. In the orchard the unit of production is the tree and individual care and attention must be given if best results are to be secured. In the case of field crops, while the plant is the unit, it exists for but a few months and receives no individual care and attention, with the possible exception of highly specialized truck crops or novelty crops.

CHOICES OF VARIETIES.

In choosing varieties for planting, of course, the question of soil and climatic conditions comes up first. The class of fruits which the grower expects to plant must be known as able to succeed under the conditions of soil and climate where they are planted; at least, there must be reasonable certainty in this respect. In selecting varieties, however, market demand is a factor of primary importance and the intending planter would do well to first satisfy himself as to this demand. In the case of canneries, he should consult with the managements as to the varieties which they recommend. Too frequently the intending planter follows the general tendency and plants the variety which he understands his neighbors or others in the community are expecting to plant.

The source of budwood or scions from which the trees were propagated is a matter of great importance and one commonly ignored by the intending planter. Investigations have indicated conclusively that the only certainty of high yielding trees is knowledge that these trees were propagated from parent trees of known high production and of good quality. Fortunately, a good percentage of nurserymen are now using budwood from trees of known production. There are still many, however, whose trees have been propagated from budwood taken more or less indiscriminately. To use trees of this kind is to court trouble.

Preparing the land for the young orchard should have been started last fall or even Planting arrangement for a "little" suburban acre. See article by Mr. Gast starting on this page.

PLAN THE HOME ACRE SO AS TO HAVE FRUIT THE YEAR AROUND.

BY ROSS H. GAST.

NO longer is the country merely a place for farmers to come from. City people, rich and poor and only fairly well-to-do, all enjoy their whirl at the life of the out of doors. Real estate men have grown opulent supplying the demands of the "land hungry" who want to get out where they can "grow things." Everyone sooner or later gets the yearning for a suburban acre where he can tickle the ribs of old Mother Nature. Lucky is he, too, who realizes his ambition to live successfully in the country.

But many who go back to the land, as they call it, return to the city generally because they took the wrong road out. Such a step as the purchase and improvement of a suburban home should not be done on the spur of the moment. There are many things to be investigated before the final decision can be made. In other words—Stop, Look and Listen.

Much depends upon the location of the homesite. Soils vary in productivness, and some districts are less favored in regard to climate than others. Water for irrigation is a factor to be considered carefully. All of these should be investigated before the purchase is made. Then the prospective small farmer must lay out his premises in an efficient manner, so that the land can be made to produce maximum yields with the least expense and labor. It is for those who are going in for both pleasure and profit that this article is written.

Before planting, the market for the crop to be grown should be considered. Many local produce dealers who supply the hotels and restaurants will contract for vegetables that are not commonly grown by the larger truckers. Such vegetables as roselle, dill, artichokes, various types of peppers, and many others, are ordered in advance, and once their trade is secured, a ready market is available. These dealers should be consulted, and their advice as to what is needed will be the best to follow. It is foolish to expect to compete with the larger truckers in the growing of standard vegetables.

Another market that is becoming a very important factor in the distribution of produce is the roadside vegetable stand. The daily turnover of such places is surprising, and they should prove to be good customers for the "one-acre man" for his fruits and vegetables. The roadside man's slogan is "fresh produce," and if he can secure it from the producer, then he is so much to the good. Few roadside market owners "grow their own."

The plan for a one-acre "farm" on this page is a typical one. It would be hard to give a specific arrangement that would suit all conditions. The home site shown here is on the intersection of two streets, and the measurements show it to be 122 feet wide and 305 feet long. It is a small "acre," for several thousand square feet are taken up in the street rights of way. However, a croner lot is ideal, for it gives an oppor-

INCREASE IS SHOWN IN TENANT FARMING.

WASHINGTON, (D. C.)—Tenant farming in the United States is growing faster than census figures on the number of farms indicate, according to a statement issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. It is pointed out that the increase in acres rented, since 1910, has been 20 per cent, as compared with an increase of 14 per cent for the preceding decade, and that the increase in value of land rented has been 111 per cent, as against 135 per cent, while the increase in number of farms rented has been but 4 per cent, as against 16 for the 10 years 1900 to 1910.

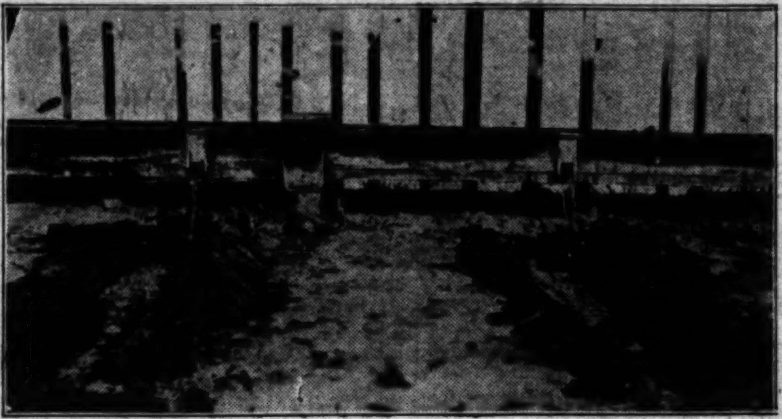
BERRIES AND GRAPES.

In the berry plot, there should be planted the most popular varieties of the tested berries. There are many new berries out that are not worth space for planting. The Cory Thornless blackberry has proved to be the best of the blackberries, though the old standard, Everbearing, is still planted by many home gardeners. One row should be planted to blackberries. The remaining space should be planted to raspberries, and dewberries. The strawberry for home planting. The Gardena The St. Regis is the most popular raspberry for home plating. The Gardena Dewberry, very prolific, and unequaled for jams and jellies, can be recommended. Of the strawberries, the choice is not so easy, though the writer inclines to the Brandeywine and the Carolina.



Miniature Flume and Box System for Home Garden.
If the gardener has fruit trees in connection with his vegetable plot, he will find such a permanent means of applying water very useful.

A variety of grapes should be set out, including the Concord, the Muscat, (both the black and the white) the Rose of Peru, the Flame Tokay, the Malaga, and the Black Monnukka. Strong, year-old plants are best. They should average eight feet apart. the Vines should have the roots pruned back before planting, to six inches from the cutting, and the top pruned to a single stem, leaving only three or four buds.

A large quantity of vegetables can be grown between the rows, and a plot of alfalfa and barley for the chickens and stock can be grown as an intercrop. Spaces planted to barley should be rotated with vegetables, and when the alfalfa is turned under, melons and cucumbers will be the best crop for the succeeding season.

If possible, the acre should be enclosed with a stout fence, to keep out marauding animals, both of the higher and lower types. Ornamentals can be planted along the fences. The Cherokee rose grows very fast, and takes less care than many other flower varieties. Its trailing habit recommends it for the fence row.

PLANTING THE "FARM."

This article would not be complete without a few tips on planting fruit trees. First, the land to be planted should be in good condition. By the plan shown here, the trees will average about twenty feet apart. That is close for some kinds of fruit, but on a small place, they should be planted closer together than in the commercial orchard. Later, if they interfere with each either a stake can be taken out here and there.

The second step is the location of the spots where the trees are to be planted. An easy way to do this is to use a wire, on which a piece of tape is wrapped every twenty feet, or at any distance desired. Locate the first row at the desired distance from the base, or fence row. Drive stakes where the trees are to stand, and line off the next row in the same manner till the whole plat is staked out. In planting the trees, use a planting board, as shown in the accompanying sketch. The holes should be amply large for the roots to lie in their natural position, usually eighteen inches in diameter, and the same in depth. The trees should stand an inch or two deeper when planted, than they stood in the nursery. All extra long or bruised roots should be cut off with a sharp knife. Fill the best surface soil about the roots; then settle it thoroughly with water, to exclude the air. It is a good plan to wet the roots in water and place them in the hole dripping wet, in case they cannot be irrigated soon after planting. Do not use fertilizer in the hole. Do not fail to head back deciduous fruit trees after planting.

Citrus and sub-tropic fruit trees are shipped with earth balled about the roots, and the balls are wrapped in burlap. Do not break the ball of earth, but plant burlap and all. The burlap will soon rot. Leave a basin around the tree, and fill it with water. The citrus trees need more attention in planting than the deciduous. Avocados should be deprived of their larger leaves when they are set out, as that will help check evaporation until the roots are established. It is advisable to shade the tender varieties the first season.

NOW IS THE TIME.

The best time to plant deciduous trees in California is during February, and March. The trees at this season of the year are in a dormant condition. Balled citrus trees can be set out at any time, but the late spring or early summer months are the best. It is necessary that avocados and other sub-tropical fruits be planted in the early spring.

When the deciduous fruit trees are one year old, thin to four or five branches, cutting these back to at least half the preceding summers growth. Thus a frame work is established for the trees.

In planting berries, the tops should be cut back to a height of about six inches. That, of course, does not include the strawberry. Raspberries and blackberries produce their fruit in the same manner, that is, the plants send out new shoots each year which bear fruit the following season. These canes die after one season's fruiting, and should be removed. That fact should be remembered when a trellis is being set up for their support. All berries are planted from January to March. The proper distances for raspberries is three feet apart, for blackberries and dewberries six feet; strawberries one and a half feet, and grapes six to ten feet. The Cory Thornless blackberry is an exception, and should not be planted closer than ten feet apart, and that might prove to be too close, if the soil favors their growth.

There are many points that cannot be covered here, but the high spots have been touched. The increase in suburban population shows that many people are moving from the cities to "grow their own" and grow healthy.

The Southern California range cattle situation was greatly improved by the rains of December.

Farm News of the Great Southwest.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

CALIPATRIA.—Secretary William G. Lowther of the Commercial Club has returned from a visit to Coast nurseries with the news that the cold snap so damaged nursery trees that thousands of grapefruit trees destined for the Imperial Valley will not be shipped, and that growers, instead of planting 30,000 trees as they expected, will be lucky if they get half that number. R. W. Hodgson, Los Angeles county farm adviser, has recommended that growers wait a year instead of planting frost-damaged trees, if the choice is given them.

SHIPPING FRUIT AGAIN.

BRYN MAWR.—Packing-houses of the citrus district are busy after an enforced idle period, to give the fruit time to develop signs of being frozen, and the picking, packing and shipping of oranges is going ahead. The fruit has now reached the stage where the water separators will take the damaged fruit from that which is good, and from now on all the fruit will be put through this test, and only that known to be good will be shipped. John P. Coy, horticultural commissioner for the county, says that better than 50 per cent of the estimated crop will be shipped. The crop before the cold snap was one of the largest of several years; in fact, there were many who estimated 4000 cars before the freeze. There is every indication that shipments from the county will be close to the light shipments of last year. Excellent prices are expected for the fruit, and Mr. Coy says that the growers will not suffer so much as will the packers and shippers who get a percentage on the amount of boxes packed and shipped.

ENCOURAGES BEET MEN.

SANTA ANA.—Orange county sugar beet growers and other agriculturists were greatly heartened by the statement of S. W. Sinsheimer, general manager of the Holly Sugar Corporation, who predicted a bright future for the beet growers, and said he could foresee no break in the unprecedented prosperity which has reigned in Southern California, while virtually all the rest of the country suffered from acute depression. A. E. Carlton, president of the corporation, is now in Washington, keeping in close touch with the fight for a duty on foreign shipments of sugar, and statements have been made that the fight will be successful. The unusual slump in sugar was caused by the extensive hoarding upon the part of candy manfacturers and others. The American companies should work for protection from foreign trade, he said.

TO DEMONSTRATE PLANTING.

SAN FERNANDO.—The recent series of vine-pruning demonstrations and discussions on grape culture conducted by the agricultural extension service, with Prof. F. T. Bioletti, the noted grape expert, as speaker and demonstrator, indicated that there is much interest in grape culture in the San Fernando Valley. Because of that interest, Prof. Bioletti has consented to spend Thursday, March 9, in the valley for a demonstration of vine planting. He states that many of the failures in grape culture are due to improper planting and laying out of a vineyard. Prof. Bioletti will show how to lay out a vineyard and plant cuttings and rooted vines. He will tell how to avoid many of the pitfalls in grape culture. There will be a meeting at 10 a.m. at Chatsworth and one at 2 p.m. at San Fernando.

APPLE MEN MEET.

COSTA MESA.—Apple growers in the Costa Mesa district are looking forward with keen interest to a dinner and business meeting to be held soon in the Costa Mesa church. Business to come before the newly created Costa Mesa Apple Growers' Association will include the election of a board of directors and a general discussion of ways and means for furthering the interests of the apple growers of Orange county. Reports will be received from the several delegates recently named to attend the meeting of the Yucaipa Apple Growers' Association. The building of an apple storage warehouse and the formation of a permanent marketing organization are subjects that will be featured in the Costa Mesa meeting.

MUST PLANT COVER CROPS.

BRAWLEY.—W. A. Covington, who came here from San Bernardino to purchase grapefruit land, and is preparing a large acreage for planting to grapefruit this spring, says that growers in Imperial Valley will realize the same prolific yield of fruit as do the growers on the coast only if they fertilize their orchards and plant cover crops to minimize the summer "drop." He says that the trouble here is that "the Imperial growers seem to think that all they have to do is to plant their trees, turn on the water, and the climate will do the rest."

WATER SAVING WORKS A SUCCESS.

RIALTO.—As the first real practical work accomplished by the Water Conservation Association, recently formed in Rialto for the express purpose of conserving the water of Lytle Creek and the valley basin, the committee appointed at the last meeting reports that of 19,000 inches of water found at the mouth of Lytle Creek Canyon, all was sunk into the earth before reaching Riverside avenue, but a short distance away. Francis Cuttle, who has been in charge of the water conservation work in the Santa Ana Basin, in a recent address given at a meeting of the Rialto Chamber of Commerce, assured local people that, with proper conservation methods there would be great abundance of water for all demands of the district this year. The saving of 19,000 inches of water by first effort along this line would seem to go far toward verifying Mr. Cuttle's welcome statement.

NEW CITROLA PARASITE.

UPLAND.—Citrola scale is to be fought here in the near future with a new parasite from Japan, now en route from that country, and due to arrive soon at the Upland insectary on Campus avenue. Paul Howard, director of the laboratory, is preparing plants for the arrival of the imported parasites. He says that the discovery of this new means of ridding groves of citrola scale was discovered by an entomologist of the California State Department, who was sent to Japan for research work.

San Gabriel Valley's exhibit at National Orange Show.

FIRST PRIZE AWARDS AT THE ORANGE SHOW.

SAN BERNARDINO. — The Twelfth National Orange Show, one of the most brilliant of the long series of citrus expositions, has passed into history.

The quality of the fruit displayed was said to be as high as at any show, according to one of the Judges, A. W. Smith, of Whittier. Other citrus authorities paid high tribute to the quality and quantity of forty boxes of lemons, Associated Chambers of Commerce, Riverside; eight boxes Washington navels, San Jacinto Packing As the displays. But three oranges of the hundreds cut into by the judges showed signs of injury from frost, it was declared by the show com. tee.

First awards in the principal divisions were as follows.

Grand sweepstakes, feature exhibits—San Gabriel Valley Chamber of Commerce; grand sweepstakes, forty boxes of Washington navels, American Fruit Growers Incorporated, Riverside; grand sweepstakes, twenty boxes of Washington navels, L. V. Brown Estate, Highgrove; grand sweepstakes forty boxes lemons, Associated Chamber of Commerce, Riverside; grand sweepstakes, twenty-four boxes of lemons, Monte Vista Association, Riverside; grapefruit sweepstakes, L. V. W. Brown Estate.

Artistic displays—Forty boxes of oranges, Mutual Orange Distributors, Redlands; sociation; eight boxes Valencias, L. V. W. Brown Estate; twelve boxes Washington navels entered by packing house, American Fruit Growers Incorporated, Riverside; forty boxes grapefruit, Associated Chambers of Commerce, Imperial Valley; best one box commercial pack Washington navels, American Fruit Growers, Lindsay; best one box commercial pack lemons, American Fruit Growers, Incorporated, Lindsay; best twelve specimens Washington navels, L. V. W. Brown Estate; best twelve specimens lemons, Etiwanda Citrus Fruit Association; best cluster oranges, L. V. W. Brown Estate; best cluster grapefruit, Barbara Worth Packing Company, Imperial Valley.

Squirrel workers in the Tulare county section estimate that at least 60,000 acres have been cleaned of these pests.

BOY WINS HEAVILY IN BANTAM CLASSES.

RIVERSIDE.—Eugene I. Hammond, Jr., a 10-year-old boy of this city, has a flock of prize bantams, consisting of the Mille Fleur, Golden Sebright and Buff Cochin bantams, that any man should be proud to possess. This energetic boy has the added credit of having purchased and paid for his fifty birds with his own earnings.

The American Bantam Association has awarded him a fine diploma for a Golden Seabright hen, one that has never been beaten wherever shown, and the Pacific Coast Bantam Club has given him a special ribbon for best display at its Pasadena show last August. He is also the proud possessor of a beautiful silver cup for the best display [illegible] at the San Fernando Fair last September.

Competing in five shows this past season, with fourteen different judges, the following awards were received by the Riverside lad: At San Fernando, five firsts, four seconds, two thirds, one fourth and one special; at the Ventura fair, five firsts and one second; at the Southern California Fair, Riverside, one second, two fourths, one fifth and two specials; at the Oakland Poultry Show, one first, three seconds, two thirds and one fifth; at the Plainview (Texas) show, three seconds, two thirds, one fourth, one fifth and one seventh. Of these classes, two specials and thirty-seven other ribbons were for Buff Cochins.

Youthful Bantam Breeder.
E. J. Hammond, Jr., Riverside, and some of his winnings.

Although competing with birds from as far East as Kansas City, every bird shown at Plainview, Tex., the last showing, came home with a ribbon. A letter from Secretary Miller of this show says: "We want to congratulate you upon your winnings, for it surely was a great class of Buff Cochin Bantams. I was clerking the judge and heard him say that your birds had fine type. I have followed a great many shows, but never have I seen the class that we had here in Buffs, in the South or West."

John S. Hammond, a brother of Eugene, has a fine flock of pure-bred White Wyandotte chickens that he is sure will be prize winners when they are placed on exhibition.

The two lads are sons of E. J. Hammond, widely known as a successful manager of poultry shows, and hence may be said to come naturally by their love of fowls.

WHAT IS A FROSTED ORANGE?

BRYN MAWR.—Orange growers, packers and shippers here would hail the man who would invent some method of determining the extent of injury to an orange from frost as a real hero. As a result of the cold snap this year, they are more convinced than ever that there is no sure way of determining this now short of the water bath. What the orange men would like is some method of telling the damage done to the fruit while it is on the tree, but they do not believe that there is much hope of any such good thing. If such a method could be found, then it would not be necessary to handle all the fruit and go through the expense of picking it and putting the fruit through the water bath to determine that which is good and that which cannot be shipped without damage to the industry. It is claimed by those who have given the subject most thought that the only harm is to the industry in shipping fruit that is not up to the standard, for it is stated no one is made ill or harmed in any way by eating frozen oranges. This year it is more difficult than ever to determine what is injured fruit. Only a small percentage of it has fallen from the trees, and growers claim that this is only the average of the amount of culls. Despite the cold weather, many growers believe that only a small percentage of the oranges have been hurt, so that they cannot be shipped.

ADVICE TO SPRAYERS.

The Bosch Chemical Company, which recently began the erection of a factory to supply its Pacific Coast customers for spray materials, will make a feature of its information service, which will be available to fruit growers and farmers. The service, it is announced, will represent study by experts of various phases of pest control as affecting California.

TREATMENT OF CITRUS TREES THAT SHOW BAD FROST CRACKS.

BY ROBERT W. HODGSON.

IT IS still too early to compare the results of the recent freeze with those of the famous freeze of 1913. It is apparent, however, that in many districts severe injury has been suffered; in certain districts, at least, it was as severe as was that in 1913. Questions of what to do and what not to do are of the greatest interest to a large part of the citrus growers of Southern California.

The most perplexing question naturally has to do with the proper decision in connection with the treatment of the younger orchards which have been injured. There is plenty of experience to show that where the injury has been severe with trees ranging between the age of two years and eight or ten, involving considerable cracking of the bark on the trunks and main branches, in the long run the paying proposition is the removal of the trees, and the planting of new ones. At a recent meeting of the Lemon Men's Club, C. C. Teague, president of the Limoneira Company, declared that failure to remove young frosted trees on the properties of his company following the 1913 freeze had meant the loss of a hundred thousand dollars to the company, which experience was corroborated by many other citrus growers present at the meeting. A severely injured tree may never be expected to recover entirely from the shock, and although it may come back into what is apparently vigorous growth, experience shows that yields from such trees never equal those from trees which have not suffered from frost injury. There is, therefore, positive agreement as to the advisability, where it is financially possible, of removing badly injured trees.

In many cases, however, growers will be unable financially to undertake such a radical procedure. Frost-injured trees may be remade. Indeed, there are a great many hundred acres of bearing orchards which in years gone by have been severely frosted. Authorities differ considerably as to the methods recommended for rebuilding injured trees. Where the injury has been confined to the cracking and splitting of the bark on the trunk, but where the main frame branches are still sound, this may be accomplished by permitting shoots to grow from below the zone of injury, and in arching these into the bark above the injured area. Where the injury has been more severe, the trunks may be cut off well below all signs of injury, and new trees formed either from one or several shoots permitted to grow. Some growers believe the best results are to be secured where a single shoot is allowed to make the new tree, and this seems to apply particularly on trees from one to three years of age at the time the frost occurred. Where the trees are older, the majority of growers feel that from three to five shoots will furnish a new tree more quickly, and produce a better tree, than if a single shoot only is allowed to remain.

All agree, however, that the utmost care must be taken in preventing the entrance of wood decay producing organisms which are present everywhere, and which are almost certain to attack frost-injured tissues. In all cases where trees are rebuilt, special care and attention are necessary if the results are to be successful. The new growth must be carefully staked, and special attention must be given to the surgical work in the cutting away of injured parts. Where rebudding is necessary it is, of course, desirable to place the buds relatively high.

As a precautionary measure against sunburn, it is recommended that all trees being rebuilt be kept thoroughly coated with a protective covering of whitewash. The addition of a small amount of copper sulphate to the whitewash is also recommended as a preventive of wood decay. The use of dressings, applied for the purpose of sealing wounds, such as grafting wax, asphaltum paint, shellac and other materials has not been found to result in any great benefit. Indeed, there is some evidence to indicate that additional injury sometimes occurs from the application of these materials.

Where the trees have reached bearing age, and the injury is confined to killing back of the growth without splitting or cracking of the bark, it will be possible to rehead the majority of the trees successfully. Cutting back the trees should be delayed, however, until one is certain how far back the injury extends, and this will likely not be certain until well into the summer. Pruning frost-injured trees is clearly inadvisable at the present time, and in most cases might well be delayed for four or five months. Experience following the 1913 freeze clearly demonstrated this fact.

With regard to fertilization, where the trees have been injured to any appreciable extent, the application of quickly available nitrogenous fertilizers has been found to be a waste of money. With lemons which have been badly frosted it appears inadvisable to apply materials of this sort for at least a year; with oranges, certainly for the next three or four months. As the trees come back into balance somewhat, develop a satisfactory leaf surface and are in a position to again carry a crop, resumption of the application of quickly available nitrogen-carrying fertilisers is advisable. It is clearly inadvisable, however, to discontinue the application of organic materials, such as manures, bean straw, alfalfa hay and the like. Where compact subsoil conditions occur, or where plow sole is known to exist, in the case of injured trees, subsoiling may be done to advantage during the coming season.

Where the injury has affected only the crop, and the foliage is still vigorous and healthy, normal fertilization, cultivation and other orchard management operations should continue. It has been clearly shown that there is no injury to the tree from the possible absorption of juices from the frosted fruits, so that harvesting frosted fruit is not necessary. Within a few weeks much of the damaged fruit will drop, and the remainder may be got rid of at the time pruning is done.

IT PAYS TO "CAN" EGGS IN THE SPRING.

BY MARGARET UTZ.

We are constantly urged to can, pickle, preserve and dry all surplus food products. Many thrifty city housekeepers "can" eggs, that is, put them down or preserve them in water glass when they are cheap in spring.

For Preserving Eggs.

The picture shows the simple equipment needed to put down eggs by the water glass method.

The provident farmer's wife should emulate her urban sister. There comes a time each year when the hens moult and cease to produce, and if the young stock has not yet begun to lay, the farmer's family are deprived of eggs. This generally happens when eggs are high in price, the rise being caused by the scarcity of eggs.

The obvious lesson is that if Mrs. Farmer has "canned" eggs in spring when they are so plentiful and so cheap that "you can get nothing for them," her family can still enjoy the luxury of them, and if there are any fresh laid ones during the time of scarcity, these can be sold at a good price, while the family uses the cheap spring eggs. That is good business.

In preserving eggs it is important that only fresh, clean, unwashed eggs be used. In washing, a protective outer covering of the eggs is removed, and the preserving liquid can penetrate the shell. Large stone jars or wooden candy buckets are good receptacles. Metal vessels become corroded and may poison the eggs. Eggs should be stood on the blunt end, then the yolks rest on the air cushion in the egg, and are not so apt to adhere to the shells. If a day's gathering does not fill the receptacle, pack as many as you have, being sure to use no washed ones, and cover with an inch of the liquid above the pack. Continue daily in the same way until within two inches of the top. There should be two inches of liquid above eggs. Cover, and set in a cool, dry place where they will not be moved about. When needed, take out as many eggs as will be used for the day, and rinse in several waters. If the eggs were fresh when packed, kept covered with liquid, and stored in a cool place, you will find that the yolks are whole and the whites may seem thin and watery, but easily beaten for cake making. For boiling whole prick with a pin in the blunt end of the shell to keep it from bursting. I find them as good as fresh eggs for frying and all kinds of cooking and baking.

Directions for preparing the water glass solution have been published frequently, but will bear repeating for the benefit of those who have not seen it.

Into ten quarts of boiled water which has again been cooled, stir and mix thoroughly one quart of sodium silicate or water glass obtainable in any drug store. This quantity is sufficient to cover about fifteen dozen eggs in a five-gallon stone jar. Keep tightly covered to prevent evaporation. Should this happen in spite of precautions, boil and cool water, then pour in enough to submerge the top eggs two inches.

ENGINEERS DISCUSS WATER CONSERVATION.

SAN BERNARDINO.—Flood control and water conservation were the subjects at the February meeting of the San Bernardino Chapter of the American Association of Engineers on February 14. Representatives from San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange counties joined in a general discussion of ways and means to conserve the annual waste of water. Lee Nafzgar, president of the local organization, stated that closer co-operation between these counties is working toward fruitful results in the effort to assure a more plentiful water supply for the future.

That the present water supply could be doubled by effective flood control was a statement emphasized by several speakers. P. B. Hasbrouck of Yucaipa explained how proper economy of water would double the acreage now under cultivation, and would raise the value of the land in the valleys. George S. Hinckley of Redlands spoke on water conservation, particularly through flood control, and Jarret Oliver, United States Geological Survey and water measurement engineer, talked on stream measurement and the preliminary steps to be taken toward flood control. W. P. Rowe of San Bernardino described means of raising the water level of the valleys by conservation.

Mr. Oliver is authority for the statement that all records since the establishment of computations in the flow of the Santa Ana River have been broken during the past year in the height and the flow of water. Gauging stations on the tributaries show that amount of water that reaches the river. From these records, and the total water in the river, the sinkage is computed. Valuable data are now being compiled for future use.

SPRING SPRAYING OF DECIDUOUS TREES.

Los Angeles county is rapidly becoming one of the greatest deciduous fruit sections of California, and with its thousands of acres of rich soil, supplied with plenty of irrigation water, and suited to the production of fruit of the best quality, there is every indication that its plantings will be greatly increased in the future. The question is often asked if plantings of fruit will not increase to such a great extent that production will be much greater than the demand. In answer it might be said that ever since the citrus industry began in California it has been predicted that the supply would soon be greater than the demand and that prices would tumble. By putting out a good product under a uniform brand, however, and advertising that brand, the growers of citrus fruit have kept up the demand for it. The deciduous growers will be able to follow suit when they are better organized.

In order for deciduous fruits to be placed on the market in an attractive condition and in good quality, it is all-essential that it will be free from disease and insect pest blemishes. Fruit which is free from scab or distortion from some other disease, or worm attack, will sell faster and at much higher prices than that which is blemished. And yet, if the orchards of Southern California had been critically examined in past years, wormy apples would have been found to be common. Peaches, apricots, plums and other fruit have also been marred and distorted by disease attack. Growers have wondered why canners called a high percentage of their fruit culls. They were culls in many instances because they were marred by disease or attacked by insects. It has been difficult to buy a box of apples not badly infested with codlin moth.

Deciduous fruit growers must come to recognize the importance of growing clean fruit if they are to succeed, one leading grower points out. In these times of high land valuations and high costs of production every effort possible should be expended toward improving products, he declares. It has been stated that fruit growers in El Dorado and Placer counties receive on an average more for their fruit from canners than is paid for fruit grown in Southern California. The fact that growers in the north spray consistently is said to be responsible for this.

Most of the diseases and insect pests attacking deciduous trees can be controlled with the proper spray materials applied at the right time. The essential thing is that the grower knows just what insect pests and diseases are liable to attack his trees, how and with what materials they can be controlled, and at what time best results can be obtained. Every grower owes it to himself to find out these things.

There are growers who have sprayed and complained that they did not get first-class results. A grower was very much convinced last season that spraying is of no avail because he had sprayed his peach trees and they were severely attacked with curl leaf. Inquiry developed that he had sprayed in January instead of at the right time, when the leaf buds were swelling. An apple grower was just as determined that codlin moth could not be controlled, for he had been growing apples for years and his apples were always wormy, even though he had sprayed. Upon inquiry it was found he had only sprayed once in a season, while in order to obtain good results, he should have sprayed at least three times. The essential thing is for the grower to know how, when, and with what materials to get best results.

The season for the spring spray is close at hand. Most of the work will be done just when the buds are swelling and opening. In order to assist growers in becoming acquainted with the various diseases and insect pests attacking deciduous trees, the time for application, methods and necessary equipment, the Agricultural Extension Service for Los Angeles county has arranged for a series of six field demonstrations to be held in various parts of the county. These will include talks on diseases and insect pests and spraying efficiency, discussions of spray materials by various representatives of spray chemical companies, and demonstration of spraying through the use of high-pressure spraying outfits. Several kinds of spray rigs manufactured by different concerns will be shown at each of the meetings. The schedule for these meetings is as follows:

Monday, March 6, 10 a.m.—Lankershim, place of F. L. Williamson, Central, between Pacoima and Whitsett streets; 2 p.m.—Van Nuys, place of W. F. Clark, corner Woodman and Vanowen streets. Tuesday, March 7, 10 a.m.—Marion; 2 p.m.—Owensmouth, place of C. B. Sexsmith, Sherman Way, one mile out. Wednesday, March 8, 2 p.m.—Downey, place of A. B. Fish, opposite Gallatin school. Thursday, March 9, 2 p.m.—Pomona, place of W. H. Hall, corner Reservoir and Philadelphia streets.

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking Founts Banish Vermin, Make Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of pure-bred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs and meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to the Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 857, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay the postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your chickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't hesitate to accept this trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

APPLYING WATER IN THE HOME GARDEN

By Ross H. Gast.

Methods of applying water in the home garden are numerous. Some are good, and some are notoriously bad. Methods successfully employed on the commercial vegetable gardens can be modified and shaped to conditions in the kitchen garden. The same results are sought—a sufficient application of water at a minimum cost.

I have always believed that sprinkling was unwise and extravagant. That is my story, and I stick to it. The other day, a gardener criticised me severely for this stand. He explained to me that the powers above, whose wisdom I do not challenge, chose sprinkling as the most efficient means of irrigating, and that the manufacturers of the overhead spray paraphernalia have cashed in on their imitation of the Celestia Supply System. That is quite true. Both systems are good; but there are drawbacks. The first is not dependable, and as the headgates are beyond our puny reach, we must devise other means of applying water to our gardens. The good overhead spray system is very efficient, but too expensive for most home gardeners to install. It places the water over the soil evenly, and no spot receives more water than another. A hose in the hands of an average person does not apply the water as well, and in the long run more damage than good is done. The twin sprinklers, or any sprinklers of the set type are better, but they, too, leave dry spots. Then there are certain plants which at times in their development would be harmed by sprinkling. The amateur gardener will find, perhaps by bitter experience, that it is best to adopt the methods practiced by the experienced market gardeners of this region.

If the home builder contemplates setting a number of fruit trees on his lot, and planning a permanent garden plot, it is advisable that he also plan and construct a permanent system of applying water to them. The miniature flume and box system is very efficient. It saves a great deal of water and labor. The first cost is not great, if the builder is handy with his tools.

—In constructing such a system, the first step should be the placing of a faucet at the high corner of the lot. Beneath this faucet, a water box is built, and the flume or flumes should extend out from it, along the side of the lot. Gates can be placed inside the flumes, controlling the flow into them.

The box and flumes should be built of redwood. The dimensions of the box are three by three inches. The flume is constructed of three 1 by 4 strips, and is caulked with tar, to prevent leakage. Every three or four feet along the flume, holes are bored, and "berry gates" are placed in these holes to control the flow into the furrows. This makes a good, sound system, and a permanent one.

A makeshift method that is very handy where the garden is a temporary one, or is planted in a different place each year, is made with a gallon can, or an old water bucket, and the garden hose. The can is slit in three or four places, and the end of the hose placed in it, so that the can will break the force of the water. Placed at the head of the furrows, the water can be turned on full force without danger of washing. Still another method is used, especially in flooding plots checked up for the first soaking. A "T" joint, of a size corresponding to that of the hose, is screwed on the end of the hose, then a piece of sacking is wrapped over that. This breaks the force of the water handily.

There seems little necessity in planning for irrigation after such rains as we have had in the past few weeks, but a few pointers on irrigating the spring garden would not be out of place. In planting the different vegetables, remember that they are to be irrigated at some time, and plan for it accordingly. The double row system that is used in most home gardens now, allows for the application of water between the ridges. The spring spuds should be ridged after they are up so that the water, if desired, can be run through the ridges. The perennials must be furrowed out for irrigating. Though the ground has been well soaked, it is time that irrigation methods should be devised, to be put into use later on in the season.

Dusting with Dosch Dusts is profit insurance

Professor H. H. Whetzel, plant pathologist of Cornell University, in an article on dusting, said: "I found every dust user I met not only satisfied but enthusiastic over dusting."

Dusting with Dosch Dusts has become recognized by growers and scientific men as being the easiest, most inexpensive and most effective method of protecting crops from fungous diseases and insect pests.

Dusting is Easier

—because Dosch Dusting Machinery is light and simple in construction. A light rig can go where a heavy rig would be mired. There is no intricate machinery. There is no water to haul.

Dusting is Most Inexpensive

—because, aside from the actual saving in cost of equipment, more acreage can be covered in a shorter time—with one-fifth the usual labor.

Dusting is More Effective

—because the minute particles of Dosch Dust can penetrate out-of-the-way places on the crop and foliage—that would remain untouched by other means. This extra fineness of Dosch Dusts and the special "sticker" which they contain mean that Dosch Dusts will go everywhere—and stick.

Dosch Dusts will conquer Thrips, Aphis and Red Spider on Citrus Fruit, as well as other Diseases and Insects.

The Dosch Research Department, composed of prominent plant-experts will send you Bulletins (results of actual experience) explaining the protection of any crop. Write this Department about your particular trouble and get personal advice without cost to you.

The Livestock Bulletin.

BY ROBERT T. LYANS.

Charles J. LeMoyne, owner of Primrose Ranch of Lankershim, secured the top priced sow of the Ed M. Kern sale of Duroc-Jersey hogs at Stanton, Neb., February 2. With a bid of $660, Mr. LeMoyne became the owner of the aged sow, Cherry Lady. Mr. Kern is said to have stated that a more valuable sow never left his place. This sow, bred to the twice grand champion boar, Great Orion Sensation, produced Sensation Leader, first prize junior boar at the 1920 National, and sire of the junior champion sow of the 1921 National. Cherry Lady was farrowed Sept. 10, 1917, in a litter of twelve. Her sire was Cherry King Orion, by Orion Cherry King, and she was out of Jack's Orion Fancy, by Jack's Friend. She is again bred to Great Orion Sensation for a March litter, and should prove a valuable addition to Mr. LeMoyne's herd. The Ed Kern sale of Durocs was appreciated by buyers from many States, as indicated by an average of around $300 on the seventy head sold.

Duroc-Jersey sow purchased in recent Nebraska sale by Charles J. Le Moyne of Lankershim, for $660.

Clayton R. Grice, Guernsey breeder of San Diego county reports that he is moving his herd of Guernsey cattle from Ramona to Santee. He will occupy a part of Edgemoor Farm, and will work in conjunction with George Strobeck, the present owner of Edgemoor Farm and the Edgemoor herd of Guernseys recently disposed of by Walter H. Dupee. This change of locality is being made, says Mr. Grice, to obtain better feeding and shipping facilities, and will undoubtedly make his herd more accessible to the public.

The name of the firm of Merritt and Bowers has been changed to the Bowers Livestock Company, as C. W. Bowers has purchased Mr. Merritt's interest. He will continue his livestock business on the Tagus Ranch, Tulare.

James Marwick, owner of Braemar Ranch, Santa Barbara, has sold his imported Scotch bred herd of Aberdeen Angus cattle to F. F. Peabody, owner of the Eagle Ranch, Atascadero. This herd, together with Mr. Peabody's own importations, will make a quality herd that will be a factor to be considered at this season's shows. Mr. Marwick has also disposed of all his young Percheron horses, but has retained the hog and poultry departments at Braemar Ranch. He reports the recent sale of a Hampshire gilt to Banden Brothers, Trinidad, Cal. The hog and poultry departments have been leased, to Dr. Medd and Raymond Gard. Dr. Medd only recently came to California from Canada, where he was a successful breeder of hogs and poultry. Under this new management, Braemar Ranch should continue to produce prize-winning stock, as it has in the past.

Orange county dairy herds are to be enlarged by the addition of some of the best pure-bred stock obtainable in Central California, if a trip planned by H. L. Wakeham, J. T. Raitt, Mike Babylon and Floyd Scott, assistant farm adviser of Santa Ana, proves successful. The three dairymen, in company with the assistant farm adviser, intend to look over herds in Tulare county and as far north as Modesto. Mr. Scott, the assistant farm adviser, is an expert in judging dairy cattle and makes the trip to assist the dairymen in the selection of the best stock.

Tulare county Holsteins are continuing to make good milk and butter production records, according to official tests reported from the office of Malcolm H. Gardner, Delevan, Wis., superintendent of the advanced registry of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. One pure-bred Holstein-Friesian cow, owned by W. F. Mitchell, Visalia, is mentioned. This cow, Fayne Spring Farm Pontiac Veeman, is reported as having made, at the age of 3 years, 5 months, a record of 470.9 pounds of milk, and 16.484 pounds of butter fat in seven days.

C. R. Thomas reports that he has recently opened an office in San Francisco where he will transact a live-stock and vending concern. The business now inaugurated contemplates the management of purebred sales, buying and selling at private treaty [illegible] tion of buying and [illegible] of stockers and feeders. For more than thirty years Mr. Thomas has been closely allied with the live-stock industry. He has been secretary of one of the major national breed associations as manager of its sales and of those of its members, a commissioner in private treaties and manager of live-stock shows, including the 1920 Los Angeles Live-stock Show and the California National Live-stock Show at San Francisco in 1921. His experiences include transactions in almost every State in the Union, as well as in Canada, Mexico and South America, and his wide acquaintance in live-stock circles should insure him a good clientele.

Morris C. Allen, manager of Winsor ranch, Bonita, has sold a Duroc-Jersey boar and a bred sow to the Ventura-Ensenada Land Company of Ensenada, Lower California, and two bred gilts to J. E. Franklin of Somerton, Ariz.

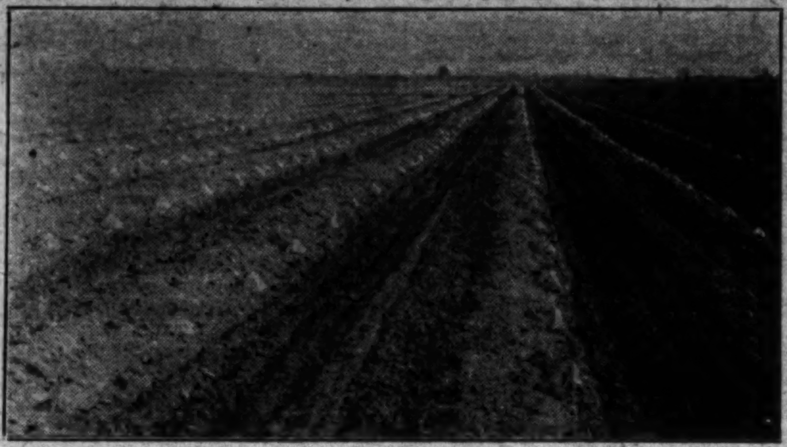
MUST REPLANT SOME IMPERIAL VEGETABLES.

BY A. W. SWANSON.

BRAWLEY.—The recent cold snap was one of the severest in the history of the Imperial Valley, and some damage was done to early vegetables. It is stated that fully 80 per cent of the 1700 acres of tomatoes will have to be replanted. This crop is largely grown by Japanese, and great care is taken by them to protect the tender plants against ordinary frosts by building little wigwams of arrow weeds and paper around each hill, leaving an opening to the south, so the young plant can get the benefit of the sun in the daytime. In former years this has been protection enough against frosts, but it proved entirely inadequate this winter. The growers declare they have learned a valuble lesson, and will hereafter depent upon hothouses for their plants, and set them out only after all danger of frost is past.



Cantaloupes Protected by Paper Caps in Imperial Valley.
The photo shows a field of 160 acres set to "cants." Each hill of tender vines is shielded from low temperatures by a paper bag.

Few, except those familiar with the business, have an idea of the amount of labor involved in creating the protection mentioned. One grower stated that he had paid a crew of Mexicans $50 per acre for doing the work. When the winter is favorable and there are no killing frosts, this extra expense is justified, as it enables the grower to get his product on the market early, and the early market is always best.

The acreage planted to peas is nearly as large as that set to tomatoes, and this vegetable, though very hardy, also suffered by the frost. Peas are planted in September, October and November, and under favorable weather conditions are ready for the market in December and January. Some shipping had been done, but the bulk of the crop was on the vines, and the frost got it. It is reported that while the leaves blossoms and pods were frost-bitten and killed, the roots are alive and have commenced to put forth new leaves and blossoms, and a crop is assured, though it will be only a fraction of what otherwise would have been harvested.

The early cantaloupes fared better, though Jack Frost managed to penetrate the little paraffined paper nightcaps which are used in early planting to protect against frost. Much of the crop will have to be replanted, especially where it was well advanced. The bulk of the cantaloupe acreage, however, had not been planted, and will not be till all danger of frost is over.

At first it was reported that lettuce was damaged, but this proved not to be true. Much of the early crop has been harvested and the late planting shows no indication of frost.

GRAIN MEN CONSIDER BULK HANDLING PLAN.

SANTA ANA.—More than 30,000 acres in Orange county will be planted to grain this season, according to John Osterman, of Santa Ana, who has had wide experience as a grain grower in the El Toro district. An approximate estimate of the production to be expected in a season like the present one promises to be has also been made by Mr. Osterman. Figuring on a basis of at least ten sacks to the acre, for an average production throughout the county, he predicts a crop of at least 300,000 sacks.

The largest part of this grain will be barley. Only a small amount of wheat and other grains is grown in the county. The largest single acreage in the county will be sown on the O'Neill ranch, according to Mr. Osterman, where 9400 acres will be planted. The Foster ranch will put in 2500 acres. L. F. Moulton plans an acreage in grain of 6600 acres. There will be 5000 acres in grain on the Irvine ranch, and the Whiting ranch will plant about 1500 acres. The small ranches near San Juan Capistrano will plant about 1000 acres more, and in the Northern part of the county about 4000 acres of grain will be included in the smaller ranches in that section.

Grain growers of the Capistrano and El Toro sections are greatly interested in the possibility of a terminal elevator to handle the Orange county product. Cooperation with other inland grain growing districts in this project will probably be sought as the proposition is developed. At a meeting of the El Toro and Capristrano grain men, under the auspices of the Farm Bureau of Orange county, a committee was appointed to investigate the possibilities of an elevator for the county product, and to promote the idea of the bulk method of handling grain.

The man is the most important factor in farming as in other lines of business.

Plant Your Spring Garden Now
select your seeds with care

March is a big month for planting spring Garden Seeds. All A & M Seeds are carefully tested in our trial grounds and proved of high germination as well as best suited to our climate and soils. Aggeler & Musser use extraordinary precautions to keep the seed free from foreign seeds, mixed pollenization and other defects. Long experience in developing new varieties and improving old strains has given Aggeler & Musser seeds their wonderful reputation for reliablity. Be sure—plant only A & M Reliable Seeds.

Tomatoes—Money Making Crop
3 packets 25¢
When you've tasted A & M First Early tomatoes you appreciate their superiority over all other early tomatoes, especially if they come from your own garden. In our testing grounds we are constantly trying out different varieties of tomatoes and have proved the excellence of this tomato and its peculiar adaptability to our soil and climate. For later tomatoes, plant the popular A & M Early Shipper and A & M Beefsteak or Ponderosa. The Early Shipper, as its name implies, is splendid for shipping, as it stands up well. The A & M Beefsteak or Ponderosa is deep red, with few seeds and lots of meat, extra large, smooth and round. Our plants are exceptionally fine this year—ready to transplant now. Or, plant seed in open ground now. You will find usual A & M Reliability in these seeds. Ask for quantity prices on plants or seed.

For Poultrymen—Milo Maize
A&M MILO MAIZE
10 lbs. $2.00
A & M Selected Dwarf Milo Maize has been produced by having our growers carefully select heads for several years. Grows about four feet high, producing forty per cent more grains than the tall. Yields 3500 to 6000 pounds to the acre. Has more foliage and is much more desirable for fodder, while the grain is better for poultry.
25c per pound.

Cucumbers and Squash
You will find it difficult to raise a more profitable crop than early cucumbers for spring salads. Aggeler & Musser have proved that the best varieties for our climate are A & M Klondike, a good shipper; A & M Davis Perfect, delicious flavor; A & M Improved Long Green, extra long. Summer squash, like cucumbers, is in great demand in spring. Brings good prices to the market gardener, and is fine for the home garden. A & M Zucchine, A & M Cocozelle and A & M White Bush Scallop are desirable varieties.
3 packets (any variety) 25 cents postpaid. Ask for ounce or pound prices.

Budding Supplies
Full line of knives, wax cloth, raffia and budding supplies of all kinds.

Hose—Good for 3 years
Here's garden hose at an unusual price. Amco Garden hose was made for us especially for gardeners' requirements in half or three-quarter inch sizes. You can depend upon it—and not feel that you are buying blindfolded.

3-4-inch 50-foot length 3-4-inch couplings, $8.25 f.o.b. Los Angeles.

Spring Greens
A & M New Zealand is the most delicious and most profitable variety of spinach. One plant covers four square feet, and can be cut every few days for market or kitchen. Once a customer for this spinach, always a customer. One packet ample for large family.
Packets 10c each or 3 for 25 cents. Postpaid.

Mulford Culture
Every legume, whether alfalfa, beans, peas, clover or peanuts, is treated with Mulford Culture by big producers throughout this section. Mulford Bean Culture doubles the "catch" of nitrogen-fixing bacteria. Specify the crop you wish to treat whether beans, clover or alfalfa, etc. Small size, 35 cents; 1 acre size, $1.50; 5 acres, $6.

Green Beans
Have you planted your green beans yet? Get them in the ground at once if you want early beans when they are highest in price and quality. Mrs. Prior writes "A & M Superior Kentucky Wonder Beans that I grew from your seed last year are the finest beans I ever ate or saw." Some prefer bush beans and the A & M Stringless Green pods are best. Be sure your beans are A & M Seed.

STOCKMEN'S WEEK AT THE UNIVERSITY FARM.

BY R. F. MILLER,

Animal Husbandry Division, University of California, College of Agriculture.

DAVIS.—The meeting of the stock raisers, students of animal husbandry, State officials and business men held here during Stockmen's Week February 20-25, was characterized by wonderful spirit, good feeling and enthusiasm for the future of live-stock development in California.

On Monday Stockmen's Week was opened with a meat-cutting demonstration, contrasting relative weights and values of cuts from a cross-bred Shorthorn Angus heifer, a half sister to Lulu Mayflower, Chicago International champion. This heifer dressed out 61.2 per cent. Lulu Mayflower dressed out 59 per cent. At prevailing prices, the heifer gave the largest net profit. C. E. Schmidt of Oakland officiated at the meat cutting, explaining the various cuts and their values. Afterward H. J. Baede, farm adviser of Napa County, discussed so-called meat rings, which have proven profitable by enabling farmers to provide their own meat supply.

Six hundred men attended the Pacific Coast Hereford breeders' sale Tuesday afternoon. Seventy-seven head were sold, the bulls averaging $163. Sophias Fairfax, bred by University Farm, topped the sale at $450. At the Shorthorn sale Wednesday afternoon a bull, consigned by Roselawn Stock Farm of Woodland, topped the sale at $675, going to W. J. Fulgam of Visalia. Mr. Fulgam and John Taylor of Nevada, were heavy buyers. The seventy-four head averaged $160. The Hereford breeders re-elected officers as follows: President J. H. Cazier, Wells, Nev., secretary and treasurer, J. A. Bunting, Mission San Jose.

The following day the California Wool Growers Association held a meeting, discussed trade and stock conditions and inspected the new wool laboratory. Chester H. Wing, University graduate, was appointed a paid secretary.

The second annual Poland-China consignment sale was held on Tuesday. Twenty-five head of hogs were sold at an average of $60. The top price was $105, paid for Miss Bob Orange 2nd, a very promising gilt bred at the University Farm. Farm.

Six bulls, sold at the dairy bull auction Friday, averaged $262. The feature of the sale was the raffling of the Guernsey bull donated by E. H. Harmon of Hood, for the benefit of an orphans' home. The bull brought $100, and was resold by the winner, Ray Steyer, University Farm student, for $50 and the proceeds turned over to the home.

Prizes awarded in the endurance contest for riding horses on Friday were as follows: First, Smoke Creek, owned by Col. A. N. McClure; second, Nigger, owned by T. F. Millerich of Shellville; third, Skylight, owned by Col. McClure. These horses covered forty miles per day in six hours for four successive days, and all finished in good shape.

Six-year-old Athels.

They are near Indio and are the oldest trees of their kind in America. They have spread out over date palms and pistacios without the latter appearing to mind it.

The Athel Tree.

In fact, the tree makes a growth of twelve feet in a year, or a foot a month.

Trees five years old are as tall as pines of fifteen or twenty. One of the oldest athels in the valley—six years this spring—measured as follows: 52 feet high; 34 feet spread; 4 feet 10 inches circumference of trunk near ground, and a diameter of 18 inches. Sixty feet is the height attained by the mature tree in its native land. Here it may grow still taller. It thickens and spreads to an immense size.

The tree is propagated with the greatest ease. Cuttings about fourteen inches long are made of the ripened wood—that is, of branches not too green—and inserted in the ground to the depth of a foot. In a month or six weeks sprouts will start from buds at the tip of the sticks, and, growing with the rapidity of asparagus plants, beautiful evergreen bushes reward the planter the first season. Usually two or three shoots start from each cutting. In pruning at the end of the first year all but one main trunk shoot should be removed, when the prunings may be cut up for propagating wood.

Ordinarily propagating from cuttings is the only device resorted to. The wood may be preserved for a considerable period in damp soil or a cool, moist celler. Cuttings are boxed and packed with damp excelsior or moss for shipment from the experiment station to all parts of the Southwest. For shipment further distances saplings with roots are grown first. This is done by burying a limb horizontally in the soil, when the stubs of branches elongate to shoots, and roots form thickly about the main branch. The branch is then cut into sections each with a shoot and a supply of roots. The sap of the athel is always running, and the tree may therefore be propagated from cuttings at any time of year. The time of planting is determined by seasonal conditions where the tree is to be grown. In California this generally means late winter or early spring.

Though the tree will endure more cold than the eucalyptus and will grow within reach of the ocean's salt spray, still it is essentially a denizen of the desert, especially fond of heat and aridity. While tolerant of many kinds of soil, it prefers a light, sandy, well-drained soil with pleanty of pervious depth. At fourteen degrees above zero the athel's foliage will be nipped; the tree itself will stand as low as six degrees. The limit of its heat endurance has not been determined. Given a fair start, it will thrive in the hottest deserts, even in sandy wastes where no sort of natural plant life appears.

Of the sixty or more varieties, all shed their leaves except Tamarisk articulata. It is this tree therefore that has been selected because of its dense evergreen foliage to represent the genus in the hot glaring wasts of America's desert. Others are being experimented with, but none shows anything like the promise of the athel. Besides proving an ideal tree to furnish grateful shade to man and protection to his orchards and gardens from the rampant desert sand storms, the athel is certain to figure importantly as a commercial product.

In its native lands the wood of the athel serves a number of useful purposes. It is especially valued for shipbuilding, water wheels and other construction in which a hard, clear, durable wood is important. The athel adds to its other resistant properties that of being insect-proof.

The wood will serve here the usual purpose of timber. Experiments are being carried on both in training and growth of the tree and in trying out the wood to determine the uses to which it is best adapted. The wood is finer grained than pine or eucalyptus, light in color and exceedingly tough, losing weight as it seasons. The claim may be advanced that the athel wood is in every way the best of the rapidly growing woods. Finally, it is certain to prove an excellent and perpetual fuel resource. It will begin immediately to take the place of the fast dsappearing mesquite of the desert. Furthermore, the athel can be grown profitably as a fuel wood; like the blue-gum, it comes back rapidly after being cut down, so that a harvest may be secured every five or six years from the same grove of trees.

Rarely is it the good fortune of the agriculturist to run across a plant or tree with practically everything in its favor and nothing to be said against it. Such an anomaly may rightly arouse our suspicion. But in the case of the athel we may go so far as to admit that even were it a gross feeder, even were its wood absolutely worthless, nevertheless so splendid a shade tree would be a [illegible] dwellers.

But to shade-making [illegible] utility, and to both [illegible] adds the further appraisement, which the accompanying photographs have already revealed, that the athel is decorative—that it is capable of gracing any landscape, and particularly pleasing in the desert.

At first meeting one inclines to associate the athel with the pine family, likening it more closely to the lacy foliated junipers of the Rockies. But no spicy aroma is forthcoming from its long delicate tendrils. Close inspection, reveals that it is an entirely new acquaintance, highly individualized, distinctly oriental. A single branch is like green gossamer; taken together they are graceful plumes carried in picturesque dishevelment.

The tree blossoms in July, when, like the chamisal of the Southland mountain slopes, it becomes crested with myriads of tiny white blooms. These flowerlets form a perfect spiral on the slender stems, like exquisite twisted strings of tiny pearls. They attract great swarms of bees delighted with this new oriental nectar.

Health Insurance

for Milch Cows

—a penny a day keeps a cow fit

WHY take chances with cow health, when such a little outlay will keep the whole herd in the pink of condition and producing at maximum profit? Now-a-days Kow-Kare is being used fully as much as an aid to perfect health and milk yield during the winter as it always has been as a medicine for cow diseases.

Actual tests in hundreds of dairies prove that Kow-Kare can be used as a preventive and production aid with wonderful results, at a cost of only about a cent a day per cow. Easy to prove it for yourself; select a poor milker and use Kow-Kare according to directions for a short period. By improving the assimilation and digestion, you will note a decided gain in milk yield.

Kow-Kare has positive medicinal qualities that build up and strengthen the organs of production and reproduction. As a sure, reliable remedy for Barrenness, Abortion, Retained Afterbirth, Scouring, Bunches, Milk Fever, Loss of Appetite, etc., Kow-Kare has a reputation of twenty-five years success.

Dairies that use Kow-Kare as "health insurance" are the profit makers. Our free book, "The Home Cow Doctor," has many valuable hints for cow owners, besides definite information on how to treat cow diseases. Send for your copy today.

Kow-Kare is sold by general stores, feed dealers and druggists at the new reduced prices—65c and $1.25

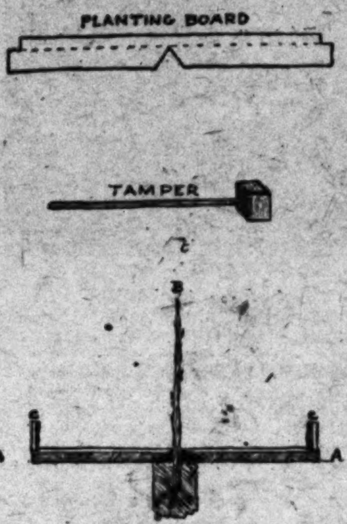
tunity for a back drive to the pens and sheds. Then, too, there is a chance to turn over the rear half acre, improved, at a profit, if such a move is necessary or desirable.

THE GROUND PLAN.

The "acre" is planned to be planted to all sorts of fruit and berries as a permanent crop, with vegetables as an intercrop. It is irrigated by means of a flume, running from the fawcet or weir box, and extending along the north and west boundaries. A piece of pipe that is easily removed can be used to carry the water from the box across the front drive to the flume which serves the upper half acre. The construction of this flume has been described in these columns before. If the acre is not level, it can be graded without a great deal of expense. Following the plan, the upper half acre should slope to the east, and the lower to the south. Such a grade system eliminates a great deal of hard work, and supplies the water to such points as needed with little loss in seepage.



Useful Planting Equipment.

In the lower drawing AA represents the ground surface level, B a year-old tree, and CC the stakes.

The pens for hogs, goats or sheep are built along the back drive to facilitate the feeding of the stock and chickens, and the feed shed, at the end of the drive, is close to both pens, saving a great many steps each day. Every acre farmer should have besides chickens, a few hogs and a goat or two, for enough food can be raised to take care of them. The space alloted to the smaller pen can be used for the hogs and goats.

A cold frame and a lath house are included in the plan, for they are very handy about the place, and much pleasure and profit can be derived from them. Half the space given for the cold frame can be used for a hot-bed to propagate the early tomatoes, peppers and eggplants. The lath house can be built later, from lath or various sized strips. The latter are much cheaper, but do not make as neat a house, for they are not sized.

The arbor, extending from the rear of the house to the feed shed, should be planted to Concord grapes. Others are good, but the old fashioned Eastern Concord still remains the favorite. Back of the arbor is a hedge row of feijoas. The feijoa should have a place in every home garden. The fruit is delicious, the flowers showy, and the leaves a glossy green, with a whitish velvet beneath. One each of the strawberry and lemon guavas should also be planted in this row.

The ideal home orchard should contain all the different fruits that can be successfully grown in the vicinity, and which are represented in many cases by a considerable number of varieties, ripening one after another. In Southern California there are few kinds of fruit that cannot be grown, and an acre planted according to the plan should have fruit or berries ripening every month of the year.

The fruit trees, represented by dots, and provided for in the diagram, by rows, are as follows:

Row 1-D, Fig, White Pacific; E, fig, Mission; F, fig, White Pacific.

Row 2-A, Orange, Washington Navel; B, orange, Washington Navel; C, orange, Valencia; D, orange, Valencia; E, lemon, Eureka; F, lemon, Lisbon.

Row 3-A, Avocado, Fuerta; B, avocado, Pueblo; C, grapefruit, Marsh Seedless; D, grapefruit, Marsh Seedless; E, tangerine, Dandy; F, Kumquat, Nagami.

Row 4-A, Peach, Foster, (July); B, peach, Early Crawford, (July); C, peach, Ontario Cling or Southern Tuscan, (July); D, peach, George IV, (August); E, peach Elberta, (August); F, loquat, Advance.

Row 5-A, Apricot, Royal, (Early June); B, peach, Miller's Late, (Early November); C, apricot, Moor Park, (Early June); D, peach, Mayflower, (Early

USING CORDON SYSTEM.

RICHGROVE.—Sierra Vista growers, under supervision of their manager, Ray Rippey of Sacramento, are putting into effect several new methods on their immense acreage of grapes and deciduous trees in this section. Seventy acres of their Malaga grapes and their large acreage of Emperors are being pruned and tied up on the one-way Cordon system. They will use the two-Cordon system on their Thompsons. In their deciduous orchards peaches have been pruned heavier than usual, and apricots topped to keep the fruit within reach at harvest time. They are also winter irrigating. All of their holdings have been subsoiled, and are now being thoroughly saturated, with the idea of establishing permanent contact between the upper and lower moisture.

AGRICULTURAL COURSE FOR CHINO FARMERS.

CHINO.—Farmers of this district, which is strictly agricultural, and comprises livestock, fruit, nut and alfalfa ranches, are going back to school, after a long vacation, to learn more about agriculture. A series of lectures expressly for adult farmers is being given by Principal Frank D. Aid, of the high school, this agricultural course to run throughout the year. Each course consists of six lectures, one lecture a week.

After consulting the farmers, Mr. Aid decided to give the first six week's lectures on the following subjects: Plant disease and pest control, insect pests, spraying and pruning of deciduous trees, dairying, and soils. Among the men who are to give these lectures are Prof. Stanford, Perrin and Weldon, of Chaffey Junior College, R. A. Condee, of Chino, and W. H. Coke, of the County Farm Bureau. An average attendance of fifteen farmers has been noted thus far; and the attendance is increasing.

TRACTOR FIRM BUSY AT NEW LOCATION.

The Kroyer Motors Company, manufacturing the Wizard-4-Pull Tractor, has now completed the removal of its plant from Stockton to the yards of the Los Angeles Ship Building and Dry Dock Corporation at Los Angeles Harbor. The removal of parts for upwards of 200 tractors and the installation of special machinery has been proceeding since the first of the year and the actual construction and output of the first unit of this year's production of tractors is now under way at the new plant.

Thorugh the recently announced election to the Kroyer company's Board of Directors of Fred L. Baker and Erle M. Leaf, respectively president and vice-president of the Los Angeles Ship Building Concern, J. M. Kroyer, president of the Tractor Company, has secured the cooperation of two men who are identified with several of the largest manufacturing enterprises in Southern California.

A Proper Start.

better yet, if it is raw land, a year ago last fall. The land should have been plowed deeply last fall before the main winter rains and left to lie in the rough so that every drop of rainfall was absorbed and washing prevented. When one has plenty of time to consider the laying out of an orchard it has been found very desirable to dry plow the land in the fall and after sufficient rainfall has occurred, to wet it down thoroughly and to seed it to some grain, preferably barley. After the barley is off, the land should be thoroughly worked and planted to a summer growing crop such as beans. After the beans are harvested, it is then dry plowed again and left to lie in the rough through the winter and then set out to trees after working down in the spring.

For raw land, some program of this sort has proven extremely beneficial, as it enables the owner to very thoroughly work the land down from the raw condition to a state of excellent tilth and gives him plenty of time to lay out an irrigation and drainage system and at the same time to lay out an irrigation condition for planting.

Trees may be planted before plowing, provided a large hole is dug and extra care taken in setting them. Indeed, if planting time comes before the land has been got into shape, it is better to put off plowing than planting. The first thing, however, after ordering, is to get the land ready. And don't stint on expense in doing so. Plow deeply and get the land in a good mellow condition. Take plenty of time and care in laying out the irrigation system if you ever intend to irrigate. Time and effort spent at this stage of the game will pay a hundred-fold. Remember, an orchard is a long-time investment.

If there is any suspicion of hard formation within the radius of root growth, which can readily be determined by the use of a soil augur or spade, don't hesitate to use a charge of explosives sufficient to thoroughly remedy this untoward condition. It will pay big in the long run.

LAYING OUT THE ORCHARD.

There are a number of planting systems to be found in use in various parts of the State, but by far the most common is the square system. This plan for planting insures that the rows are laid off at right angles to each other. While this arrangement does not give the largest number of trees to the acre nor leave them equidistant, it is by far the simplest system and by most growers is held to be the best. It is so generally in use and so satisfactory that there seems to be no good reason for the prospective orchardist situated on fairly level land to use any other.

There are a number of ways for laying off an orchard for squares, one of the commonest of which is the marking off with a plow. An ordinary two-horse turning plow is rigged with a "marker" set at the distance desired between the trees. The line of the first furrow is laid off with a flag and subsequent furrows are plowed along the mark made by the "marker." When the field is laid off in one direction it is then plowed at right angles and the trees planted at the intersection of the furrows. About the only requisite for this system of laying off an orchard is that the man plowing must be able to plow a reasonably straight furrow.

Planting a citrus tree.

Another method much used is that of measure and sight. The sighting stakes are usually plasterer's laths which may be dipped in whitewash to make them more visible. The field is measured all around and stakes are placed at the proper intervals. Then a line of laths is placed both ways through the middle and the job is finished by sighting. If one has patience and and a good eye, very satisfactory work can be done by this method.

Perhaps the method in most common use and the one most generally satisfactory is that of marking off with wire. This wire, which is of the length desired, is marked at the proper intervals with a solder bead or some suitable indicator and is stretched across the field by means of iron stakes set as far apart as the rows are desired. A stake is set at each bead and the job is done.

No matter how carefully the field is laid out, the rows of trees will not be true unless some form of tree setter is used, either the straight bar or triangle form. The notched straight bar is a general favorite and gives excellent results. It consists of a board, one inch thick, four inches wide, and five feet long. At each end is an inch hole and at the middle is a good-sized notch. The notch is placed about the stake where the tree is to be set and then a small stake is driven through the hole in each end. When the hole is dug and the tree set, the tree rests in the notch where the stake was and then is placed at exactly the same point, giving the desired result of straight rows.

Distances of planting vary somewhat with varieties of trees as well as with soil conditions, but for most fruits, such as apricots, plums, peaches, oranges, etc., usually range from twenty to twenty-four feet. Walnuts should not be closer than sixty feet on good soil figs and olives not closer than thirty-five. The following table gives the number of trees to the acre at various distances on the square system:

Eighteen feet apart	134 trees
Twenty feet apart	108 trees
Twenty-two feet apart	90 trees
Twenty-four feet apart	75 trees
Thirty feet apart	48 trees
Thirty-six feet apart	33 trees
Forty feet apart	27 trees
Forty-eight feet apart	18 trees
Fifty feet apart	17 trees
Sixty feet apart	12 trees

HEELING-IN OF TREES.

If you are not ready to plant when the trees arrive, and the chances are that you won't be, especially if you are planting any considerable acreage, take every possible precaution to prevent them from suffering from exposure. First and foremost, don't let them lie around at the depot until it is convenient to go after them. Make it convenient to get them just as soon after they arrive as possible. And don't open the crates and haul them out home without cover, exposed to the air and sun, and pile them in the barn. Everything depends on those trees and care in handling them is extremely important if they are to grow and thrive. Every year thousands of dollars are lost in nursery trees because of lack of proper attention in handling them after they are received.

If you have to haul them any distance after they are uncrated, wet them down and cover them over with something to prevent the roots from drying out. The best way is to haul the crates, if the trees come crated, out to the orchard and heel the trees in as fast as taken out. For heeling-in a location on a knoll where the soil does not get saturated or hold water in the trench should be selected. Dig a good trench and when the trees are heeled-in see that the dirt is well sifted about the roots so that they will not dry out. If the weather is cold, do not let trees lie over night in the water trough or unprotected. They may be frosted, which often does not show up for a season or two after the trees are set. Care taken in handling the trees will be amply repaid in a uniform stand and thrifty growth.

When the land has been prepared, the field laid off, and the trees have arrived, the next question is when top lant. Generally speaking, the time to plant is when the soil is in a good mellow condition so that it breaks up well and sifts down about the roots. If the soil is still wet and cold, it is best to wait a little until it warms up. Early planting in cold soil does not give as good results as later planting when the soil is right. But when the time comes to plant, plant—even though everything else is not entirely finished.

SETTING THE TREE.

One of the commonest mistakes made in planting is setting the trees too deep. Such trees rarely ever succeed, but are stunted and sooner or later must be pulled out. The writer has seen whole orchards where this mistake was the sole reason for the trees not doing well. Other things being equal, always set the tree so that when settled and established in place it is about the same depth at which it stood in the nursery. With most trees this means that the bud union will be only an inch or so above the ground. This rule applies to practically all sorts of trees, even those purposely budded high.

There is little advantage under ordinary conditions in digging a hole much larger than just sufficient to take the spread of the roots. Make the hole just large enough to comfortably take the tree. But take every care to thoroughly sift the soil about the roots and to firm it there. Air spaces under or near the roots annually cause the loss of many trees. But do not leave the surface soil too firmly packed. Leave a shallow mulch of loose soil on top. And never put manure or fertilizer in the hole with the tree. On top, as a surface dressing, they are all right, but next to the roots they are apt to cause trouble.

Some nurseries make it the habit to trim back trees before shipment. It is much more desirable from the growers' standpoint that this be not done until the tree is planted. After planting, do not permit the trees to stand any length of time without cutting back. To do so is dangerous, as all that top is losing water and the tree has not yet had time to become established so that it can absorb water. Cut the [illegible] high if it is a peach, apricot, almond or deciduous fruit. If it has made two years' growth in the nursery, you may be able to use some of those framework branches, so cut them back accordingly.

But with cutting back the job is not yet finished. Sunburn and bores (which follow sunburn) annually kill and injure thousands of young trees. Be safe and whitewash the tree. And then follow with a tree protector (not black in color) as well. If you will do these things, the young tree will throw out a mass of short, leafy growth which will add to its protection from these evils by shading.

CATTLE VALUE OVER HOGS.

Despite the economic importance of the great American hog and the fact that annual receipts of hogs at public markets are frequently more than double those of cattle, the money value of the cattle marketed annually usually exceeds that of hogs. The average price of cattle received on the Chicigo market during 1920 has been calculated at $110.61 per head and that of hogs at $34. Applying these values to all of the cattle and hogs marketed in the United States during that year the total value of cattle marketed was $1,863,085,307, compared with a total valuation of $1,429,996,242 for hogs.

The Athel Tree—A New Shade Maker for the Desert.

BY GEORGE LAW.

FROM the Lydian desert has come to settle in the Coachella Valley of California a tree immigrant bearing the pleasing name of Athel. To thousands of desert ranchers and to countless numbers of people longing for country life but scarcely daring to tackle the hard and trying conditions of arid homesteads, the Athel tree brings a message of hope and good cheer; for by means of it every desert ranch is a potential oasis, cool with dense shade in the dead of summer, enlivened by the joyous singing of birds and the contented humming of bees. Indeed, in the denseness and lace-like quality of its evergreen foliage and in the easy ornate picturesqueness of its form resides the inalienable luxuriance of its native land.

While the productivity of our desert soils has been amply demonstrated wherever water has been supplied, a great deal needs to be done to create homeland value in these sun-stricken regions. No farming region has prospered by virtue of productivity alone. The farm is the farmer's home, and contentment is the sine qua non of successful production. More than any other factor, excepting water alone, the Athel tree promises to transform the repellant desert wilderness into a pleasing land hospitable to the needs and likes of man. The influence it is destined to bear throughout the arid regions of America already may be gauged from the tree's ready adaptability and multiform qualifications, all of the highest and most desirable order.

Three-year-old athel hedge at government experiment station, Indio. It is growing beside a vineyard interplanted with onions. These trees have been pruned and the lower branches have been lopped for propagating wood.

Packing athel cuttings for shipment. The scions are planted upright with an inch of tip showing above the ground.

SCHEEL VINEYARD

These athels were set out from cuttings in the spring of 1921. They were less than a year old when photographed.

So desirable an immigrant did not find its way here accidentally. Experts from our Bureau of Plant Industry go out to all parts of the world in search of foreign plants and trees likely to prove useful at home. Specimens are shipped to experiment stations where other experts give the foreigners a thorough trying-out. Thus came the first Athel trees six years ago to the government date garden near Indio, Cal. The experiments of Bruce Drummond there have resulted in such noteworthy success that a bulletin dealing fully with the history, propagation and uses of the tree has been prepared and will shortly be issued by the Department of Agriculture. Already a number of Athel hedges have been set out in the Coachella Valley and as rapidly as wood is developed for cuttings great numbers of the trees are being started there and elsewhere in the Southwest. For the past several springs from eleven to fifteen thousand cuttings have left the station annually for destinations ranging all the way from Santa Cruz to eastern Texas.

Botanically the tree is known as Tamarisk Articulata, which may be all very well for scientists. But ranchers are not given to attaching high-sounding titles to their familiar companions of the fields and orchards. Simply "Tamarisk" has made some headway in common parlance. But as there are as many varieties of Tamarisk as of eucalyptus, such designation is both inconvenient and inaccurate. Moreover, Tamarisk is susceptible to confusion with Tamarack—our Murray or lodgepole pine; and as a matter of fact nine-tenths of the people who have heard of the new tree miscall it by the latter name. Therefore, to avoid confusion and attain accuracy, the government authorities are encouraging the popularization of "Athel," the tree's common Arabic name. So now that the tree has been properly credentialed and introduced we will drop both the botanical name and the capital letter to speak of it familiarly as athel.

The tree is fortunate in thus acquiring in the American tongue an easily pronounced, pleasure-sounding and accurate name; more fortunate than the tongue-twister from Australia now popularly dubbed blue-gum. The athel is being received in the desert with a [illegible] [illegible] to that bestowed upon the blue-gum at the time of its popularization as a perfectly [illegible] prodigy of arboreal beauty and utility in the valleys along the coast.' But the athel has already demonstrated a versatile superiority to any variety of eucalyptus, not excepting the thrifty, drought-resisting, rapidly growing blue-gum. Indeed, it seems to possess characteristics which destine it to attract favor forfeited by the latter; and should its adaptability to the coast region be assured, the athel is certain to usurp not only much of the territory of the blue-gum, but also to replace, where trees are desired, the native cottonwoods, sycamores, live-oaks and others.'

Of its growing precocity and the quality and value of its wood we will speak later. First of all we wish to call attention to what is possibly the greatest of its advantages, greatest, at any rate, in the eyes of the farmer. The claim is made that the athel is a parsimonious feeder absolutely unoffending in the matter of stealing nutriment from fruit trees and food plants grown right next the hedge row. It is a fact that date palms, pomelos, grape vines, figs, onions, cotton and other trees and plants may be seen growing within eight or ten feet of the athel hedges, in instances actually under the spread of the branches, without showing any impairment or loss of vitality whatsoever. Of course, there are no hedges as yet older than six years; most are from one to four years old. So that whether or not the athels will sap the soil as they mature and become established remains to be seen. It is not to be expected that many trees and plants will tolerate so much shade without disclosing ill consequences. Nor is it to be credited that the athel will not rob its nearest neighbors of a certain amount of soil nutriment. However, it appears certain that the athel does not, nor ever will, sap the land to anything like the extent or distance of the eucalyptus. That faith in the new tree is great is clearly shown in the action of Coachella ranchers, not only in the extent of their new plantings, but in replacing their gum trees, cottonwood and poplar hedges with the athel.

This five-year-old athel hedge has not apparently caused the least inconvenience to the date palms growing within eight feet of it.

This unoffending feeding advantage of the athel is attributed to its rooting system, essentially of the tap-root rather than lateral style. It is claimed that the athel develops a main single root artery through which it obtains the elements needed for its phenomenal growth from sources deep in the earth. This tap-root like that of the native mesquite penetrates unbelievable distances, the claim is made, to the desert water table.

Some ranchers who have had occasion to dig up the trees state, on the other hand, that a complicated root system with well developed laterals and no exceptionally distinct tap-root was in every instance revealed. Be this as it may, the tree appears not only tolerant, but kindly disposed toward the desert rancher's dates and other crops; and it may just be possible that its peculiar tastes select certain soil elements not so much needed by the food-producing trees and plants.

The delicate foliage of the athel is like green gossamer. On each fine tendril a perfect spiral of tiny white blossoms forms in July.

Two further desirable qualifications tend to substantiate the tap-root claim. The athel is both drought-resistant and largely indifferent to alkali—important factors indeed in establishing adaptability to the desert. Only for the first year do the newly set out trees require irrigation. After that the athel may be quite neglected; it will not only take care of itself; it will flourish luxuriantly.

Moreover, it will grow with phenomenal rapidity. Cuttings set out in early spring attain the height of an average Christmas tree in time for the Yule-tide celebration.

Labor-Saving Devices Big Help to Poultryman.

BY C. G. GRAVENS.

Mrs. E. E. Eisenberg demonstrates the simple method her husband has perfected for opening all the pens by the operation of a lever.

And here is Mr. Eisenberg's carrier system for handling feed and running out dropings. The bumpers force the swinging doors open.

RIVERSIDE.—The flock of White Leghorns belonging to E. E. Eisenberg, West Riverside poultryman, has stood well at the top among high egg-producing commercial flocks in this State, according to the reports of the University of California Agriculture Department for last summer and fall. In the October report, five commercial flocks having the highest production were named and Mr. Eisenberg's ranch stood second in the list, with 9.8 eggs per hen, or 31.5 per cent production for 1110 hens. The ranch that led had 9.9 eggs per hen, or 31.9 per cent production for 878 hens.

In the yearly report just issued by the division of agriculture extension of the University of California at Berkeley, Mr. Eisenberg's flock of 1472 S. C. White Leghorns has an average production record of 178.1 eggs. This is the highest average production in the State for a flock of 1000 or more hens, under supervision of the University Farm Extension workers. In the egg-laying contest being held at Pomona by the Southern California Farm Bureau egg-laying contest a hen owned by Mr. Eisenberg held third place for the month of October and second place for November. He also had third pen for November.

At his poultry ranch in West Riverside Mr. Eisenberg has under trap nest a total of 1100 hens and pullets. Of this number he has four lots of 100 hens each, whose trap-nest records show a production of from 200 to 230 eggs per year.

In the breeding house he has ten pens of hens whose records begin at 230 eggs and run up to, 287 eggs, the last figure having been made by one designated as R 463. In the pen with her are twelve others whose records are all more than 230 eggs and a cock, N 940, secured from the university and whose mother has a record of 302 eggs for her pullet year. One other interesting bird is cockerel 320, whose dam has a record of 288 eggs. He was sired by N 940. If the layman will stop for a moment and consider, he will realise that 287 eggs means an eleven-months production of twenty-four eggs each and for just one month, of twenty-three eggs.

Mr. Eisenberg has been in the business only six years, and only started the trap-nest system in January, 1920, beginning it with 700 birds. Out of this number he obtained fifty-eight hens with records of 200 eggs or better, while in 1921 he trapped 942 pullets, and of this number 340 made records of 200 eggs each or better. Eleven hens in the two years' lay produced 400 eggs or more each. This year Mr. Eisenberg is trap-nesting 600 pullets and 500 hens, making a total of 1100 birds under trap-nest. With 298 individuals 200-egg record hens at present, he expects ultimately to have no hens in his flock unless they have made a yearly record of 200 eggs each.

The owner has installed almost every modern labor-saving device to economically carry on his business, and quite a few of these are seldom found in many up-to-date establishments, as they are Mr. Eisenberg's own invention. Among some of the clever contrivances featured in the laying houses are cabinet feed hoppers, concrete reinforced dropping boards and carriers with special bumpers attached which enable the operator to push the carrier through each and every pen without stopping to adjust or open or shut each gate. Another handy device is a lever at the corner of the laying houses, a single pull on which enables one to open all pens at one operation, allowing the hens to go out into the outside runs.

Another device which makes an otherwise disagreeable task an easy one is the disinfectant piping system, consisting of a series of pipes running from the power house to the laying house and attached under the dropping boards. All that is necessary to disinfect the houses is to attach the nozzle and turn on the power, making the operation so simple that this part of the poultry business need not be neglected for lack of time. Then there are concrete floors, of course, and the built-in trap-nests before mentioned. The birds all have outside runs, thus allowing plenty of exercise.

In the workshop are to be found the disinfectant mixer and agitator, the feed cutter, grinder and circular saw, all of which are power driven. The gates between pens are fitted with spiral hinges, which makes it possible to swing them either way, and yet holds them in their proper places. The fact that Mr. Eisenberg is mechanically inclined has enabled him to cut down the labor on the place to a minimum, which, while not absolutely essential to successful poultry raising, nevertheless adds greatly to the pleasure of the business.

Mr. Eisenberg believes the trap nest to be the only sure method of finding out what hens are really making a profit, and if he does succeed in producing an entire flock of hens with records of 200 eggs each or better, he says he will have absolute assurance that he is not feeding any "boarders." By the good records he has made it seems fair to assume that he may some day realise his ambition.

A balanced agricultural policy demands a system of diversified farming in which live stock plays an important part.

Methods Used in Planting Citrus and Sub-Tropic Trees

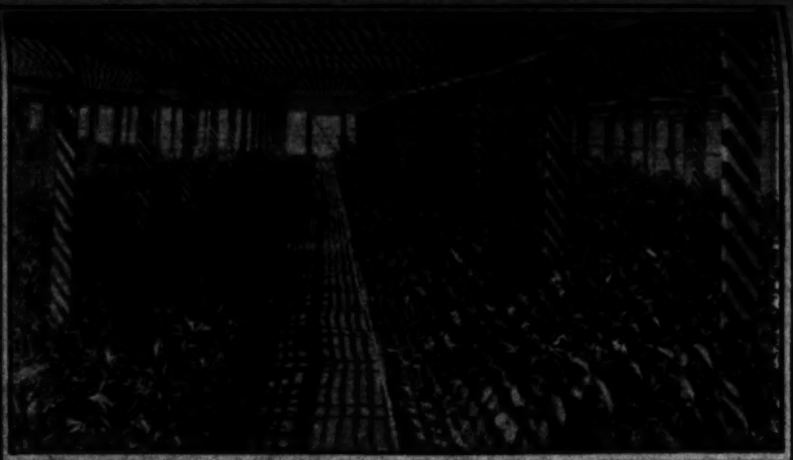
Did you know that jelly can be made from a plant which is a close relative to cotton?

The Roselle is the plant accredited with such properties. The story is not new, but should be retold. It is a strange fact that some of our best and most economical plants and vegetables are not generally grown by the gardening public. For vegetables, like moving-picture stars, must have publicity. The grower hesitates to venture a crop which is new to the consumer, and consequently it takes quite a time to put it on the market.

But the roselle is here to stay. It is an exceptionally economical plant for the home garden, and a money maker for the grower. Twenty years ago it was introduced here from its native haunts in India, by the way of Australia, where it is grown extensively for commercial purposes. It has taken Californians the larger portion of the twenty years to become acquainted with its possibilities, but last year found the demand not supplied by half.



Roselle plants in a lath house, Los Angeles county. Each plant is set in an earthenware pot.

It is an annual, belonging to the large family Malvaceae (that name should not be held against it) and is related to several fiber plants, itself being grown for that purpose in some of the tropical countries. Cotton, okra, and the ornamental plants, Abutilon and Hibiscus, are of the same family. Roselle, when grown as an individual plant, is a beautiful flowering ornamental.

It is the usual practice to plant roselle seed in the open in April. Here is a good stand in a suburban garden.

The soil conditions required for this remarkable plant are not limited. It does well on any type of soil that is well drained, and kept open and friable. As the roots have a tendency to penetrate to greater depths than most of the ordinary garden crops, deep plowing is necessary. Fertilizers can be used, if the soil is in poor shape. Barnyard manure is not recommended, but commercial fertilizers containing potash are consistent to its needs. Excess ammonia in the soil tends to develop the plant stems and foliage at the expense of the pods.

As to the culture of roselle, local conditions favor its seeding in the open early in April. Methods of planting and spacing differ. Some growers recommend planting four feet apart, in rows six feet across. This method allows ample space for the individual plant. However, as the calyces surrounding the seed pod are the portions of the plant to be utilized, culture should be based upon the best development of the pods. With such an idea in mind, seed should be drilled in rows four feet across, and the plants later thinned to two feet apart. The seedlings are easily transplanted, and the empty spaces in the rows can be replaced in that manner. It is cultivated between rows, just as is sweet corn or any of the field crops. Planted in April, the pods can be harvested in August and September.

The roselle is a drouth-resistant plant, and for the best results, water should be applied sparingly. As with all the Malvaceae, an abundance of water usually promotes a rank growth of foliage, and few flowers or fruits. As mentioned before, development of the pods is the prime requisite in its culture, and some growers recommend that the plants get no water after they are well along, so that the pods will develop more fully.

Seed grown in California should be planted here, for it is "acclimated." By careful selection from year to year, seed which will produce larger pods will be obtained. There is a future in the growing and selecting of the seed in Southern California. The plant is not at its best as yet, for it has not been the subject of as much experimentation as other varieties of useful plants. To improve the strain, the grower should go over his field repeatedly, when the fruit is setting, and tag such plants as combine great vigor of growth with large bearing capacity, and which have calyces which are large and well formed. In this way, early-bearing strains with larger calyces, those that stand the frost with less damage, may be brought out.

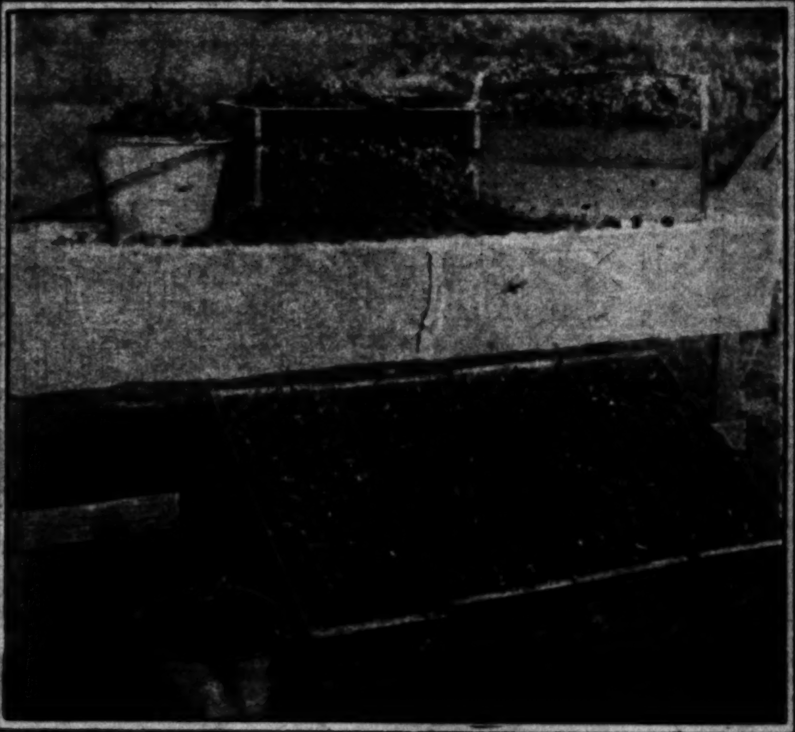
There are a few diseases which attack the roselle, and it is fortunate in having a limited number of insect enemies. However, it cannot be grown with any success on land infested with nematode. Mildew attacks the plants in some districts, but an application of sulphur will take care of it. The aphids visit occasionally, but will not harm vigorously growing plants. They can be treated the same as melon aphis.

The commercial possibilities of this plant have been increasing with its popularity with the consuming public. At prevailing prices, it stands high in profit per acre, among field crops. It would be well for the small orchardist and farmer to consult with local dealers. Many of them are anxious to contract for such products, so that they may be sure to have some on hand. Last year, the market was exceptionally good. The superintendent of the Whittier State School Farm planted a small acreage and reports that he could not fill the orders he received. Other growers were enthusiastic; and will "repeat" this year.

And now for its uses: It makes a cooling drink, jam, jelly, sauces, and a coloring substitute. In comparing it with the cranberry, experts found that they contained practically the same constituents, in the same proportion. Australia exports yearly to Europe a great quantity of "Queensland jelly" made from the roselle plant. A factory in Texas puts out a large amount of the juice, which is sold as coloring for jellies.

In preparing the roselle for cooking, pick off the pods at the axil of the leaf, cut off the stem and the basal end of the calyx to where the seed pod is united with the calyx. Then a slight pressure will force out the seed pod. Boil the calyces until they are soft, and strain through a sieve, or a coarse cloth. To each pint of juice so obtained add one-half pint of sugar and the juice from one-fourth of a lemon. Then boil it again until it jells. There are many recipes for sauces and jams, and other dishes will suggest themselves to the thrifty housewife.

The usefulness of the roselle as a food product, and the beauty of its foliage and cream-colored blossoms, should win for it a place in every home garden.



Roselle pods gathered for market. Only acclimated seed should be planted in Southern California.

This roselle planter found an eager market for his wares. The demand last year exceeded the supply.

CONTROLLING SLUGS.

Slugs and snails may be controlled to some extent by dusting finely powdered, hydrated lime over infested plants. Recent investigations, however, have shown that a 5 per cent nico-dust is very effective in killing these pests if applied late in the evening or on dull days when the animals are at work on the plants. Trapping by means of boards or wet sacks and killing those taking shelter thereunder is fairly effective. One of the best traps is an ordinary six-inch pot turned upside down and kept moist. Several very interesting and quite effective adaptations of this sort are on the market at the present time.

WATERHOUSE PROMOTED.

W. G. Waterhouse, for some time in charge of agricultural club work in Los Angeles county, has been promoted to be assistant State club leader, in charge of Coast counties. Franklin Henry Ernst is his successor, and will follow the outline of work prepared by Mr. Waterhouse, whose work among the boys and girls of the county has been a decided success.

SORGHUM POISONING.

When milo or other sorghums are cut and a new growth starts, keep animals from the field. This is the warning given farmers in sections where grain and forage sorghums are raised. Many cattle die each winter because of sorghum poisoning.
